JENNYSLIPPER FLOAT IN PARADE--It was the only float in the parade, but the Muleshoe Jennyslippers should have been very proud of their ornate float in the annual July Fourth 'Freedom Parade.' The float was at the end of the parade, and as can be noted from the detail, was very carefully constructed by the Muleshoe Jennyslippers, who are at the forefront of most civic activities in Muleshoe. The Jennyslippers also purchased all of the fireworks for the annual display to close out a full day of activities in Muleshoe. (Journal Photo)

Beef Ads State Facts

About Dietary Guidelines

Advertisements indicating that a lean, trim, cooked 3-ounce portion of beef fits within the dietary guidelines are stating fact, according to specialists with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

Last week the Center for Science in the Public Interest (CPSI), a Washington-based consumer-interest group, labeled Beef Industry Council ads which contain this statement as misleading.

"Lean beef is included in dietary guidelines from the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services, the American Heart Association and other national health organizations," said Dr. Mary Kinney Sweeten, an Extension nutrition specialist.

"The CSPI didn't dispute this fact, but based its criticism on claims that the average serving of beef is more than three ounces and that popular beef products, such as hamburgers, contain large amounts of fat," Sweeten said.

"The dietary guidelines recommend 6-7 ounces of lean meat, poultry, fish or protein alternate each day," she said. "If you overeat these or any other foods, it can lead to overweight and obesity."

"So whether you eat your protein food for the day in the form of six ounces of lean beef for dinner, or two three-ounce servings at two different meals, you're still within the guidelines," said the nutritionist.

"It's true that some of our most popular foods are high in fat, often because they're fried. Eating lots of chicken fried steak, fried chicken, fried fish, fried hamburgers, fried pies and french fries will put excess fat in your diet," she said.

The nutritionist said the key to including beef or any meat, poultry and fish in a healthy diet is selecting lean cuts, knowing the recommended serving sizes, balancing them out over the day and choosing low-fat cooking methods.

According to Dr. Dan Hale, an Extension meat scientist and expert in beef marketing, consumers can easily find lean cuts in the meat case.

"Most retailers are now removing all exterior fat or trimming it to less than 1/4 inch," he said. "Beef is also being pre-cut into serving sizes for smaller, more convenient packages," he said.

"Results of a recent national beef market basket survey conducted by meat scientists at Texas A&M showed that over 42 percent of beef retail cuts had no external fat and the overall fat thickness for steaks and roasts was .14 inch," Hale said.

"Consumers are also buying more lean ground beef. Figures on the distribution of ground beef type showed almost 60 percent of the ground beef in stores is lean or extra lean," said the specialist.

"Since many retailers clearly label lean cuts and the type of ground beef, consumers can use these as guides to selecting lean beef," he said.

Figures Show Infant Care Needed

Last week's release of Census Bureau figures showing that 51 percent of mothers with children under a year old are now in the labor force came as no surprise in Texas.

"In 1986, the demand for infant care was cited as part of a crisis in Texas child care by the United Way of Texas Child Care Working Group," said Diane T. Welch, a home economist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"In the past two years the needs have only increased, due to several factors which are sending or keeping the mothers of very young children in the labor force," she said.

"Given the economic conditions in Texas, many new mothers simply can't afford to leave their jobs."

"A significant percentage of the births are also occurring among women in their thirties who have invested heavily in a career and are reluctant to take to much time away from it," Welch said.

"After years of having two incomes, other families don't want to reduce their standard of living or may find it difficult to support their financial obligations on one income," said Welch, an Extension family life specialist at Texas A&M University.

Whatever the reasons for returning to work, new parents often face a difficult task in locating infant care. She said once they find it, quality should be a major concern.

"Minimum standards call for a loving caregiver and a clean healthy, stimulating environment in which there are no more than five infants to one caregiver," said Welch.

"Parents should also be aware that consistency in caregiving is extremely important for infants, since it helps develop feelings of security," she said. "Research in child development indicates that infants should have no more than one primary caregiver other than the parents."

Welch said that since 35 percent of the labor force in Texas are parents with children under six, employers are becoming more involved in providing child care or child care information, referral and counseling services.

"While the number of employers providing such services is fairly small, parents should inquire so they can explore all available options," she said.

Hi-Tech Process Yields Lo-Cal Fat Substitute

Hi-tech is changing the egg industry. "For years, Americans have said, 'an egg is an egg.' Now new technologies being developed may make future questions key on 'what kind of eggs do you want?'" Said Dr. David Mellor.

Mellor, a poultry marketing specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service, said a company has now developed a new low-calorie fat substitute that can be made from egg albumen or dairy whey. The company also is testing other agricultural products for this use.

"The egg protein or dairy protein particles are heated and blended until they are so small--so tiny--that the tongue perceives them as a fat taste," Mellor said.

Mellor said this fat substitute can be used in products like ice cream or table spreads but cannot be used in place of a fat that must be heated or cooked, such as in a cake or for frying.

"The new fat substitute can cause a major calorie reduction in adapted foods. The product contains less than one-fifth the calories of the fat it is replacing. Roughly, three grams of fat are being replaced with one gram of protein," Mellor said.

Another product that utilizes two new technologies may change the eggs served in many food service establishments, including schools and nursing homes as well as fast food chains, Mellor said.

"One process makes it possible to remove as much as 90 percent of the cholesterol from the egg yolk, researchers indicate. The other process, ultra high temperature pasteurization of the liquid egg, kills any harmful bacteria but does not cook the egg," Mellor explained.

This pasteurization process should soon make it possible to store the liquid egg products up to two months on store shelves, under refrigeration but not frozen, Mellor said.

"These new egg products would be used in the food products we buy in the grocery store," Mellor said.

"They are not expected to be sold to the consumer, but may be the basis of consumer products--frozen low-cholesterol omelets, for example--developed for specialized markets."

He said companies are developing these products for food manufacturers or restaurant, hotel and institutional trade.

Research was done at the University of Nebraska and the University of Wisconsin for the cholesterol reduction process. The pasteurization process was developed at North Carolina State University.

ALL SET TO BEGIN PARADE---Arnold Morris and Margaret Beard are all set and ready to start the Wheelchair Parade which was held Friday afternoon at the Muleshoe Nursing Home.

A large crowd turned out for the parade at 11 a.m. Monday, and people said they enjoyed the morning parade, as the temperature was not unbearably hot as it had been for the many years the parade was held at 5 p.m. on the day of the Fourth of July Celebration.

With the parade route stretched out, people lined the parade route most of the way, lounging in lawn chairs and sitting in the shade on lawns and alongside businesses.

Disappointment was expressed that only one float was entered into the parade this year, and there were no riding clubs.

Late in the evening, the city park filled up for picnicking, visiting and enjoying entertainment, which included the Ozark Country Express, a professional entertainment group, topped off by the annual fireworks display.

Texas A&M chemist says people may need non-toxic arsenic compound for survival

COLLEGE STATION — Arsenic conjures up the picture of a good murder mystery, but it also plays a part in keeping us alive, says a Texas A&M University chemist who has become a detective of sorts.

"Lobster, shrimp and crab are relatively rich in arsenic, but don't worry about it. It's in a chemical form that is nontoxic, may be necessary for survival, and may even have a beneficial effect, although what it does nobody knows," says Dr. Kurt Irgolic.

He is working with a team of scientists worldwide to unlock some of the mysteries surrounding arsenic.

"Toxicity is a question of dose," he explained. "We're interested in finding out how arsenic compounds migrate through the food chain, including how they affect humans. We've already developed an analytical method to determine chemical forms of arsenic in rice, crab, water and the soil."

'Twas A Very Busy July 4th Celebration

Events July 1-4

Drought Stretches Past Farm, Ranches

Drought effects are mounting in Texas each day, and those effects are beginning to reach well beyond the farm gate.

The business sector, as well as cities and towns, are feeling the pinch of the drought, which is threatening the state's fragile economic turnaround, said Dr. Carl Anderson.

Anderson, an economist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service, said some cities and towns in the state's drier areas have imposed water rationing programs. Officials elsewhere have asked residents to voluntarily cut water use and practice tight conservation measures.

The Texas crop, forage and livestock situation is deteriorating rapidly as summer begins, Anderson said.

"Ranchers in hardest hit south and southwestern counties are continuing to market or move their cattle in an effort to sustain some of their foundation herds. Large offerings of cattle are being consigned to local auction markets, creating depressed prices in a number of areas," Anderson said.

Maintenance feeding of livestock continues heavy in the driest areas, said Anderson, although hay supplies are low and new crop cuttings there are minimal. Some ranchers continue to burn prickly pear cactus to feed their cattle. Dryland sorghum yield potentials are declining fast and corn and other crops also are greatly stressed, Anderson said.

Although Texas counties were not among those in the 13 states where the U.S. Department of Agriculture opened Conservation Reserve Acreage (CRP) land to haying late last week, Texas officials in charge of drought documentation said this work is being rushed for federal review. Spearheading the move is Terry Harman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service state executive director, and ASCS state committee members.

When Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng opened CRP acreage to haying, the move was designed to provide hay for livestock in the most critical areas. Farmers in the designated counties can harvest hay on the CRP acres for 30 days if they give up a proportional part of the program payments and meet other specified conditions.

Lyng said determination of eligible counties will be made on a county-by-county basis by Federal Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service officials, who receive complete documentation of drought from state ASCS leaders, including Harman in Texas.

County CRP eligibility will be made based on the fact that a county has been approved for the emergency haying and grazing of Acreage Conservation Reserve (ACR) and Conservation Use (CU) acreage, and use of the Palmer drought severity index as reported jointly by the USDA, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The drought severity index, often called "Long Term Palmer Drought Index," is a measure of prolonged and abnormal moisture deficiencies.

Slide Show

In Elk Hunt

In the searing blasts of summer in this area, Terry Hutto presented a slide show on elk hunting in Colorado for the Muleshoe Rotary Club on Tuesday at noon.

Setting for the slides was the White River National Forest in northwestern Colorado, and as it covered a hunting/fishing trip in September, the aspens were turning, there were slides of a snowstorm and the countryside was beautiful.

In his humorous presentation, Hutto told of adventures with flatland mules, used for packs, and an impromptu mule rodeo that scattered canned goods all over the mountainsides.

He said they camped at 9,000 feet; hiked to 11,000 feet and the peaks shown in the slides were at 13,000 feet.

Two other local men were on the hunt, where they caught brook trout, but bagged no elk, included Barry Cowart and Larry Hancock.

The trio's adventures proved to be informational and entertaining.

George Neiman spent his first meeting as president, and thanked the Rotarians who helped with the world champion mule shoe pitching contest on July 4th. He also presented world champion mule shoe pitcher, James Turnbow with his trophy for the event.

New members announced included Turnbow, Gene Atkins and Howard Watson.

An embarrassed Rotary Sweetheart, Stacy McElroy, drew the name of her father, Don, as the Polio Plus drawing winner. He was presented a $10 gift certificate from Poytors.

Guests at the meeting were James Cox, Robin Cowart, John Bryan Cowart, Scott Campbell, Reagan and Eric McElroy, Barak Harlan, Douglass Field and Albert Lopez.

South Plains Fair Catalogs

Are Now Ready

More than 6,500 catalogs promoting the 71st annual addition of the Panhandle-South Plains fair are being distributed throughout the region, general manager Steve L. Lewis has announced.

With this year's cover featuring a colorful montage of typical fair scenes, the 1988 exposition marks the beginning of its eighth decade of service to the area by offering premiums totaling $100.00. The eight-day run begins September 24.

A donkey and mule show has been added to the regular fare for this year, Lewis said. It will be held September 29-30 and is expected to attract widespread interest, he noted.

The fair boasts a number of livestock judging events, plus an array of commercial and agricultural exhibits, women's and flower shows plus military, industrial and educational displays. Crops also will be competing for honors. Gene Ledel's million-dollar midway, free entertainment and other events round out the daily calendars.

Attractions booked for Fair Park Coliseum include Dan Seals and Kathy Mattea, 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. September 24; the Oak Ridge Boys, 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. September 25; Highway 101 and Sweethearts of the Rodeo, 7 p.m. only September 26; Exile, 7 p.m. only September 27; Michael Martin Murphy and Holly Dunn, 7 p.m. only September 29; Ray Stevens, 7 p.m. only September 30 and Merle Haggard and the Strangers, 7 p.m. only October 1.

Tickets for all shows are $10 each. Mail order reservations only are being accepted at this time and may be addressed to Show Tickets, P.O. Box 208, Lubbock, Texas 79408. Requests will be processed in the order in which received and tickets will be mailed in early August. Mail orders must be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Catalogs currently being distributed contain premium details and entry information concerning all events scheduled during the exposition. Show officials also are listed.
