For more than 67 years, through several generations, the Federal Land Bank has provided long-term financing to help make that continuity possible.

Library News

BY ANNE CAMP

Librarian Anne Camp and Advisory Council member Izetta Shain attended a meeting of the West Texas Library System in Lubbock Thursday, March 14. The meeting was called for the approval of the Plan of Service for FY 1986. After the meeting the group went to lunch at the Depot restaurant. The speaker for the noon meeting was Mrs. Ellis Loter, who is an Adult Education Literacy teacher at night classes at the Mahon library. This is a pilot program sponsored by the West Texas Library System for adults who can neither read nor write. If this program is deemed a success the System may sponsor and provide funds for Area Libraries to have such a program in the future.

In an effort to provide an abundance of suitable reading material for the young people of our community, the library has just received a collection of high interest paperback books on the Jr. High-High School level. We hope they will enjoy them. We have to stress however that these, as well as other paperback books need to be returned to the library promptly so that others can enjoy them too, and to avoid having to pay over-due charges on them.

There has been two more donations to go on the World Globe for the library in memory of Blanche Johnson. They were given by Mildred Davis and Bettye Oliver. Appreciation goes to them as well as others who have given.

Reading is to the mind what exercise is to the body.

We are happy to have Mildred Williams show some of her bright, colorful paintings as Artist of the Month at the Library.

Soil Compaction Hurts Future Crop Growth

Soil compaction can act as an unseen enemy to farmers and reduce crop production.

Commonly called a "hardpan," compacted soil can literally "choke off" plant roots so that they're unable to get water or nutrients, says Spencer Tanksley county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

A shallow plant root system often indicates compacted soil, says Tanksley. Plant roots may be unable to penetrate a severely compacted soil and may grow horizontally, resulting in what some farmers call "crow foot" in such crops as cotton that have a tap root.

Along with stunting plant roots, soil compaction may affect seed germination, seedling emergence and other phases of crop growth and production, says Tanksley.

Poor stands, poor plant growth, discolored plant leaves and premature wilting may signal problems due to compacted soil. However, many of these same symptoms can also be due to dry weather, nutrient deficiencies and other factors.

Excessive soil compaction also reduces water penetration and increases run-off and soil erosion, adds Tanksley. Water standing in a field may signal a soil compaction problem since water infiltration is slow in a hardpan area.

The best way to identify a hardpan is to dig a hole at least 3 feet deep and look for crop roots in the subsoil, explains Tanksley. If roots have penetrated the subsoil, then the next crop also be able to move to that depth.

A farmer can also use a sharp

CASA Group

Invite Public

To Attend Meet

"We want to help your child," said Richard Hawkins, chairman for CASA (Citizens Against Substance Abuse). "If you think you have a problem with your child, or yourself, please meet with us on Thursday, March 28, at 7:30 p.m. in the basement of the Bailey County Law Enforcement Center.

"No! Not My Child!" is a normal reaction, added Hawkins, who cites the continuing problem of drug abuse in this area. "Do you know what to look for in your child?"

Some of the things parents should be aware of include:

Upon coming home a parent should talk with their child and develop good relations. Your child could have problems you are not aware of.

If your child keeps late hours and there is not a lot of contact, become very aware.

When the child has no desire to be around the family and home, be aware.

Be aware of the use of breath mints and sprays, also room fresheners and colognes. This hides the odor on your child's person and their clothing.

Strange clothing, missing articles (jewels, tapes,) new tape decks etc. should be a symptom of a growing problem. Youth who don't have a lot of cash will sometimes trade and sell to get what they want. Be aware of where your child's funds are going!

Loss of appetite or sporadic binges could be a clue.

rod or soil probe to check for hardpans. A person should be able to push the rod into the soil at a fairly constant rate until it hits compacted soil. The average person will have trouble pushing the rod through a hardpan.

What causes soil compaction? Some soils are naturally compact, especially subsoil material, explains Tanksley. Excessive tillage, which reduces the size of soil granules, and tillage or other field operations when soil is wet are two major causes of soil compaction.

In fact, any machinery operation results in soil compaction, whether it's planting, cultivating, fertilizing or harvesting.

Farmers should limit the use of heavy equipment and the number of tillage operations to those, required to keep soil physical conditions, promote water infiltration and aeration, help weed control, incorporate

ENERGY SAVING TIPS

Saving Energy & Money- Indoors and Out

You probably enjoy the fresh air and exercise you get when you work in your yard. . . But did you know your efforts could save you money too? You can cut your energy costs by as much as 10-15% by taking advantage of the shading and wind blockage offered by trees.

Many trees provide dense shade during the summertime, but also shed their leaves in the fall, allowing sunlight through in the wintertime. Oaks, maples, poplars and ashes should be planted on the south and west sides of your home to keep you cool all summer and warm all winter. These trees should be planted at least fifteen feet from the house, to leave room for them to root.

Evergreen trees provide constant shading, and they offer good protection against winter winds. Spruces, firs, hemlocks, magnolias and white pines should be planted on the north and west sides of the home. In this way, they'll block cold northern winds before they reach windows and doors, and shade the house from the hot summer sun.

Inside your home if you heat with efficient propane or natural gas, you can save money and energy with an automatic setback thermostat. This is a thermostat equipped with a timer to give you better heating control at different times of the day.

When an automatic setback thermostat is set to cut heating from 70° to 60° overnight, it can save you as much as 10-15% on your heating bill. A high efficiency propane gas furnace equipped with the automatic setback gives you a heating system which runs only when needed, is safe, comfortable and inexpensive.

For further information on the automatic setback thermostat and the economical alternative of heating with propane gas, call the Texas LP-Gas Association's hot line toll-free at 1-800-252-8232.

IRS Tips

Because of widespread protest from taxpayers unhappy with recent IRS recordkeeping rules, the IRS has announced a relaxation of these rules in some cases.

"The public has been heard," says A. James Golato, Director of Public Affairs for H&R Block. Golato travels throughout the U.S. answering questions about taxes and providing the public with information about taxes.

"Inevitably, no matter where I go, people want to know about the recordkeeping laws. That's what they ask me about and I've found the public reaction to them has been very negative," Golato said.

Congress also found unfavorable public reaction to the IRS rules. More mail flooded Washington on this issue than on any other since the 10% withholding tax on interest and dividends stirred the public to action.

Golato also commented that the relaxation of some of the rules could be just the beginning. "Congress has pressured the IRS to liberalize the recordkeeping rules and make them more reasonable. There are many on the Hill who have introduced legislation to completely repeal these laws, including members of the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee."

Although many taxpayers will still be required to keep "adequate contemporaneous records" in order to claim deductions, there are four situations in which the stringent rules for business use of road vehicles have now been relaxed.

Those who receive more than 70% of their non-investment gross income from farming may either keep records of personal use of their farm trucks or keep no records and claim 80% business use.

People who spend most of a normal business day using a vehicle to call on customers, make deliveries, or visit job sites may either keep records of personal use of their car or truck, or keep no records and claim 70% business use of their car or 80% business use of their truck. Farmers may use the 70% rule for a car regularly used for farm business.

Taxpayers who use a vehicle solely for a trade or business and keep the vehicle on their employer's premises during nonbusiness hours are not required to keep log or trip records. The residence of any employee or self-employed person who uses the vehicle will not be considered business premises.

No log or records are necessary if an employer requires an employee to commute to work in a business vehicle, as long as no other personal use is permitted and the employer includes in the employee's W-2 income $3 per day for the value of commuting.

If business records are necessary for the use of a car or truck, it is not necessary to make separate entries for each business trip during a period of uninterrupted business use. A single entry will suffice.

The modification of the original recordkeeping laws will further complicate an already complex tax code. This fact plus public reaction could influence Congress to simply repeal the recent recordkeeping laws, revisions and all. In the meantime, unless you are certain you qualify to use one of the relaxed rules, maintain your records. Failing to do so will cost you deductions.

H&R Block offices have free recordkeeping books available to all taxpayers.

Lifeline

This pipe bridge spanning the water is a common sight in the gas producing areas of our great nation. This line is but one of thousands that feed the hungry furnaces of American industry. How nearly we might compare the gleaming line with the arteries that carry the precious life blood throughout our bodies. Human life and industry would not be possible without these small but important lifelines.

And so it is with the Church... for the church is the lifeline between God and man. It is where man's spiritual needs are fed, his faith and beliefs renewed. And his doubts, worries and frustrations removed. Through the church... God's Lifeline... is man able to know of the bountiful blessings of eternal life.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Dear Sir
 Can you please assist our family in supplying any lead in the search for descendants of James Washington (J.W.) Wilson who lived in Muleshoe after 1900 and before 1940 and had daughters Mildred, Georgia, Evaline and Adobelle. His wife abandoned them and he educated the 4 daughters but they are deceased we are told. J.W. Wilson was a carpenter and built cotton gins in Texas, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. Older citizens in your area may recall him or/and the daughter and supply leads whereby a contact may be made. We are working on a family tree and wish to include details of J.W. Wilson's first family. After 1940 he remarried and had another family who lost contact with the first family. Any help will be appreciated.
 Sincerely,
 O. Alden Smith
