SLANDER ON FAMILY TREE KEEPT BACK TOMATOES

Because it has a villainous cousin in its family line called the "deadly nightshade," the tomato had a trying time getting where it is today. People whispered "poison" and tomato took a back seat in the garden as a decorative plant one wouldn't dare allow to come into the table!

Superstition overthrown, the tomato has come into its own at towering speed. Big beefsteak tomatoes, cherry tomatoes borne in bunches, plum tomatoes, sometimes called "eggs," or just ordinary out-of-the-garden tomatoes are all as much a part of summer as a rocker on the porch. Known as the world's number one tomato consumer, this country's homemakers give tomatoes the sporting chance that a winner always gets against a handicap in the U.S.A. Tomatoes come through with a whang!

To tell how many ways we use tomatoes at table today would take fifty columns of tabulation for the tomato as a flavor, a fruit, or a vegetable just fits in everywhere. Get vines and vines of tomatoes in your V-garden? Put up some ketchup or chili sauce this season—save points aptly at the store! Pick your most perfect tomatoes for the prettiest salad of the season—quick canned shrimp and celery mixed with mayonnaise and seeped in hollowed-out tomato cups. That delicate shrimp color is a tint of tomato's ruddier red—a feast for the eye!

New tomato ways follow to help you with hats-off dishes to celebrate tomato's successful tussle with slander!

Deep-sea salad: 4 medium tomatoes, salt, 1 cup shredded young spinach leaves, 1 No. 1 7-oz. can shrimp (1 1/4 cups), 1/2 cup sour cream, black pepper, lettuce or other salad greens.

Scoop out tomatoes half-way, sprinkle with salt; invert on plate; fill. Combine spinach, shrimp and cream; season with pepper. Arrange lettuce or other salad greens on plates; place tomatoes on greens. Fill tomatoes with shrimp and spinach mixture. Serve 4.

Tomato-onion dumplings: 2 cups flour, 1 teasp. salt, 3 teasp. baking powder, 2 tbsps. shortening, 1 teasp. grated onion, 1 cup sieved peeled tomatoes.

Sift together flour, salt and all-phosphate baking powder. Cut in shortening with 2 knives or pastry blender. Add onion. Gradually add tomatoes, mixing with fork to make smooth dough. Drop dough by heaping spoonfuls on boiling meat stew. Cover tightly; steam 10 to 15 mins. without removing cover. Serves 4 to 6.

Tamale pie: 3/4 cup cornmeal, 2 cups boiling water, 1 teasp. salt, 1/4 cup whole bran, 1/2 clove garlic, minced; 3 tbsps. fat, 1 lb. ground beef, 1/2 cup chopped green pepper, 2 1/2 cups cooked or canned tomatoes, 1 tsp. chili powder, 1 1/2 tbsps. salt, 1/2 teasp. pepper, 1/4 cup grated dry cheese.

Add cornmeal to boiling salted water; cook 'til thick. Add whole bran and spread in 8-in. baking dish to 1/4-in. thickness; cool. Brown garlic in fat; add meat and cheese, stirring to break meat into pieces. Add green pepper, tomatoes and seasonings; simmer 'til juice from vegetables has partially evaporated, about 15 mins. Pour into baking dish on top of cooled mush; sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in moderately hot oven (400 F. degrees.) about 15 mins. Serves 8.

Devised tomato halves: 4 large tomatoes, 1/4 cup syrup, 1 teasp. Worcestershire sauce, 1/2 teasp. dry mustard, 1 teasp. paprika, 1 teasp. salt, 1/4 teasp. pepper.

Cut tomatoes in halves. Mix karo, Worcestershire, mustard, paprika, salt and pepper. Spread cut sides of tomatoes with karo mixture; let stand 15 mins. Place on broiler rack with tops of tomatoes 3-in. below broiler heat. Broil 10 mins, or 'til lightly browned and heated through. Serve hot. Serves 4.

Tomatoes have the correct middle syllable—they "mate" with nearly everything! Try them in cold meat salads... big thick slices as sandwich "middles"... filled with cottage cheese and chives with a little bleu cheese mixed in... to garnish potato salad... serve with eggs, any style, cold or hot... halves as the basis for a cold salad mixture for a first course. To-may-to or to-mah-to—who cares!!

It was bad enough, says Russell Patterson of East Liverpool, Ohio, that rabbits ruined his garden, but the last straw came when he saw his cocker spaniel running for dear life, yelping at every step, with two bunnies in hot pursuit.

Cover Crops And Compost Increase Yields

The timely use of cover crops and compost can make that Victory garden produce more next year, according to Extension Director A. B. Fite, whose experience as a horticulturist goes back beyond World War I.

Cover crops planted in the early fall keep the soil from washing during the winter. They also add plant food and humus to the soil when they are turned under in the spring.

Manure and compost will also help condition the soil for next year's garden. Compost is a mixture of rotten waste material, such as leaves, straw, lawn clippings, vines, clumps of grass roots, and even such kitchen refuse as peelings. Commercial fertilizer sprinkled on each layer of organic matter in the compost pile will also hasten its decomposition.

Fite said those who have some well-rotted compost, should work it into the garden soil this fall. "If you haven't," he said, stable manure or commercial fertilizer will put new life in your garden."

WE KNOW NOT THE DATE NOR WHERE THEY LAID HIM

Not long ago, the word came that a friend, John W. R. ("Shipwreck") Engholm had made the supreme sacrifice out in the broad Pacific for Old Glory, while fighting with the U. S. Marines. We paid a little tribute to "Shipwreck" in this column. His sister, Miss Redicia Engholm, Topeka, Kansas, whom we never knew, has written an interesting letter, parts of which we pass on to you.

"Yes, we thought John would come marching home again, too—and he left us such a short while ago—not a year. The big battle of Saipan was over and on July 2nd he cabled to Betty: 'Well, safe and unharmed'.

"His letter of July Fourth related how he was dug-in a foxhole with a cane patch in front and the broad, blue Pacific beyond. 'At home you are celebrating the Fourth with a picnic,' he wrote, 'but where I am it ain't no picnic.' On July 18th another letter—the last—then silence.

"****We know not the date nor where they have laid him. To me the body is not John; but to my mother, she wants the body not laid in foreign soil. Where? And shall we ever know? My father's grief rebels against THE WHY OF WAR and agrees with your paragraph of the common man versus the leaders."

Geo. M. Cowles, L. A.: We take our hats off to you. We know when we are licked. We decline to engage in a controversy with any New Dealer who "mooches" his space while we pay for ours. Therein lies the difference in our philosophies—you ride free but make the other fellow pay. Give my worst to your leaders, Earl Browder, twice a convict, once pardoned by FDR, and Communist; Russian-born Sidney Hillman, Bolshevik; Australian-born Harry Bridges, under sentence of deportation but being held over to help you fellows in the election, and Mr. Roosevelt. I'll remember you unkindly to Mr. Hoover. I don't like to call this to your attention, but to save you embarrassment I will. You have probably been concentrating so heavily on foreign "isms" for the past 25 years you hadn't heard of the deaths of Harding and Coolidge.

SCHOOL CHILDREN DEFRAUDED BY NEW DEALERS

His Excellency, Governor "Johnny-Come-Lately" Dempsey in beginning his campaign for re-election has decided to take up the question of the schools under Republican regimes and compare them with the New Deal period.

With all the graft, corruption and downright stealing from the schools and school children during the past few years, it seems, the Governor must not have been thinking very clearly, or he wouldn't have mentioned the subject.

Jack's particularly concerned with schools prior to 1930. Maybe I'm wrong—if I am somebody correct me—along about that time wasn't Dempsey a staunch, true member of Tammany Hall, which was looting New York City treasury and pillaging the schools of that fair city, or was he by that time as far west as Kansas City?

Anyway, Governor, if you keep discussing the subject, it looks as if we will have to get out that picture, which we published two years ago, of the lumber mill, built to take care of "Hardwood" Ray Rodgers' "mistake" timber deal, which the taxpayers association estimates cost the school children of the state between $150,000 and $200,000, and which some people are so unkind as to say made "Hardwood" Ray and some of his friends wealthy and snooty.

TAXPAYERS CALLED ON TO MAKE UP $50,000 SHORTAGE

And we might, Governor, remind the folk that one of your New Deal legislatures—not during your tenure of office, but the period of which you boast and brag—was called upon to pass an appropriation of $50,000 to take care of a shortage of "missing funds" in the public schools' text book department. You haven't forgotten that, have you Governor? If you have I'll refresh your memory.

The legislature made the appropriation and months later when they went to pay off the shortage and keep a member of the gang from going to the penitentiary, what did they discover? There wasn't any $50,000 shortage! IT WAS $70,000 OR OVER. In keeping the guilty parties out of the "kink," as Uncle Willie's Mamie is so fond of saying, the taxpayers and school children were nicked for $90,000 or more.

Was anybody ever prosecuted for that shortage of funds in the text book fund? Of course not. Now, Governor Dempsey there are just two of your gang's deals which set the poor school kids of New Mexico back on their little haunches to the tune of about one-quarter of a million bucks.

Yes, you built some schools; you raised the teachers' pay some, but if you hadn't done some of those things, how in the world could you have hoped to pull two deals that netted your gang a quarter of a million simoleons?

SCHOOLS LOSE ACCREDITED STANDINGS

Wasn't it under a New Deal regime—that of Governor Miles—the schools became so deeply involved and embroiled in politics that many of our colleges and high schools lost their accredited standings? Just off-hand like, it seems to me, State College, Silver City college (or whatever the correct name is) and numerous others lost those standings because your gang tried to run them politically.

Didn't you have that in mind, Governor, as well as other crimes against the school children and teachers of the state, when you are reported to have told a business group in Artesia, upon an inquiry as to why you gave up a $25,000-a-year job in Washington to come back and run for Governor of this state, which pays $5,000, "This is the most corrupt administration the state has ever seen and I want to clean it up."

You also promised to get rid of the crooks, grafters, embezzlers, highbinders and corruptionists in the state government. How many of them have you fired, canned or "eased" out of state employment?

When an Army sergeant headed back for his Alaskan outpost, Mrs. M. K. McChesney of Seattle slipped an assortment of delicacies into his duffle bag, including a full chocolate malt can which she told him to share with his buddies. A letter from the sergeant informed the donor: "The only reason I am alive now is because we are all Christians. The can of malted milk you gave me turned out to be fruit jar rubbers. 'I was almost thrown into the sea.'"

Several years of litigation over possession of a business building in Topeka have ended like this: The District Court gave the owner a writ of possession, ordering Sheriff Elb Beal to clear the building of the occupant and his wares—more than a million books. The county had no suitable place to store the books, finally trucked them to some county-owned vacant lots. Thieves carried away six of the first seven truckloads.

All Alfred (Happy) Wenzel, blacksmith for the Grindstone community near Philip, S. D., wanted to do was replenish his gas welding supply by mixing carbide and water in the acetylene tank. "Happy" wrapped the carbide in paper

"Scorchers" are rare. The cops have to look thrice—and even then what they mostly see is skilled, ticket-proof driving that earns their respect. For as experts they know that's really how to get there, without taking it out on your car. You too, knew it all the time, but war "alerted" you to it—and you're staying alert. Now be still more alert to the perils of engine acids. Those can be curbed by one brainy move...by having your engine OIL-PLATED.

Changing to Conoco Nth motor oil—at popular price—is all it takes to own an OIL-PLATED engine. One special characteristic of OIL-PLATING is the acid-resistance that costly pioneer research developed. This acid-fighter—OIL-PLATING—becomes That's made possible by Conoco Nth oil's special ingredient whose magnet-like nature holds OIL-PLATING direct to metals—square in the path of the acids always created by every engine explosion. Contact between acids and metals is checked. Then so is corrosion.

And now here looms the season of low engine temperatures—unable to clear out acids sufficiently. So now they could do their worst—but not with your engine OIL-PLATED by patented Conoco Nth motor oil. Change at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Today. Continental Oil Company

Now Is Time to Plan for Modernization of Farm Irrigation System, SCS Man Declares

Now is the time to plan for the modernization of farm irrigation systems, according to G. L. Beene of Artesia, district conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service.

While wartime shortages of equipment and labor make it impossible to meet all the demands for irrigation improvement work, needs will be better met if jobs are planned early in the season, he said.

The experience of farmers throughout the state has demonstrated that modernization of irrigation layouts is a paying proposition—leveling of uneven fields has usually resulted in increases of from a third to more than a half in crop production, Beene pointed out.

He said that better distribution of water is the explanation of this yield increase. Of equal importance are properly-placed irrigation runs, efficient turnouts, and spiles, which make it possible to maintain absolute control over the flow in each irrigation furrow, so that plants at the far end of the field get as much moisture as those near the ditch.

These structures also prevent the wasting of precious water and topsoil—and the invisible but even more costly "leaching out" of plant nutrients from the soil by excess water, which dissolves vital minerals and carries them far below the root level of the crop, Beene said.

Many New Mexico farmers have cut their water bills 20 per cent, raised better crops, and kept their soil from washing away by applying irrigation water more efficiently.

The conservationist said surveys indicate there are many farms in the district that should be leveled. On some of these, drainage would reclaim many acres, and on other farms bench terracing and improving water delivery systems would place more acres in heavier production, he declared.

One of the most common errors made in field layouts in this area is the use of runs that are too long, according to Beene. Runs are frequently as long as 1,200 feet, whereas 500 feet should be the average to save water and allow even penetration in the local soils.

Another common error is wild flooding down steeper slopes, especially with alfalfa and small grains, Beene said. An irrigation system will correct these practices.

Irrigators also could save water if they would check penetration of moisture throughout their field by means of a moisture probe, Beene said. This probe is merely a thin iron rod with a "T" shaped handle on it. By thrusting it into the soil, the farmer soon learns to determine by "feel" just how deep the water is going.

If the moisture penetration is below the root level of the crop, the farmer knows that he is wasting water, as the old idea that "you can make plants send roots just as deep as the water goes" has been definitely disproved, he declared.

Red Cross News

Mrs. Harold Crozier, chairman of the Red Cross surgical dressing rooms, expressed a note of disapproval at the fourth quarterly conference of the Artesia community who reported during the last week to fold dressings. Instructors outnumbered workers, she said.

This is a duty of every woman in this community who is physically able and who can in any manner spare a few hours each week, said the chairman. This is not a job for just a few women. Every household is either directly or indirectly represented by their men on the fighting fronts all over the world, bandages must be folded to bind the wounds of the injured. Bandages save lives.

Red Cross rooms are open every week day except Saturday. It is hoped that the present quota may be folded and shipped before the holidays which are only a few weeks off, said Mrs. Crozier, but it cannot be done unless many more women come to fold, she said.

One of the most phenomenal years in the career of any film personality is being experienced by Sonny Tufts, big, blonde gent, who is the current screen rave.

Little more than a year ago, Tufts was groping his way in a bewildered fashion through his first scenes in front of a camera. Now he has completed his third film, "I Love a Soldier," in which he is officially co-starred with the glamorous and long-established Paulette Goddard. Tufts rose from practically a nonentity to one of the hottest personalities on the screen at the present time. It is more amazing when one remembers that Tufts was not sought by the movies; he came trekking out to movieland and, hammering on the gates of Hollywood, mumbled, "I wanna be in movies."

That is no fairy story. He actually appeared on the Hollywood scene in such a manner, although the actual words were voiced by a friend, Jack Donnelly, who led Sonny into the Paramount casting department and said, "Meet my friend, Sonny Tufts; he wants to be in pictures."

This incident ended with Sonny being auditioned, tested, contracted, and cast. The last event took place in "So Proudly We Hail," when Mark Sandrich gave him a chance at fame by casting him as the abashed hero, Kansas. That started Tufts' first year in the movies.

Even before "So Proudly We Hail" was finished, Sandrich had Allan Scott writing a script for Goddard and Tufts. It is likely the first time in movie history that a newcomer has the distinction of having a starring story written for him even before he completes his first film. The story, of course, is Paramount's "I Love a Soldier," coming soon to the Ocotillo Theatre.

Capt. Clarence E. Tisdale, officer at Bruns General Hospital, Santa Fe, went bear hunting, leaving his wife in a shaded, comfortable camping spot. When he returned empty-handed three hours later, he found Mrs. Tisdale had bagged a 300-pound bear with a single shot. The bear "just stood up and posed for me across a ravine," said Mrs. Tisdale, who grew up on the IGO Ranch near Lubbock.

The office of H. R. Rodgers, commissioner of public lands, said that the Land Office grazing department has recently completed a three-month audit of the grazing lease tract books for errors and unleased acreage. The study covered seventy-two volumes, totaling 36,000 pages, recording the status of the state's lands. The work has resulted in the elimination of errors accumulated over a period of years, as well as the setting up of subsidiary tract books showing all unleased state lands administered by the department, Wood said. Use of the subsidiary tract book, Wood said, "has brought about the immediate leasing of more than 6,000 acres of previously unleased grazing lands."

THE STRANGE LIFE OF JOSE ASUNCION SILVA

Had Jose Asuncion Silva's name not been remembered as that of the author of one of the best-known poems of Latin America, his strange passionate life would have been enough to make him an interesting figure in the background history of our hemisphere. Characteristic to some extent of many of the men of his time, in his noble bearing, his extreme refinement, his sombre melancholy, he is—however—a unique and unusual character, one which may be said to represent truly the essence of romantic Latin America.

Born in the land of poets—Bogota, Colombia—on Nov. 27, 1865, Jose Asuncion Silva came into the world with the proverbial "silver spoon in his mouth." He was the son of an aristocratic and wealthy family whose women were renowned for their beauty. His father, a rich merchant, was also a writer of merit. He gave Jose Asuncion a good, if somewhat irregular, education and "finished" him off by sending him to Europe on a business trip during which it is suspected that the young man attended less to his father's affairs than to his own poetic inclinations. He was very much impressed by the French poets of the time whose influence was to leave a permanent mark on his own poetry. The youth, who had handled bottles of perfume and expensive French silks in the Silva warehouses in Bogota, was also an expert at playing with rhymes and beautiful thoughts. He falls in love with the elegant, refined, intellectual Paris of 1890 when a handsome, wealthy and intelligent young man of twenty-five he visits "the city of lights." The loss of most of their fortune followed by the death of his father comes as an unexpected shock; he hastens back to Colombia where, during the next few years, he is to struggle to keep up the family's standard of living. One of his two sisters, Elvira, is then at the height of her beauty. Jose Asuncion admires her as he would a lovely statue, a radiant flower, as a poet and an artist. When she sat in her box at the theater he would go down to the orchestra and contemplate her from afar as one would a star. One night, as a comet was to be seen in Bogota, Elvira got up to catch a glimpse of it and caught cold. She died of pneumonia a few days later and the rumor went that the comet, jealous of her beauty, revished her from the world. Whether Elvira was or was not the inspiration to Silva's famous "Nocturno" has not been ascertained, but it is a fact that her death was a turning point in the life of the young poet.

The final loss of what remained of the family's property leads him to enter the Foreign Service of his country and he is sent to Venezuela as secretary of legation. This is for him a time of great literary activity: He writes poems, short stories, prose works of many kinds, is known in Caracas as a handsome dandy, always elegantly dressed, a flower at his button-hole. His letters and his writings, however, are those of a melancholy and tortured soul, harassed by ill fortune, haunted by vain illusions. When in 1895 he returns to Colombia, "L'America" on which he is traveling, shipwrecks and most of his literary work is lost at sea. He eventually reaches Bogota where, for a few months, he leads an apparently tranquil life. One morning in May, 1896, however, complaining of a pain in the heart, he goes to see the family physician. Would the doctor tell him exactly where the heart was? A few days later he is found lying dead on his bed in his best clothes, an old revolver next to him. He had shot himself at the age of 31 through the same heart whose beatings had inspired "Nocturno." Only the day before he had carefully made out a check for what remained of his account at the bank: "To the order of G. K., Florist. Flowers for Chula" — his younger sister.

As a poet Silva is considered among the greatest of Latin America. His verses have been said to possess "the charm of a strong personal feeling set forth sincerely in musical language." A master of form he sought "to adjust the rhythm of the verse to the inward rhythm of the thought" and in his best-known work, "Los Nocturnos"—four tragic love-scenes set to poetry—he achieves perfection in his style. One of these "Nocturnos" has become a classic and a favorite throughout Latin America. It evokes, "through the repetition of words and lines assisted by the mode of printing," the shadows of two lovers in the moonlight. Its sad, romantic, emotional mood must have unconsciously been reflecting Silva's own state of mind. He may never have guessed, however, that in spite of his tragic life, his early death—through him—two lovers standing in the clear Colombian moonlight would live forever in Spanish American literature.
