Opinion Found Monday Hearing

B. Cobble, 45, who is charged with molesting the grave of his wife, Opal Ophelia Cobble, on the night of June 23, and murdering her body, was adjudged at a sanity hearing in Carlsbad Monday.
The hearing has been set for 10 o'clock this afternoon, when the court will argue to determine whether the alleged actions of Cobble constitute a felony or a misdemeanor.
In the latter case, it was understood that the maximum penalty which may be imposed is a 90-day sentence. The penalty for a felony could be much more severe.
The sanity hearing Monday was held before Judge Roy Anderson. A physician was called as a witness in the examination of Cobble.
The defendant entered a plea of not guilty before Judge J. D. Josey, and the hearing was waived until June 27 on a charge that Cobble "unlawfully and feloniously molested the grave of Opal Ophelia Cobble and did molest her body by putting portions of said body over the grave with a knife."
That time Judge Josey bound the defendant over to the action of the grand jury without bond.

City Named For Winter Meet State Press

Albuquerque will be host for the winter convention of the New Mexico Press Association to be held during the month of January. The meeting is expected to be set at the annual meeting of the board of directors called by President Dan McLaughlin in October.
An invitation to come to Albuquerque for the annual convention was extended during the first sessions of the press organization to be held since the war. The convention was conducted at Raton on Saturday and Sunday, July 18 and 19, with Frank Pfeifer, publisher of the Raton Range, as host.
The association also at its session expressed its appreciation to the State Legislature for the enactment of the open book law recently passed, and for the stand of Gov. Thomas Mabry in his effort to halt gambling in the state.
This action was taken at a meeting on Saturday in sessions adopted.
Principal speakers for the convention included Ed Bemis, publisher of the Littleton (Colo.) Independent and manager of the Independent Press Association; Eric Reiff, secretary of the Graphic Association at Wichita, Kan., (moved last page this section)

Local Boys Get In Tokyo Fourth July

Local boys in the Army have much in common, celebrated the Fourth of July together, and had a real get-together, on which they spent several hours reviewing news of the day.
They were Pvt. J. L. Long, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Long. Pvt. James S. Spence, son of Mrs. Spence.
Private Long is stationed in Italy, while Private Spence is in the Sapporo. But each where the other was located, they both knew there would be a big Fourth of July in Tokyo, which General Arthur was to review. So they corresponded and made an arrangement.
The result was that they managed to enjoy each other's company for three hours on the radio, with home the main topic (continued on last page)

Band Uniforms Expected Here By First Of August

Franklyn L. Wiltse, high school director, announced this week that the new band uniforms will be about Aug. 1.
He said they will be issued to the musicians only after they had try-outs and that they would be earned by the individual musicians.
Director Wiltse said he believed a number of the students had been neglecting their practicing during the summer vacation, and that some will not deserve them when school opens. He said he did not plan to issue a uniform to anyone who is not a good musician or at least to anyone who is not working to that end.

A Child May Dare So Drive With Care

"Man is basically a stinker" and some want what the other fellow has," and because the United States has many things which other countries do not, this nation must be ready for the time when some nation decides to crack down, according to Lt. Col. Harold Turner, commanding officer of the White Sands Proving Ground, who spoke Friday noon at the monthly luncheon meeting of the Artesia Chamber of Commerce.
Colonel Turner pointed out that it was because of that idea of wanting what the other fellow has that Hitler and Tojo wanted the United States.
"The bully tackles the weak guy," the colonel said, in stressing that the United States must be strong.
That is why, he explained, that the experiments being carried on at the White Sands Proving Ground are so important, in the world race in developing guided missiles.
Speaking on "Push-Button Warfare," Colonel Turner gave a brief history of the development of the proving ground, which was conceived by General Barnes, whom he termed the greatest authority on ordnance in the world.
General Barnes, he said, recognized that whereas the longest range for guns was 20 to 25 miles, the first guided missiles had traveled 60 to 75 miles, and that when the Germans released the V-2 rockets the launching sites were 200 or more miles away.
Here was something new, the colonel said, and the general realized that any nation to be out ahead must be first in development of guided missiles.
Colonel Turner said the United States was whipped at Pearl Harbor, and only because of the industry and the willingness of the people, after two years this nation had the material and personnel to turn the tide. The delay was necessary, he said, because after World War I the people figured that was the end of hostilities and "it can't happen to us," so appropriations for the Army were cut drastically.
The colonel said the Ordnance Department from 1926 to 1936 had only about 10 million dollars with which to develop weapons.
Now, he said, this nation has come out of another war, which was nearly lost because the people wanted low taxes. But if some of the money spent on WPA and other government projects had been spent on military development, he said, the result might have been different.

Artesia Is Host Tuesday To CAP Aircade Fliers

Artesia was host Tuesday afternoon to 38 pilots and other fliers, when 18 airplanes landed at the municipal airport on a nine-day trip through Colorado and New Mexico, which started at Denver Monday.
A number of the guests were taken on a tour of the city in a school bus furnished by the Artesia Auto Company, which was waiting at the airport, when the airplanes started to arrive from Roswell.
The pilots and others of the party had been entertained at Roswell at noon by the Chamber of Commerce and were to be guests at a banquet in Carlsbad in the evening.
When the aircade left Denver Monday there were about 50 planes in the party, but a number of them turned back after one day. However, it was expected that a number of planes would join the aircade at El Paso this morning, as the trip is continued.
The aircade, sponsored by the New Mexico and Colorado wings of the Civil Air Patrol, was in charge of Army Lieutenant Colonel Phillips of Albuquerque, who was piloting a five-place Howard. With him was Major Gray of Albuquerque, CAP officer. The Civil Aeronautics Administration was represented by Al Myers of Albuquerque, pilot of a Waco, and Bill Barry of Fort Worth. With them were their wives.
Many local people, who were at the airport to greet the visitors (continued last page this section)

Officers Search For Car Dealer In Hover Murder

Little has been learned in Artesia during the last week in regard to the death of A. H. Hover, Artesia and Laguna, Calif., oil operator, who was found murdered in Mississippi July 10, other than that officers are conducting a widespread search for a man known to have been with Mr. Hover.
An Associated Press dispatch from Laurel, Miss., near where Mr. Hover's body was found, under a dateline of July 18, said:
"Mississippi law enforcement officers and FBI agents were conducting a widespread search today for J. W. Moore, charged with the slaying of Aaron Hover, 63-year-old Artesia, N. M., geologist, whose battered and partly decomposed body was found in a woods last week."
"Sheriff Luther Hill said Moore accompanied Hover to Laurel near Knoxville, Tenn., to look over some oil fields. He said Moore is a used car dealer who recently transferred his business from Alabama to Knoxville."

Oil Men Plan To Attend Institute Meet At Hobbs

A number of local men connected with the oil industry are planning to attend a meeting of the Permian Basin chapter of the American Petroleum Institute at the Hobbs County Club at 6 o'clock Friday evening. It will be a combination business session and social program.
Hiram M. Dow of Roswell, chairman of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, will be the principal speaker at the business session.
Fred (Squeeze-Box) Christaneli, and a widely known entertainer, will be featured during the social periods.
A dutch lunch will be served by the Odessa Chuck Wagon Gang.
All men in the Permian Basin area, who are engaged in any branch of the petroleum industry, or who are interested in, or affected by the business, are eligible to attend the Hobbs meeting, officials of the organization said.

Mayor Mahone Is Behind City Band, He Tells Citizens

The Artesia municipal band, which is becoming more and more active, was given a boost this week by Mayor A. P. Mahone in his efforts to raise funds with which to pay for instruments already purchased and to continue.
Mayor Mahone addressed a letter to the citizens of Artesia, which reads:
"I hereby wish it to be known publicly that I heartily endorse and pledge my support to our own Artesia municipal band and also ask all of our citizens to do likewise.
"This project is a fine thing in more ways than one. The band members find this to be good recreation, the public enjoys their free concerts, and the band is a great advertising vehicle for the city of Artesia as was recently shown on the good-will trip to the mountains.
"I understand now that they have a couple more trips coming up in the future as well as more local concerts and affairs. Good work, Director Wiltse and your fine band.
"Now, citizens, let's get back of them, financially and otherwise. Artesia is now making great strides in the band field and let's keep it going, everybody. Self-made music by our own citizens contributes greatly to a growing community.
"Again, my stamp of approval is for the Artesia municipal band and our fine school bands, too."
The band's activities during the last week included the presentation last Thursday evening of the fourth concert in the summer series (continued last page this section)

Veterans Are To Turn Out Sunday In Work Program

Members of the building committee representing the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Disabled American Veterans have appealed to every veteran—or anyone else willing to work—who can push a wheelbarrow, drive a nail, or do anything else in the line of construction, to report at the building at 8 o'clock Sunday morning to help.
Those who cannot give a full day are asked to work a half day, either in the morning or afternoon.
It is planned Sunday to work on partitions, pour concrete flooring and walks, and otherwise boost the construction on the building.

Eddy Farmers May Contract For Alien Help

About 50 Mexican aliens are available for farm work in Eddy County, provided farmers sign up for them immediately, it was announced by A. S. Hudson, chief of the Alien Control Division, El Paso.
He said the aliens are in a pool at Juarez and may be had only by farmers who make proper contract for them and will live up to the terms of the contract.
Chief Hudson likewise announced that aliens who are working on Eddy farms at this time illegally must be contracted for immediately, or they will be picked up.
He pointed out that the present program will be over within a very short time—possibly this week—and advised that farmers do not lose time in regard to contracts, either for aliens in the pool at Juarez or those now on Eddy County farms.
Farmers wishing to contract in the program were invited to contact G. C. Wilmoth, district director, at El Paso.
Or they may get in touch with D. R. Kelly, assistant chief of the Immigration Border Patrol, who is working in this locality at this time and may be contacted through Artesia Chief of Police O. T. Lindsey.
Assistant Chief Kelly also will explain to Eddy County farmers about the contracts exacted by the government for obtaining the use of aliens on their farms, either those in the present pool or those already on farms here illegally.
The federal officers said a representative of the service will explain the program at the next meeting of the Eddy County Farm and Livestock Bureau.

Gov. Mabry Will Present Charter To Young Demos

Lon P. Watkins of Carlsbad, president of the newly-organized Eddy County Young Democratic Club, and three other young men were here Monday evening from Carlsbad signing up local members and prevailing upon young Democrats of the Artesia community to attend a meeting at the courthouse at 8 o'clock tonight, at which Gov. Thomas J. Mabry will be the principal speaker and will present the club its charter.
Watkins said Harry Briggs and M. R. Maitin of Carlsbad have been elected secretary and treasurer respectively, but that the election of vice presidents had been deferred until young men and women of Artesia from 18 to 35 years old have had a chance to join the organization.
Here Monday evening with Watkins were Adair Gossett, who has been endorsed by the Eddy County group for state chairman of the Young Democratic Clubs of New Mexico; Ed London, and Bill Davis.

Artesia 20-30 Club's Junior Ball Team Leaves For State Tourney

Members of the Artesia 20-30 Club's junior baseball team left Wednesday afternoon for Albuquerque to play in the state junior baseball tournament, which starts today and runs through Sunday.
They were taken in the school activities bus, driven by Robert E. Belshe, who represents the 20-30 Club, as well as the American Legion, under whose rules the tournament is to be played.
The junior baseball players and the three adults attended a banquet Wednesday evening for members of about a dozen teams throughout the state. At that time a drawing was held for matching the teams in the tournament. In the drawing Artesia drew a bye for this morning. Artesia will play at 7:30 o'clock tonight against the winner of the Albuquerque Stromberg-Albuquerque Heights Mustangs game.
The winning team at the state tournament will be sent to a regional tournament at York, Neb., in the elimination to determine the champion nine in the "little world series."

Watson is to discuss national affairs of the organization, as related to his work since leaving Artesia some months ago.
Manager Moore asked that as many members and others interested as possible attend the luncheon next week.
In order that preparation may be made by the hotel management for the luncheon, Manager Moore asked that his office be called as soon as possible for reservations, no later than next Thursday.

Three Young Women Selected To Attend Chicagoland Festival

Two Artesia girls and a Roswell girl were selected at the first annual Pecos Valley Music Festival here Tuesday to represent the Southwest in the 18th annual Chicagoland Music Festival in Chicago Aug. 16.
The contest was won by a brother and sister team, young Negroes by the name of Colton. One couple, youngsters' little more than tots, stole the show, but Captain Stube judged their technique not as good as the winners.
During the program Tom Mayfield, new superintendent of Artesia schools, made his first public appearance and spoke briefly over a public address system installed by Harold Ulrich. Superintendent Mayfield was introduced by Artie McAnally, president of the Artesia Board of Education.
Franklyn L. Wiltse, Artesia band director and a member of the festival committee, welcomed the visitors to the festival and then turned the festivities over to Captain Stube, who served as master of ceremonies.
Later in the program Mayor A. (continued last page this section)

Governor, General Sage, Veterans' Commanders Invited Here VJ-Day

Gov. Thomas J. Mabry, Brig. Gen. C. G. Sage, the adjutant general of New Mexico, and the state commanders of the three veterans' organizations, which have posts here have been invited to be honor guests at the VJ-Day celebration in Artesia Thursday, Aug. 14.
The commanders, to whom invitations went out Wednesday, are Merle P. Briggs of Silver City, American Legion; George S. Deane of Roswell, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Paul Pompeo of Dawson, Disabled American Veterans.
Tentative plans for the celebration, which it is hoped will bring to Artesia the largest crowd in history, call for a big parade at 10 o'clock in the morning, automobile races at the new track being built at the municipal airport at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, a band concert by the municipal band from 7 to 8 o'clock in the evening, and a big dance at the veterans' building at 9 o'clock.
Luke E. Willis and His Boys have been engaged for the dance, in connection with which will be games of various kinds.
The race track, which is in the east quadrant at the airport, east of the administration building and hangars, is shaping up well, with graders on the job every day.
When completed it will be one of the finest half-mile tracks in this part of the country and will be used not only on VJ-Day but for subsequent races.
A number of "hot-rod" racers have been booked for the VJ-Day races and they will appear that afternoon in several races of various lengths.
The parade committee is urging all Artesia businesses and civic organizations, as well as any others so wishing, to enter floats in the parade, which will carry out the day's theme, "Preparedness for Peace."
Members of the three organizations owning the veterans' building, as well as members of the United Spanish War Veterans, are to be in the parade.
And it is expected an Army band from Tucson, Ariz., will be here for the parade, and to play at other times during the day. Arrangements have been made for the band to be flown here in a B-29. It is hoped the big bomber will be open for inspection during the day. The Artesia municipal band also will play in the parade and at other times during the day.
The parade committee has also invited cowboys and cowgirls to ride in the parade.
VJ-Day is one of the holidays on the list of seven during the year for observation in Artesia, as determined some weeks ago by the retail merchants' committee of the Chamber of Commerce, so the stores in Artesia will also (continued on last page)

Four Narrowly Escape Death In Freak Accident Of Six Vehicles

Four persons missed death by a matter of inches four miles north of Artesia last Thursday evening, when a semi-trailer came to rest on top of a pick-up truck in a freak accident involving six vehicles, four of them motor-driven and the semi-trailer and a trailer.
In the pick-up were Mrs. Bertha Scoggin Robinson, 41, of Lake Arthur and her three children, Pauline, 9; Betty, 7, and Kenneth, 2.
Pauline was the only one who sustained any fractures. Her shoulder was broken and she was otherwise injured. Her mother suffered severe bruises and shock. The two are patients in Artesia Memorial Hospital. The other Robinson children were badly shaken up and bruised, but neither seriously.
State Police Officer Bill Lewis, who investigated the accident with Police Officers George Ray and Bill Schott, said the accident probably happened thus:
The pick-up driven by Mrs. Robinson was headed north and had run out of gasoline. She had pulled to the side of the highway, but not off, as it had been raining and the shoulder was muddy.
H. L. Brown, who was overtaking the pick-up, had pulled up behind her.
Following him was a truck driven by Ted Pate, Jr., of Carlsbad, while from the north was approaching a Ferguson-Steele Motor Company truck, to which were attached a semi-trailer and a trailer, both oil tankers.
Pate's truck collided with the rear of the Brown car, which in turn collided with the rear of the Robinson pick-up, setting it in motion. After being bumped, the pick-up careened across the highway in front of the approaching Ferguson-Steele truck, driven by I. L. Funk.
Funk turned towards the barrow pit to his right, and as he did so his string of vehicles jackknifed at the tractor's fifth wheel (continued on last page)

Rotarians Report On District Assembly At Roswell Last Week

Martin Yates, Jr., and three other members of the Artesia Rotary Club made reports at the weekly luncheon Tuesday of the district assembly held in Roswell last Thursday and Friday.
Others making reports were Boone Barnett, vice president; B. N. Muncy, Jr., a past president, and Burney Jones. Don Bush, who also attended the assembly, was not able to be present Tuesday noon.
The Rotarians reported 140 persons were registered, the largest number ever at a district assembly of the 115th district of Rotary International.
Members of the organization met at the Roswell Woman's Club, where a banquet was held last Thursday evening. At that time D. D. Munroe of Clayton, a director of Rotary International, was the principal speaker.

Keeping Business Here

ARE WE DOING EVERYTHING we can do to keep business, which belongs in Artesia, at home?

Probably we aren't. Recently we heard a merchant from another city declare that he was striving to keep special at home. He pointed out he had offered special bargains and special buys because he thought this would help the folks be able to trade at home.

He wasn't blaming the folks for going elsewhere because he knew some of the attractions, which were offered. He was striving to make his offerings just as attractive. He felt sure if he did that then he would be helping to make it possible for those folks to trade at home.

And he had offered some real buys and bargains and he enjoyed a real day's business. We should take a lesson from the example he offered. Artesia wants all of those within the trade territory to trade in Artesia. But the question is, are we making buying as attractive here as it is in these other communities? Are we seeking to help these people come to Artesia to trade?

It can and it should be done. Let's stop complaining about the business we think we should have and are not getting. Let's try to find out why we are not enjoying this business and then do those things, which must be done if we are to have this business.

All we have to do is follow the example of that merchant, who said he was trying to help the local folks buy and trade at home by making his offerings just as attractive as could be found elsewhere.—O.E.P.

Fine Compliments

IT IS PLEASING, of course, to The Artesia Advocate staff, to hear some of the fine comments, which are made now and then regarding the paper. And these things are frequently said not only by local citizens, but by those in other communities, who see The Advocate.

They first comment on the fine print, which is secured and the general appearance of the paper. They discuss the fine advertisements and the firms of Artesia represented in the advertising columns. They mention the number of local stories and the kind of stories. They are especially pleased with those, which seek to boost the schools, the churches, the civic and community affairs.

And all of these comments are appreciated. And when voiced they make us feel just a little pride, but more than that, they arouse within us a determination to try and do even a better job.

We know at times the print is not all that we want and seek. We know that errors, too many of them, appear and we seek to reduce these to a minimum. We appreciate that sometimes we do not get all the facts regarding a story or the issue. We also know we fall short in securing all of the local stories we want and should have. We are fully appreciative of the fact we miss local items and personals we should have and want.

But the comments and compliments are appreciated. We are like others, we like a pat on the back. We hope we deserve them, but at times feel we don't. But we can assure you they spur us on to give and do our best, with your fine help, to make The Advocate the best weekly paper in New Mexico.—O.E.P.

Regulate The Bikes

THROUGH THE MEDIUM of these columns, we have in the past spoken of the habit of boys and girls on bicycles—including our own boy—in riding on the wrong side of the street, darting in and out of traffic, endangering pedestrians on the sidewalks, and in general keeping adults on the edge of the jitters.

Part of the trouble with kids owning—or borrowing—bicycles lies with the parents, those who allow the boys and girls to have them and ride them anywhere, long before they have developed a sense of fear and responsibility, and before they know how.

But many of the older youngsters are to blame themselves. We mean those who are old enough to have some responsibility—or should have.

And part of the blame rests with motorists, who do not consider a bicycle a vehicle, and expect a boy or girl—or an adult, as far as that is concerned—to give the right of way to the big steel steed.

There are several things wrong in the entire picture.

One of them is the matter of age. The state law specifically states the minimum age at which a boy or girl may be licensed to drive a motor vehicle. That is because it is realized there is a time before which the sense of responsibility is not there. And the ability to drive properly and carefully has not been developed.

Perhaps in that case there are some who could, without danger, be permitted to drive at a younger age. But there must be a law—and there is one!

The same holds true with bicycles. They are not nearly as dangerous to others than their operators as are automobiles, but they are dangerous to the operators. And until a child is old enough to operate one within a reasonable degree of safety to himself, as well as others, he should be precluded from the privilege.

What then should be done when he does reach such an age? He should have to undergo a test to show that he both knows how to operate a bicycle in a sane manner, and what constitutes traffic rules and regulations.

There is no sense in having rules for some vehicles and not for others. It would be far better to turn loose an adult, who never before had driven an automobile but suddenly decided to do so, than a child who never has had a fear in his life. Such an adult, through normal observation, should have some conception about how to operate an automobile, and where, and when. (There are those with licenses, however, who apparently do not!)

So we propose not only a minimum age for the operation of a bicycle, but an examination—and a license to go with it, provided at a nominal fee, and bearing the signature of the parent or guardian, as well as that of an official.

Then to go one further, it might be well to license the bicycles themselves, by way of keeping tab on such things.

We do not propose at this time a state law on bicycles, for surely the boy on a ranch with a bike is not especially affected. But we do think the cities of the state—Artesia in particular—should look into the matter and pass the necessary ordinances. If an enabling measure is needed, then go to the State Legislature and have it passed.

In the matter of the test of driving, we could point out a number of little things which would make it safer for a youngster on a bike, and so could any set of officers appointed to handle the situation.

We have been fortunate in Artesia for many months in regard to the kids on bikes, but there seem to be more and more of them riding, so we merely propose the stich in time.—A.L.B.

More Music

IT WAS JUST A STARTER, but the Pecos Valley Music Festival here this week demonstrated what can be done in a little city, not only by way of bringing people here and staging a show, but by way of carrying the name of Artesia far and wide.

Franklyn L. Wiltse, whose fingerprints we could read on the program out of Chicago announcing that the festival would be here, has done much to increase interest in music here, as well as to advertise Artesia.

E. L. Harp, whose fingerprints will appear on the literature for the International Good-Will High School Band, likewise has done much and is doing much for music and for Artesia. His efforts in the current project work just the opposite from those of the younger bandmaster, but the results are the same.

Conductor Wiltse did not found the Chicago-Land Music Festival, of which the Pecos Valley Music Festival was a part, but he had a part in having Artesia recognized for one of the 17 regional festivals in the nation.

Conversely, Conductor Harp conceived the idea of a good-will band, international in nature, and his efforts have taken root and have spread to three nations, Canada, Mexico, and the United States, and they will bear fruit.

We as a community should recognize in these two gentlemen the enthusiasm they have for Artesia and for music.

We as a community should profit greatly musically and communitywise from their efforts.—A.L.B.

Mass Hysteria

WE HAVE NO IDEA where the first report of a flying disc came from, nor do we care. And we do not know whether it is an actuality or not, but the fact remains that the people have been seeing spots—or discs—before their eyes.

We will venture to say that whether anyone actually has seen any strange flying objects, unusual in that they are something new, the vast majority of those who have reported discs of one kind or another have merely reported figments of their imagination—brought on by mass hysteria, if you please.

It seems to be human nature for the people of this nation—probably other nations as well—to catch on to some strange thing and then build it up.

Certainly we, as a newspaper, are anxious to know if and when anyone in this area sees or thinks he sees a flying disc, or some other strange object, and we will pass it along for what it is worth.

But the chances are that no one here will see such, just as there is small chance that anyone anywhere has seen a flying disc.

We know that an idea can be planted in the minds of others. We know from experience, for, with the assistance of a couple of other boys some years ago, we tied up traffic in a reasonably large city, merely by all looking at a certain spot in the sky, whispering among ourselves, and pointing.

Not that there was any particular hysteria in the crowd which gathered, but the reaction can only be attributed to mass hysteria, that which grips the nation, whenever anything of an imaginative nature comes along—or is concocted in the mind of some joker.—A.L.B.

If summer comes, can fall be far behind? When fall does come, the tumbleweeds will begin to tumble, for that is when they dry out. And that is when they become a fire hazard. Artesia citizens could do a little more cleaning up of vegetation around the premises.

As Artesia Grows

TWENTY YEARS AGO

(From The Advocate Files for July 21, 1927) The outstanding event for the year 1927 in Eastern New Mexico oil development was the gas strike in the Texas Production Company's Robinson No. 1 well. According to the officials of the Texas Production Company, the gasser was uncovered at a depth of 3885 feet. The pressure from the gas blew the tools up in the hole.

Cigarette ads were just beginning to appear in the papers. However, it was always a young man who did the smoking. What a change from the periodical ads of today! Also newcomers to the ad columns were bathing beauties and illustrated lingerie styles.

Miss Pauline Clayton had celebrated her birthday with a slumber party. Among her young guests were Laura Elizabeth Bullock, Ruth Graham, Evelyn Finley, Nelle Jackson, and Elizabeth Muncy.

Frank F. Smith, manager of Rodden Studio, was announcing the opening of his enlarged shop and also the expansion of the types of work he could handle.

A picture of a single-seated monoplane making its first appearance at the Ford airport, near Detroit, Mich., brings a contrast in planes then and now, which equals the contrast in automobiles then and now.

TEN YEARS AGO

(From The Advocate Files for July 22, 1937) Fur coats with huge collars, full skirts, and large sleeves were being shown at the Peoples Mercantile Company store. Lappin and beaver furs were being offered and prices ran from $69.50 to $99.50.

Mrs. Harve Muncy had entertained the Past Noble rGand Club. Among the members present were Mmes. Frank Thomas, Harriet Whitener, Ed Conner, George Dungan, and J. M. Story, and Miss Ella Bauslin.

Mrs. Effie Wingfield had just returned from a visit with friends and relatives on the West Coast.

Misses Opal Martin and Ethel Bullock were taking a vacation trip through Colorado, Utah, and Wyoming. They planned to see Yellowstone National Park and other points of interest. Miss Winifred Detterick of Las Vegas accompanied them.

Helen Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Watson, had been rushed to El Paso after sustaining a broken shoulder bone. She received the injury when she was thrown from a horse.

Old Sourdough Writes Poem Of Artesia Splendor

(W. D. Thompson, 90-year-old sourdough, who spent many years prospecting in Alaska, recently returned to Artesia after an absence of a number of months, during which his devotion to Artesia prompted him to write a poem in free verse, "When the Sun Shines High in Artesia." He had a number of copies printed, which he has been giving his friends, who have been requesting that The Advocate pass it on for all to read. So the "no-poems rule" is broken—just this once.

From the ice that causes illumination In the night their glory what a sight.

The same thing prevails in this desert land, When the evening shadows come on,

The colors of the earth below arise in the sky, And cause that reflection and illumination.

That makes the sky so grand, A Paradise in the sky, While the sun still shines high in that clear blue sky.

What makes the sky so grand in this desert land more than any other land?

It's the climate, the air, and clear atmosphere that prevails That makes the sky so grand, in this enchanted land, When the sun shines high in the sky.

The sun shining high is seen from Artesia, In the sunshine state of Mexico, It is known far and wide for its beauty, climate, and sunshine.

In the land of Enchantment, It is also in the sky, When the sun is shining high in the sky— Till it reaches its own horizon in the sky. Then again a clear blue sky.

Local Member Of AA Explains Anonymous Part

(In his efforts to impart to the general public, especially those who might profit by his knowledge, a member of the Artesia chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous has written and submitted this article:

Much could be said in behalf of that anonymous part of the workings of Alcoholics Anonymous commonly referred to as AA, which would enlighten the general public beneficial to them as well as the efforts put forth by AA members, but space and time only afford a brief educational explanation, that opinions formed may not be erroneous, but helpful to those desirous of co-operating with the AA program toward rehabilitation of someone in dire need of the benefits of the program.

It is not at all surprising that the unimformed public is at loss to understand why, when some men and women who have fallen victims to excessive indulgence in alcoholic beverages to the extent they are powerless over alcohol, that their lives become unmanageable, that their close friends and relatives are unable to aid in their rehabilitation, still Alcoholics Anonymous does, in many cases, accomplish this service.

The reader should bear in mind that AA groups do not claim success in all cases, but due to the fact it is successful in more than 75 per cent of cases properly contacted is sufficient proof most alcoholics can be rehabilitated, and the anonymous part of its workings still rests with AA.

For the benefit of those who have formed erroneous opinions through misinformation, it may be stated clearly that there is no prescribed medicine used by AA members to keep sober. While alcoholics are termed as physically-sick human beings, it is generally conceded there is no medical cure for the disease.

It has come to the attention of AA group that some people are of the opinion AA is opposed to sales of liquor, which is not true. Neither do AA groups advocate prohibition, local option, or other methods of curtailment or handling of liquors.

Alcoholics Anonymous is not an organization; it is merely a group of alcoholics who have associated themselves together for the purpose of staying sober and helping others to stay sober through a program of fellowship nonexcellent. AA groups have no officials, no governing regulations, no dues other than voluntary contributions, therefore the results appear anonymous even to those in the association. Due to the fact more than 50,000 alcoholics throughout the country have rehabilitated themselves, it is ample proof the program voluntarily followed has been, and still is, successful with those seriously desiring sobriety.

Many times AA groups receive requests from persons other than alcoholics for its members to contact certain persons who are alcoholics. For the benefit of persons interested only in others, we may state that contact of this nature has, in most cases, proven unsuccessful, and that the alcoholic must come to realize his condition and form his or her own opinion and request AA assistance accordingly. Should the alcoholic make request of you to contact AA, this information should be passed on with your request. If your friend only wants to get sober so he can get drunk again, pigeonhole your request. If his disposition is of egotistic nature, a big-shot attitude, let him call personally. AA can only help those who really want help and can not help themselves.

Alcoholics who have taken a beating physically, morally, socially, and financially due to lack of self control, still retaining a spark of intelligence and self pride sufficient to be desirous of rehabilitating themselves and fully recovering that part of life which has been lost, have in most cases found what they want by associating themselves with AA.

Who Is An Alcoholic? Any person may be a potential alcoholic, regardless of his or her position in life. It has been known with some who never have taken a drink until after they were 35 years of age then became alcoholics of a most serious degree. Due to the fact a person has never taken a drink gives no reason for such person to state he is nonalcoholic. Should he be allergic and start indulging only slightly, he may become alcoholic even though above the age of 35 years.

So long as a person does not take a drink, his allergic condition has not been exposed, therefore, his alcoholic condition rests with the hidden mystery. Many indulging alcoholics simply will not admit it. They will tell you they are not alcoholics, that they can quit tomorrow or next week, but they never quit. They may remain sober for two days, two weeks, or two years, then unintentionally drink to excess.

It is most difficult for persons of this nature to admit they are alcoholics, but due to the fact they drank to excess, more than they intended to drink, is proof sufficient to themselves, not to mention others, that they cannot control their drinks. Therefore, to be honest with themselves, they must admit they are alcoholics. Most all alcoholics who are honest with themselves, and who have rehabilitated themselves, are not at all backward to admit that all their associates knew they were alcoholics far in advance of their realization of it.

A few symptoms of an alcoholic approaching the advanced stage are: He considers his drinking no one else's business, not even his own family's. If any of the family member begin to leave the impression he is drinking to excess, he begins to sneak all drinks after he has what they may feel is enough for him. He begins to hide a bottle in some convenient place so he can have a drink after he has had what the family terms enough. He feels he must get up early in the morning before the family arises, and get a drink to start the day by being able to eat a bit of breakfast. The many, many other symptoms are too numerous to mention, but the allergic will usually advance a reason for his drinking convincing to him, even though it does not convince others.

In dealing with alcoholics, it may be well to say that criticism, abusive advice, physical interference, hiding their whiskey, shaming them, comparing their habits to that of nonalcoholics and calling it to their attention, confining them for punishment, or even calling the law enforcement agency or your minister to talk with them, has proven in most all cases as useless efforts on the part of the one dealing with them.

As soon as it is possible to get the allergic to acknowledge his condition is helps on his part, have him get in touch with his AA group. Maybe they can talk his language and he will enjoy his visit. Men of all walks of life have rehabilitated themselves through the assistance of AA, and to date no one has expressed regret of his contact. No one is proud of his alcoholic condition, but they are proud of the fact they retained sufficient humanitarian substance to rehabilitate themselves. The world is becoming to recognize a rehabilitated alcoholic as a most courageous type of character and no better recommendation can be had.

A more understandable educational view of AA can only be had through much reading and study of facts advanced by hundreds of alcoholics for the purpose of helping themselves and others to stay sober. Literature composed of this helpful nature is printed by the Works Publishing Company, New York, N. Y., and may be supplied by contacting that company direct or calling upon your local AA group.

Safety Of Youth Is Discussed At Kiwanis Lunch

Jack McGarry, assistant district attorney, and Robert Rowan, both of Carlsbad, spoke Thursday, July 10 at the weekly Artesia Kiwanis Club luncheon on "Safety for Our Youth."

The assistant district attorney opened the discussions with a short talk, after which Rowan summarized the remarks and enlarged upon the subject.

Four new members were inducted into the club, with Vernon Bryan making a short talk of welcome.

They were Franklyn L. Wiltse, Cecil Wilkerson, Carl Cunningham, and W. W. Ports, and were sponsored respectively by Howard O. Miller, Paul Dillard, O. J. (Jack) Carson, and Marshall Rowley.

It was reported at the meeting that the sale of tickets for the Pecos Valley Music Festival here next Tuesday is going nicely. The ticket sale is in charge of the Kiwanis Club.

The Philadelphia police reported a snarling wild animal on the fire escape of a midtown building. Officers, responding to the alarm, snared the beast in a racoon.

LIZ BABY

Nothing brings more real pleasure into a home than the laughing face of a healthy, happy baby. It brightens the household and revitalizes the domestic relations of the family.

In the face of this happy child the whole purpose of marriage and of the home is fulfilled. For man's highest duty, next to that of living a just and useful life and honoring God, is to carry on the human race and transmit its priceless heritage to a new generation.

The greatest thrill on earth is that of the parent who looks into the wide, wondering eyes and smiling face of his own flesh and blood.

But parenthood carries great responsibilities which no father or mother can afford to ignore. It is the responsibility to bring the child up in an environment conducive to faith, honesty and right living. In this great task the Church can render invaluable assistance.

The churches of this community offer religious instruction and spiritual inspiration to young and old alike. Go to church on Sunday. Let the service lift you into the realms of the Infinite.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH. The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend and support the church of his choice. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church on Sunday and read your Bible daily. Copyright 1947 by E. E. Keister, Strasburg, Virginia

—Courtesy Roswell Record

MRS. E. L. BROWN, JR.

Shown above is Mrs. E. L. Brown, Jr., who was, before her marriage Sunday evening, Miss Peggy Nelson. The wedding took place in the garden of the Oscar Pearson home on Cottonwood. The double-ring ceremony was read by Rev. Joseph Harvey of St. Andrew's Church before a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

The bridal party moved down a white covered path to the improvised altar which was arranged against tall shrubs and trees enhanced by pedestal baskets of ivory and pink shaded gladioli, pale blue delphinium, feverfew, and white snapdragons. A blossom entwined arch, pedestals looped together with white satin ribbon, and a satin kneeling bench completed the setting.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. J. T. Caudie, accompanied by Mrs. Stanley Carper, sang, "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life" and "Because." At the close of the service, she sang, "The Lord's Prayer." Mrs. Carper played the wedding marches on a piano on the terrace.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her uncle, Oscar Pearson, was a picture in a formal gown of heaven-blue net, fashioned with a deep ruffle-trimmed yoke and long calla-pointed sleeves. The fitted bodice was attached to a bouffant skirt which was designed in four full tiers. She wore a large garden hat designed of matching net and horsehair. The crown was circled with Joanna Hill rosebuds. She carried a prayer book with a single pale lavender orchid and her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls.

Mrs. Harold Green, matron of honor, was dressed in a pale pink chiffon creation made with a deep ruffled yoke and long full sleeves caught at the wrist by tight bands. The full skirt was softly tucked. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink rosebuds interspersed with blue delphinium blossoms set in a lace frill.

Flower girls were little Martha Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Watson, and Susie Gilchrist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Gilchrist. They wore identical floor-length frocks of pale yellow net over taffeta, with blue sashes and wreaths of feverfew in their hair.

John Davis attended the bridegroom as best man. Ushers were Bill Robinson and Douglas Orr. The three men are all of Roswell.

Mrs. Pearson, aunt of the bride, wore a brown sheer gown with a small hat of pale pink and lime feathers. Her shoulder corsage was of pink roses.

Mrs. E. L. Brown, mother of the bridegroom, was charming in a sheer gray print with a small flowered hat and a corsage of roses.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held in the house. Guests were received by the bride and bridegroom and the wedding party. Beautiful flower arrangements were used throughout the house. A huge blue vase, placed on the mantel, held exact matching delphinium and ivory pink throated gladioli. Asters in pastel shades were in the sun-room. The bride's table in the dining room was covered with an

Horse races at the New Mexico State Fair Sept. 28-Oct. 5 will be under direct supervision of the State Racing Commission. A joint announcement of the Racing Commission and the Fair Commission said the racing body would take full charge of pari-mutuel betting, stalls, housing, and program sales. W. E. Knott, Racing Commission secretary, said applications are being considered for the post of pari-mutuels manager.

An unofficial check of New Mexico gambling statutes has disclosed only two exceptions to the state's ban against gambling—pari-mutuel betting on horse races and lotteries conducted for the benefit of a church or charitable, non-profit institution. The lottery exception is based on a State Supreme Court ruling in 1938, when a group of Easterners tried to conduct a lottery from which the Carrie Tingley Hospital for Crippled Children at Hot Springs would have received a specified amount of the proceeds. The high court held that such a lottery was permissible only in connection with a "fair" for the benefit of a church, library, or other charitable institution and only if "all proceeds" from the lottery went to the institution.

"Folding Money" NOW

Poultry raising in our area has come a long way since Mother kept a few chickens for egg money and Sunday dinners.

Today there's a lot of good "folding money" in scientific poultry raising. It's not "chicken feed" any more, for more folks than ever before are making big money in the poultry business in the Panhandle-Plains-Pecos Valley Area.

We have so much confidence in the poultry industry—and all other industries we serve, that we are investing 35 million dollars in a building program. This expansion program in our territory will bring more dependable electric service to industry and farms and better living—electrically—to everyone.

Hot weather always brings problems in poultry management, but good practices will solve most of them successfully. Feed your flocks freely to keep up high egg production and to keep pullets growing rapidly. Have plenty of fresh water available to them at all times. Provide plenty of shade. Make use of good pastures, where possible, to help keep feed costs down. Control fowl parasites. Sell hens that stop laying.

Dairymen lose cows from bloat every year. The cause generally lies in the animals' rapid eating of the tender tops of legumes like alfalfa or clover, without their getting a sufficient amount of fibrous stems.

Many dairymen believe that by following a few simple practices they can prevent many cases of bloat. First of all, let the cows graze on a new legume pasture for only a few minutes the first day. Then gradually increase their grazing time. Second, don't turn the cows onto legume pasture when it's wet with rain or dew. Another thing: Feed hay to your cows before pasturing them on legumes. And last, keep hay in the feed racks in the legume pasture.

Above all, never turn a hungry cow onto a legume pasture.

unless you know New Mexico's Safety Responsibility Law!

STATE LAW AFFECTS YOU. Every motorist, whether owner or driver, is affected by the provisions of the new Safety-Responsibility law.

MUST PROVE FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY. Under this new law, any motor vehicle owner or driver involved in an accident resulting in either personal injury to, or damage to property of another, may be required to furnish the Commissioner of the Motor Vehicle Department with security to guarantee payment of judgments which may ensue from future accidents.

Security must consist of cash or other acceptable security in the amount of $11,000, but an automobile liability policy will serve in lieu thereof.

Failure, however, to post the required security or to show evidence that you have automobile liability insurance will result in suspension of both operator's license and car registration plates.

HOW YOU CAN COMPLY WITH THE LAW. THE BEST AND CHEAPEST WAY IS TO BUY AN AUTOMOBILE LIABILITY INSURANCE POLICY. The time to get your policy is BEFORE you have an accident—not AFTER. Don't learn about this law the hard way—be wise and get proper liability insurance now.

The Golden Text is: "O Lord, thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name: . . . thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth."—(Isaiah 15:1.)
Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out? And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting."—(Mark 9:28-29.)
The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook: "Prayer cannot change the unalterable Truth, nor can prayer alone give us an understanding of Truth; but prayer, coupled with a fervent habitual desire to know and do the will of God, will bring us into all truth."—(Page 11.)

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out? And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting."—(Mark 9:28-29.)
The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook: "Prayer cannot change the unalterable Truth, nor can prayer alone give us an understanding of Truth; but prayer, coupled with a fervent habitual desire to know and do the will of God, will bring us into all truth."—(Page 11.)

Irrigated Pasture Recommendations Are Made By Ernest O. Hill Of SCS

By Ernest O. Hill
Soil Conservation Service

A number of farmers are reporting good results from irrigated pastures.

J. W. Everest, a dairy farmer and a cooperator of Central Valley Soil Conservation District living four miles north of Artesia, has 13 acres that was sown last fall. Everest is grazing 20 head of milk cows on this pasture. Twenty milk cows are equivalent to 30 range cows in forage consumption. This pasture is not providing all the roughage the cows need. Five bales of alfalfa are also eaten by them daily.

Everest is trying to protect the vigor of his pasture by not overgrazing. According to pasture specialists, the total forage produced is greater where close grazing is not practiced. Everest has applied ammonium nitrate fertilizer on most of this pasture and is well pleased with the increased yield because of it. He followed recommendations of the Soil Conservation Service technicians in purchasing seed mixture, preparation of seed bed, time and rate of sowing, fertilizing, and other management practices.

W. M. Jackson, Jesse Funk, J. W. Collins and Elzie Swift are other farmers who have good irrigated pastures.

Farmers who plan to sow a similar pasture this fall should purchase their seed as soon as possible in order that no delay in seeding will be caused by lack of seed.

The seed bed should be prepared similar to that for alfalfa, with corrugations or small furrows as an additional step. Corrugations help to get a good stand of clover and grasses. A smaller head of water can be used with them, and, as a result, the ridges do not become baked and crusted. These corrugations should be made in the direction of irrigation run and should be spaced approximately 20 inches apart. The seed should be drilled at right angles to corrugations, and not more than an inch deep. The last of August or the first half of September is normally the best time to sow.

The following is a good mixture, and the proper quantity of seed for an acre: Alta fescue 5 pounds, perennial ryegrass 3 pounds, orchard grass 4 pounds, ladino clover 2 pounds, alfalfa 1 pound, total per acre 15 pounds.

If substitutions are needed, meadow fescue, domestic ryegrass, or Harding grass may be used for any of the grasses, and Tennessee button clover, Louisiana strain of red clover, or yellow sweet clover may be substituted for the legumes.

Where red, ladino, or alsike clover is included in the mixture, the red clover group of bacteria inoculation should be mixed with the seed before sowing.

The top soil should be kept moist until a good stand has been obtained. The pasture should not be grazed this fall because these plants need to become firmly rooted. Many plants may be pulled up if grazed too soon.

The Soil Conservation Service recommends these pastures for land that has too much grade to grow other crops without soil and water losses. The grasses are sod forming. Their fibrous roots hold the soil and slow the water sufficiently to cause deeper penetration. It is also needed in many instances to provide spring, summer, and fall pasture for livestock that would be consuming expensive hay. Irrigated pasture has advantages in that no cultivation is required, and the livestock can feed themselves and harvest the crop at the same time.

The Central Valley Soil Conservation District can help farmers with their soil and water conservation problems if requests are made for assistance.

WALLER TO CONDUCT REVIVAL AT GROOM

Robert A. Waller, evangelist of the Church of Christ of Artesia, left Wednesday for Groom, Tex., to conduct a two-week revival.

During his absence the local church activities will be carried on by church officers, Lynn Shelton, Clifton Stark, and T. A. Southard.

Proving Ground-

velopment, there would have been as much employment, the colonel said.

He pointed out that the United States was extremely lucky in capturing a number of V-2 rockets, requiring two ships to bring them here. And with time still the essence of the program, the United States has gained 10 years over what it would have taken to develop guided missiles to the present state.

Colonel Turner gave an interesting account of what makes the V-2 rocket go. In principle, he said, it is somewhat like a toy balloon, in that when the tube on a balloon is released, the attempt of the air inside to push equally at all points forces it out the hole and hence propels it. Similarly, in the rocket, a tremendous amount of fuel is burned through a hole at the back of the rocket.

The V-2 accelerates for 67 seconds, Colonel Turner said, during which time it burns four and a half tons of its nine and a half tons of fuel, alcohol and liquid oxygen. At that time it is traveling upwards at the rate of a mile a second.

An extremely complicated mechanism controls the rocket in flight, correcting its course, unless something goes wrong, such as happened some weeks ago, when one landed near Juarez. However, the colonel said, it is now possible to stop the rocket's flight should anything go wrong.

Whereas the V-2 may be sent 250 miles horizontally and has been fired at the White Sands Proving Ground to a height of 114 miles, the world is now dealing with something which may be imagined to go 5000 miles, capable of carrying a warhead containing anything from black powder to—shall we say—an atomic bomb.

Colonel Turner, in stressing the great importance of the tests being carried on and in the developments by scientists, pointed out that "other nations are working hard on similar gadgets."

He said that the White Sands Proving Ground, started only about two years ago, now has several hundred buildings and is still growing, as the race for development of guided missiles goes on.

During the meeting Chuck Aston, president of the Chamber of Commerce, made a report on the organization of the Eddy County Fair Association, of which he has been elected vice president. He said the county fairs will be at Carlsbad on the site of the Carlsbad Army Air Field, where a number of buildings have been purchased.

Although Carlsbad will benefit more directly from the fair than will Artesia, it is intended to make it a countywide enterprise, he said.

On motion of Hollis G. Watson, a resolution of respect was passed to be sent to the family of the late A. H. Hover, who was found murdered in Mississippi recently. He was quite active in the Artesia Chamber of Commerce.

M. Sgt. Preston Triplett, representing the veterans organizations of the northern part of the county to attend the meeting this evening, President Watkins pointed out that the state convention will be in Albuquerque Aug. 16 and a number of the local eligible men and women may want to attend that as delegates from Eddy County.

Young Democratic women were also invited to attend a reception for Mrs. Mabry at the Crawford Hotel at 7 o'clock this evening, an hour prior to the general meeting.

The Artesia municipal band, under the direction of Franklin L. Wiltse, will play at the meeting tonight.

and E. B. Erskine, manager of the Butler Paper Company at Denver, Colo.

Manager Bemis discussed editorial policies and the need of the home-town editor to include more editorials in his paper. Deubner discussed the program of selling, emphasizing the fact that newspapers are in the greatest public relations work in the world and need not only to sell their product but to show and display it.

Erskine discussed the newspaper situation, pointing out there is more newspaper being produced today than ever before, but reminding the newspaper people the demand is greater. He also pointed out that Canada produces some 81 per cent of all paper used in the nation. He also reminded his listeners that production of newspaper in the United States has steadily declined in the past few years because of production costs.

He expressed the belief there is little opportunity for much increase in newspaper during the next few months and declared the hope is merely to receive normal amounts rather than any increase.

One of the highlights of the two-day convention was the banquet held on Friday evening when Governor and Mrs. Mabry were special guests and when Governor Mabry brought a brief message on his experience at the governors' conference held in Salt Lake City. The principal address for the banquet was given by D. D. Monroe, director of Rotary International, and from Clayton, N. M. He spoke on the need of America to realize the seriousness of the situation, which prevails today in America.

Luncheons were held on both Friday and Saturday noons, while on Friday and Saturday afternoons editors and their guests were guests for the horse races at the La Mesa track where the 20 days of racing opened on Thursday.

Church Of Christ Starts Work On Its New Building

Work is now in progress for a new church home for the Church of Christ of Artesia on the southwest corner of the intersection of Eighth Street and Grand Avenue, a block west of the present church home.

Robert A. Waller, evangelist, said the church when completed will have a basement 50x110 feet, which will house the educational facilities of the church.

On the upper floor there will be an auditorium, which will seat about 650 persons, with a nursery, lounges, a study, and baptismal facilities.

Midsummer Pack Picnic Planned For August 8

A midsummer pack picnic and meeting of the Artesia pack of Cub Scouts will be held in the park east of Morris Field at 8 o'clock Friday evening, Aug. 8, it was announced this week by Walter G. Short, cubmaster.

He said at least two Cubs will graduate at that time and become Boy Scouts. They are Barry Hager and Billy Ray Moreland.

The cubmaster said everyone is to bring a picnic lunch, but that cold drinks and other refreshments will be furnished by the committee.

Cubmaster Short said den mothers should contact the Cubs in their packs, informing them of awards which have been earned and are to be made at the picnic.

It was announced by the cubmaster that Shirley Hager, a member of the pack committee, has resigned in order to assume the duties of assistant scoutmaster of Troop No. 27.

While the truck proper came to rest at the side of the road, the semi-trailer and tractor continued on the highway. Mrs. Robinson's pick-up nearly cleared in front of the oncoming runaways, but was brushed at the rear, spinning it around, to where it faced the highway in the barrow ditch.

The impact started the trailers to whipping and they swung around with the rear of the back trailer describing an arc to the left. As they came to rest in the barrow ditch, the front of the semi-trailer came to rest on the hood and front of the cab of the pick-up, crushing the steering wheel and narrowly missing the occupants.

State's Cotton Is Superior To Other Upland Product In Country

(The New Mexico Extension service has prepared a feature article and chart on New Mexico's irrigated cotton especially for newspapers in the cotton-growing counties of the state, bringing out the fact that New Mexico cotton is of a superior quality. The article.)

In spinning quality, New Mexico's irrigated cotton is superior to any other upland cotton of equal staple length in the United States, perhaps in the world.

That fact has been proved conclusively by spinning tests and fiber studies conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, tests which demonstrate that the new strains developed in New Mexico produce a stronger and finer fiber than any other upland cotton. And upland cotton is 99 per cent of all cotton grown in the United States.

Cotton buyers and farmers have always evaluated the quality of cotton by the "classer's staple length," which is the actual length of the cotton fiber. Judged by this standard, New Mexico's cotton is one of the highest qualities in the land.

In recent years, however, spinning tests have helped to establish a truer basis of evaluation—

U.S. Tests Prove New Mexico Irrigated Staple Is 'King'

The above graph, based on 1941-45 averages compiled from reports of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, shows that New Mexico strains of cotton are superior in spinning quality to the average actual length of other popular varieties of cotton grown in the United States. The staple lengths quoted give fiber in each variety; the equivalent staple lengths indicate fiber length in terms of spinning quality.

the "equivalent staple length" which gives the relative strength and fineness of any particular variety as shown by its spinning properties. A shorter-stapled cotton may, for instance, be so strong and fine that it can be spun into a better cotton yarn than that usually obtained only from a longer-stapled cotton. In other words, the "equivalent staple length" of a shorter-stapled cotton may show it to be "longer" in spinning quality than some longer-stapled cottons. In this respect, the strength and fineness of New Mexico cotton makes it the best spinning upland cotton in the world's greatest cotton producing nation.

There may be some longer-stapled cottons than New Mexico's, but there is none which shows as much difference between the actual and equivalent staple length. But this superiority didn't come as a matter of chance. Only after many years of co-operative research by the New Mexico Experiment Station, the U.S. Cotton Field Station, and the New Mexico Crop Improvement Association was it possible to produce new strains of cotton that are early-maturing, high yielding, wilt-resistant, and equal in fiber to any in the country.

Since Dr. G. N. Stroman began the cotton breeding program at the state experiment station on the New Mexico A. & M. College campus in 1928, particular attention has been given to the selection of fine, strong, long-fibered cottons with the best spinning qualities. The first improved strain, called "Acala 1064," a selection from "Young's Acala," was released by the station in 1937 for use in the Pecos Valley. In 1939 another strain was released, "Acala 1517," a selection from 1064, as was "Acala 2815," which in 1941 replaced 1064 in the Pecos Valley. Many hours of genetic selection and other laboratory work went into the breeding of these new strains.

Prior to the release of 1517 and 2815, "College Acala," a comparatively weak-fibered cotton similar to the so-called "Shafter's Acala" was produced in the irrigated valleys of New Mexico. Cotton buyers attributed its weakness to irrigation, and consequently all irrigated cotton was penalized until 1517 and 2815 came along to prove that theory untrue. Then the penalty was lifted, now that cotton brings a premium on the market.

In the Deep South it's the boll weevil that eats the cotton profits. But in New Mexico it's the verticillium wilt, a soil-borne fungus which interferes with the growth of the cotton plant and may eventually wilt it. When verticillium wilt began spreading rapidly in New Mexico, the U.S. Field Station, under the direction of A. R. Leding, began looking for a wilt-resistant strain.

The result of this research was "Wilt-Resistant 1517"—commonly known as WR1517—a selection from "Acala 1517." "WR1517," which was released for the first time in 1946, has proved to be quite resistant to verticillium wilt, producing higher yields and better quality of fiber in wilt-infected fields. This strain has proved to be one of the strongest ever developed. In two years most of the cotton in wilt-infected areas in New Mexico will be planted to "WR1715." (Meanwhile, Plant Pathologist Phil Leyendecker is devoting all his time to discovering some way to eradicate the wilt altogether.)

Because of their fineness and strength, stronger yarn can be spun from these strains than from other upland varieties with longer staple lengths. For example, "Acala 1517," which has a staple length of 1 3/32 inches, will produce yarn as strong and fine as that ordinarily spun from cotton stapling 1 9/32 inches. (And that 6/32 of an inch difference makes a great difference in the spinning value of the cotton.) Hence, "Acala 1517" is said to have an equivalent staple length of 1 9/32 inches. As equivalent staple length is the best single index of cotton spinning value, New Mexico's cotton ranks tops among upland cottons for "spinnability," as Doc Stroman calls it. (See chart for equivalent staple lengths of varied upland cotton varieties.)

So much for the research that went to make New Mexico's cotton great. But after the new strains had developed, many steps were necessary to protect their desirable characteristics while in commercial status. Farmers and breeders cooperated to protect the purity of the new strains.

First, before the strains were released, the Experiment Station and the U.S. Field Station proved them to be definitely superior in yield, staple length, and spinning qualities. That is, after three years' testing, these appeared to be cottons that would make the farmer the highest return per acre.

Next was the release of foundation seed by the Experiment Station and the U.S. Field Station to the New Mexico Crop Improvement Association, a non-profit farmers' organization for the betterment of agriculture in the state. Members of the association increased the foundation seed secured from the experiment Station by planting and producing pure cotton seed to be sold as registered seed to the general farm public.

And last, the registered seed was planted for production of certified seed, which bore the association's seal to guarantee that the seed was not more than two years removed from the breeding block.

The Experiment Station annually allotted about 18,000 pounds of delinted foundation seed for planting. This will plant about 1500 acres for registration and yield 1,500,000 pounds of registered seed. Four to six million pounds of registered and certified seed are produced each year by Crop Improvement Association members, enough seed to plant the entire cotton acreage of New Mexico and still furnish some seed for El Paso County in Texas.

As the program recognizes no seed that is more than two years from the breeding block, farmers quickly realize any increased benefits from the new strains. For example, two years after "Acala

Beef At $75 Ton Is Figured For DDT Spraying

More than a ton of beef for $5! Looks queer, doesn't it? That's even worse than back in 1932.

Last summer a Kansas rancher sprayed his cattle with DDT for control of flies. Checking up later, he found that for every pound of DDT he got 2306 more pounds of beef on treated over untreated cattle. Two other ranchers reported gains of 1202 and 1285 pounds of beef for each pound of DDT used. A pound of DDT can be applied for $5 or less.

A number of ranchers in this state sprayed for flies last summer, and nearly all of them are treating again this year. It looks as if they think it is a good idea. Five dollars against a possible ton of beef is like hitting the jackpot on a slot machine.

Four pounds of 50 per cent wet-

table DDT per 100 gallons water used as a dip or spray the rate of half to one gallon cow will do the job.

Santa Fe Attorney Francis W. son is organizing the lawyers New Mexico for a drive to raise $100,000 to match an expected amount from the state build a law building on the University of New Mexico campus.

Are You Saving—

$272 and Raising Five Big Calves?

At today's price on milk, it means more profit to you to sell all the milk you can. When you feed Purina Calf Startena you have more milk to sell because just one bag replaces 40 gallons of milk. Here's the proof of what you can save:

When milk sells for $6.25 cwt. (50¢ gallon) and Calf Startena costs $6.40 a bag.
1 bag saves 40 gals. of milk worth	$20.00
4 bags per calf at a saving of	$80.00
$20.00 a bag amounts to	25.60
Cost of 4 bags at $6.40
Savings per calf	$54.40
Average farm, 5 calves, saves	$272.00

And Purina Calf Startena is easy to feed—a complete ration. No mess with mixing gruel in buckets. It helps produce big, hearty calves, too, that are usually above the average in size at 4 months. Calves fed on Purina Calf Startena rarely have scours and are allowed to grow to full development.

Come in and get the ration that will help you make profits this year . . . and help raise big calves on the Purina Calf Startena Plan.

It's Time To Vaccinate Flock Against Fowl Pox

Fowl pox—or chicken pox, as it is often called—costs New Mexico poultry raisers thousands of dollars' loss every year. Yet the loss can be definitely prevented by vaccination, County Health Officer Dallas Rierson told farmers recently.

Vaccination is the only answer to fowl pox, if the disease has not been present within the vicinity of the flock for several years," he said. "The loss is so little that it can't afford to take a chance. The time to vaccinate is during the warm weather when the birds are normally resistant to fowl pox. Most poultrymen prefer to vaccinate their pullets between 2 and 4 months of age, though some prefer to wait until the early-hatched pullets are 4 months old, before production is started. Vaccinating at this time delays production somewhat, but this is often desirable. It is best to vaccinate late-hatched pullets as early as possible, as it probably slows them down the least at that time."

The most common methods of applying vaccine are the feather-follicle and the stock methods, Rierson pointed out. In the feather-follicle method, a few feathers are plucked from the outside portion of the thigh. The vaccine is applied against the open follicle with a brush that is first dipped in the vaccine.

"Most poultrymen prefer the stick method as it takes less time, uses less vaccine and seems to be just as effective as the other," Rierson said. "If the company from whom the vaccine is purchased does not supply an instrument to apply the vaccine, one is easily made. To do so, secure two medium to large sewing machine needles to the end of a stick an eighth inch in diameter. Dip this double needle instrument in the vaccine and stab through the thin web of the wing from the inside, avoiding the feathers. Otherwise, the vaccine may be brushed from the needles. The eyes of the needles carry a definite amount of the vaccine and deposit it in the wounds made by the points. A number of birds should be examined in 10 to 12 days after vaccination to see if there are 'takes.' Evidence of a take is shown by a slight swelling or scab at the point of vaccination. Failure to get a high percentage of takes should result in revaccination."

Fowl-pox vaccine must be kept and used strictly according to directions given by the manufacturer. Every container carries an expiration date after which the vaccine is not guaranteed to be effective.

Should it be necessary to vaccinate birds which are in production, it is best to use what is known as pigeon-pox vaccine, according to Rierson. "It gives a much less severe reaction than fowl-pox vaccine, but the immunity lasts only a few months," he said. "Little or no drop in egg production should result from using pigeon-pox vaccine. In applying pigeon-pox vaccine, apply by the feather follicle method."

"Fowl-pox may also be used to vaccinate turkeys against turkey-pox. Apply it in the same manner as for chickens. As fowl-pox vaccine does not set up a life immunity in turkeys, it is considered advisable that all birds kept for breeders should be revaccinated just before the hatching season."

Rierson pointed out there should be no danger associated with vaccination if the chickens or turkeys are in good health and especially if the work is done in warm weather. Birds suffering from any disease or parasitic infection that reduces the fowl's vitality, he said, should not be vaccinated until they have been treated and brought back into good physical condition.

"Right now is a good time to vaccinate," Rierson reminded. "It's mighty cheap insurance."

Chicken feed will not do for turkey poult feed. In order to thrive, young turkeys require a more concentrated diet than chickens. Turkey poults need about 4½ times as much Vitamin D as young chicks, about twice as much Vitamin A and calcium, and somewhat more Vitamin G. They also need more protein and phosphorus. If the poults do not get a full allowance of high-quality feed, they show the lack more clearly than chicks. Breeding birds also need a higher level of vitamins than chickens do. Turkeys, however, make excellent use of good green pasture in summer. A turkey grower who provides good pasture may save up to 15 per cent of the grain he would otherwise have to feed.

Although President Truman has proclaimed the week of July 20-26 as "National Farm Safety week," that was just a starter for an all-year-round farm safety program. "I request all persons and organizations concerned with agriculture and farm life to cooperate in the observance of this fourth annual 'National Farm Safety Week,'" the president's proclamation read. "I also urge farm people everywhere to set aside a specific time during 'National Farm Safety Week' for family discussion of ways to prevent accidents, in order that these producers of the nation's food may live and work with greater safety."

Farm families should study the hazards that menace their lives at home and on the farm, at work, and on the highway; they should learn what each member of the family can do to reduce these dangers, and then they must realize how carelessness on the part of any member of the family imperils the lives and happiness of all.

State's Cotton Is Superior To Other Upland Product In Country

(The New Mexico Extension service has prepared a feature article and chart on New Mexico's irrigated cotton especially for newspapers in the cotton-growing counties of the state, bringing out the fact that New Mexico cotton is of a superior quality. The article.)

In spinning quality, New Mexico's irrigated cotton is superior to any other upland cotton of equal staple length in the United States, perhaps in the world. That fact has been proved conclusively by spinning tests and fiber studies conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, tests which demonstrate that the new strains developed in New Mexico produce a stronger and finer fiber than any other upland cotton. And upland cotton is 99 per cent of all cotton grown in the United States.

Cotton buyers and farmers have always evaluated the quality of cotton by the "class's staple length," which is the actual length of the cotton fiber. Judged by this standard, New Mexico's cotton is one of the highest qualities in the land.

In recent years, however, spinning tests have helped to establish a truer basis of evaluation—

U.S. Tests Prove New Mexico Irrigated Staple Is 'King'

The above graph, based on 1941-45 averages compiled from reports of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, shows that New Mexico strains of cotton are superior in spinning quality to the average actual length of five other popular varieties of cotton grown in the United States. The staple lengths quoted give ber in each variety; the equivalent staple lengths indicate fiber length in terms of spinning quality.

the "equivalent staple length"—which gives the relative strength and fineness of any particular variety as shown by its spinning properties. A shorter-stapled cotton may, for instance, be so strong and fine that it can be spun into a better cotton yarn than that usually obtained only from a longer-stapled cotton. In other words, the "equivalent staple length" of a shorter-stapled cotton may show it to be "longer" in spinning quality than some longer-stapled cottons. In this respect, the strength and fineness of New Mexico cotton makes it the best spinning upland cotton in the world's greatest cotton producing nation.

There may be some longer-stapled cottons than New Mexico's, but there is none which shows as much difference between the actual and equivalent staple length. But this superiority didn't come as a matter of chance. Only after many years of co-operative research by the New Mexico Experiment Station, the U.S. Cotton Field Station, and the New Mexico Crop Improvement Association was it possible to produce new strains of cotton that are early-maturing, high yielding, wilt-resistant, and equal in fiber to any in the country.

Since Dr. G. N. Stroman began the cotton breeding program at the state experiment station on the New Mexico A. & M. College campus in 1928, particular attention has been given to the selection of fine, strong, long-fibered cottons with the best spinning qualities. The first improved strain, called "Acala 1064," a selection from "Young's Acala," was released by the station in 1937 for use in the Pecos Valley. In 1939 another strain was released, "Acala 1517," a selection from 1064, as was "Acala 2815," which in 1941 replaced 1064 in the Pecos Valley. Many hours of genetic selection and other laboratory work went into the breeding of these new strains.

Prior to the release of 1517 and 2815, "College Acala," a comparatively weak-fibered cotton similar to the so-called "Shafter's Acala" was produced in the irrigated valleys of New Mexico. Cotton buyers attributed its weakness to irrigation, and consequently all irrigated cotton was penalized until 1517 and 2815 came along to prove that theory untrue. Then the penalty was lifted, now that cotton brings a premium on the market.

In the Deep South it's the boll weevil that eats the cotton profits. But in New Mexico it's the verticillium wilt, a soil-borne fungus which interferes with the growth of the cotton plant and may eventually wilt it. When verticillium wilt began spreading rapidly in New Mexico, the U.S. Field Station, under the direction of A. R. Leding, began looking for a wilt-resistant strain.

The result of this research was "Wilt-Resistant 1517"—commonly known as WR1517—a selection from "Acala 1517." "WR1517," which was released for the first time in 1946, has proved to be quite resistant to verticillium wilt, producing higher yields and better quality of fiber in wilt-infected fields. This strain has proved to be one of the strongest ever developed. In two years most of the cotton in wilt-infected areas in New Mexico will be planted to "WR1517." (Meanwhile, Plant Pathologist Phil Leyendecker is devoting all his time to discovering some way to eradicate the wilt altogether.)

Because of their fineness and strength, stronger yarn can be spun from these strains than from other upland varieties with longer staple lengths. For example, "Acala 1517," which has a staple length of 1 3/32 inches, will produce yarn as strong and fine as that ordinarily spun from cotton stapling 1 9/32 inches. (And that 6/32 of an inch difference makes a great difference in the spinning value of the cotton.) Hence, "Acala 1517" is said to have an equivalent staple length of 1 9/32 inches. As equivalent staple length is the best single index of cotton spinning value, New Mexico's cotton ranks tops among upland cottons for "spinnability," as Doc Stroman calls it. (See chart for equivalent staple

So much for the research that went to make New Mexico's cotton great. But after the new strains had developed, many steps were necessary to protect their desirable characteristics while in commercial status. Farmers and breeders cooperated to protect the purity of the new strains.

First, before the strains were released, the Experiment Station and the U.S. Field Station proved them to be definitely superior in yield, staple length, and spinning qualities. That is, after three years' testing, these appeared to be cottons that would make the farmer the highest return per acre.

Next was the release of foundation seed by the Experiment Station and the U.S. Field Station to the New Mexico Crop Improvement Association, a non-profit farmers' organization for the betterment of agriculture in the state. Members of the association increased the foundation seed secured from the experiment Station by planting and producing pure cotton seed to be sold as registered seed to the general farm public.

And last, the registered seed was planted for production of certified seed, which bore the association's seal to guarantee that the seed was not more than two years removed from the breeding block.

The Experiment Station annually allotted about 18,000 pounds of delinted foundation seed for planting. This will plant about 1500 acres for registration and yield 1,500,000 pounds of registered seed. Four to six million pounds of registered and certified seed are produced each year by Crop Improvement Association members, enough seed to plant the entire cotton acreage of New Mexico and still furnish some seed for El Paso County in Texas. As the program recognizes no seed that is more than two years from the breeding block, farmers quickly realize any increased benefits from the new strains. For example, two years after "Acala 1517" was released in 1939, more than 70 per cent of New Mexico's cotton stapled 1 1/2 inches and longer, compared to 1939's figure of only 50 per cent.

The New Mexico Crop Improvement Association aids the program by having spinning tests conducted and by increasing the amount and maintaining the purity of seed stocks released by the Experiment Station and the U.S. Field Station. Their field representative, John T. Stovall, coordinates the program.

So, you see, it isn't just luck that has made New Mexico's cotton what it is today. And New Mexico's scientists are not through experimenting by a long shot. In fact, they've just begun.

Green Manure Crops Valuable In Farm Planning

"In planning your crop rotation, plow under a few green manure crops each year for soil improvement," County Agent Orlas Rierson urges farmers.

"Soils of the semi-arid Southwest are noted for their lack of organic matter," he says. "Yet organic matter can be applied to the soil through green manure crops."

"There are probably two reasons for using legumes as a green manure crop. First, legumes make high-quality hay or pasture, and, second, they have the ability to take nitrogen from the air and put it into the soil."

But even though alfalfa returns nitrogen to the soil, Rierson reminds, if all the hay is removed year after year and nothing is returned, the soil becomes depleted of phosphates and other valuable minor plant food elements. Alfalfa uses more of the different plant foods than most crops, he says.

"In deciding upon your rotation, plan to plow under an alfalfa crop every four or five years," he explains. "In this way, better quality hay is produced and larger returns are received from your land."

"In New Mexico, oats, barley, rye, sudan grass, and clovers are also good green manure crops. In the southern part of the state, a good summer green manure crop is the new legume, sesbania, but it should not be planted before the first of June."

Rierson recommends sudan grass, cowpeas, and volunteer wheat for dry-farming areas. Such green manure crops not only furnish plant food, he says, but also increase the moisture-holding capacity of the soil and help prevent wind erosion.

"Successful crop rotation depend on long-term planning and certainly includes green manures as a sound conservation practice."

Beef At $75 Ton Is Figured For DDT Spraying

More than a ton of beef for $5! Looks queer, doesn't it? That's even worse than back in 1932.

Last summer a Kansas rancher sprayed his cattle with DDT for control of flies. Checking up later, he found that for every pound of DDT he got 2306 more pounds of beef on treated over untreated cattle. Two other ranchers reported gains of 1202 and 1285 pounds of beef for each pound of DDT used. A pound of DDT can be applied for $5 or less.

A number of ranchers in this state sprayed for flies last summer, and nearly all of them are treating again this year. It looks as if they think it is a good idea. Five dollars against a possible ton of beef is like hitting the jackpot on a slot machine.

Four pounds of 50 per cent wet-

table DDT per 100 gallons water used as a dip or spray the rate of half to one gallon cow will do the job.

Santa Fe Attorney Francis W. son is organizing the lawyers New Mexico for a drive to raise $100,000 to match an equal amount from the state to build a law building on the University of New Mexico campus.

Is Time To Vaccinate Flock Against Fowl Pox

Fowl pox—or chicken pox, as it is often called—costs New Mexico poultry raisers thousands of dollars' loss every year. Yet loss can be definitely prevented by vaccination, County Health Officer Dallas Rierson told farm-owners recently.

Vaccination is the only answer to fowl pox, if the disease has not been present within the vicinity for the last few years," he said. "The cost is so little that it can't afford to take a chance. The time to vaccinate is during warm weather when the birds are normally resistant to fowl pox. Most poultrymen prefer to vaccinate their pullets between 2 and 4 months of age, though some prefer to wait until the early-hatched pullets are 4 months old, shortly before production begins. Vaccinating at this time delays production somewhat, but this is often desirable. It is to vaccinate late-hatched pullets as early as possible, as it

The most common methods of applying vaccine are the feather-follicle and the stock methods, Rierson pointed out. In the feather-follicle method, a few feathers are plucked from the outside portion of the thigh. The vaccine is applied against the open follicles with a brush that is first dipped in the vaccine.

"Most poultrymen prefer the stick method as it takes less time, uses less vaccine and seems to be just as effective as the other," Rierson said. "If the company from whom the vaccine is purchased does not supply an instrument to apply the vaccine, one is easily made. To do so, secure two medium to large sewing machine needles to the end of a stick an eighth inch in diameter. Dip this double needle instrument in the vaccine and stab through the thin web of the wing from the inside, avoiding the feathers. Otherwise, the vaccine may be brushed from the needles. The eyes of the needles carry a definite amount of the vaccine and deposit it in the wounds made by the points. A number of birds should be examined in 10 to 12 days after vaccination to see if there are 'takes.' Evidence of a take is shown by a slight swelling or scab at the point of vaccination. Failure to get a high percentage of takes should result in revaccination."

Fowl-pox vaccine must be kept and used strictly according to directions given by the manufacturer. Every container carries an expiration date after which the vaccine is not guaranteed to be effective.

Should it be necessary to vaccinate birds which are in production, it is best to use what is known as pigeon-pox vaccine, according to Rierson. "It gives a much less severe reaction than fowl-pox vaccine, but the immunity lasts only a few months," he said. "Little or no drop in egg production should result from using pigeon-pox vaccine. In applying pigeon-pox vaccine, apply by the feather follicle method.

"Fowl-pox may also be used to vaccinate turkeys against turkey-pox. Apply it in the same manner as for chickens. As fowl-pox vaccine does not set up a life immunity in turkeys, it is considered advisable that all birds kept for breeders should be revaccinated just before the hatching season."

Rierson pointed out there should be no danger associated with vaccination if the chickens or turkeys are in good health and especially if the work is done in warm weather. Birds suffering from any disease or parasitic infection that reduces the fowl's vitality, he said, should not be vaccinated until they have been treated and brought back into good physical condition.

"Right now is a good time to vaccinate," Rierson reminded. "It's mighty cheap insurance."

Chicken feed will not do for turkey poult feed. In order to thrive, young turkeys require a more concentrated diet than chickens. Turkey poults need about 4 1/2 times as much Vitamin D as young chicks, about twice as much Vitamin A and calcium, and somewhat more Vitamin G. They also need more protein and phosphorus. If the poults do not get a full allowance of high-quality feed, they show the lack more clearly than chicks. Breeding birds also need a higher level of vitamins than chickens do. Turkeys, however, make excellent use of good green pasture in summer. A turkey grower who provides good pasture may save up to 15 per cent of the grain he would otherwise have to feed.

Although President Truman has proclaimed the week of July 20-26 as "National Farm Safety Week," that was just a starter for an all-year-round farm safety program. "I request all persons and organizations concerned with agriculture and farm life to cooperate in the observance of this fourth annual 'National Farm Safety Week' for family discussion of ways to prevent accidents, in order that these producers of the nation's food may live and work with greater safety."

Farm families should study the hazards that menace their lives at home and on the farm, at work, and on the highway; they should learn what each member of the family can do to reduce these dangers, and then they must realize how carelessness on the part of any member of the family imperils the lives and happiness of all.
