MAY DAY MEETING OF LEGION AUXILIARY

The May Day meeting of the Legion Auxiliary was held at the attractive new home of Mrs. Skelt Williams with Mrs. John Runyan Mrs. Pearl Morris and Mrs. Francis Painter as hostesses. As usual the session was crowded with business, the Auxiliary program embracing a variety of interests. A short musical program was given under the direction of the unit music chairman, Mrs. Fred Cole, who is also department music chairman. The general theme was American Folk Songs, illustrated by the company singing the choruses of "Till We Meet Again," and "A Long, Long Trail." "Mother McCreer" was rendered in a very pleasing manner by Mrs. Myron Bruning to the accompaniment of Mrs. Cole.

May being the month of observance and memories, Mrs. Albert Richards gave an article upon the Memorial theme. The FIDAC chairman, Miss Mollie King, read an article upon the "French Woman." A silent tribute was paid to the gold star mothers and women of France, who are mourning the death of their martyred. The typical Russian music was a novelty to most of the listeners and the colorful costumes, their attractions enhanced by the lighting effects, added much to the charm of the entertainment, the last part of which included several lively dances, peculiar to that country. The show, which was under the auspices of the American Legion, was well patronized at both the matinee and the evening performance.

The following story was written by Don Merchant, eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Merchant. The theme is interesting, but it has a tragic ending as the readers will learn.

There was once two little boys. The older one's name was Billy and the young one was named Johnny. Billie was ten and Johnny eight years of age. One hot summer day their mother sent them to the mail box. It was in the morning and so they thought they would like to take a walk through the forest. Johnny said, "Let's camp out all night?" "That does not matter, Johnny replied, we can climb a tree and sleep all night."

Billy agreed with him so the boys climbed a big juniper tree to rest. It was getting dark and there were many stars in the sky. Billy was learning how to shoot a pistol and took it with him so if he saw any doves or quail he could shoot them.

All at once the boys heard a great roar and the bushes parted and they saw a mountain lion. Billy shot him in the head and killed him. When morning came the boys descended from the tree and went home. When they arrived at home their mother was so glad to see them that she whipped them both.

English Laws Explicit as to "Leap Year" Rule

One of the curious complications caused by the addition of an extra day every fourth year is the creation of a calendar date which occurs only once in four years. He who is born on February 29 has, in a strictly technical sense, no birthday save during leap years. In 1910 this prank of the calendar makers came in for a legal dispute when an English father of a son born on February 29 asked whether his son would attain his legal majority twenty-one years after his birth, despite the fact that in that time he would have had only five technical birthdays.

First reference to the law indicated that the boy would have only one legal birthday every four years. Blackstone's language was unequivocal, stating that a man child attains his majority "on the day preceding the twenty-first anniversary of the person's birth."

But further search revealed a law among the statutes of King Henry III, made at Westminster in 1236. The language was ambiguous, the text antique, but the lawyers insisted it left no doubt about its intent, by saying, "... the day increasing in the leap year shall be taken and reckoned on the same month wherein it groweth, and that day, and the day next going before, shall be accounted for one day." King Henry had meant that the boy should have a legal birthday on February 28 in all except leap years.

Egyptian Monarch Was First Wheat Dictator

The first recorded wheat dictator was Henku, monarch of Egypt, who apparently considered it his most worthy claim to fame, having "I was lord and overseer of southern grain" engraved on his tomb. A study of food control for forty-six centuries was made by Mary G. Lacy, librarian of the United States Department of Agriculture, and this is the most ancient deed of price fixing which she unearthed from the dusty tomes.

The story of the pharaoh and his treasurer Joseph, who ran the first recorded wheat corner, is known to all Bible readers, but he lived in 1700 B. C., centuries later than Henku. The Egyptian method of control was by the monarch owning all the land, similar to the government ownership in the Soviet union today.

China as early as 1122 B. C. had a system of crop and price control, chiefly concerned with rice. The government bought the surplus after inspecting each field and deciding how much each farmer might keep. It bought at a normal price in surplus years and sold at the same price in short years, protecting the farmer in one and the consumer in the other.

Claims Long in Dispute

French spoliation claims were demands upon the United States government by American merchants for losses of ships and cargoes between 1793 and 1800 at the hands of the French, whose chief excuse for the depredations was that the United States had violated its pledges to France under the treaty of 1778. By the treaty of September 30, 1800, and by the convention of April 30, 1803, France released the United States from certain treaty obligations, and in return was released from paying the merchants' claims. Between 1800 and 1885 about fifty bills to reimburse the claimants or their descendants came before congress. Appropriations were twice voted, but were vetoed. In 1885 redress was obtained when the adjudication of the claims was given to the court of claims, and decisions were reached awarding some $4,800,000 to the petitioners.

Sanctuary for Birds

In the very densest part of Liverpool's industrial life is a patch of green ground by the cathedral. Here have been placed bird tables, baths, nesting-boxes, and shelters; and here, amid smoke and noise hundreds of birds come every year to build their nests and rear their young. All the common birds, in addition to tits, great white-throats yellow-hammers, and chaff-chaffs have been noted by the city naturalists, and Archdeacon Howson thinks it is the only sanctuary of its kind in a great city.—London Mail.

Planes' Adaptiveness

The army air corps says that a biplane is stronger than a monoplane because the two wings permit truss construction for combat, or where the plane gets sudden strain a biplane is better; also it permits the use of shorter wings to get the same lift. A monoplane has the advantage of getting full efficiency out of the wing, and permits greater visibility. The monoplane's disadvantages are that it is designed for one particular purpose, such as straight flying or long distance.

FALL IS RELEASED FROM PEN MONDAY

TRES RIOS—Albert Bacon Fall went home Monday evening.

The aged former secretary of the interior in the Harding administration was released from the New Mexico state penitentiary at 1:22 p. m. Monday after serving a year and a day sentence for accepting a bribe. He was whisked forty miles an hour in an ambulance to his once beloved home—Tres Rios ranch.

The gray skies opened and loosed rain to settle the dust and make the air cool thus giving Fall a comfortable trip throughout. Just as the long mass of the lowering sun sent shafts through the clouds, then breaking, the former secretary was taken into the ranch entrance.

A party of ten accompanied Fall from Santa Fe to the ranch, including the two ambulance drivers, Mrs. Fall, Mrs. C. C. Chase, Mrs. J. J. Elliott and friends of the family from Santa Fe.

Although still very ill and weak, Fall showed his determination to carry on and fight by his spirit which carried him from the ranks of a New Mexico cattleman to one of the highest offices in the land, and stood the trip well. The family was overjoyed at his release.

HIS OWN FAULT

A merchant was persuaded to buy a parrot. It had traveled far and could jabber in several languages. He ordered it to be sent home.

The same day his wife had ordered a chicken for dinner. On leaving the house she said to the cook, "Mary, there's a bird coming for dinner. Have it cooked for Mr. Richards when he gets home."

Unfortunately, the parrot arrived first and Mary followed instructions. Dinner was served. "What's this?" exclaimed Mr. Richards.

Mary told him. "But for goodness sake, Mary," he said, "this is awful! That bird could speak three languages." "Then why the dickens didn't he say something?" asked Mary.

(Col. W. B. Pistole)

He held in his hand a wooden paddle about ten inches long, three and a half inches wide and an inch thick. In it are set three rows of what appears to be halves of double safety razor blades. The victim approaches and contributes the fee, which we are told is twenty centavos (10c) he then turns and stoops till the muscles of his back are tense. The recipient of the fee then slaps him twice on either side of the back with his open hand and then as many times with the business side of the paddle. Instantly he is covered with blood and it runs down his back and legs to the ground. The victim then starts on his way, beating his freshly wounded back as he goes. Every blow brings out more blood and bystanders standing too close are sometimes splattered with it. As he goes up the beach he occasionally steps out into the water and dips his flail into it. He continued his way along the beach and into a side street for near a quarter of a mile where he lies upon his face with outstretched arms in the dusty street. Here others beat upon him with straps and lashes made of tough vines and then they walk upon his prostrate body. This is to typify the helplessness of one in the hold of sin. Near- by are to be heard the wails and chants of women. We are told that these are wives of the un- fortunate "sinners" making in- tercession for them. Throughout the whole proceeding no sound is heard from the victim.

From this place they go to some place where I understand they undergo some sort of purification. We were unable to find this place and I have since been told that we would not have been permitted to witness this rite had we found the place.

We were told that prior to our arrival 71 had paid the fee to the man with the paddle and blade. We saw twenty or more so that least one man got a pretty good days wages out of the ceremony. Except for his circumference at the waistband his appearance indicated that what he got was equivalent to a fair months earnings.

Of course it would be as unfair to the Filipino people to say that this rite is commonly practiced here as to say that kidnapping for ransom, is a common practice in America. Both do exist, however.

I procured some fairly good pictures of a part of the ceremony and I am inclosing one or two just to support what sounds like a pipe dream.

Late in the afternoon of the same day there were many processions in Manila commemorating the events immediately following the crucifixion. We went to Santo Domingo church in the "walled city" at five o'clock to see one of the most elaborate ones. The police told us that there were six in the city at one time. It took exactly one hour for this procession to pass out of the church yard into the street. There were four bands in line and thousands of men and women carrying lighted candles. There were five images of the different women mentioned in connection with the crucifixion and burial of the Savior. These images are all life sized, erect and mounted on elaborate pedestals supported by four wheels and drawn by several men. The images are all robed in the finest of satin and velvet, embellished with fine embroidery and gold braid. Their hair hung loose in abundant wavy masses to well below the knees. Jewels worth scores of thousands of dollars, gold, adorned each of them. Since it was dusk as the procession wound its way through the narrow streets the pedestals were equipped in some way so as to keep about 100 electric bulbs brilliantly lighted. The last and most elaborately adorned of the five images was that of the Virgin Mary.

After all of these came the re- cumbent image of the Savior in burial robes fit for His royal station, but no doubt much more splendid than was actually provided for Him by His humble fol- lowers. About this image were borne, on long staffs, symbols of many things in connection with the crucifixion; such as the cock, the sponge, the garments, the dice, the spear, the hammers and a number of others.

On Easter morning there were other processions typifying the meeting of Mary and the Master. We saw one of these as we were on our way to a sunrise meeting at Fort William McKinley. It was all beautiful; but un- usual to us in many ways and there was in it all much occasion for serious reflection. This was especially true when we learned that all of the downtown stores were opened on Easter afternoon as a special consideration to the 350 tourists in the city for 48 hours.

SEVEN RIVERS GIRL DIES

Ida Christell Mack, nine year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Allen of Seven Rivers died in a Carlsbad hospital Friday evening as result of injuries sus- tained in an auto accident earlier in the day. Only meager informa- tion about the tragedy was re- ceived here. It was said that the little girl had just gotten out of a school bus and started across the highway when hit by a car trav- eling at a high rate of speed. The girl never regained conscious- ness. Funeral services were held in Carlsbad Saturday afternoon.

PAY DAY

By AMY CAMPBELL

AS HE neared home with his pay envelope in his pocket, Dick Howard had a sense of depression that he hated to go inside and face the exhilarated mood of his wife. She was always elated on pay days, ready for some new adventure in spending.

To have been married a year and a half, with a baby one month old, and not to have been able to save more than a paltry sum from his fairly good wages, seemed over- whelming tragedy. Most of what they saved had gone to pay the hos- pital bill. The doctor was yet to be heard from.

Dick couldn't see how he was so stupid as to turn over nearly every cent to Mae from the beginning. He had given her the credit of being able to manage well. He was still terribly in love with her and as for the baby—well, nothing was too good for the little fellow.

That was the worst of this never getting anywhere. There was the baby's future to consider. He ought to have the best. Especially in edu- cation. Dick felt ugly with himself for being so soft in acceding to Mae's demands for money. He had never once protested and Mae had taken it all for granted that she could have almost anything she wanted.

He had got so sick of hearing her mention over all the things she would do the minute money was in her hands. He had never once heard her say the word—save. If she had it would have been differ- ent. Then they could talk things over.

He hated to spoil the kid's fun. She was lovely in her excitement of getting things together in the house. She must be enmeshed with different deferred payments for various things. He couldn't see how she could be so weak as to fall for that dollar-down stuff. But he hadn't the heart so far to damp- en his enthusiasm.

Not that he didn't want to spend. He told himself he got as much kick as the next one out of throw- ing money for a little fun or spec. But Mae was surely hyped on this installment buying. He wondered where it would bring them if she didn't ease up.

Suddenly he thought of the ab- surdity of his acceptance of her ex- travagance. He saw them in debt which they could never meet. If he had any stuff in him at all he'd tell her. He'd tell her tonight when he handed over the pay. He'd be kind about it but wise and firm. He'd treat her like a fine little kid that just needed advice.

He felt kind of sick about at- tempting it as he opened the door and called his usual "Hi, you two." "Oh, Dick, I've hardly been able to wait to tell you what we've got Baby and I. You know you said you wanted him to have a good edu- cation. Well, he's going to begin right here at home first with his own lovely library. Look—"

She led the way to the living room and displayed the beginning of a group of knowledge volumes for a child from babyhood to—it looked to Dick, like old age. She leaped upon pages with her fingers and pointed excitedly to certain items which attracted her eye. A slow fury came over Dick. He looked at the baby asleep in the new buggy, and at Mae with her eyes glowing over this new pur- chase that was to enchain them with new obligations. He tight- ened his fists to keep them from gripping her shoulders. He felt he could shake and shake her in- sensibility with a more keen de- light than he had ever known in either kissing or loving her.

But when she went over to the baby, cooling above him, calling back that she had had the money for the down payment so she thought it was a splendid thing to get the books, he took a quick step toward them.

"And so you had to get into more debt, didn't you?" he growled above her as she bent to pick up his son.

"And now," she continued, with out looking at Dick, without seem- ingly to have heard him, "it's time Sonny, to tell your Daddy our sur- prise for him—how busy you and I have been trying to spend the pre- cious money he works so hard for. Even with all the things we've saved a lot more than the doctor's bill which came today. We can pay it and clean up most of our debts and start a bank account for Sonny and some time maybe we'll put our rent into buying a house for us all, won't we?"

She looked at Dick, a veritable glow about her.

"Why, you're all tired out and white. Bet you're hungry. But aren't you proud of us, uh?"

He held her as if forever, the baby between them.

"Proud? I'll show you. I've got something to work for. Something too good for a plug like me—"
