THE OLD GRAY MARE

A Carlsbad politician, who made trouble in the democratic ranks his uncle and grandfather. for several years before going over to the GOP, is understood to have admitted he might be induced to run for the United States father had left the room, "how old senate on the republican ticket this fall, provided the platform was is grandpa ?' liberal and constructive. This politician ought not to have made his announcement without so many reservations, because he would prob- his uncle, "without looking it up ably jump through himself to get the nomination without opposition and without any reservations, if such a thing were possible.

He says the reason he quit the democrats was because they strayed so far from Jefferson's principles. He ought to have said the reason he quit the democrats was because they failed to give him anything and would not pay him to make political speeches and make political whoopee.

Like others this politician's announcement is clothed in a bold gesture to get votes. He has endorsed the Townsend plan, the Frazier-Lemke bill and a few other plans to spend more federal money, yet he will probably wind up by saying he is in favor of a reduction in all kinds of expenses and taxes; truly a feat of a magician.

Before the year is over, the average voter will be privileged to hours, the Englishman was amazed hear a lot of wailing and gnashing of teeth over the fact that the to find the mountain apparently American people and the democratic party have departed from the no nearer. Upon asking his friend teachings of Jefferson. But all that will be said or done will not how far the mountain was from move the clock back. We have departed from lots of things, prin- them, he was astonished to learn cipally our manner of living. Jefferson did not believe the government owed its subjects a living, but lots of people now day do.

Jefferson rode horseback and worked fourteen or fifteen hours a day, if necessary, while the politician of today uses the high speed auto, the loud speaker and the radio; quite a departure from the manner of doing things a hundred and fifty years ago.

Most people have not only changed their manner of living, but Englishman sat down, and to his lots of their ideas as well. About the only thing left unchanged is host's surprise, began to remove the political "hooey" put out by some politicians. This is the same his shoes. as it was in the time of the founders of our government.

MORE ABOUT TAXES

A farmer of their neighborhood who constantly complains about taxes was asked by a neighbor recently what he thought ought to be done about it. His answer was: "Close the high schools and have the boys and girls go out and get jobs doing something useful. In this If all the "problems" had been way we could cut our taxes about a third."

Sad to say, this idea is all too common, and it is pernicious and dangerous. Closing any school to lower taxes a few dollars is not a And nothing worried you at allwise investment. If all high schools were closed it would add 4,000,000 boys and girls to the already heavy unemployment rolls. This in itself would cost more for crime prevention than the schools What would the good reformers do, cost.

It is said that crime costs from ten to thirteen billion dollars a year. Our schools cost us three billion. Take that as a basis for figuring and you'll see that the man who would close the schools to reduce taxes is supporting a dangerous theory .--- Muleshoe Journal.

MAKING HIGHWAYS SAFER

The state law requiring all cars to be tested regularly for defective lights, brakes and steering gear is sensible, provided, of course, the law is enforced, otherwise it is a joke. There are still too many cars on the streets and highway mechanically unsafe.

Lots of accidents are due to the fact that the driver of the auto is mentally unsafe, made unsafe by trying to mix liquor with gas. If everything worked out as plan-In some cities, notably El Paso, filling stations are cooperating with the police by reporting all drunken drivers. If other communities This world might be a better place would follow El Paso's example, we could remove at least one hazard from the highway.

Blind Man With His "Seeing Eye Dog" Shows Women How Easy It Is To Iron

THE blind man, Reginald D. White, shown here with his dog Wickee travels from town to town on the Pacific Coast, demonstrating to housewives how easy it is to iron by up-to-date methods. Using a household ironer, he irons shirts, dresses and other clothing and amazes women with his perfect work. In all his demonstra-The Viernes Bridge club meets tions he asks members of his audience to sit down and iron a few pieces

Arrangements also are made for him to talk before high schools, junior colleges, luncheon clubs and other organizations. Newspapers give Mr. White and his dog much attention.

Wickee, herself, is a marvel of canine intelligence and no little crowd attractor. She understands numbers up to ten and many words and helps her master during demonstrations by bringing articles upon direction, for him to iron.

Wickee is a German Shepherd and outside of being Reginald White's eyes, is a well known NBC radio personality and is president of the Western Seeing Eye Owners Association, the only dog alumni organization in the world. She is a graduate of the class of 1930 of the Seeing Eye of Morristown, N. J., the dog training school made famous by Alexander Woollcott in his radio broadcasts.

At life's kaleidoscope. Those bits of glass of varied hue

That formed a thousand scenes, So like the hours of joy and bliss When we were in our teens. They seem to change in after years,

A sunburst or a rose. May be more like the setting sun, When twilight nears its close.

Sometimes a star will tumble down, A spear may form instead, And seem to pierce the heavenly blue With shafts of green and red. Then bit by bit they fall apart Like clashing colors met. Or scenes we try to memorize Then study to forget.

And so it is with each of us, Who try so hard to plan. That we may feel each passing day, We do the best we can. Then fate steps in to take a turn: We watch our castles fall. Now comes the time we win or los And learn to rise or fall.

But most of all I like to feel, That just another turn. May bring the picture that we want If we but live to learn. Without the night there is no day, Nor life without its hope. And someday fate will change the scene, In our Kaleidoscope.
