BUILD UP ARTESIA NOW

(An Editorial)

It rather puts the boosters of the city on the spot. With further development of the oil industry, the housing problem has become acute. Although some are here for their health, the majority of Artesia business men are here for business reasons and to grow up with this thriving little city.

It is to their interests to see that newcomers are comfortably situated and happy. Many have been heard to say, "We should build more houses," but few are so doing.

Several houses are under construction. But it will require several dozen to accomodate the present population. And more new citizens are to come. The situation became especially apparent the last few days, with the new activity in the Maljamar field and the new refinery bringing in many families.

Now is the time to build and expand Artesia. We hope the building program does not get out of hand, but it should not. Rental property in Artesia is a good investment and pays good dividends, even to those who are fair about it and do not take advantage of the law of supply and demand. Build good rent houses-rent them fairly-help make Artesia grow and become a larger, happier city.

And in the meantime, the Chamber of Commerce has issued a plea that persons, who do not ordinarily rent rooms, open their houses to the newcomers until the situation has been met. Be good citizens and notify the chamber. And then rent rooms

OLD AMERICAN INSTITUTION DYING

The demise of another old American institution, dear to the hearts of boys throughout the land, is being hastened because of labor trouble. The Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus folded its canvas the other day and abandoned its 1938 schedule.

Years ago there were a number of large circuses which toured the country, bringing many wonders to millions of boys and girls, both young and old. Smaller circuses played the "tanks." The coming of either type of circus was always looked forward to from the day the bill posters pasted their gaudy sheets on barns and fences.

With the closing for the remainer of the season of "the world's greatest show," there is only one of the larger circuses left on the road, the Al G. Barnes show, which is Ringling owned. With it will be combined part of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey ages. Circus, which will make it as great, or greater, than the parent outfit.

But the sad part is that one circus can fill only half as many en- minister. gagements as two, and thousands will miss their annual visit to the big top with its pink lemonade, peanuts for the elephants and its clowns, acrobats and trained animals. When we were a boy we saw every large circus on the road, some years as many as four of them, as well as the old "Wild West" shows. The boy who has never seen a circus has missed a lot and we feel sorry for those who will be deprived of this pleasure.

It costs a tremendous amount of money to run a circus and we fear that closing of the big show may hasten its ultimate demise.

THE REAL COWBOY

Radio, screen, fiction and other entertainment media have given the American people a picture of the cowboy which is no more authentic than similar versions of the newspaper man, business man, plant worker or shopgirl.

Over the air we have heard a cowhand from Brooklyn nasally drawling a song of the range; on the screen we see a manicured citybred fellow swaggering around in chaps and broad-brimmed hat, and even in rodeos we witness cowboys who gained their training around stockyards of large cities. A popular hit song that sentimentally headed a cowboy for "the last round-up" was composed by a young man who had never been near a ranch.

Whatever we think of this spuriousness in representation of Western life, we may be consoled in finding none of it in the Texas Cowboy the feast, not with old leaven, who cannot do something to aid a spected for the first time. Scientists Remain

World Looks "Silvery" After Underground Stay in Cold Depths

Two scientists last week were getting used to a "silvery" world with buildings that looked "different" after a month in the cold depths of Mammoth Cave.

For thirty-three days Dr. Nathaniel Kleitman and Bruce Richardson of the University of Chicago stayed in their "apartment" on "Audubon Avenue," the main passageway in the cave's recesses.

They sought to adjust themselves to a twenty-eight hour day instead of the usual twenty-four. Richardson did but Dr. Kleitman

The experiment was another in a series of long range study of the 'why and how" of sleep, conducted by the University of Chicago since

As they emerged, both bearded and wearing heavy hooded garments to protect them from the cold, Dr. Kleitman said the earthy smell of vegetation was the most striking odor they noticed.

"The houses looked different," said the stocky, 43-year-old Dr. Kleitman. Tall, 25-year-old Richardson said "everything looked silvery to me," as they glanced about them.

Approximately seventy-five persons, including Mrs. Kleitman, informally welcomed the men. The scientists soon shed most of the heavy outer garments because of the heat. In the cavern, which had been their home for four and a half weeks, the temperature stayed at 54 degrees.

"I guess we missed hot baths more than anything else," said Richardson.

There are at present 183 families of Indians, totaling 750 persons, on this reservation, which contains nearly 475,000 acres of beautiful timbered mountain land and small, fertile valleys.

Surprisingly, the Apaches have shown a disposition to work and they have made some real progress economically. Their chief income so far is from livestock. Last year they sold 2,064 cattle, and their entire receipts from all livestock sources, including wool and mohair, was $105,000. They own 6,000 purebred cattle, 8,000 sheep, 4,000 goats and many horses.

Mr. Womack, a resident of Artesia for the last few years, is the son of Mrs. Nora Womack who, with her late husband, Dr. Womack, made their home in Texarkana where he practiced his profession. The bridegroom is a graduate of Texarkana High School and since moving to Artesia has been employed in the oil field east of here. He is the brother of Dr. C. L Womack, prominent physician and surgeon of Artesia and Carlsbad.

Following the ceremony, the young couple made a short honeymoon trip through Louisiana. While in Monroe, La., they were house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kennedy, close friends of the bridal pair, and were entertained with a number of festivities. Since returning to Artesia they are at home with Mrs. Nora Womack on South First Street.

MISS HELEN VERA FUNK BECOMES BRIDE

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Funk of Artesia announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Vera Funk to Mr. Ray Sylvester, which took place at the First Baptist Church in Santa Fe, Saturday, The beautiful ceremony was held in the church with it's pastor, the Rev. Bert Gould, of-Shasta daisies were used to form the altar where the vows were exchanged.

The bride was a popular member of the younger set in Artesia until very recently. She was picturesquely dressed in a formal gown of white organza with floor length skirt and a tiny bolero jacket of the popular mode. Her veil was fingertip length of white tulle and was arranged on a Juliet cap. The bridal bouquet was white in the Colonial style arrangement, which was apropos with the entire costume. She is a graduate of Draughon's Business College of Corpus Christi, Texas. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the traditional wedding march played on the organ by Mrs. Bert Gould. Bridesmaids attending the bride Twelve new members of the association were taken in at the meeting Monday. Mr. Barham said there will be an open forum at the next meeting, Monday evening, Aug. 8, when an endeavor will be made to find out whether valley farmers like the present cotton program, what changes they would like to see made and if they would prefer to drop the program.
