NOT DUE TO TARIFF

Rise in Price of Sugar Easily Accounted For.

Disorganization of the Industry in Europe Responsible for Conditions-High Protection Arguments Are Flagrantly Dishonest.

Why is it that practically all high protection arguments are intellectually dishonest? The latest illustration is furnished by the sugar lobby.

Whatever else the sugar lobby is, it is not "insidious;" it is flagrant. It works not in the dark of the moon but when that luminary is at its full. It is now bombarding the centers of American opinion with morals drawn from the rise in sugar prices consequent upon the European war. We are told that if the protective tariff had been continued, and had been made adequate, we should soon be producing sugar enough to supply our home market and should then be independendent of kaisers, czars, kings

Let us see. Sugar has gone up in price. It has gone up because European buyers have entered the New York sugar market and bidden it up. The origin of the sugar has no bearing on the situation. These European buyers have come to New York because the European beet sugar industry has been disorganized by war. And they would have so come and so bid if every dollar's worth of sugar in New York had been raised on our own

We can never be prevented from importing sugar by European war. Ninety-four per cent of our importations come from Cuba, just at our doors. But there is no way, so long as natural laws govern trade, in which a European scarcity can be prevented from reflecting itself in American prices. That is all that has happened now. We can get plenty of sugar, but we are compelled to pay more for it because more people are bidding for it.

Sugar prices are fixed by the world market and the question of the point of origin of the product does not affect them. And when the sugar lobby uses the present high price of sugar as an argument for a protective tariff it is either consciously dishonest in its methods or innocent of acquaintance with the elementary laws of trade. Taxing every breakfast table in the country for the benefit of-the sugar magnates cannot prevent the reduction of the sugar supply abroad from raising prices at home as soon as the difference between prices in Europe and prices in New York becomes great enough to bring their buyers to our market.

Carranza is now actually in control of Mexico. The remnants of federal troops-those which supported Huerta -are being mustered out. Constitutionalist regiments, under General Obregon are about the capital. For the time being, the land insurrectionist, Zapata, appears to have been reconciled to the change. The only disturbing possibility is Villa, who has gathered a large army in the North, and whose attitude towards the new Butte's first day of martial law was government is not yet defined. Agents without disturbances. The Montana of Carranza, and certain Americans. are known to be conferring with Villa, and the expectation is that the threatened split will be avoided.

Ineffective G. O. P. Ridicule. Newspapers a short time ago reported a speech of Senator Boies Penrose, in which he referred to President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan as a school teacher and vaudeville performer, and expressed regret that there are not "real men" in their stead at this critical time.

The plight of Penrose and other stand-pat Republicans is, indeed, pathetic just now. A few months ago they were expressing the belief that Wilson's Mexican policy would surely fail, and they would have that failure to point out to the voters this fail.

But now they find that peace is a very popular slogan throughout the country, and they are casting around like fish out of water for something that will get votes for the G. O. P. It now seems that "Watchful Waiting" will prove a popular theme for ning to move, and business stimulathe Democrats, and the Republicans to successfully ridicule President Wilson or Secretary Eryan.

First Need of Mexico. As a member of President Madero's provisional cabinet Carranza had opportunity to see what some of Mexico's needs were, and since that time. as governor of Coahuila and "first chief" of the constitutionalists, he must have observed his people's miserable lack of education. He has said that, after establishing the provisional government, he would endeavor to take up the land and school questions. On their solution depends the formation of a solid, intelligent, prosperous middle class,

People No Longer Have Confidence in the Leader of the Bull Mgose Herds.

In New York Mr. Roosevelt has repudiated Mr. Hinman, and once more is astraddle the sadly emaclated Bull Moose. The attack of strabismus has passed. It was impossible to boss two political parties at the same time, even though one had nothing but a name and a few subordinate leaders left.

Why is it that the importance of Roosevelt has become so inconsequential? The roaring of the lion was of no interest to the sheep in Maine. They yawned or got no nearer than the war bulletins. Nobody seems to care who or what the great tribune of opportunism supports. The vocabulary of his excoriation is not exhausted. The old parties are still filled with bosses who must be driven out. There is not an ism that was capitalized in 1912 that is not just as good fly paper as ever. But the flies stay away. They will not be coaxed. There are many reasons for the diminution of the Roosevelt hysteria. It is the war, however, that has eclipsed his star. Good citizens cannot help being thankful that there is not a war lord in the White House. The horror occasioned by the European catastrophe is deep-seated. The public depreciates war talk and its aversion extends to all who have become associated in the general mind with war. The blare of trumpets has lost its attractiveness. Most Americans believe that Roosevelt in the White House would have meant war with Mexico, most of them are sure that were he president the danger of our becoming embroiled in the catacylsm abroad would be far greater than it is. This implies a lack of confidence.

The fact that the war has kept Roosevelt off the front pages does not explain the clogging of his progress. The psychology of the times is against his advancement. He is the victim of events.

Profit in Refined Sugar.

"Facts About Sugar" is a small monthly published in New York which seems to be genuinely what it says, "Devoted to American Sugar Produc-

This little paper, for the month of August, says that the margin of the refiners since the new tariff law became operative March 1, 1914, and which reduced the duty on raw sugar .33 cent a pound, has averaged 81 cents a hundred pounds, while for a similar period previous to the reduction of the tariff the average was 61 cents; at the same time producers of cane sugar in the United States have been receiving 28 cents a hundred pounds less for their crop since the reduction of the tariff. "Approximately," says the writer, "threefourths of this reduction has gone directly into the pockets of the little handful of sugar refiners." It is asserted that this means a clear addition of 20 cents a hundred pounds to the refiners, which, on the 8,000,000,000 pounds consumed in the United States annually, would mean a profit of $18,000,0001

From October, 1913, to March 1, 1914, the maximum of the margin of the refiners was 68.9 cents per 100 pounds, which was in December, 1913, and the minimum, in February, 1914, was 47.7. In the first month after the reduced tariff went into effect the average margin was 84.2, in April it was 73.8, in May 70.9, in June 82.7. and in July 92.6; but since July, in the weeks of August that have passed. the profits of the refiners must have been much more.

Blame This on Democrats. More high prices are coming. From New York contemporary we learn that "an advance in the prices of diamonds, world-wide in its effect, is expected in the near future by diamond dealers." It is all due to the wicked Democrats our standpat friends will say, that these articles of every-day household necessity are going up in price, so that the average family cannot afford to buy them as freely as in the good old Republican days. Well, hardly. From the same authority comes the information that "the upward prices will be due to artificial causes, the first being an agreement among the three largest diamond-producing companies in the world to curtail their yearly output." As these three companies produce 98 per cent of the world's total output of diamonds, we will have to put up with their extortions until the G. O. P. is restored to power.

Business Capacity Advances. Every day the gloomy prophecies are being dispelled by facts and the steady advance of business prosperity. Crops-prodigious crops-are begintion is already reported from nearly will have to look to some other source every section of the country. We are going to have a splendidly prosperous fall season.

> Sidelight on Trust Problem. The trusts are not the chief sinners just now in unwarranted price boosting. That bad eminence is held by untrustified dealers, who see in the war a chance to reap where they have not sowed, and get rich by imposing

If a sad proportion of us did not secretly envy the trusts and wish we could emulate their bucaneering, those predatory and oppressive organizations never could have gained a foothold in American industry.

SPNOPSIS.

Bud Hooker and Phil De Lancey are forced, owing to a revolution in Mexico, to give up their mining claim and return to the United States. In the border town of Gadsden Bud meets Henry Kruger, a wealthy miner, who makes him a proposition to return to Mexico to acquire title to a very rich mine which Kruger had blown up when he found he had been cheated out of the title by one Aragon. The Mexican subsequently spent a large sum in an unsuccessful attempt to relocate the vein and then allowed the land to revert for taxes. Hooker and Le Lancey arrive at Fortuna near where the mine, known as the Eagle Tail, is located. They engage the services of Crus Mendes, who has been friendly to Kruger, to acquire the title for them and get a spermit to do preliminary work. Aragon protests and accuses them of jumping his claim. Bud discovers that matrimonial ontanglements make it impossible for Mendes to secure a valid title to the land. Phil, who has become interested in Aragon's daughter, Gracia, decides to turn Mexican and get the title in his own name.

Undoubtedly, in his own way, he was in love-but he would never admit it, that he knew, too. So he sank down on the blankets and swore harsh- sat out the dance didn't appeal to her ly, while De Lancey stared at him in at all. So she gave me her hand and unfelgned surprise.

"Well, then," he went on, taking Bud's answer for granted, "what're del Rey blowing up like a volcano in you making such a row about? Can't a bunch of carambas or worse. Gee, go to a dance, with a girl without it was great, and she could dance like you jumping down my throat?"

"W'y, sure you can!" rumbled Bud, now hot with a new indignation; "but after getting me to go into this deal against my will and swearing me to some damn-fool pledge, the first thing you do is to make friends with Aragon and then make love to his daughter. Is that your idea of helping things along? D'ye think that's the way a pardner ought to act? No. I tell you, it is not!"

'Aw, Bud," protested De Lancey plaintively, "what's the matter with you? Be reasonable, old man; I never meant to hurt your feelings!

"Hurt my feelings!" echoed Hooker scornfully. "Huh, what are we down here for, anyway—a Sunday school picnic? My feelings are nothing, and they can wait; but we're sitting on a mine that's worth a million dollars mebbe-and it ain't ours, either-and when you throw in with old Aragon and go to making love to his daughter you know you're not doing right! That's all there is to it-you're doing me and Kruger dirt!"

"Well, Bud,' said De Lancey with mock gravity, "if that's the way you feel about it I won't do it any more!" "I wish you wouldn't," breathed Bud, raising his head from his hands; "it sure wears me out, Phil, worrying about it."

Well, then, I won't do it." protested Phil sincerely. "So that's settled-now who's going to turn Mexican citizen?"

"Suit yourself," said Bud listlessly. "I'll match you for it!" proposed De Lancey, diving into his pocket for money.

"Don't need to," responded Bud; "you can do what you please."

"No; I'll match you!" persisted Phil. "That was the agreement-whenever it was an even break we'd let the money talk. Here's your quarter-and if I match you I'll become the Mexican citizen. All set? Let 'er go!"

He flipped the coin into the air and caught it in his hand.

"Heads!" he called, without looking at it. "What you got?"

"Heads!" answered Bud, and Phil chucked his money into the air again and laughed as it dropped into his

'Aw, that's all right," mumbled Bud, rising and holding out his hand. "I knowed you didn't mean nothing." He sat down again after that and gazed drearily out the door.

"Say, Bud," began Phil, his eyes sparkling with amusement, "I've got irritating as the old-world formalism, nething to tell you about that dance last night. If I didn't put the crusher on Mr. Feliz Luna and Manuel del Rey! Wow! I sure wished you were there to see me do it!

This Felix Luna is the son of an old sugar planter down in the hot country somewhere. He got run out by the revoltosos and now he's up here trying to make a winning with Gracia -uniting two noble families, and all that junk. Well, sir, of all the conceited, swelled-up little squirts you ever saw in your life he's the limit, and yet the old man kind of favors

She was fanning herself real slow, and in the language of the fan that means: 'This don't interest me a bit!' So, just to show her I was wise, I pulled out my handkerchief and dropped it on the floor, and when she saw me she stopped and began to count the ribs in her fan. That was my cue-it meant she wanted to speak with me-so I stepped up and said:

"'Excuse me, senorita, but while the gentlemen talk-and if the senora, your mother, will permit-perhaps we can enjoy a dance?'

"And say, Bud, you should have seen the way she rose to it. The girl is a sport, believe me, and the idea of those two novios chewing the rag while she away we went, with all the old ladies talking behind their fans and Manuel a queen.

"But here's the interesting part of it-what do you think she asked me, after we'd had our little laugh? Well, you don't need to get so grouchy about it-she asked about you!'

"Aw!" "Yes, she did! So you see what you get for throwing her down!"

"What did she ask?" "Well, she asked"-here he stopped and laughed-"she asked if you were a cowboy!"

"No!" cried Bud, pleased in spite of himself; "what does she know about cowboys?"

"Oh, she's wise!" declared Phil; "she's been to school twice in Los Angeles and seen the wild west show. Yes, sir, she's just like an American girl and speaks English perfectly. She told me she didn't like the Mexican men-they were too stuck on themselves-and say, Bud, when I told her

CHAPTER X.

To an American, accustomed to getting things done first and talking about it afterward, there is nothing so subtly the polite evasiveness of the Mexicans; and yet, at times, they can speak to the point with the best of us.

For sixty days Don Cipriano Aragon had smiled and smiled and then, suddenly, as the last day of their mining permit passed by and there was no record of a denouncement by Cruz Mondez, he appeared at the Eagle Tail | days—being polite to that damn Meximine with a pistol in his belt and a can. Now it's our turn. Are you triumphant sneer on his lips.

Behind him rode four Mexicans. fully armed, and they made no reply to De Lancey's polite "Buenos dias!"

"Take your poor things," burst out Aragon, pointing contemptuously at their tent and beds, "and your low, pelado Mexican-and go! This mine no longer stands in the name of Cruz Mendez, and I want it for myself! No. not a word!" he cried, as De Lancey opened his mouth to explain. "Nothing! Only go!"

"No, senor," said Hooker, dropping his hand to his six-shooter which hung low by his leg and stepping forward, "we will not go!"

"What?" stormed Aragon, "you-"

four retainers. "If you touch that gun "You go on ahead," he said, shaking four retainers. "If you touch that gun I'll kill you!"

There was a pause, in which the Mexicans sat frozen to their saddles, and then De Lancey broke the silence.

"You must not think, Senor Aragon," he began, speaking with a certain bitterness, "that you can carry your point like this. My friend here is a Texan, and if your men stir he will kill them. But there is a law in this he twirled his loop once and laid it cer saluted from his horse; "what do country for every man-what is it that you want?

"Enough!" cried Aragon, still trying to carry it off cavallerly; "I sent my servant to the mining agent yesterday and he reported that the permit had "If he had taken the pains to in-

"You!" screamed Aragon, his eyes bulging with astonishment; and then, finding himself tricked, he turned suddenly upon one of his retainers and struck him with his whip.

"Son of a goat!" he stormed. "ldg! Is this the way you obey my orders?" But though he raved and scolded, he had gone too far, and there was no putting the blame on his servant. In his desire to humiliate the hated gringos he had thrown down all his guards, and even De Lancey saw all too clearly what his intentions in the matter had been.

"Spare your cursing, Senor Aragon," he said, "and after this." he added. "you can save your pretty words, too -for somebody else. We shall remain here and hold our property."

"Ha! You Americans!" exclaimed Aragon, as he chewed bitterly on his defeat. "You will rob us of everything-even our government. So you are a Mexican citizen, eh? You must value this barren mine very highly to give up the protection of your government. But perhaps you are acquainted with a man named Kruger?" he sneered.

"He would sell his honor any time to defraud a Mexican of his rights. and I doubt not it was he who sent you here. Yes, I have known it from the first-but I will fool him yet!

"So you are a Mexican citizen, Senor De Lancey? Bien, then you shall pay the full price of your citizenship. Before our law you are now no more than that poor pelado, Mendez. You cannot appeal now to your consul at Gadsden-you are only a Mexican! Very

He shrugged his shoulders and smiled significantly.

"No," retorted De Lancey angrily; you are right-I cannot appeal to my government! But let me tell you something, Senor Mexicano! An American needs no government to protect hime has his gun, and that is enough!

"Yes,' added Bud, who had caught the drift of the last, "and he has his friends, too; don't forget that!" He strode over toward Aragon and menaced him with a threatening finger.

"If anything happens to my friend," he hissed, "you will have me to whip And now, senor," he added, speaking in the idiom of the country, "go with God-and do not come back!'

"Pah!" spat back Aragon, his hate for the pushing foreigner showing in every glance; "I will beat you yet! And I pray God the revoltosos come this way, if they take the full half of my cattle-so long as they get you two!"

"Very well," nodded Bud as Aragon and his men turned away, "but be careful you do not send any!

"Good!" he continued, smiling grimly at the pallid Phil; "now we got him where we want him-out in the open And I'll just remember them four pai sanos he had with him-they're his handy men, the boys with nerve-and don't never let one of 'em catch you out after dark."

De Lancey sat down on a rock and wiped his face.

"Heavens, Bud," he groaned. " never would have believed it of him-I thought he was on the square. But it just goes to prove the old sayingevery Mexican has got a streak of yellow in him somewhere. All you've got to do is to trust him long enough and you'll find it out. Well, we're hep to Mr. Aragon, all right!"

"I never seen ore of these polite, palavering Mexicans yet," observed Bud sagely, "that wasn't crooked. And this feller Aragon is mean, to boot, But that's a game," he added, "that two can play at. I don't know how you feel, Phil, but we been kinder creeping and slipping around so long that I'm all cramped up inside. Never suffered more in my life than the last sixty game?"

"Count me in!" cried De Lancey, rising from his rock. "What's the "Well, we'll go into town pretty soon," grinned Bud, "and if I run across old Aragon, or any one of them four bad Mexicans, I'm going to make a show. And as for that big brindle dog of his-well, he's sure going to get roped and drug if he don't mend his ways. Come on, let's ketch up our horses and go in for a little time!"

"I'll go you!" agreed Phil with enlasm, and half an hour later, each on his favorite horse, they were clattering down the canyon. At the turn of the trail, where it swung into the

In the door of the store stood Aragon, pale with fury, but Bud appeared not to see him. His eyes were turned rather toward the house where, on the edge of the veranda, Gracia Aragon and her mother stood staring at his antics.

"Good morning to you, ladies!" he saluted, taking off his sombrero with a flourish; "lovely weather, ain't it?" And with his tongue in his cheek and a roguish glance at Aragon, who was struck dumb by this last effrontery, he ing back a series of joyous yips.

"Now that sure does me good," he confided to Phil, as they rode down between cottonwoods and struck into the muddy creek. "No sense in it, but it gets something out of my system that has kept me from feeling glad. Did you see me bowing to the ladies? Some class to that bow-no? You want to look out-I got my eye on that gal and I'm sure a hard one to head. Only thing is, I wouldn't like the old man for a father-in-law the way matters stand between us now."

He laughed boisterously at this wit ticism, and the little Mexican children, playing among the willows, crouched and lay 'quiet like rabbits. Along the sides of the rocky hills, where the peons had their mud-androck houses, mothers came anxiously to open doors; and as they jogged along up the river the Chinese gardeners, working in each separate nook and eddy of the storm-washed creekbed, stopped grubbing to gaze at them inquiringly.

"Wonder what's the matter with them chinks?" observed Bud, when his happiness had ceased to effervesce; "they sit up like a village of prairie dogs! Whole country seems to be on the rubber neck. Must be something

CHAPTER XI.

The plaza at Fortuna, ordinarily so peaceful and sleepy, was alive with hurrying men when Bud and Phil reached town. Over at the station a special engine was wheezing and blowing after its heavy run and, from the train of commandeered ore cars behind, a swarm of soldiers were leaping to the ground. On the porch of the hotel Don Juan de Dios Brachamonte was making violent signals with his of Curry county rejected the proposihands, and as they rode up he hurried tion to establish a county high school out to meet them.

"My gracious, boys," he cried, "it's a good thing you came into town! Bernardo Bravo has come over the mountains and he's marching to take Moctezuma!

"Why, that doesn't make any difference to us!" answered Phil. "Moctesuma is eighty miles from here-and look at all the soldiers. How many men has Bernardo got?" 'Well, that I do not know," responded Don Juan; "some say more and some less, but if you boys hadn't come in I would have sent a man to fetch you. "Aw, Bernardo Bravo hasn't got any men!" scoffed Phil: "I bet this is a false alarm. He got whipped out of his boots over in Chihuahua last fall, and he's been up in the Sierra Madres ever since. Probably come down to steal a liftle beef.

"Why, Don Juan, Bud and I lived right next to a trail all last year and if we'd listened to one-tenth of the revoltoso stories we heard we wouldn't have taken out an ounce of gold. I'm going to get my denouncement papers tomorrow, and I'll bet you we work that mine all summer and never know | Spangled Banner," be sung in all the the difference. These rebels won't hurt you any, anyhow!"

"No! Only beg a little grub!" added Bud scornfully. "Come on, Phil; let's go over and look at the soldiers-it's that bunch of Yaquis we saw up at

They tied their horses to the rack went rollicking after his pardner, send- and, leaving the solicitous Don Juan to sputter, hurried over to the yard. From the heavy metal ore cars, each a rolling fortress in itself, the last of the active Yaquis were helping out their women and pet dogs, while the rest, talking and laughing in high spirits, were strung out along the track in a perfunctory line.

If the few officers in command had ever attempted to teach them military discipline, the result was not apparent in the line they formed; but any man who looked at their swarthy faces, the hawklike profiles, and deepset, steady eyes, would know that they | tifies it. were fighters.

After all, a straight line on parade has very little to do with actual warfare and these men had proved their worth under fire.

To be sure, it was the fire of Mexican guns, and perhaps that was why the officers were so quiet and unassertive; for every one of these big, upstanding Indians had been captured in the Yaqui wars and deported to the henequen fields of Yucatan to die in the miasma and heat.

But they had come from a hardy breed and the whirligig of fortune was flying fast-Madero defeated Porfirio Diaz; fresh revolutions broke out against the victor and, looking about in desperation for soldiers to fill his ranks, Madero fell upon the Yaquis.

Trained warriors for generations, of a race so fierce that the ancient Aztecs had been turned aside by them in their empire-founding migration, they were the very men to whip back the rebels, if he could but win them to his in the mineral display in the New

So Madero had approached Chief Bule, whom Diaz had taken under a flag of truce, and soon the agreement was made. In return for faithful service. Mexico would give back to the Indians the one thing they had been fighting a hunrded and sixty years to attain, their land along the Rio Yaqui: live in peace as their ancestors had done before them.

And so, with a thousand or more of his men, the crafty old war chief had taken service in the federal army, though his mind, poisoned perhaps by the treachery he had suffered, was not entirely free from guile.

Water cost money and wasted water is wasted money. The loss by seepage alone in dirt ditches amounts to from 1 to 60 per cent of the total water pumped per mile. In some soils over half of the water is lost before it reaches the place where it is needed. By using this pipe all the water delivord is used, there is practically no waste. The conclave of the sacred college, whose duty it is to elect the pope, went into session the evening of Monday, August 31. The announcement of the outcome of its deliberations was made in the morning shortly after 11 o'clock. Cardinal Chiesa was elected pope on the ninth ballot.

At 11:45 the new pope appeared on an inner balcony of St. Peter's clad in his pontifical robes. The balcony was golden fringe decorated the railing. The pontiff pronounced the apostolic Cardinal Chiesa was born at Pegil. in the diocese of Genes, November 21. 1854, and was ordained a priest December 21, 1878. He served as secretary of the nunciature in Spain from 1883 to 1887, in which year he was appointed secretary to the late Cardinal Rampolla.

In 1907 he was appointed papal nunclo of Madrid, succeeding Mgr. Rianal aung with red velours and a heavy dini, but this appointment was canceled three days later. This incident had occurred just before he was made archbishop of Bologna. When Mgr. Della Chiesa was given this post it was declared in Rome that it was mainly with the object of combating modern religious ideas, Bologna being the headquarters of the National Democratic league, whose members advocated what is known as "modernism" in religion.

Gournay, Near Rouen.-I talked with a noncommissioned officer belonging to a regiment named after an eastern county of England which has been in the front of the fighting almost continuously night and day. And very hard fighting, too.

"Our only rest was when we were on the march retiring," he said. "This German attack is certainly extraordinary. You can throw them down and mow them down, but still they come on, and directly the gaps are made in their ranks fresh men fill them up. There seems to be an inexhaustible supply of fresh troops. It is impossible to oppose successfully such a mass of men."

Allies In Good Spirits. Still, from my observation and my talks with men and officers, there need be no concern in England about the enthusiasm and confidence and good spirits of both the British and French forces. They do not minimize in any way the power of the enemy, but it is strange that the rapid and irresistible rush of the Germans, which in England may appear intensely alarming. does not worry the French or the British soldier.

They believe themselves well placed and are surprisingly quiet and confident, and are patiently working away and watching and waiting for their day, which is to come. Nothing that has yet happened in the campaign has made any of them in the least despond-

Success for General Pau.

Let us see what seems to have happened since my dispatch from Amiens last Monday. On that day the staff of the famous general commanding the extreme left wing of the allies (Sir John French) was at -

From the north the Germans seemed to be advancing in great force. On the other wing General Pau had had a fine success near Guise, where he handled severely the Tenth Prussian army corps and the Imperial guard in a fight lasting throughout Saturday and Sunday last. I was informed that he circled them and smashed them into the Oise.

On Monday the Germans were forced to retreat with heavy losses, but in the center and left center of the allied forces the British were not so successful. The concentration of Germans was against these points and there was great fighting last Sunday.

Regardless of Human Life. But knowing this and more than this. I am not any more alarmed than are the French and British officers and men I spoke with in the course of my unpleasant journey close to the fighting line. They know they are only beginning, but they are still intact and the men who have been working hard and skillfully to stem the German torrent are quite confident that success will ultimately be theirs.

Huge masses of obedient men are flung by the German commanders, regardless of the loss of life, in a flerce and desperate effort to burst through to Paris quickly, and though such enormous masses must necessarily force back all opposition, the allies' opposition meets them resolutely and tary science.

When the history of this war is written it will be seen that, wonderful as the German advance has been, the reequally magnificent. It is hardly possible to understand why such reckless masses of men and guns (and it is belleved that nearly all the German army is in France), continually pushing along, should not overwhelm everything human, however well armed and skillfully handled, which stands before it.

Still it has not overwhelmed the allies. It is almost incredible, but it is true.

Town Is Deserted Suddenly,

When I arrived at this little railroad function at noon, after a trip to Paris and back, I was told that, on Monday, the French cavalry were seen on the hills to the south and southwest, and that fightifig had been going on to the east, 12 miles away. From what I had heard of the progress of the German advance up till last Saturday. I judged it would be useful to visit the little town of --down the road.

I found as peaceful a countryside as if it had never heard of war. The sight of a strangely beautiful cathedral standing apart from the town was restful enough, but there was something uncanny about the shut and silent houses. "It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know, from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients, that the food is a wonderful rebuilder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients gain very rapidly, just as I did in strength and weight.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely, and went to the mountains of this state, but two months there did not improve me; in fact, I was not quite as well as when I left home.

"My food did not sustain me and it became plain that I must change.
