REMEMBERING THE OLD MAN

This country is overrun with special days and weeks. But we are in favor of some of them, especially Mother's Day and Father's

But being many miles from one's family and remembered on special occasions makes the world a little brighter.

In a somewhat lighter vein than many poems about Father's Day was one by Nat Campbell and published Sunday by H. R. Hunter in his column in The El Paso Times. Under the caption, "Father," it reads:

Who is th' guy who pays all th' bills Fer all th' furbelows and frills? Father.

Who sits up sometimes all night Half dumb with financial fright? Father. Who asks th' banker for a loan

And listens to his doleful moan? Father. Who drinks just ordinary beer

While cocktails are for daughter dear? Father. Who needs a haircut all th' time But can't afford an extra dime?

Father. Who sends th' children off to school To play football and act th' fool? Father.

Who gets no hing for himself-Looks like he's ready for th' shelf? Father.

Who'll finally lie down and die While all th' children sob and cry?

Father. Who will leave insurance "dough" To be spent in a year or so? Yer old man.

THEY PLAY "FOLLOW THE LEADER"

That humans are somewhat like sheep, in that they follow the leader, was demonstrated last week at the expense of a number from Artesia on the "Good Will Trip."

Somewhere along the line a woman driver who had nothing to do with the parade, pulled into the string of cars. She evidently knew just where she was going, for she turned off up in the mountains and was followed for 8 or 10 miles by about half of the Artesia ages.

The joke was on the "good willers," who would not have been on the trip had they themselves not been leaders.

But it does demonstrate how easy it is to take the wrong road if one follows a false leader. Perhaps there is a moral or lesson, or material for a sermon, in these services.

An Ancient Indian Brewery Is Found

The oldest brewery in the country - a plant which apparently turned out a flood of powerful drink centuries before Columbus discovered America - has been found by Smithsonian Institute archeologists in the Big Bend country of West Texas.

Frank M. Setzler, Smithsonian official, came upon the plant forty-five miles north of Dryden, Texas, recently while he was trying to trace the civilization of an old cave-dwelling branch of the Indian race.

Setzler had previously explored dwelling caves in the limestone cliffs of the area, finding cooking implements, remains of fires and

The new cave, however, turned out to be a highly-specialized one The accumulation of debris, particularly the taus, or stones which were heated in fires and dumped into pots for cooking, was many times thicker than in the caves used as homes. It indicated that this was a liquor factory.

The Indians of historic times have prepared a potent alcoholic drink from the desert sotol plant and it is reasonable to assume, Setzler said, that the formula of its preparation was handed down from the prehistoric races. It is made by heating the ground-up plants, pressing out the juice, and allowing it to ferment.

In the cave Setzler and his assistants found one large boulder, the top of which had been ground out to the depth of a foot, and a July. large pestle roller nearby. This huge pot was apparently the fer-

I SAW YOU barely miss a little boy on a tricycle this afternoon and heard you yell, "Get the H- out of the way! Don't you know any better than to ride in the street?" He didn't answer because he hasn't learned to talk very well yet. So I'm going to answer for him.

No, the little boy doesn't know any better than to ride his tricycle in the street. He has been warned not to, but little boys don't always heed warnings. Some adults don't either, especially traffic warnings; for example, the one limiting the speed of automobiles.

I'm going to tell you something about that little boy. He has a mother who endured considerable inconvenience, anxiety and suffering to bring him into the world. He has a father who has worked hard and made many sacrifices to make him healthy and happy. The supreme purpose of their lives is to have their little boy grow up to be a useful man.

Now stop a minute and think. If you should kill a child, how would you feel facing its parents? What excuse could you possibly offer Him whose Kingdom is made up of little children?

Children, my hasty friend, were here long before you or your automobile were thought of. All the automobiles on earth are not worth the life of one little boy. We don't know what that little boy may some day be. But we know what you are, and it's unimportant. We could get along without you, but we can't spare a single little boy on the street.

New Mexico's Beauty Beckons Travelers Who Are Bent on an Enjoyable Vacation

This is the time of the year when the call of the wild crops out in the worst stay-at-homethat urge to get out under the sun and swing a wicked cast to tantalize the trout—the hunger for camp-fire smoke in your eyesants up your pants-bugs in the food-and the other innumerable ecstacies that comprise the ordinary mortal's vacation. And if you're searching for good trout holes, or mammoth mountain passes to gape at, or just a quiet place to take your leisure away from the rush of things, New Mexico, now at her best, offers you every opportunity to go native in the morning when it's 10 below, to years. a big way, declares Abie Graham souse your face in a pan of ice The Amarillo Sunday News and steaming breakfast of flap jacks

Northern New Mexico is particularly suited to those who like to along, with as few stops as necessary, while the other side of the state takes in vast Carlsbad Caverns where you'll find it necessary to give up one precious day to see even a small part of the holebut don't get me wrong, it's worth it—and the regular mountain hangout, Ruidoso, which every year is full and running over, if you prefer that type of amusement.

Of course, while you're out touring this exceptional baby-state, it wouldn't be fair to leave out the groom. extraordinary White Sands near Alamogordo, and Junior will have a lovely time digging in the sand while the elders take snapshots of this geological phenomena. And then you'll probably want to swat a few golf balls around the highest golf course in the United States-or is it the world?-at Cloudcroft, but don't over-exercise because the high "multitude" might get you down.

In Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Las Vegas and Taos the curio lover will find a perfect mecca, with shops beckoning him on every corner, and the majority emerge drunk with the power of securing unique little what-nots to show the folks back home, and fail to sober up until they discover how their pocketbook has shrunk in the meantime.

From Las Vegas, we suggest a jaunt over seventeen miles of the worst road in the state, to one of New Mexico's beauty spots-El Porvenir. Tucked securely away in the mountains, just at the foot of the famous Hermit's Peak, you'll crane your neck to take it all in. You'll go up and up and up a narrow ledge that doesn't look big enough for a cat to squirm by, but you'll meet cars and then somehow or other muster your courage and look down some several thousand feet to the churning waters of the river below. Oh, yes, it's quite a thrill-and a thorough investigation of El Porvenir Lodge will convince even the most skeptical that the trip was well worth the while.

Then for the air-minded, the long ten-mile up-grade over Holman Hill, between Las Vegas and Taos, running through beautiful Tres Ritos Canyon, is sure to charm -just ten miles of going into the skies — and it's a grand drive, what with 10,000 foot aspen, water running uphill, straight-up road that you would swear looks perfectly level, and a few other seemingly impossible antics of the mountains to divert you. The Taos Pueblos, where you can see the Indians by the flocks wearing dirty bed blankets around their hips-how they keep them there is a mystery-and women with shoplifting bags around their legs-the order at the entrance that you report to the governor, and do not take pictures until you have paid dearly for such privileges, all come under the heading of a "swell time" although you'll probably wonder afterwards why you did it.

From Taos to Eagle Nest Lake -a puny little pond spread out several thousand acres-the Pal Fletchado Pass, which takes you up 9,083 in the air, is one of the most beautiful drives in the state, after which you may go swimming at Eagle Nest, investigate the possibilities of the huge mountain trout which good fishermen yank out of the lake, or climb on over the hill and traverse the switchbacks into Red River Canyon-in our opinion the place in the state to spend the week end, or more if you have time.

A drive through the Red River Canyon from Red River proper to Questa - a Mexican-Indian town some twenty miles distant-will be a high spot in your memory after which you must climb out Red River pass and continue through Cimarron Canyon, in which the spectacular Palisadesgreat sheafs of rock stacked thousands of feet in the air-will demand that you get out and take

All in all, it's really a swell time to go vacationing-but don't forget the mentholatum for chapped lips, or the oil for sun-burned and blistered backs. If you can build a fire in a wood stove on the first attempt, minus burned hands, blackened clothes or ashes on the floor, you are one of the few lucky ones, and don't go

Bureau Estimates New Mexico's Share at $37,000,000 for This Season

Headed by Carlsbad Caverns and by the Indian ceremonials in August, the attractions of New Mexico are expected to enrich the state by at least $37,000,000 in tourist expenditures in 1938, according to an estimate announced by Joe H. Thompson, director of a tourist bureau, with national headquarters and maps received. He includes only the number of motor parties in touch with his own bureau.

Although this is the largest free travel bureau in the country, the expenditures of all visitors arriving by train, bus and other means of transportation and motorists served by other bureaus would amount to a considerably larger Mrs. J. M. Story, telephone 158.

"Motor tourists' spending habits in prior years," says Thompson, "indicate that they will spend about $9,200,000 in New Mexico's retail stores; about $7,800,000 in restaurants and dining rooms; $7,400,000 for hotel rooms, over-night bungalows and other lodgings; another $7,400,000 for gasoline, oil and automobile supplies; $3,000,000 for recreation and amusement and about $2,200,000 Watson and family, several days for incidentals."

Largest Motorcade, Canada to Mexico, May Pass Artesia

Artesia may be visited in September by the largest motorcade to ever cross the United States in any direction, when the "Three-Nations Good Will Caravan" from Canada passes through New Mexico on the way to Mexico City. More make the trip.

It has been definitely announced the tourists will visit the Carlsbad Caverns and Carlsbad, so it is presumed the cars will be routed down the Pecos Valley, at least from Roswell.

The trip is being sponsored by the U. S. Highway 85 Association, which is striving for an all-weather, dustless north and south highway from Canada to Mexico. Highway 85 runs the other side of the mountains, but it is presumed that highway will be left at San Antonio, Highway 70 taken from there to Roswell and Highway 285 from there to Carlsbad through Artesia.

The caravan is to start at Prince Albert, Canada, and is to go through North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, New Money from this bank is flowing daily into the hands of responsible business firms and individual borrowers - and flowing back again as these loans are repaid.

We're Lending Money

Good loan applications are welcome. We judge each one fairly on its merits, taking into consideration the character, and financial responsibility of the borrower.

There are no unreasonable restrictions; there is no "coldness" in our attitude toward any legitimate proposition. We want to lend money-and we are lending. You are invited to discuss vour requirements with us.

THE three granddaughters of Phineas Cobb listened to the reading of his last will and testament. "To my granddaughter, Annie Cobb Youngs, $10,000. To my granddaughter, Martha Weeks Stringer, $10,000. To my granddaughter, Helen Cobb, the Chinese cabinet in my library, together with all my books and collection of engravings."

"That is all," said the lawyer. "All?" repeated Mrs. Youngs. "What becomes of the house and its three, share and share alike." "That would be the legal division," admitted the lawyer, "unless your grandfather disposed of it in some other manner.'

"You should know that," protested Mrs. Youngs.

He shook his head. "You remember that my partner attended to Mr. Cobb's affairs, and that I was recalled from the West because of my partner's death, which occurred a week before that of Mr. Cobb. I can only administer the estate according to the will, and if you care to carry the matter into court it can be decided definitely.'

Mrs. Youngs said she preferred to consult her husband, and Mrs. Stringer echoed the remark. Helen Cobb, the youngest and unmarried one of the cousins, arose and thanked the lawyer for his services, kissed her cousins goodby and went

"Grandfather treated her abominably," declared Annie Youngs to Martha as they rode to the railroad station. "She worked for him, took care of him when he was sick, and made a slave of herself-now, she is turned out with that wretched Chinese cabinet and a lot of musty old books. She will have to find something to do. And she's all alone in the world. She's a good nurse, Martha."

In the meantime Helen Cobb walked home like one in a daze. The blow she had received had been a staggering one, deprived her not only of a home and sustenance, but of faith in the grandparent she had loved and cherished in his lonely old age.

"It must be a mistake," she whispered as she let herself into the great, silent house. Maggle, the cook, came creaking upstairs, her "You look all wore out, Miss

"I expect you ought to see Doctor Hare-your nerves are all unstrung, child."

Helen blushed. "I don't need a "There's a young doctor thinks

"I am sorry about your grandfather-it is puzzling, for he was a man of strong intellect up to his death. But I am glad, Helen, for another reason-now you can marry me all the sooner. I am still struggling, but there is enough for two-and I would never have dared ask an heiress to become my wife!"

the disinherited granddaughter and the poor young doctor. "I am heiress to a Chinese cabinet and a library of 5,000 volumes!"

And so they became engaged-declared Helen. The Chinese cabinet was of lacquer, with gorgeous fighting cocks in brilliant red in relief on the bits of Chinese jewelry of small value; the second one was filled with a silk shawl of cobweb finepess, and the third one contained an ivory fan delicately carved. The third drawer was shallow and came out entirely, disclosing another secret drawer behind it.

"How delightful," exclaimed Helon, pulling on the red silk tassel that formed a handle. The secret drawer opened with a jerk and a mass of envelopes fell into Helen's lap. Upon examination they proved to be deeds to the property-house and gardens-transferring all of the real estate to Helen Cobb. Another paper directed her to open each volume in the library. This they did in the presence of the amazed lawyer, and in each book was found a new $100 bill.

"You are quite an heiress after all," said the friendly lawyer, shaking hands with the girl.

"Yes-but-Jack, you're not going?" She followed the doctor to the door. His honest young face was white and set. "After all this I cannot offer you my modest-" There her soft white hands pressed

The band was an important factor in carrying the spirit of the trip into the mountains, by playing for the crowds which greeted the Artesians at every stop. And at Cloudcroft, where the caravan spent the night, a uniformed band from Alamogordo extended greetings from that city. The two bands united to play several numbers.

Other high spots of the trip were three ball games and two barbecues, one each noon. Leaving Artesia shortly after 7 o'clock Wednesday morning, the caravan first stopped at Hope, where the band played and where a few Hope people joined the Artesians for two days of fun. Duncan was the second stop and the band again played there.

At Pinon the Artesia and Hope delegates were met by the largest gathering of mountain people ever to greet the valley folks on a 'Good Will Tour." There in the late morning, a Pinon men's team was defeated at softball by a team of Artesians. But the hosts evidently forgot the defeat at the noon hour, when an exceptionally fine barbecue dinner was served.

At Weed in the afternoon, the band played and a men's team composed of "so-called softball players" representing the Artesia Chamber of Commerce was whipped by a girls' team from Eating a meal has exactly the same effect, except that the time is much slower. The Mayo experiments showed that finger temperatures start a rather sharp, quick rise in about an hour and a half after a meal.

The toes also rise in temperature after a meal, provided nature has to call on them. At about 67 degrees Fahenheit, for example, only the fingers are likely to warm. But at 75 degrees the toes will give

There is no change in blood pressure accompanying these temperature rises, the physicians said.

It was suggested that the warming effect of highballs on the feet may be one reason why some people stagger with too many drinks. The reason for the temperature

Chemist Asks Oil Men Question At Meeting Monday Evening

"What are you going to have when your gas is gone, wasted as it is now?" Dr. E. P. Dr. Schoch was brought to Amarillo by the association to explain some of the problems facing the oil and gas industry today. His Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brown and subject was "Natural Gas and Its

Elections in State

The total cost of municipal elections in New Mexico held last spring in 35 of the 61 incorporated cities, towns and villages of the state amounted to $8,988.53, a per capita cost of eight cents, based upon estimated population for 1937.

The total costs ranged from $6 in Grenville to $3,346 in Santa Fe. Several municipalities showed election costs that averaged as low as one cent per capita.

The highest per capita was 22 cents in Santa Fe. Roswell, with an estimated population of 12,500 spent $282.46, or 2 cents per capita. Gallup, with an estimated population of 6,700 spent $874.41 or 13 cents per capita. Magdalena spent 14 cents and Socorro 13 cents. In Farmington the per capita cost was 11 cents and in Hot Springs 12 cents.

Other municipalities showed Wedding Announcements, printed costs varying from 1 cent to 10
