President Wilson's Appeal to Farmers

In his proclamation President Wilson says:

Upon the farmers of this country, therefore, in a large measure rests the fate of the war and the fate of the Nation. The time is short. It is of the most imperative importance that everything possible be done and done immediately to make sure of large harvests."

Back of the soldier stands the farmer. And united effort to make the land produce abundant food supplies is a national duty to which the farmers of this section will, we are confident, enthusiastically respond.

THE WINANS FARM

A Model of Neatness and Sure Money-Maker

Only Eighty Acres Yet is Making Owner Rich

Income From Alfalfa This Year Exceeds $8,000

Home With all the Luxuries of City and Country

(By W. M. TODD)

Seven miles south-east from Artesia is a farm which portrays better than the most eloquent tongue or facile pen what can be accomplished on a small tract of land by industry and the application of wise and practical methods. This farm is not owned by a millionaire who lives in town and uses it as a plaything, or to enable him to indulge his individual hobbies. It is owned and operated by a man whose only business is farming, and who farms first, because it is his chosen occupation, and second, because he enjoys the work.

G. M. Winans was raised in the state of Illinois. Until he reached middle age he knew no business except selling goods. His health having failed while he was running a mercantile establishment in Oklahoma he came to Artesia and purchased a farm. He had never worked on a farm, neither had he ever witnessed the process of irrigation. He had every thing to learn, and that by his own experience. But he bought 80 acres of land (the farm known as "Alfadale") paid spot cash for it, and started out on the principle of "root hog or die." It was just six years ago that Mr. Winans took the reins.

The farm he bought was practically wild. It was worse than wild, for it was covered with Johnson grass which is harder to get rid of than the fabled seven-year itch. Neighbors kindly told him that the Johnson grass on his farm made it worthless, the grass having gained such a hold it could not be exterminated. Mr. Winans paid little heed to this cheerful information; on the other hand he simply scratched the zenith of his anatomy and said: "Mebby the Johnson grass will run things here and again mebbly it wont". With a strong team he plowed the Johnson grass under and sowed the whole farm to alfalfa. Of course, the Johnson grass came up again and locked horns with the alfalfa, but between the choking it got from the alfalfa, and five cuttings during the season, it surrendered unconditionally and today there is none to speak of on the place.

The alfalfa crops on this farm were good from the start, and Mr. Winans, while almost dazed by the amount of labor he could see would be required to bring the place up to the desired standard, really enjoyed the task. Meantime, the good air, sunshine and vigorous exercise had changed him from an invalid to a fairly robust man. He also received encouragement as well as assistance from his good wife, who was, from the beginning, in hearty sympathy with all his plans, and shared his enthusiasm. She was, and still is, a corking good business partner.

When they moved on this farm there was not a tree or shrub or flower. There was a crude little shack and a well; that was all. But as soon as they saw that things were coming their way they planned a new house which was soon built. That house today is, in design, substance, thoroughness of detail and furnishings, unique among the farm residences of this or any other state. It is a roomy bungalow of reinforced concrete, and strictly modern. It has no "city" water but it has plenty of good country water from an artesian well, and no meter is used. There is an immaculate tiled bath room, a convenient kitchen with sink and dumb waiter, a basement with concrete floor and walls, and an elaborate sleeping porch running the whole length of the house. In the basement is a refrigerator, the ice for which is carried from town in the auto. Besides the well there is a large cistern, with pump in the house, and many other convenient details that one could hardly carry away in his memory.

The furniture in this house is Mission oak which seems peculiarly appropriate in view of its plain, substantial and restful character. The grounds and surroundings have also received the same measure of attention, and the spacious blue grass lawn and friendly shade trees add their part to the general attractiveness.

But to get back to the farming operations. While Mr. Winans has from the beginning kept some choice stock, his first efforts were devoted largely to alfalfa. The farm was producing good crops. He had mastered the irrigating stunt, and five cuttings each season brought handsome returns.

The receipts from the 1915 crop were exactly $4600; the 1916 crop $6033. The first cutting this season (1917) yielded 90 tons, and brought $1756, or $19.50 per ton. The second cutting, which will be made about June 20th, or six weeks after the first, will easily make 100 tons, for the grass is higher and stouter than when cut in May. Mr. Winans estimates the season's crop at 450 tons. This yield at $18 per ton, which is safe to assume as an average, would bring the neat little sum of $8,100—Pretty good for 75 acres.

But even these figures do not tell the whole story. Mr. Winans keeps from 25 to 35 head of Hereford cows and several head of horses. Incidentally, he turns off some of these every year at fancy prices, for his stock is all registered. But this stock is kept, summer and winter, on alfalfa. When he markets a cutting he generally buys about twenty-five dollars' worth of maize on the stalk, in order to change the ration; but with this exception there has never been a bushel of grain on the place.

Sometimes when a crop of alfalfa has been cut, the price is not satisfactory, or, perhaps there is a delay in getting cars for loading. And it is unsafe to let a crop remain in the field for a rain would seriously damage it. To get around this Mr. Winans built a barn 64x100 ft, with 16 ft posts. On several occasions this barn has been full to the roof.

Successful alfalfa culture depends largely on thorough irrigation. In this matter Mr. Winans is in advance of prevailing customs. He noticed, first, that irrigation ditches become choked by weeds; second, that in a long run much water was lost through seepage. To overcome this the main ditch in the Alfadale irrigation system is being laid in concrete its whole length. The task is half finished, and will cost about 25cts per running foot.

Now this is the simple story of how a man, with no previous experience in farming, took eighty acres of land, with no improvements except a shack and a well, and overrun with dreaded Johnson grass, and by industry and the application of common-sense methods, made a farm of it that people not only talk about but ride many miles to see. The land is just like all the land in that vicinity—no better, no worse. Any other man could take any other eighty in that vicinity, and with the same industry, perseverance and intelligent handling of details, attain the same degree of success.

With all his work and study and application Mr. Winans declares he has enjoyed every feature of his experience on that farm. The work is still interesting as well as profitable. He keeps a Jap. the year round, and another man during the busy season, thus relieving him of the back-aching work, though he is busy at something during every hour of daylight.

It is no wonder the Winans are contented and happy. Their home enables them to enjoy the luxuries of both city and country life. Their house, which would be a credit to the best residence street in Artesia, has every convenience of the modern city residence, and is located where all is peace and quietness, where the air is pure and undefiled and where the days abound in golden sunshine. Trees give cooling shade, a big garden yields abundantly of vegetables and fruits and berries, including strawberries and raspberries, while a flock of White Wyandottes, with upwards of 250 chicks suggest pleasant hours in the dining room.

Whether he realizes it or not Mr. Winans has set a pattern, not only in his method of farming but in his manner of living, that other agriculturists could follow with both pleasure and profit.

The Red Cross Tea.

The Red Cross Tea given on Tuesday afternoon was a success, both socially and financially.

A successful effort had been made to make the decoration appropriate to the occasion. The girls wore Red Cross uniforms and the room was draped with flags. About forty of our soldier boys were honorary guests. Resplendent in their uniforms they made a striking as well as patriotic picture as they mingled with the girls in their unique costumes.

Mr. Rorie Couden, a private in Company C, accompanied by Mrs. Warnock, played a cornet solo.

Miss Annette Jacobson delighted the audience with a musical reading and responded to encore. Mrs. Yates sang a solo.

Rev. Mitchelmore concluded the program with a talk that was appropriate and well received.

We must look to the Red Cross to save the lives of wounded soldiers and every American woman will want to help this matter. The making of hospital supplies, comfort kits and many other things for the soldiers will keep a big army of women busy for some time.

Classes for instruction are being formed every where.

Pupils in these classes are being taught how to make bandages, hospital garments and everything needed how to pack them the right way, and fitted to teach others to do the work. The women of Artesia are ready to help, so remember the meeting at the Christian Church next Wednesday. Unemployed, and especially unmarried, women can give much of their time to this work and every woman will want to have some part in it.

It is our Red Cross chapter, our soldier boys and our country.

Panoramic Pictures

Judge Miller, of Roswell, one of the men interested in the new hotel mentioned in these columns last week, was in town this week with a panorama picture machine. Assisted by photographer Boddy he took a panoramic view of the surroundings from the roof of the College buildings, and other points of interest in and around Artesia. These pictures are to be used in the descriptive advertising of the new hotel.

Health About Gone

Many thousands of women suffering from womanly trouble, have been benefited by the use of Cardui, the woman's tonic, according to letters we receive, similar to this one from Mrs. Z. V. Spell, of Hayne, N. C. "I could not stand on my feet, and just suffered terribly," she says. "As my suffering was so great, and he had tried other remedies, Dr. — had us get Cardui. . . I began improving, and it cured me. I know, and my doctor knows, what Cardui did for me, for my nerves and health were about gone."

She writes further: "I am in splendid health. . . can do my work. I feel I owe it to Cardui, for I was in dreadful condition." If you are nervous, run-down and weak, or suffer from headache, backache, etc., every month, try Cardui. Thousands of women praise this medicine for the good it has done them, and many physicians who have used Cardui successfully with their women patients, for years, endorse this medicine. Think what it means to be in splendid health, like Mrs. Spell. Give Cardui a trial.

A Soldier's Letter

The following excerpt from a letter written by Lawrence C. Donald to his parents will be of interest as it gives details of Red Cross organization and equipment in actual use by our army:

(In camp somewhere in Arizona)

A Hospital Corps for one regiment consists of 1 Major, 1 Captain, 2 sergeants and 26 privates.

The Corps has two ambulances drawn by mules, an infirmary tent and a modicum of supplies, medical and otherwise.

Its duty is to treat minor illnesses which arise in camp, to administer first aid treatment to the wounded who are brought off the battle field, usually before the said bringing off and to forward all cases of more than minor importance to the nearest base or camp hospital where they are cared for.

A Hospital Corps private carries no arms except the Corps knife which is used for cutting brush, making splints etc. He is supposed to be protected by international law when he goes on the battle field, but the Germans know no international law and would just as soon shoot down a Red Cross private as a General; maybe a little sooner.

The Corps knife is an interesting tool. It is seventeen and a half inches long with a blade two and a half inches wide. The handle has finger grips on it. It weighs about three pounds and is carried in a scabbard.

Each private has a pouch in which are bandages, gauze, aromatic spirits, a roll of stiff wire to be used as a splint, iodine, a pair of scissors and a pair of forceps, a tourniquet, adhesive tape, pins, safety pins and small saw for splints.

The temperature in Artesia has been of the growing kind for a few days. It has ranged a little higher than 100. It is very discouraging to the cut worms and garden truck is no longer molested by them.

The West End Embroidery club met with Mrs. H. G. Strattan last Friday afternoon. Mrs. P. M. Everest and Miss Ella Bauslin were guests of the club. Misses Lois Chisom and Uarda Robertson assisted the hostess serving refreshments.

The women of Artesia are urged to meet at the Baptist church next Friday afternoon, June 22, at 3 o'clock.

He is a Sergeant Major in the 8th Engineer Corps, and expects any day to be called to service in France. Mrs. Flamm will remain in Artesia with her mother during his absence.

Meetings at M. E. Church

Rev. F. M. Neal, the evangelist now conducting meetings at the Methodist church, is beginning to arouse the religious fervor of Artesia people. He has a marked personality, and is an orator and character painter of no mean order. Many of the scenes he places before his audiences are carried away and retained.

FREE BED ROOM to right party. Two houses to rent, sell or exchange. Apply to E. A. Carlton, Ft. Davis, Texas, or W. M. Daugherty, Artesia.

Not less conspicuous is the singing of the Sunshine choir of Juniors, under the direction of Prof. F. H. Poulter. Prof. Poulter is not only a singer of renown but equally adroit as an organizer. He has the place organized into working bands and these are an important feature of the services.

The meetings are well patronized.

Dr. Clark Back Again.

Dr. J. J. Clark returned last Monday from a ten day trip to New Orleans where he attended a meeting of the Four State Dental association. This was a special meeting of the post graduates in dentistry from the states of Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and Texas. The meeting was addressed by the most skillful teachers in the United States, and was thus of great value to the profession. The doctor is very enthusiastic over the new methods now being exploited for the elimination of pain in dental surgery, and declares that operations that were once painful are now only blissful dreams. As inventions which have the much advertised "twilight zone" scheme beaten several miles. According to the doctor the time is coming when people will have dental operations (when they can afford it) just for a pastime or recreation.

The doctor says it was not only very hot during his stay in the Crescent City but that the humidity made it very disagreeable. While times down there are generally prosperous everything except rice is suffering from drouth. The drouth and prohibition coming at the same time constitute a double burden for some of the people.

Our Soldier Boys Are Gone

Artesia's soldier boys are finally gone. They left Thursday morning on a special train which also took the boys from Carlsbad. They went to Albuquerque where they will go into camp for training. Most all the people of the town were at the station, some for a fond farewell to son, brother or sweetheart, and others from patriotic motives.

While the boys, by their voluntary service, have shown a spirit of patriotism of which we are all proud, the parting scene was none the less pathetic. Tears fell copiously, and the power of speech in many instances was lost through quivering lips. The boys have enlisted to do battle in a ferocious world war, and none of them knows his destiny. To whatever field of action they may be called, many will, in all human probability, return; but some of them may not. Some may meet death by bullet or shell, some may succumb to disease and some may languish in an enemy prison. But we all hope for the best, and the boys, who were good boys and good citizens, may be assured from day to day that those left behind—neighbors and friends as well as relatives—will think of them with the deepest interest and sincerely hope for their safety.

Good bye; good luck.

Another Abdication

King Constantine of Greece has abdicated the throne under pressure of popular demand. While he professed to be neutral as between the nations at war his sympathies were pro-German, much to the displeasure of a majority of his subjects. While his son succeeds to the throne, the reign of monarchy is as likely to soon come to an end in Greece as it is in many of the other European nations. Norway and Sweden are both likely to become republics within two years, and all the nations are beginning to think that a monarch is something they can get along without.

King Constantine couldn't make the neutrality scheme work. As we have said before, there is no such thing as neutrality. Regardless of its professions the United States has not been neutral at heart since Belgium was invaded.

There are indications that the Council of Defence will prove to be the greatest bureau of immigration New Mexico ever had, or ever will have. The effective way of handling some of the natural resources of the state has opened the eyes of men with money to invest, and it is probable that many of the speeded up industries of the state will continue to grow after the emergency ceases to exist.

The lands of New Mexico, unimproved, and no facilities for irrigation, are now worth from eight to forty dollars an acre, and are increasing in value every day. Sales of large tracts average above five dollars, while choice small tracts go into money fast. A few years ago three and five dollars was considered a top price for New Mexico land. Those holding land will find it worth double its present value within five years.

Happy Hour Club

The sixth of June saw the Happy Hour Club at the first meeting since war economy was adopted. Refreshments are barred for patriotic and economic reasons while war endures. That the club is still happy was still evident when a goodly number of women met at the pleasant residence of Mrs. Ed. Henderson on Upper Cottonwood.

Seats were provided on the spacious enclosed porch embowered in vines and climbing roses.

The important subject discussed was the part members can take in Red Cross work. Hearing that a branch of this work is being organized in Artesia it was decided that those who are in the habit of trading at Artesia will assist that branch while those who live near Lake Arthur will join the movement which is being inaugurated in that town by its patriotic women. The annual exhibition held by the Happy Hour Club each fall will be given as usual this year in an effort to stimulate the production of food in line with the nation wide activity in that direction. Knitted comforts needed by sailors and not furnished by our Government will be exhibited in connection with the usual fancy work of the club.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Horrall on June 20th. Members are requested to post themselves on what they can do to assist the Red Cross work.

Building In War Times

(From an editorial in the Chicago Times May 26 1917.)

The Illinois legislature has abandoned its plans for extensive building operations in the state departments and institutions, and with the ear of faith we already hear applause the country over. Bravo! Let cities, commonwealths, and the federal government follow suit!

To which impending outbursts we reply, "Be orthodox, brethren, but don't be more orthodox than his holiness the pope," Paris has not suspended public building operations because of the war. Neither has Berlin. To curtail such operations, if by curtailment you mean putting a check on wild and wanton extravagance, is doubtless advisable. Self-confessed pork barrel expenditures must halt, and there are other pork barrels besides the celebrated cask of iniquity at Washington. Pork kegs, we might term them. States and cities have each their own. Away with such! But not with the long projected and long needed improvements that have an incontestable value. Just because we are no longer in a position to throw money about, it does not follow that we must scrimp or periah. Neither does it follow that scrimping will prevent our perishing. It may even help us to.

As we look at it a quietus clapped on legitimate public building enterprise would rank with the mania for private economy that is now impoverishing milliners and dress-makers and many a distressed tailor. Fine—is it not?—to see her ladyship economize by starving her modiste! Inspiring to see her husband economize by skinning his tailor! for that is what it comes to. And they call it patriotism. Patriotism! Ye gods and little fishes! One plain duty of patriotism in war time is to keep the pot a-boiling. Waste is wicked, but legitimate spending a virtue. Within the bounds of reason go on spending. It promotes "business as usual." It steadies the state. And what applies to individual applies equally to municipalities, commonwealth, and the federal government. Let there be no havoc wrought in the building trade and its half dozen allied industries in the name of patriotic economy. To put a peremptory quietus on legitimate and sorely needed public building projects is to sow disorder, unrest and distress at the very time when such calamities would work a maximum of mischief. Let us keep our hair on. In avoiding waste, let us also avoid the economy that in the end spells extravagance.
