Then Quit That Job

NOOD JOBS OR POSITIONS are not as plenti-I ful today as they were even a year ago. And good employes also remain scarce.

There is always a shortage of good employes employes who are qualified for the job; interested in their work; and willing to give and do their

There has always been room at the top of the ladder for that individual, who knows his or her work and who applies themselves to the task at

We are confident there always will be

But the average worker—the individual, who only does that which they have to do; who are more interested in the clock; their hours and the pay check; and who never give or contribute anything to their job, are always plentiful.

And those jobs are now becoming more difficult to find.

That perhaps accounts for the fact that the individual, who is always grumbling; always complaining; always fussing about his or her job or their work, stays on. It probably accounts for the fact that these individuals who do not like their job, their work, their surroundings, their hours. their pay, and their employer do not quit their job and go to work elsewhere

But the fact does remain if we do not like our job; if we are not satisfied; if we are not willing to do and give our best; if we are not doing the job, which needs to be done and the job we agreed to do for the salary we receive-well, then we business corporation without a boss." should quit.

We are not only creating the wrong impression with our boss and we are not doing justice to ourselves because we are creating the impression that we can not do a good job.

But we have always felt if some individual has a job, which he or she does not like; if they have a job where they are discontended; if they have a job where they feel they have not or are not being treated fairly and where they are being discriminated against—then the only fair thing for them to do is to quit that job and find another.

They owe this to themselves and they ly owe it to their employer.

These are difficult days and times not only from the standpoint of the employe having insufficient funds in the payroll envelope to meet their high living expenses but they likewise are difficult days for employers and those engaged in business because of the high overhead costs and the costs of doing business. The employe wants the best job with the best pay possible and they cannot be criticized for that. On the other hand the employer wants the best employe possible at the best wage scale he can afford to pay.

And so our advise to the individual, who is not happy and satisfied in his or her work, is to quit that job and seek other employment where they will be happier; where they can do a better job; and by and if it is the proper thing to do, then let us so doing permit their employer to hire an employe, change over to this most modern and most effiwho can do a good job in the position they have and who doubtless can be happy in this work.

Then Keep Plugging

IF YOU HAVE AN IDEA or if you believe that munity—then keep plugging away.

If it is worth while and you work long enough

We know of one instance where an individual believed that definite action should be taken by the law enforcement officers to remove all slot machines and gambling devises in a county. He be put to such use at reasonable cost. That is the advocated and preached for 15 years that the law airport. after the fight was started, the same judge who refused to take action before demanded that the slot machines be taken out; and handed out stiff fines for violations of the law.

It took 17 long years to get that job done but it was accomplished. Many in Artesia have pet ideas and theories. They belive that certain improvements are needed here. They believe certain programs should be adopted; they believe in ommunity progress.

But the fact does remain if the cause is worthy and we will continue to plug, eventually we will be successful in our undertaking.-O.E.P.

Be Considerate Of Others

THIFRE IS MORE GOOD TIME wasted by or 30 minutes late in arriving for the meeting. There are, we suppose, times when individ uals cannot help being late to meetings. There are times when they are unavoidably delayed. There are other times however, when individuals do not make the effort needed or necessary to be present. They take the attitude that everyone else will be late and they are late. The result is that those who attend meetings on time, sit and wait for the others to arrive

The time they sit and wait as a rule is time that is lost or is wasted.

Just why we as citizens do not bother to get to meetings on time has always been a mystery to us. If we have a meeting to attend we prefer BAN to go to the meeting on time, transact the business, .#1.50 which needs to be transacted, and then leave the meeting. We believe that everyone else would prefer to do this but for some reason or other we just don't do it.

Americans attending meetings than in any other way, we believe.

No, Our Town's Not "Slow" and "Stop" signs along Main Street, local drivers were "warned" at it, any tavern selling beer, and failticket on the second.

That first warning was generally enough. Because folks in our town are law-abiding citizens, eager to comply with any sensible regulation. (Only violator was an out-oftowner, who claimed he thought that "Slow Down Here" was a description of the town itself!)

Yes, with sensible folks, a warning's generally enough-as the brewers have found with their "Self Regulation" program. Under their first violation-and given a ing to meet high standards of good conduct and lawful practice, is warned. If that warning isn't heeded, proper authorities are notified.

> From where I sit, "Self Regulation" is the reason 99% of taverns selling beer are law-abiding places (and the reason why the wayward one per cent won't last long!)
