GANG WAY! HOT STUFF!

KEPPLE POST LEGION NOTES
BY R. H. ROWAN

Bursum says he has reformed. So have I. Read the Hot Stuff column each week.

Comrade Vogel spent several days in Carlsbad this week.

The fellow who doesn't want any pay for his patriotism is the bird who never did anything during the war to show it.

Harold Keinath has recently purchased a new Buick "4" roadster. It's prettier than any straight flush we ever gazed at.

Congress says the government hasn't money enough to pay the soldier bonus. Still they can rake up eight billion dollars to loan the railroads.

The anti-beer bill has received more consideration than the bonus bill. There are more beer drinkers than soldiers. Stars and Stripes.

W. C. Cunningham is back in the harness again on the same chair, No. 4, after a month's lay-off, caused by blood poisoning in his left hand.

Wm. T. McKenna, patient at the government hospital at Ft. Bayard, member of the local post, will represent us at the State Convention at Silver City.

Comrades Klopfenstein and Cunningham spent several days of this week doing tank work on their homesteads, twenty five miles northwest of Artesia.

Our latest member, Comrade Guthrie, is a newcomer, living at present on the Cottonwood. He hails from Tulsa, Oklahoma, and was in the air service during the war.

That man Edward Hohwhaler, a new member of the post, is no "slouch" with the boxing gloves. With a little practice he will make most any of the gang set up and take notice.

One of the local Legion boys asking for a date: "If you have nothing on for the evening I would like to take you to the Elrose."

Young lady, rather indignant: "Of course, I will have my clothes on."

Commander Samelson reports a large delegation going to Carlsbad on the 10th of October to appear before the Clean-up Squad. Those wanting transportation, see Commander Samelson at once.

Wm. Shippy and Gordon Sowell, members of the El Paso Post have been here for the past two weeks. They intend to homestead near the city and will likely be here the greater part of this winter.

Twelve Mexicans were hauled to the poles at the Tuesday election and its dollars to doughnuts that the entire "dirty dozen" went against Amendment 4 and the same bet they went for Amendment 8.

We thought for a while a few Artesia citizens needed only to be reminded, but since the election it looks as though several have entirely forgotten the boys who were promised anything they wanted during the gloomy days of 1917-18.

Comrade David Crockett Cogsdell left last week for sunny Arizona. His future address we are told will be Phoenix. Comrade Cogsdell hits for a warmer climate each winter. We extend to him our heartfelt wishes for the best there is to be had.

In a recent letter from Comrade Fred Brainard, with Columbus in the American Association, he states that he will return to Artesia immediately after the close of the season, October 3. He is a charter member of the Post and one of its most willing workers. He has had a successful season, swatting the pill for over 300.

Adjutant Fred Cole will help coach the High School football eleven for the next five or six weeks. Fred is a Simmons College star and knows the game from all angles and we are already predicting a championship team for the locals. He also has charge of the Legion team and is whipping them into shape for the game this afternoon with the Highs.

The entertainment committee of the local post announce that the next dance to be given would be Saturday night, October 1. It was intended to hold the dances on Wednesday nights during the winter, but owing to another organization using the hall on that night, the date has been changed to Saturday. The Artesia Jazz Orchestra will again furnish the music. The dances are attracting crowds from towns all through the valley. The excellent music and the best floor in the state, assure them of a pleasant evening.

ADDITIONAL LAND OPEN FOR ENTRY OCT. 14.

Lincoln, Nebraska and W. J. Bryan.

(By W. M. Todd.)

(This is a continuation of the article by Mr. Todd published last week.)

Lincoln, Nebraska, is a prosperous city of 55,000 people. It is second in size only to Omaha among the cities of that state. But in many respects its importance is superior to that of Omaha. It is not only the state capital but about all the state institutions are located there. It has the prison, the insane hospital, the university, the agricultural school and experimental farm and state fair grounds and plant. It also has substantial jobbing houses and many manufacturing, including an airplane industry.

The Home of Bryan.

But one of the greatest assets of this Nebraska city in the past was the fact that it was the home of W. J. Bryan. However Mr. Bryan may be regarded elsewhere, it is not hard to find how he is regarded in Lincoln. And yet the feeling there toward him is not in all things just what one might reasonably think. The people of Nebraska did not take kindly to the 16 to 1 theory neither do the people of the state or the city of Lincoln have a supreme regard for Bryan's statesmanship. If my source of information was reliable, he could not today carry the state if he were to again run for president.

But it is possible for a public man to be so lofty and exemplary in other respects as to maintain the respect and devotion of the people even if he is not their ideal as a statesman. And this aptly illustrates the feeling of the people of Lincoln toward Mr. Bryan. The feeling toward him is not only one of pride and respect, but of genuine affection.

The power and charm of Mr. Bryan's oratory is known in two continents. And when, on any occasion, he is advertised to speak, the people of his home town know in advance that he will acquit himself with credit and add new laurels to his oratorical crown. Upon strict analysis they may not fully endorse everything he says, particularly if his utterances involve political prophecies, but they are ready and glad to overlook a trifling fault in view of his larger virtues. People who know him best think he should have been a preacher, and that in that event he would have been a second Beecher.

But it is not alone as a public man and orator that Mr. Bryan has acquired the wholesome and lasting respect of his townsmen. He is regarded as an ideal citizen and neighbor. He has always been keenly interested and active in the educational, commercial and moral status of his city and community and ready to make any reasonable sacrifice of time, labor or money in its behalf. When any scheme is about to be undertaken for the betterment of the community they do not think it necessary to go to Mr. Bryan for the details. They just put his name down at the head of the list, and they never have to take it off.

Mr. Bryan some years ago acquired a large fractional tract of land within the city limits of Lincoln. As the city grew this tract became valuable. The city had a small park near the tract which it wished to enlarge. A committee acquired all the land between the park and Mr. Bryan's tract and then waited upon him to find what he would ask them for that. As soon as they stated their desires Mr. Bryan, with a ponderous smile on his face, patted the spokesman on the head and said: "Gentlemen, I'm heartily in favor of enlarging our park and I will be happy to donate my tract of land." All this required less than two minutes.

A few years ago, after Mr. Bryan had given his famous lecture on "The Prince of Peace" in some of the large cities, a committee of Lincoln citizens waited upon him and asked if they could arrange with him to give it in one of the churches there. With his characteristic smile he replied that it would be a singular pleasure for him to comply and added that it would be given without charge and he desired that no one should have to pay a cent to hear it. The lecture was given in the largest church auditorium in Lincoln on a cold Sunday night in midwinter. Every foot of space was occupied and many had to stand. Mr. Bryan, with his wife, drove in from the farm with a little team and carriage. He had on a heavy overcoat, gauntlet mittens and a big cap turned down over his ears. After warming himself over the radiator he disrobed and entered the pulpit. The fact that he was giving this lecture to a home audience did not cause him to bear on lightly or take any reefs in his oratory. On the other hand he spoke as earnestly and fervently and made all the oratorical lights he would have made had he been addressing the largest crowd that ever assembled. It was the first exhibition of his real oratorical skill and power his audience had seen since he had become famed as an orator. The unrestrained applause he received, even in a church and on the Sabbath, was a substantial indication of the pleasure and appreciation of his audience.

The Bryan Farm.

The Bryan farm is just two miles outside the city limits and about seven miles from the center of the business district. It embraces 160 acres of very fertile and productive land. The house is a very large old fashioned one made of red brick and surrounded by trees. It is well back from the road and the trees along the driveway completely shut out a front view. The house and buildings were wired for electricity fifteen years ago and was the first farm plant to be wired in that vicinity. Even the cooking is done by electricity. The estimated value of the farm is $250 or $300 per acre exclusive of improvements. Mr. Bryan lived on this farm all the time he resided in Lincoln, although it is said he never did a day's work on it himself.

No Longer a Resident.

But Mr. Bryan is no longer a resident of Lincoln or even Nebraska. He has moved to Miami, Florida, which is to be his future home. This change was mostly to escape the rigors of Nebraska winters which were severe on Mrs. Bryan. The farm mean time is operated by a tenant.

The people of Lincoln were sorry to lose Mr. Bryan as a citizen. And yet, while they were proud to have Lincoln known as his home, his duties of late years, have called him away so much that he was practically only a visitor when he came there. About all his friends and neighbors know of his whereabouts and doings was what they read in the papers, and they can read as much about him while he lives in Miami as they could when he lived in Lincoln. But the people of Lincoln will never lose their respect or affection for their former distinguished townsman no matter where he resides.

The Commoner.
 Mr. Bryan's paper, The Commoner, is still published at the old stand. The management is in the hands of C. W. Bryan, a brother of W. J. When W. J. was a weekly contributor the paper had a wide circulation and was read everywhere with interest. Since his contributions dropped off it has lost in popularity and circulation. C. W. Bryan is a man of intelligence and force but no one ever accused him of being in his brother's class. He is a live wire in municipal affairs and is an honored and respected citizen, but his ideas are too radical for conservative business men. He is a member of the city council and has established through that body a full fledged municipal coal yard. He will manage the coal yard, and as he is also chairman of the committee on streets he will be henceforth a busy man. He ran for mayor of his city on the issue of municipal ownership of public utilities and was defeated.

On entering the Lincoln Hotel at Lincoln the first thing that meets the eye is a life size portrait in oil of Lincoln and Bryan on either side of the business office. These pictures are fully twelve feet high, beautifully framed, and are almost striking in their lifelike fidelity.

Preliminary arrangements for the organization of the new $25,000 cotton seed oil mill company are going along smoothly this week, with every prospect of success. A move is on foot to make the new company a joint corporation with the Otis Gin and Warehouse company, because of the great saving in ground and building arrangements. RAMBLING
RUMINATIONS

(By The Listener.)

If you meet a man of ordinary intelligence on the street and have a moment's conversation with him he will most always say something that would be interesting enough to publish—particularly as people are always interested in what other people say and think. But if you ask that same man to say something short for publication he will study and struggle and flounder until he evolves some labored meaningless thing that is neither important nor interesting. The better way is to write what you think a man thinks, or what people who know him would expect him to think, then ask him to rattle it.

The little spot near the railroad station which has been beautified by grass and trees has made a noticeable improvement in the appearance of that vicinity. Not only that, but it shows that the railroad company has taste and enterprise. If all the people of this town would catch the spirit and follow the example of the railroad company it would change the town so much in a few months that people accustomed to seeing it as it is would have to ask what place it was.

The old band stand which was anchored to the vacant lot south of the post office had endured the sun, rain, wind and dust for years. It became warped, racked, contorted and begrimed until it looked like the latter end of an ill spent fire. Keating, serenely on an old wagon in a new location it now presents a different aspect. It is righted up, rehabilitated and rejuvenated, and looks able to hold the fort until the old wagon goes to pot. It assumes a look of unctious vindication when from its heights the melodious strains of brass music are wafted out upon the dusty air.

For serenity and patience under fire we have got to hand it to Holm O. Bursum. No other man in public life in New Mexico ever faced such an artillery of fire from his opponents. But in the midst of it all he has remained calm and unperturbed and he has never run for cover or retreated a foot. Whatever he may lack in other things, he is not lacking in courage, patience or initiative.

Miss Adelaide Thurston, who spoke at the Elrose Theatre last Friday night, was for many years an actress. She traveled with her own company and stood high in her profession. It is her stage experience that makes her so thoroughly at home and graceful before the public. Her fluency of speech and faultless language were noticeable and her gesticulation natural, graceful and spontaneous. The only rough places on her oratorical highway were caused by the tendency of the pins in her back hair to work out. But her frequent adjustments of these were not only graceful but kind of cute.

James A. Jones, who is operating an onion farm on the raging Cottonwood, irrigates his onions with water from a sulphur well. He is visionary enough to believe the odor of the sulphur will subdue the odor of his onions. He has not as yet formed an opinion of the possible benefit of this nature to be derived from the numerous polecats in that vicinity.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Sept. 16.—Congressman W. R. Green of this district, before leaving today for Washington, declared in an interview his opinion that if the governors of states of the mid-western section would appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission for a reduction in freight and passenger rates, that it would be promptly granted.

Congressman Green said: "It is a singular fact that most of the reductions have been made on the application of the railroads themselves. I believe that if there was a concerted move made by the governors of the middlewest states, in presenting the case, important freight reductions might be effected."

WORTH TRYING.

Congressman Green, of Iowa, says the governors of the middle western states should obtain lower freight rates if they would just ask for them. Mr. Green points out that most of the rate reductions thus far granted have been requested by the railroads themselves. The roads realize they are driving away business with their high rates. Driving it away? Killing it, rather. They just kill the business and let it lie. A source of unpleasant economic odor in the nostrils of the multitude. So the roads, proceeding cautiously, have been asking to be permitted to lower rates in certain instances, such as long-haul livestock business. But this isn't doing the middle west any good. Business out here is suffering because of advantages given to the coast cities on long hauls.

We cannot expect the railroad magnates to rush to our rescue very rapidly, so long as we sit supine, cheering lustily when a crumb happens to be brushed our way.

The course suggested by Representative Green is worth trying. Who will be the first middle-western governor to call upon the others to join with him in petitioning the interstate commerce commission for lower freight rates in this region?

Perhaps it will be the governor of Kansas, who so frequently takes the lead. Who knows?—Wichita Eagle.

After Oct. 1 positively no credit extended.

Salvaging Grain From Elevator That Blew Up

The work of salvaging the grain that was blown up in the world's largest grain elevator, in Chicago, owned by the Armour company, has just been finished. The work of cleaning out the elevator, which it had been estimated would take at least a year, was finished in four months. Blowers were run out from two sides of the elevator, one to the railroad tracks and one to the canal where the barges were loaded.

Danube Is Open to All Nations

Internationalization of Famous River Completed by Action of Interested Allied Powers.

BARRIER AND BATTLEGROUND

Danube Has Long Been Chain Upon Which Romance and History Have Vied With Each Other to Hang Interesting Traditions.

Washington.—The completion of the internationalization of the Danube by the recent formal action of the interested allied powers, announced in Paris dispatches, is the occasion for the issuance from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society of the following bulletin, descriptive of the famous river.

"From the Black forest to the Black sea, over a course 1,800 miles in length, the Danube has long been a chain upon which romance and history have vied with each other to hang interesting traditions and occurrences. Geography, too, has done its share, and although the Volga exceeds its rival in length, and although the Rhine in Thackeray and Hood has had better press agents, the Danube is large enough and beautiful enough to rank in interest with the great rivers of the world.

Less a Highway and More a Barrier.

"There was a time when the Danube was symbolized by an old-fashioned waltz. But since the World War began, nothing but a hesitation typifies the place the river has held in the economic life of the countries through which it runs. It has been less a highway and more the barrier than in prewar days. Not yet does it serve to bind the various nations through which it passes into a friendly and co-operating group. It has been officially open to ships of all nations since the forming of the Danube commission in 1856 and the various states interested long co-operated to improve the navigation facilities, especially in the lower reaches of the river; but political conditions have done much to weaken the economic link which once bound Linz and Vienna to the great grain shipping center of Braila, to which ocean-going vessels can steam, and to the Black sea ports themselves.

"Charming villages, beautiful meadows, picturesque hills crowned with ruined castles, princely palaces, ecclesiastical piles and two of the world's most fascinating capitals are strung along the lengthy and winding river. Thriving industries raise their smokestacks beside the stream whose legendary color is blue but whose true tint varies from a dirty green to a muddy yellow. More tragic than the encroachment of factory smoke has been in late years the sad sight of countless chimneys from which the life-breath of industry seemed to have expired forever.

Hohenzollern Castle on Banks.
"Near its source at Donaueschingen, the river passes between the castle which gave its name to the late ruling family in Germany and a war monument to the Hohenzollern men who fell in the Franco-Prussian war. Farther down it passes through the once-proud capital of Austria-Hungary, where the fine government buildings stand to the despairing inhabitants as a mocking reminder of better days, and beside the Prater, once a deer park and later a pleasure garden noted for its Viennese gayety.

The Danube.
"Still farther along its course just after entering Czechoslovakia, at its junction with the March, there is a towering cliff spired with a monument erected to celebrate 1,000 years of Hungarian nationality. This is Czechoslovakian territory now, and there last summer the Stars and Stripes were draped on the occasion of the visit of a large group of Czech-

Americans to the newly freed land of their fathers.

"Bratislava, now Czechoslovakia's river port, was once the city in whose dignified cathedral the Hungarian kings were crowned. The boat station there reveals the changes which history has wrought. Over the center of the landing the present name is given, but to the left one can see most of the letters of the German name 'Pressburg' and to the right there is the Hungarian name 'Poszony.'

Budapest Not War-Torn.

"Vienna, brooding in its lovely parks, which lack the care that was once lavished on them, and contemplating with cynicism the motto 'Si Vis Pacem, Para Bellum,' whose golden letters decorate the walls of the ministry of war, is a sad sight. But Budapest, still militant, still haughty in the consciousness of its beauty, seems to have been less troubled by the passage of war.

"Food is the main reason Hungary, reduced as it is, still contains some of the best land in Europe. Vienna, its industry stopped, can do little to earn the food it needs. During the summer of 1920 all traffic between the two capitals was stopped by mutual boycotts and although steamers plied the Danube from Linz to Budapest, no through passengers or freight were received.

"To the casual observer, Budapest is the same proud city as of old. The fine parliament building and the imposing palace on the heights across the river, where Admiral Horthy now rules, seem as attractive as before the war. The upper river is still crowded with bathers and with canoes and rowboats in which charming women and stalwart men do their best to attain a spacious coat of tan. Along Franz Josef quay, the promenade adds a lively touch of color to the drab scenes to which the beautiful blue Danube has become accustomed.

Celtic Fortress Still Stands.

"From Zemun, once the last Hungarian port on the Danube, a short trip between low banks brings one to Belgrade, the capital of the new kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, where the steamer rounds the base of the ancient fortress which dates back to the time of the Celts, the Romans and the Franks, and comes to its dock a little way up the Save,

Big Feet No Help in Killing Rattlesnake

James Kiernan, Tusten, N. Y., nearly lost a battle with a four-foot rattlesnake because his feet were too big. Kiernan got both feet on the rattler, but was unable to club it to death as he could not hit the snake without bruising his own toes. He was nearly tired out before he managed to get in a blow which stunned the snake so that he could get off and finish the job.

which here enters the Danube from the south.

"About four hours sail below Belgrade the wide plains give way to hilly country where the Transylvanian Alps curve down toward the jumble of mountains which extend to Montenegro and Greece. It is in this region that the main obstructions of the river occur. But the most famous obstructions and the finest scenery come at the Kazan Duffla and the 'Iron Gates,' where the river has collected a gruesome toll.

"At Ruscuk, the railway traveler from Roumania ferries across a broad and sluggish stream to continue his journey to Sofia and Constantinople; and here the banks of the Danube are lined with huge barges, many of which are still idle. Below Silistria, the river curves to the north and passes through Roumanian territory throughout the rest of its length. At Cerna Voda, it is crossed by one of the longest railway bridges in the world, the last of the many bridges which cross the stream, some of which are now destroyed as a result of the war and post-armistice fighting.

"Braila, 125 miles from the three main mouths of the Danube, is a port for the grain and produce of a rich agricultural region. In prewar days its wharves teemed with life and its huge grain elevators bulged with the rich products of Wallachia and Dobruja, which has seen great development since the Russians gave it to Roumania instead of the more valuable and fertile tracts of Bessarabia. From Galatz to the sea the Danube has already been under the control of an international commission whose duty has been to tame the river and the many nationalities to whom the river is highway or barrier, according to the tides of human passion and national life."

Mexican Government to Refuse to Furnish Oil and Tires to Employees.

Mexico City.—The Mexican government, by refusing free gasoline, tires, repairs and garage service to its employees who use government automobiles, hopes to effect a saving of more than $1,000,000 annually. Several more hundreds of thousands will be saved to the government when army officers are forced to purchase their own gala uniforms, and there will be a still greater saving when all federal employees drawing more than five pesos ($2.50) daily suffer a wage reduction of 10 per cent. These economies which, it is understood, will be made effective shortly, are in line with a program of rigid thrift inaugurated by presidential decree.

Too Many Women in Europe.

Berlin.—Unless recently advocated plans of a Bulgarian solon and a Colorado farmer result in laws permitting farmers and others to have more than one wife are accepted in Germany, from 30 to 40 per cent of the German women are doomed never to have husbands, according to statistics gathered by Albin Michel, a German expert, who declares that Europe's surplus women have increased until they exceed men by 15,000,000.

The forthcoming election for Mayor puts in operation the political machinery and a conference of the bosses ensues, culminating in the selection of THE FIGUREHEAD or silk stocking Willie to act as candidate for Mayor on one ticket while one of the Bosses proceeds to announce on the opposition, and believe me it was some opposition. Willie, realizing he had been framed from a taunt from his best girl puts into motion one of the grandest political upheavals to which this town had ever been subjected. You have often been told of and possibly lived in such a town as this but could never satisfy your mind as to the sinister workings of the grafting crew, but to see this wonderful photoplay will give you a clear insight as to the methods of this one individual of cleaning up his town. THE MEDICINE BOTTLE.

"If you think my life is a pleasant one," said the Medicine Bottle, "I'll tell you from the start that it isn't. In the first place I was in the doctor's office. I saw the people quake and shake when they were told they had to take some bitter medicine. I don't suppose they really shook as much as I thought they did, but I was standing quite still at the time and they seemed to make a great deal of fuss.

"Then I heard someone say, 'Doctors give us horrible stuff. When we think we're sick enough, but after all they make us well. And this fact, too, I think we should tell.'"

"Then someone else said, 'I wonder if the doctor has taken from the medicine bottle which must be shaken. It's hard to swallow it and be held by the nose. While we get down the horrible dose.' 'Such are the things I've heard,' said the Medicine Bottle.

"Did all the people speak like that asked the little White Pills. 'They didn't speak in rhyme like that,' said the Medicine Bottle, 'but those were the things they said which I've changed into rhymes. 'A medicine bottle must have something to cheer it up at times. 'Yes, I'll tell you my life is not a pleasant one. 'I'm never greeted with a smile. Fancy that, White Pills! I'm never greeted with a smile. 'I'm always greeted with a scowl, often with tears and usually with grumbles. 'No one likes me! It is too bad! When I am empty I am filled up again. Oh, I have a horrid life. 'Now, you're not bad to take at all. People take you very easily and without complaint in the least. You are so easy to take. 'You can be swallowed down with a drop of water and no one can taste you. 'But think, Medicine Bottle," said the White Pills, "when you're being taken folks can be pretty sure they're getting something whereas with tasteless pills, as we are, it doesn't seem as though we amount to anything. 'Oh," said the Medicine Bottle, "it is good of you to cheer me up. But I can't very well be cheered up. 'Here I sit on the mantelpiece and three times a day taken down and shaken as though they'd like to kill me, I do believe, and then with groans or tears or complaints I'm swallowed. Or rather, some of the medicine from me is swallowed. 'And the faces that are made about me! Oh, they're awful! Truly, awful faces are made up because of me! 'Now you are taken without all that fuss. You do good even if you don't taste bad. 'But I taste so bad that no one can appreciate me, or rather the medicine in me. 'It's a terrible life that I lead! And when I am emptied I will be filled again. Or for a time I may sit about with a lot of other ugly medicine bottles, and we'll all be put on a shelf that sees very little life, and there we'll gather dust. 'We'll stay there, some of us with a little medicine left in us and outside of us as well, until we're wanted for refilling. 'I started from a doctor's office, and here I am in this house. 'Goodness only knows when I'll go back to the old shelf again. I wish the doctor would take me back. I never did the doctor any harm. 'I helped him all I could. All I knew how! But oh dear, life is very hard when one has to go through it and be scowled at wherever one goes. 'And the very worst thing about it is that I wouldn't really have a great deal of respect or admiration for any one who smiled at me, for it would show they had wretched taste. Yes, that is the saddest part of my sad story! I may do good, but oh, the medicine that I hold, tastes too horrid for mere words to describe!"

"Wheat Gets Thrashed. 'Now, Edwin," said the Sunday school teacher to a member of the juvenile class, "which would you rather be—the wheat or the tares?" "The tares," answered Edwin. "Why?" asked the teacher in surprise. "How can you say that when you know wheat represents the good and the tares the bad?" "Oh, that's all right," replied the precocious youngster, "the wheat gets thrashed and the tares don't."
