HELPING TO BUILD A GREATER ARTESIA

VOLUME FORTY-SEVEN

ARTESIA, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1950

NUMBER 52

POT POURRI

Anticipation is a great thing. There can be lots of fun in it. One can plan for days or weeks on a holiday. And that is almost as much fun as the holiday itself.

Unless the holiday brings an accident!

No doubt hundreds of Artesia citizens will make a trip over the Fourth of July. Some of them will be able to get away for a three-day week end. Others will make hurried trips only on the Fourth, or on the Sunday prior, or both.

So it will be throughout the nation, with the greatest number of pleasure seekers in the history of the nation expected to take to the open road.

To some it will be their last holiday. And of them, many will not get to complete it, may get only a few miles from home before death takes their holiday. Others will be nearly home, again with anticipation—anticipation of developing pictures, writing letters, rehashing their experiences and telling for months to come about the things they have seen and done.

It is true the majority will be able to do this. But not all.

On the Fourth of July end of a year ago, almost 700 persons lost their lives in accidents of all kinds. Traffic accidents accounted for about 300 of them.

And that does not take into consideration the thousands who were injured, or even those, more fortunate, who came through accidents unscathed, but with battered-up cars.

Those who plan to go on holiday trips should do so with just a little fear, enough to keep them alert, but they should go with a great determination to exercise the utmost caution.

Holiday trips are frequently too long for the time allotted, so there is a tendency to drive too fast. Or perhaps an attempt is made to stretch mileage, when the driver is too tired and sleepy to be at his best.

Then there frequently is the holiday urge for otherwise careful and sane drivers to celebrate too much, to drink, and then to take to the road, when their faculties are not at their best.

All of these things make for accidents. And when there is the other fellow, when the driver must watch at all times. Many innocent persons are killed because of some other driver, who is going too fast, is sleepy, or has been drinking. This condition cannot be helped, it seems. But by always watching the car approaching, the one ahead, and the one in the rear-view mirror, at the same time using every precaution, a driver can frequently avoid an accident which someone else would cause, were he less on his toes.

The National Safety Council advises all to be a little scared on the Fourth, and be alive on the fifth.

And the council also gives this splendid caution: "Don't make your steering wheel a wheel of chance—because you bet your life!"

We always discourage poetry, especially when it is submitted to us for original publication. But here's a little jingle which has been handed us, "Bill's in Trouble," clipped from an unidentified newspaper and the origin of which is unknown.

We believe it's worthy of passing on, just on general principles, so here it is:

I've got a letter, Parson
From my son way out West,
And my old heart is heavy
As an anvil in my breast.
His letters came so seldom
That somehow I sorta knowed
That Billy was a trampin'
On a mighty rocky road,
But never once imagined
He would bow my head in shame,
And in the dust'd waller
His ol' daddy's honored name.
He writes from out in Hilltown,
And the story's mighty short;
I just can't tell his mother;
I'll break her poor ol' heart;
And so I reckon, Parson,
You might break th' news to her—
Bill's in the legislature,
But he didn't say what fur!

Some of the police officers have called our attention to a condition about which merchants should be a little more careful, that of forgetting to close and lock windows and doors when closing.

Quite frequently the cops find windows or doors open, which is an invitation to someone to enter the place.

Or, as one of them said, "It is a situation which could make a crook out of someone who might

Parade, Rodeo, And Dance Are To Be Keystones Of V-J Day Celebration

Parade, rodeo and dance will be keystones of the fourth annual V-J Day celebration of Aug. 10, 11 and 12.

Outline of plans on these three were clarified at a meeting of the celebration committee chairmen held at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night in Veterans Memorial Building.

Route of the parade will be from Second and Quay to Main, thence to Thirteenth. There will be only one parade during the fiesta. It is set for 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Aug. 10, although the time is subject to change.

Earl D. Westfall, police chief, will be parade marshal. Artesia Junior Chamber of Commerce is working on obtaining floats for the parade and plan to make an intensive canvass of all business concerns.

Howard Brown of Dublin, Erath County, Texas, who supplied the rodeo stock for the preceding two celebrations, will for the third year bring horses and cattle to Artesia for the tourney which will be an official national rodeo event.

Expected are 150 head of horses and cattle. Contestants last year totaled 109 and an equal number is expected in this year's rodeo.

Performances, lasting two hours, will be held each of the three nights, starting at 8 o'clock.

In case of rain halting performances, a performance will be given Sunday night.

Top Announcer
Marvin Shoulters, ace rodeo commentator, will be at the mike for the V-J celebration rodeo. He is a former champion bull rider who was injured last year in a rodeo at Sidney, Iowa.

This came after his entry here in a bull riding contest in which he placed third. Shoulters competed after all the other contestants and few knew of his competing.

He is from Henryetta, Okla. and

Charley Bullock Is Installed As Rotary President

Charley Bullock, vice president of the Artesia Rotary Club the last year, was installed as president Tuesday noon at the weekly luncheon, to succeed Thad Cox.

He was installed by Boone Barnett, a past president, who spoke on the responsibilities of the officers and members of the club.

President Bullock was elected at a meeting of the new 1950-51 board of directors, after they had been named at the first regular club meeting in March.

As is customary with the Artesia Rotary Club, the vice president named a year prior automatically is elected president.

At the same time the directors elected T. Stovall vice president for the coming club year, and he in turn will automatically be named president a year hence.

The directors re-elected B. N. Muney, Jr., and W. W. Byers secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Other directors named in March were Landis B. Feather, Rev. R. L. Willingham, Dr. C. Pardue Bunch, and Bill McGinty. Retiring President Cox became a director automatically as the immediate past president.

In his talk of installation, Barnett pointed out that it is necessary for members to assume their part of the responsibilities, so the officers can assume theirs.

He said history shows that in almost every instance when a people have lost its identity it has been because they have been self satisfied with the things they have done and were willing to sacrifice their individual responsibilities.

Barnett said that when any group is willing to surrender its responsibility it loses its identity; it is sunk. "We are traveling in that direction," he said.

Members of the Artesia Rotary Club are fortunate, Barnett said, because they live in a small town and thus have an opportunity to exercise their responsibilities. "They would have a slim chance in a big place," he added.

L. W. Feemster, Former Artesian, Dies in Arkansas

L. W. Feemster, 77, a former Artesia resident, died Tuesday at Decatur, Ark., after an illness of about two weeks.

Funeral services are to be at Decatur at 2 o'clock this afternoon and burial will be in a Decatur cemetery.

Mr. Feemster is survived by his widow, three daughters, Mrs. H. F. Bliss of El Centro, Calif., Mrs. J. B. Lawton of Long Beach, Calif., and Mrs. B. W. Jarbo of Hobbs, and a son, R. A. Feemster of Houston, Texas.

He lived in Artesia from about 1905 to 1920 during which time he operated a plumbing shop.

Mr. Feemster had been farming at Decatur since about 1940.

Many To Observe Three-Day Fourth Of July Holiday

Indications are that Artesia will be fairly well deserted over the three-day Fourth of July holiday, as plans were announced many of the businesses will remain closed from Saturday night to Wednesday morning, July 5.

The Advocate, publication date of which falls on the Fourth, will be distributed on Wednesday, rather than on Monday, as was done the week of Memorial Day.

This means The Advocate office will remain open Monday. And all customary deadlines will be observed, as the distribution a day late does not mean the force will have an extra day in which to work for the Fourth will be observed.

The holiday will necessitate a speed-up on Wednesday and Thursday of next week in order to get the Friday issue out on time, and the co-operation of everyone is asked in getting in copy promptly.

In a poll taken by the Artesia Chamber of Commerce, management of clothing, shoe, hardware, and variety stores agreed to remain closed both Monday and Tuesday. Many of the food stores will be closed both days. And it is presumed the majority of office workers will have a three-day holiday.

Drug stores, restaurants, and a majority of the service stations will remain open on Monday, and it is presumed most of them will follow their Sunday schedules on the Fourth.

With no celebration planned at Artesia, it is probable many of those who can get away for three days will go to the mountains or will take other trips. And there is certain to be a mass exodus on Independence Day.

Another story elsewhere in this issue lists places to go for the Fourth and communities in which there will be celebrations.

Mystery Shrouds Death At Dexter Of Mrs. Hurst, 64

Mrs. Belle Hurst, 64-year-old wealthy Dexter woman and a director of the Peoples State Bank of Artesia, was found Sunday in her home shot to death, the cause of which may remain a mystery.

While it appeared the home might have been searched for valuable by a prowler, Chaves County officers discounted the prowler-killer theory, while some believed Mrs. Hurst had taken her own life.

District Attorney Randolph Reese said a .38-caliber automatic, which was found by the body, was bought by Mrs. Hurst Friday of last week, the day on which she was last seen alive.

Four bullets, one of which was recovered from Mrs. Hurst's body, have been sent to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington. Three of them were found imbedded in a door facing wall in the bedroom in which Mrs. Hurst was found. The district attorney said he expected the FBI to determine whether all four were fired from the same gun.

An inquest into the death of Mrs. Hurst was to be held Wednesday evening at Dexter. The findings of the coroner's jury had not been learned here Thursday afternoon.

Funeral services for Mrs. Hurst were held Tuesday morning at the Presbyterian Church in Dexter, with Rev. Roger Wallace officiating. Mrs. Hurst's body was taken to Vernon, Texas, for burial.

Faculty For New Junior High School, To Open Sept. 1, Is Announced

Names of the teachers who will compose the faculty of the new junior high school building to open for its first session Sept. 1, were made known Tuesday by Superintendent Tom Mayfield.

With the exception of two teachers yet to be selected, the list is complete.

Received here for the new school has been a quantity of furniture, including $9000 worth of blond finish desks, stored in Central School cafeteria.

There are 400 arm chairs, 18 teachers' desks, 36 "aeroplane" tables measuring 52 inches in length and 27 inches high, 150 folding chairs, and 100 chairs designed for use of home economics and arts and crafts students.

The "aeroplane" table possibly derives its name from its "wing-spread," as it has a wide smooth surface wooden top, metal frame, space for books, and is so arranged that ample room is provided for two pupils.

At the building under construction at 11th and Bullock, steel was

Aerial Dusting Of Artesia Is Planned

Aerial dusting of Artesia as a means of polio prevention will again be done in a project sponsored by the 20-30 Club, following appearance of a three-member committee before the City Council at its session Wednesday night.

The club sponsored a similar move last year with cost defrayed by public subscription.

Date of the 1950 dusting is not definite but probably will be within the next 10 days.

The 20-30 committee is composed of Don Jensen, Andy May and Oscar Bayer.

Chamber Lunch Today Is Last Until September

In what will likely be the last meeting until September, Artesia Chamber of Commerce is to have a luncheon session at noon today in Masonic Temple.

The gathering will hear C. E. Withers report on the recent meeting of the New Mexico Freight Equalization Board in Santa Fe that will be of "definite interest to Artesia merchants and to Eastern New Mexico," the chamber officer said.

Beach Barton, merchants' committee chairman, is to make a report of his unit, which has been conducting a questionnaire poll of

How Celebration Grew Here V-J Day History Compiled

(From the files of The Advocate and other sources, Bill Dunnam has compiled a history of the annual V-J Day celebration in Artesia, which is especially interesting at this time, as members of the United Veterans Club are making plans for the biggest and best celebration of all time here on Aug. 10-12. Not only is his history of V-J in Artesia being passed on to the reading public, but it is being made a part of the permanent records of the United Veterans Club, which is composed of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Disabled American Veterans, with the remaining Spanish-American War veterans as honorary members.)

By BILL DUNNAM
During the winter of 1946-47 a group of young veterans, with Attorney Don Bush as mouthpiece, began pestering everybody and group who would listen about celebration and observance of V-J Day—Aug. 14—which they claimed should be recognized and observed in the same manner as Nov. 11 for World War I vets.

Bush was particularly vehement and would launch into his favorite topic with, or without, the slightest provocation. He was rapidly gaining fame as a downright nuisance. Being a lawyer made it rather difficult to give him the ordinary brush-off.

Then at the March, 1947, meeting of the Clarence Kepple Post, American Legion, with the writer acting commander, in the absence of Commander L. F. Hamilton, who was ill, up pops Bush with his V-J

V-J Celebration Awards Offered By Merchants

Indicative of the interest of the annual V-J day celebration consistently arouses among Artesia merchants is the list of awards offered by retailers.

There are 16 donors to date, according to a report of Julius Chandler, chairman of the committee obtaining awards to be given spectators at the rodeo.

Don Bush, publicity director of the celebration, said the awards were obtained on a matter-of-fact basis without any high pressure tactics and that offering of the awards last year was voluntary.

The celebration dates are Aug. 10, 11, and 12.

Bush announced the list of awards:

Modern Dress Shop, $10 gift certificate; Baldwin's, Stetson hat; Lovelady, $5 gift certificate; Williams Furniture, $10 gift certificate; Thompson-Price, $15 gift certificate; Anthony, a Halsey hat and a Miller shirt.

Sanders Office Supply, box of personalized stationery; Vogue Dress Shop, $15 gift certificate; Artesia Shoe Store, $10 gift certificate; Guy Chevrolet, $25 Savings Bond; Artesia Furniture, combination electric warmer-hot plate.

Firestone, $5 gift certificate; Goldstein, book of fiction; Oscar's Boot Shop, handmade belt; Palace Drug, camera and roll of film; Hub Clothiers, H-Bar-C Western shirt each night.

The manufacturer of Levi's has also offered a pair of Levi's for each of the three dates.

No solicitation is being made for awards but merchants who wish to add their names to the list are invited to notify Chandler, telephone 485.

Mahone-Smith Burglarized On Tuesday Night

Mahone-Smith Motor Company was burglarized between 1:45 and 2:15 o'clock Wednesday morning, but nothing was taken, according to Frank Smith of the firm.

The burglary was discovered at 2:15 o'clock by Patrolman Luther Daniels, who discovered a rear window had been broken in the half hour since he had last patrolled in that area.

The inner door of an office safe, the main door of which was left unlocked, was broken open, desks were ransacked and the cash register was found removed to the floor.

Smith said there is seldom any money at the garage and that the safe is used principally to protect books from possible fire.

Another Guard Unit Also Seeks Recruits

Like Artesia, the Portales unit of New Mexico National Guard is seeking recruits.

The Artesia battery has been appealing for recruits for weeks, a move anticipating the annual summer camp at Fort Bliss, Aug. 13-27.

At Portales the unit has set today as the deadline to fill vacancies. Work on the new Portales armory is to start tomorrow.

Over at Las Cruces the battery has received two new M-1 90-millimeter anti aircraft guns and two new M-4 18-ton high speed tractor prime movers for the guns.

Committee Is To Work Out Details For City Gasoline Tax

Further steps were taken Wednesday night at a regular meeting of the City Council towards the passage of a gasoline tax for Artesia, when Mayor Oren C. Roberts appointed a committee to work out details, to be reported at the next meeting.

Serving on the committee are Mayor Roberts, Councilmen Fred Brainard and Frank Smith, City Attorney Neil E. Watson and City Supervisor, John D. Josey, Jr.

Mayor Roberts reluctantly recommended that a gasoline tax be instituted and inaugurated, with funds raised to be used for maintenance of the city streets.

It had been pointed out at a previous meeting that the city has no other source of revenue for street maintenance, but that the need for maintenance is great. The longer the program is put off, the greater will be the cost, it was brought out at that time.

At the meeting Wednesday night, Mayor Roberts said that in order to keep the tax program fair and equitable, it will be necessary to bring into the city property on which are located two service stations. The locations in question were not mentioned by name at the meeting.

Mayor Roberts said it has been figured a half-cent gasoline tax will bring in approximately $1000 a month in revenue, with the addition of the two stations now outside the city limits.

This amount, he said, is believed to be sufficient to carry out the contemplated program of street maintenance.

Whereas it is planned to pass a half-cent tax, the state permits a gasoline tax for municipalities up to a cent a gallon.

Councilman Harold Kersey, in moving that the mayor appoint a committee to work out details, suggested that the council procure copies of ordinances and resolutions in other municipalities which have similar taxes.

The council granted permission to the new Payne Packing Company, which was represented by J. L. Payne, to do business without inspection by a licensed veterinarian until such time as the city is able to obtain the services of a veterinarian.

An ordinance was recently passed by the council that all meat slaughtered locally for sale in Artesia must be inspected by a veterinarian and that meat slaughtered elsewhere in the state must have been inspected under the regulations of a comparable ordinance. Meat shipped in from out of the state is government inspected for interstate transit.

Payne asked the consideration as a temporary move, as it was planned to start operations Wednesday, July 5.

J. H. (Bus) Brown asked consideration of two plots adjacent to the city as additions. One is located north and east of the municipal athletic field and the other is south of the west end of Hermosa Drive. No action was taken on either proposal.

Earl Zeigler Ends Year As Lions Prexy

Officers of the Lions and Lioness Clubs for 1950-51 were installed at a joint meeting Wednesday noon in the basement of the Masonic Temple.

Floyd Springer will head the Artesia Lions Club the coming year and Mrs. Grady Wright will serve as president of the Lioness Club.

The new officers of the Lions Club were installed by D. D. Archer, deputy district governor. Besides President Springer, they were:

First vice president, Ed Shockley; second vice president, Grady Wright; secretary-treasurer, Vernon Mills; Lion tamer, Beach Barton; tail twister, Clyde Dungan; directors, C. C. Nelson, Walter G. Short, Ray Carpenter and B. R. Gorman.

Fred Cole, a past president of the Lions Club, installed Mrs. Wright as president and other officers of the Lioness Club. They were: First vice president, Mrs. W. F. Hinde; second vice president, Mrs. Fritz Moeller; secretary, Mrs. W. M. Jackson, Jr.; tail twister, Mrs. Chuck Johns.

Artesia Jaycees Make Plans To Sponsor Local Beauty Contest

Getting into the swing of the national move of their organization, Artesia Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday started its talent pageant, seeking entries of Artesia girls in the beauty contest that culminates in the national tourney at Atlantic City, N. J.

State finals, at which "Miss New Mexico" will be elected, will be held in nearby Carlsbad on Aug. 4. Local Jaycees have pointed out the advantage of the location and the possibility of having an entrant named Miss Eddy County. In last year's competition a Carlsbad girl won a $1000 scholarship.

Contestants must be single, talented, attractive, and have personality.

Girls wishing to compete are invited to contact Bill White, Box 174, Route 1, Artesia.

Adair Gossett, president, and Bob Jones, secretary, New Mexico Junior Chamber of Commerce, both of Carlsbad, and Cliff Ryan, president of Carlsbad Jaycees, were guests of honor at the local club at its regular supper meeting at 7 o'clock Wednesday night in Artesia Hotel.

A report on the recent national convention in Chicago was given by Gossett and Ryan. They told of the New Mexico float which took plaques as the best float in the parade and of the 13 varieties of cactus on the exhibit that drew keen interest from Chicagoans.

"Everyone wanted that cactus," the state Jaycee officials said. The cactus was finally given to a bus concern that had provided space for assembling the New Mexico float.

Copper ash trays of Indian design were distributed by the New Mexico delegation.

Composing the installation committee for the induction of the new Artesia Jaycee officers is Aaron Cunningham, Harold Crosssett, and Gene Roberts.

Date is July 12. The affair will be a covered dish supper. Probable location will be the Sombbrero Room at Veterans Memorial Building.

Nada Dean Stallings Of Abernathy Becomes Bride Of Robert B. Gates

MRS. ROBERT GATES

Miss Nada Dean Stallings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Stallings, of Abernathy, Texas, became the bride of Robert B. Gates, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Gates, of Artesia, at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the First Nazarene Church at Abernathy, with Rev. N. M. Duke performing the double-ring ceremony.

White and pink gladioli, greenery, and candles decorated the altar. Miss Juanita Bridges, organist, played the traditional wedding marches. Miss Lambert sang, "Yours," "Because," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a dress fashioned of white imported organdy in ballerina length. It was designed with a fitted bodice, fastened to the waistline with tiny buttons and a small white lace collar. Her veil of illusion fell from a tiara of seed pearls and her bouquet of stephanotis and a white orchid were arranged on a white satin ribbon. She wore embroidered organdy mitts.

Miss Jean Rogers of Lubbock, Texas, maid of honor, wore orchid organdy fashioned after the bride's. She carried a colonial bouquet of yellow rosebuds.

The bridesmaids, Misses Melva Waters of Lubbock and Cecelia Winningham of Lorenzo, were dressed in Nile green and yellow organdy. They wore matching mitts and headdresses and carried arm bouquets of roses.

Candles were lighted by Miss Geneva Stallings, sister of the bride and Miss Edith Phillips. Wallace Gates of Vernon, Texas, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Albert Linell and Jim Scoggins of Artesia were the ushers.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. A four-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom centered the table. Bouquets of the bride's attendants decorated the refreshment table. After the bride and bridegroom cut the first piece of cake, it was presided over by the bridesmaids and served with punch.

The living room and dining room were decorated with pink and white gladioli and greenery.

Mrs. Stallings, mother of the bride, chose for her daughter's wedding, a navy blue sheer ensemble and wore a blue picture hat. Her corsage was of gardenias.

Mrs. Gates, mother of the bridegroom, wore a two-piece silk crepe suit with navy blue accessories. Her corsage was of gardenias.

The newlyweds left that evening on a honeymoon trip to Electra Lake, Colo. For travel, the bride wore a blue linen suit with black and white accessories and an orchid corsage. They will make their home at 1107 West Chisum Avenue, Artesia.

The bride graduated from Abernathy High School and attended Texas Tech at Lubbock, Texas.

Mr. Gates was born and reared in Artesia. He is a graduate of New Mexico Military Institute, Roswell and is a former student of Occidental College in Los Angeles.

Laying Potential Is Dependent On Care of Flock

The health and laying potential of your growing birds are dependent to a considerable extent on how well you care for them during the growing period.

If your young flock is on the range, you will want to give the future pullets every possible chance to develop and grow as they should. It costs no more to do the job right; and in the end it's far more economical.

Give your range flock a clean plot of well-drained soil with a balance between sunny and shady spots. It is best to use different ranges from year to year, if possible, so that the ground is not contaminated by flocks of the past. Never range growing chickens with older birds. If both pullets and cockerels are being raised, keep them on separate ranges. Provide good forage, such as bluegrass, timothy or similar crop. Help the flock keep this forage short by occasionally mowing, so that the sun's rays will penetrate the soil and help kill germs.

Have enough shelter space. And make sure the shelters are well-ventilated and sturdy enough to give protection against bad weather. Clean roosts, waterers and feeders regularly—and use a reliable disinfectant on them, too.

Provide plenty of life's essentials for the birds—water, feed, sun and shade. If trees do not grow on your range, you may want to try sunflowers. For convenient watering, try high-capacity range fountains. Sheltered feeders are best for outdoor use to protect the feed from rain. Supply enough feeders so that each 100 birds have 30 to 36 feet of feeder space. Don't forget to supply grit and as pullets begin to lay, oyster shell.

Protect Flock From Worminess

To keep your chickens free of severe damage caused by intestinal worms, follow a systematic control program for the rest of the growing season and after fall housing. Such a program should include regular cleaning of the poultry house or shelters, runs and equipment, plus the use of medicines which will remove the worm species from the infected birds.

The frequent removal of filth will prevent worm infection in your flock by reducing the number of worm eggs present. Give your flock the benefits of a clean, sanitary home.

For such familiar worm species as large roundworms and cecal worms there are dependable commercial medicines which may be given to the flock with good results. Many poultrymen follow the practice of administering a worm-remover every month, mixing it in the flock's feed. This is done during the range period and also after fall housing.

Poultry-raisers who follow a good worm-control program find that it helps prevent damage from intestinal worms, thereby promoting uniform growth of the birds and encouraging higher egg production. Although they rarely cause mortality, intestinal worms are actually extremely costly. They cause decreased egg production, lower birds' resistance to infectious disease and create cull chickens which are not fit for market.

In effect, worms cause slow starvation. Great numbers of them in a fowl's intestinal tract make it impossible for the bird's body to assimilate food as it should. The effect is most noticeable in young birds whose growing bodies demand full use of the feed they consume.

Transplanting of Mule Deer Is Successful

New Mexico's first attempt at the trapping and transplanting of mule deer has proven successful, according to Homer Pickens, assistant state game warden.

A program of trapping and transplanting mule deer has been thought of for some time as a possible solution to the acute shortage of deer in some areas of the state. A program of this sort may also be of considerable value in removing deer from areas where they are inflicting heavy damage to farmers and ranchers.

Pickens reports that 28 mule deer were trapped on the TO Ranch in Colfax County on the first attempt by members of the Department of Game and Fish field force. These deer were then transplanted in areas where the deer population needed supplementing.

Six deer were released in the Dry Cimarron Canyon in Colfax County, seven were released about Ute Park near Cimarron, seven were planted in the Canadian River Refuge west of Mills, and eight were released south of the Dry Cimarron River.

"We are extremely pleased with the results of the first try at deer transplanting," Pickens said. "The deer were in fine shape when released. The system used is in many respects similar to the methods used

Sheep Killing Lion Reported Near Cuba

It has been reported to the Predator Control Division of the Department of Game and Fish that a mountain lion has killed 20 sheep belonging to Jacobo De Herrera, a rancher living near Cuba.

According to Homer Pickens, assistant game warden, a sheep killing lion is rather unusual and the last one he had heard of was one he killed some years ago just north of the town of Gallina. That lion had killed five sheep.

Jose Montoya, also of Cuba, reports that a lion has been doing damage to his sheep. As both ranchers live in the same area, according to Pickens, it is probable that it is the same lion that is doing the damage.

A department lion hunter is being assigned to the area.

In another part of the program the local club received an invitation from the Carlsbad club to attend a dance in the Woman's Club building in Carlsbad tomorrow night. Paul Dillard made known the invitation.

How Celebration—

 this: Big parade at 10 o'clock in the morning; hotrod races at 2 in the afternoon; band concert 7 to 8 in the evening, followed by a dance at 9 in the partially completed Veterans Memorial Building, which incidentally has been completed and is one of the finest in the Southwest.

There was to be plenty of color and fun. The city would be decorated with flags and the national colors. The Army, Gen. Roger Ramey promised, would fly a band here from Tucson, Ariz., in a big C-47 or C-54. The Air Force agreed to have planes over the community during the parade and later at the local airport where they could be inspected by the general public. Fort Bliss authorities were persuaded to get into the act by sending an anti-aircraft battery. The merchants closed their doors and the town had the biggest crowd in its history.

Spring of 1948 came and went without the V-J Day affair getting more than honorable mention. It was still in the discussion stage when the V.F.W. post passed a resolution at its June meeting urging that a rodeo be included. With a scant two months to prepare, the United Veterans Club, consisting of members from each veterans organization, called a meeting for approval or rejection. Approval won. Harold Brown of Dublin, Texas, was hired to stage the rodeo. It was agreed that this celebration would be unique in that there would be no beard growings, no Western attire, except for those who did so voluntarily.

The Chamber of Commerce put up $100 for parade float prizes. The theme would be the same as the previous year, "Preparedness for Peace."

While practically all business firms were extreme co-operative, three of them—the First National Bank, Guy Chevrolet Company, and the Artesia Alfalfa Growers Association—together with the Chamber of Commerce, tossed in $100 each to bring the colorful Santa Fe Indian band here for the occasion.

A good time was had by everybody, including the veteran organizations, which found after the dust had subsided they were $2000 in the red. The Chamber of Commerce came through again by donating $400 to help get us back in black ink. The vets scraped up the rest.

Despite the loss, everyone seemed to be fairly well convinced by this time that it was a fine thing for the city and with proper supervision and long-range planning could be made to pay its own way, so in 1949 the boys got an early start.

Early in the spring a working organization was set up. Bush was publicity chairman; Buster Mulcock, chairman in charge of field; John Simons, Jr., parade and music; H. W. Worthington, concessions; Wade Cunningham, policing grounds; Howard Whitson, tickets and gate receipts; Harry Gilmore, dances, and Hugh Donald Burch, memorial. Every chairman was authorized to name members of his own committee. Nearly every person called upon by these chairmen responded eagerly.

This time it was to be plenty Western. "The Law West of the Pecos" was to prevail, with Judge Roy Bean (Jack Fauntleroy) presiding over a kangaroo court, when the judge could be persuaded to leave a brass-rail bar, to impose penalties on those who failed to grow a beard or wear some article of Western attire. A log corral was erected on Main Street for confining those who had violated "The Law West of the Pecos." The public good-naturedly entered into the occasion and found the court as devoid of justice as of Stalin's and with less respect for custom and tradition than our own U.S. Supreme Court. But it all added to the fun and gaiety of the occasion.

This one had for its theme, "Victory," and it lived up to its name in more ways than one. After all expenses were paid, the boys had earned around 4000 smackeroos net and the city had enjoyed three of the rooitiest, tootiest, hootiest days ever.

The 1950 program was decided on months ago and has the backing of the entire city. The Jaycees have volunteered to handle the parade; the 20-30's, the beard-growing contest; the Chamber of Commerce will lend its assistance, as will the business and professional people. And, of course, so will John Q. Public.

It has not been possible to mention all of those who have contributed of their time and effort, but without the continued support of the nameless, who usually do most of the work, such an undertaking would be doomed to failure. With the experience acquired in the past three years, the V-J Day celebration—Aug. 10-12—should be bigger and better than any of its predecessors.

Because of our profession, we have to be somewhat of a lexicographer, but we have never discovered just what "genuine" means or why it should be used.

In our book, either a thing is what it is claimed to be, or it isn't. If it's leather, it's leather, and that's all there is to it. If it isn't leather, but is made to look like leather, it might be imitation leather. But the use of the term, "genuine," in the first case somehow goes against the grain—our grain that is, not the grain of the leather. And when we see the term applied to anything, leather, a gem, or anything else, we wonder if it really is "genuine," because if it is there's no use saying so.

Of course, we're a sort of scrooball in many ways. —A. L. B.

Commencement For Bible School To Be Tonight

Commencement exercises at 8 o'clock tonight will bring to a conclusion a successful two-week daily vacation Bible school at the Assembly of God.

Rev. R. L. Franks of Hatch, former pastor here, who has been conducting the school, said the attendance has broken all records for daily vacation Bible schools conducted by Assembly of God Churches in the state.

The enrollment Thursday had reached 271 and it was expected to reach or surpass 300 today at the closing session. The highest daily attendance up to today was on Wednesday, when 171 boys and girls attended.

At the conclusion of the morning session on Thursday, about 140 youngsters were taken to the park adjacent to Morris Field for a picnic.

Rev. J. H. McClendon, pastor and Rev. Franks urged all parents of children who have been attending the school to attend the commencement exercises tonight.

Hornbaker Finds Barley To Be Profitable Valley 'Transition Crop'

That barley is well adapted to the Pecos Valley and is quite profitable has been proven this season by W. R. Hornbaker of south of Artesia.

And that barley is a splendid "transition crop" for this area of cotton and alfalfa has been proven by Hornbaker and a number of other farmers in the valley this year.

Hornbaker has had marked success with barley this year on 100 acres, but his yield on one 38-acre field has been remarkable, so remarkable that many other farmers have taken note. But the yield on the entire 100 acres has been profitable beyond expectations of the average Pecos Valley farmer.

The shift to barley as a cash crop by farmers of the valley was brought about because of the curtailment of cotton acreage by the government. However, that was not the case with Hornbaker, who had not increased his cotton acreage previously and therefore did not have to cut it. In fact, he has fewer acres in cotton this year than he has been allocated.

Hornbaker's phenomenal 38-acre field made 3570 bushels, or 171,360 pounds, an average of 94 bushels to the acre, figured at the standard barley bushel weight of 48 pounds. But so heavy was the grain that it weighed 52 pounds to the measured bushel.

At the current price of barley, that field brought a gross of $3570.

The field, along with the remainder of the 100 acres, was planted to Trebi barley seed from Colorado early last February, after the 1949 cotton crop had been picked. And now it has been combined, the entire acreage will be sown by July 10 to Hegari, Hornbaker said Tuesday. And that crop should be harvested by the time of the first frost, which comes in the Pecos Valley about Oct. 25, on the average.

On the 38 acres Hornbaker plans to plant barley again next winter, after harvesting the Hegari, and then raise another crop of Hegari, after which it will be seeded to alfalfa in the fall of 1951.

But the remainder of the 100 acres he plans to plant to alfalfa this fall which Hornbaker explained demonstrates the usefulness of barley as a "transition crop" between cotton and alfalfa. Farmer in this area prefer to sow their alfalfa in the fall. But if a field has been in cotton, this is impossible. The cotton is not all picked until late in the winter, too late to sow to alfalfa. So some crop must be found to tide over until the next fall. Barley, says Hornbaker, is ideal for this purpose, at the same time providing a profitable cash crop.

However, Hornbaker pointed out, barley has an advantage over cotton in one respect, in that it requires less hand labor than does cotton, which reached about 75 per cent including chopping and picking.

In the raising of barley, he said, there is no hand labor, other than that of irrigating, which amounts to about the same as for cotton. The barley raised on the Hornbaker farm this year was sowed by drill, irrigated four times (it would have been less had there been normal rainfall), it was harvested by machine, hauled to the elevator and dumped. That was all there was to it, Hornbaker pointed out.

Cotton will bring about the same amount gross as will alfalfa insofar as the first bale per acre of cotton is concerned. But cotton lends itself to high-production farms on which it is more profitable than barley. However, Hornbaker added, most farms will not make a second bale to the acre. But when one will, the second bale is "velvet," except for the cost of picking, as all other labor expenses are the same regardless of the cotton yield.

Up to Tuesday, including the yield of 3570 bushels from the 38-acre field, Hornbaker had threshed 359,635 pounds, an average of 77 bushels of barley to the acre, off the 100 acres, with about seven acres yet to be combined. The completion of the seven acres will bring the average still higher.

The combining was started last week by Alton Lowery and Gene Chambers and would have been completed Tuesday, except for wet soil in the seven acres, which was to be combined as soon as possible.

Hornbaker pointed out there has been very little barley raised here in the past, that everybody has believed cotton to be a better crop. However, he grew some barley about 15 years ago, and other farmers have raised a certain amount over the years.

He believes the government "did the cotton farmers a good turn," when the cotton acreage was cut, as many farmers are now finding out there are other crops which exceed cotton in many ways.

On Hornbaker's 320-acre farm, he was allocated 120 acres of cotton this year, but he is raising only 112 acres. He has about 100 acres in alfalfa.

He explained the greater yield of barley on the 38-acre field than on the remainder of the 100 acres by pointing out that it had been in alfalfa more recently than had the other acreage. It has been only three years since alfalfa was raised on the 38 acres, but about six years on the other acreage.

The heavy growth on the 38 acres has caused Hornbaker to resort to a measure which all farmers know should be avoided: He has burned the stubble. He said he found the stubble so heavy that no plow, offset disc, or other implement would turn it under. Then, even against his better judgement, he tried to hog it down. But as a last resort, he had to burn the stubble, so as to be able to have the soil in shape for the sowing of Hegari by July 10.

All in all, Hornbaker believes that with a larger acreage of barley in the valley than ever before, the farmers are finding out that there is something besides cotton which they can raise profitably. At least, they are learning that it is a splendid "transition crop."

Oil Industry Establishes New Safety Record

The petroleum industry established an all-time safety record in 1949, according to the annual summary of injuries compiled by the Department of Safety of the American Petroleum Institute. The record is even more impressive than it appears, because 7751 more employees were covered in the 1949 report than any previous study. In addition, total exposure exceeded one billion hours.

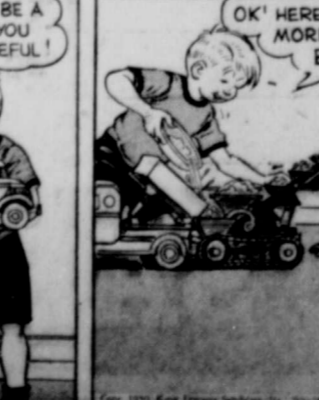

Best previous safety performance established by the petroleum industry was in 1939. By breaking the 1939 record, the petroleum industry resumed the steady trend toward safer operations which it maintained before the war. During the war years, injury rates increased disproportionately because of the shortage of skilled manpower and the constantly increasing tempo of production and output. Comparative figures based upon the 1949 A.P.I. study show that as a result of the petroleum industry's over-all safety program and employee training, the average employee is now three times safer at work than he is in his own home. The 1949 study resulted from the experience records of 263 oil companies employing 478,583 persons. The frequency rate of injuries in 1949 dipped to 10.54 per million man-hours worked, and the severity rate of injuries declined to 1.03 days lost per thousand man-hours worked. This represents an improvement of 14 per cent under the 1948 frequency rate, and 11.2 per cent under the 1948 severity rate. The 1949 study shows that the chances of an employee being injured fatally now are almost 4400 to one, against an average of 2800 to one in 1946. The chances of an employee being disabled by injury now are 45 to one, compared with 34 to one four years ago. The 1949 frequency and severity rates both are under the 1948 all-industry averages. Statistics on the all-industry averages for 1949 are not available yet, but they are believed to be comparable to the 1948 totals. The greatest improvement in safety performance in 1949 was in the drilling department. Here, the frequency rate of injuries showed a decline of 24 per cent below the 1948 totals. Among the safest operations, according to the study, were wholesale marketing and refining. The oil industry long has been a leader in safety measures to protect its manpower. Oil company executives were among the first to recognize the need for safety education and training. They drew up codes of safe operating practices, and trained foremen and workers alike in accident prevention and fire protection. In 1920, the American Petroleum Institute set up a committee to serve as a clearing house for the safety programs of its member companies. Thousands of oil companies were urged to intensify their own programs, and to "pool" their safety knowledge so it could be shared by all members of the industry. The success of the safety program to date can be judged from the fact that the modern oil worker ranks among the best protected individuals in American industry. 1949 safety record zone is proof of that. Single copies of the 1949 summary of injuries may be obtained by writing to the A.P.I. Department of Safety, 50 West 50th Street, New York 20, N. Y.

W. T. Houston represented the Cole Motor Company of Artesia at a factory-sponsored Pontiac Hydra-Matic transmission school for servicemen at the Court House Garage in Roswell Tuesday of last week. It was announced by G. Taylor Cole.

The school was conducted by a zone service instructor and covered every phase of Pontiac's 1950 Hydra-Matic transmission. Pontiac this year is conducting a series of schools on proper service methods. Two will be two-day refresher courses for those servicemen who have had previous Hydra-Matic training. Another will be a five-day school primarily for new trainees, Cole said.

been famed in story, promotion and later in song as the kingpin of roads. But now, says The Leader, "The Highway 70 association has Highways 66 and 80 worried because motorists are tending to use it more than the other two transcontinental routes."

U.S. Highway 70 goes through Roswell, only 43 miles north of Artesia, and 70 plans national advertising through films, press and radio to keep traffic growing. Ruidoso and Lordsburg, like Roswell, are on the route.

More Than 40,000 Gar Are Removed Below McMillan
More than 40,000 gar were removed from the Pecos River below Lake McMillan on June 12-13, according to Fred Thompson, director of fisheries, who, working with Department of Game and Fish biologists, conducted the two-day operation.

The waters below the lake, which extended for about four miles down the river, were systematically seined and poisoned in what is thought to be the most effective job of rough fish control so far this year. In addition to the 40,000 gar, 5,000 shad, 500 buffalo, 7,000 quillbacks, and 30,000 carp were removed.

A large seine was put across the river below the dam and the gates were then closed. As the water became lower the fish headed downstream to find permanent water.

About six hours after the barrier was put across the river it was inspected and according to Bob Carter, biologist, the net was literally covered with gar. He reported that at places every mesh of the net was filled.

Few game fish were taken in the netting and poisoning operations, and the public was urged to seine before the poisoning began so as to have an opportunity to take fish for food or for the stocking of private ponds and tanks.

A bed should be at least six inches longer than the sleeper.

Stand On Records

WHEN THE CANDIDATES for the various offices do all the talking, the preaching and the campaigning on their records we are always inclined to want to inquire—what record.

Because most of this is "political hogwash" and everyone who looks into the matter realizes that fact.

There was a lot of talk in the primary election about the record of the candidate; about qualifications; about experience; about ability. The record doesn't show much in any of these fields.

And insofar as this county and particularly the northern part of this county is concerned this candidate we do not believe can cite a single thing he has ever done.

We would have a difficult time convincing the citizens and the taxpayers that he had done much for them. He might have provided jobs for a few politicians; he might have done some personal favors; he might have taken care of the political stooges but he didn't do anything constructive for the northern part of the county or for the city.

Gov. Thomas J. Mabry did more for Artesia and a good many years. He straightened and removed the dip west of Artesia. He stood pat on Highway No. 83 and kept his promise regarding this highway. He aided and helped Artesia on Highway No. 265; he listened to his friends in North Eddy County on other problems.

He deserves full credit for that. But he isn't running for re-election and others can't, although they may try, claim credit for what he did.

The average politician does a lot of talking about his record but he wants to talk in generalities and he doesn't want to get specific because he doesn't dare do so. He can't cite the things he has done to aid the people and he can't cite examples of where he has been a friend of the people in the northern part of this county.

One of those candidates running for election probably can't cite anything he has done for North Eddy County but he can cite some counties, not Bernalillo either, where he did help the people; serve them; and show a real interest. His record there stands and he has always been interested in North Eddy County and probably will do anything possible to aid us.

That candidate is John J. (Jack) Dempsey who led the ticket and apparently has been assured of his election to Congress by his Democratic nomination.

But one of the candidates, who has done a great deal of talking about what he has done and what he is going to do, can't cite anything he has done in this county and he can't cite anything he has done in the county where Dempsey has created for himself many friends by his activities.

The average politician isn't interested in serving the people; or rendering service or even helping the taxpayers. He is interested in himself, his party and his leaders. He is going to serve them and they are all interested in obtaining everything they can obtain for themselves and theirs.

They want the state's business; they want state jobs; they want their party in control and power.

That is their real interest regardless of what they tell the voters. And those who have been in power longest want to remain—it isn't they want to serve.

The public should do a little checking on these so called records that are always employed. Most of them won't stand very close scrutiny.

Just be a little weary of that politician who tells you what he has done for you, for the state and for your county then do a little checking and you will learn that most of it is just political propaganda.—O.E.P.

Whose Business Is It?

WE RECALL HEARING OF A MINISTER who registered the complaint before his ministerial alliance that they had reached the point where everybody's business was coming before them and as a result they did not have time any more to transact their own business.

That, we fear, is true of many groups and organizations today. These groups, clubs, organizations and associations have been formed for the purpose of discussing those problems and those matters peculiar to that particular group of individuals.

As a rule they never have ample time to take up, to discuss and to go over their own problems. Yet far too often today outsiders are seeking to come before these organizations and to seek their aid and help in a movement or an undertaking which does not properly come under their own rules of business.

This has happened and is happening before the New Mexico Press Association. Time after time this organization does not have sufficient time at its semi-annual conventions and meetings to go over its own problems. Yet time and again some outsider representing some movement, undertaking, project or association manages in some way or another to get into the meeting and take up time the editors, reporters, owners and publishers need to discuss their own problems.

And this happens, of course, because these individual seek to impose on the newspaper people and because the officers and those charged with the responsibility of operating the associations permit them to do just this.

Personally when we attend a newspaper press convention we are not interested in the problems of others. We go to the meeting to discuss or hear discussed some of our own problems. And we are a little tired of others seeking to come before the newspaper people with some of their special problems which may be of interest but certainly are not a part of the newspaper men's problems.

We are sure that the members of other state associations are experiencing the very same thing and that they also are a little weary of this occurring.

If we want to maintain the interest in our various state organizations it appears to us we better confine these programs and these discussions to our own particular business. If we don't then many of those who should be attending these affairs are going to stay at home.—O.E.P.

Just because you have sound opinion is no excuse for going around bursting other people's eardrums.

Watch out for blowouts this summer! They make a lot of touring plans fall flat.

What Other Editors Are Saying

COST OF PEACE IS HIGH

The cost of peace, particularly in a troubled time, is almost as expensive as war, so far as dollars are concerned.

Since the end of World War II, this country has spent several billions of dollars in a varied number of attempts to preserve peace in the world, and it looks as though several more billions will be spent in the same direction.

President Truman expects to ask the Congress for 300 million dollars to speed up work on the hydrogen bomb. That may be credited against the accounts of peace, inasmuch as it is a precaution to be taken to preserve the peace, initially, while the ultimate aim is to have it ready for use in case some nations get so far out of line war is inevitable.

Whatever the cost, however, if peace is maintained by arming weaker nations of the Western world, and by arming our nation to the extent it will be ready for emergency, and in case the two are sufficient threats to discourage communists from further attempts at world domination, it will have been an outlay of money that is better than well spent.

There is an element of the American population, however, which discourages the present program of government. They argue against facts, and so far have had no serious audience. America having learned that their argument is phony by experiences in the past quarter century.

To that element it will be a bit difficult to see that whatever we invest in preparation may be a way of preserving peace. But it is fortunate that most of the people recognize the situation and the facts.—Roswell Daily Record.

MESS CLEANED UP

Results of the sheriff's election Dona Ana County, when former Sheriff Happy Apodaca was badly beaten for the Democratic nomination for return to the office which he vacated under fire, indicates that the people of that county have decided upon a new and different brand of officials in county offices.

During Apodaca's trials, after the county was overrun by state police and an untold amount of large and small crime brought to light, the record and reputation of the sheriff was made to look pretty bad. And in that light it appeared highly presumptuous when he asked for another election to the same office that he made a center of disrespect and suspicion.

His defeat indicates that the people of his county are through with the violations of decency and law that were allowed to flourish, and that a spot that was a blemish upon the state has been cleaned up.—Roswell Record.

CARLSBAD DIAL SYSTEM

And now it's Carlsbad that is getting a new dial telephone system. Construction of a $600,000 building will start soon and the system will be converted by early next year. The number of telephones there has been increased from 1400 in 1940 to more than 4100 at the present time.

Carlsbad has been one of the fastest growing larger cities in the state, and it keeps on growing and improving.—Gallup Independent.

FOR LIGHT IN JAPAN

If Japanese are to learn democratic ways of living, freedom of thought, and a Christian regard for the dignity of the individual, they must have opportunities to study in a democratic and Christian atmosphere.

With this as a premise, the Japan International Christian University Foundation, with headquarters in New York, is undertaking to raise $10,000,000 for the construction and establishment of a top-rank institution of learning in the island now under American occupation.

Another premise of the undertaking is that by an expression of tangible and enduring generosity to a fallen foe, Americans will be illustrating Christianity in action.

With this as a premise, the Japan land has been bought near Tokyo and the nucleus of the university organized in two one-time Japanese Air Force buildings. The institution will comprise a college of liberal arts and graduate schools of education, public administration, and social work, aiming to prepare students for tasks in the rehabilitation of the country.

An institution of the caliber envisaged by the foundation would be of great service both in fostering free education for the Japan of the future and in forming a strong cultural tie between Japan and the United States.—Christian Science Monitor.

ULTRA-MODERN FARMING

The art of practical farming is becoming so mechanized, scientific, and complicated that if a farmer decided to rest a couple of years and then start back, he'd probably have to take a refresher course to learn where to begin. The newest wrinkle around here in farming will be two-way radios installed in farm trucks. A transmitting license has already been applied for by the Ponder Plant Company and installation will probably be made before another plant season. By use of radio an order for plants can be transmitted some 20 miles from the office to the field. Wear and tear on men and machines will be reduced to a minimum.—Omega (Ga.) News.

SCHOOL OF MINES—IT'S LEADERSHIP

New Mexico's leadership in seeking new sources of water, in the clouds and in the ground, emphasizes the vigor of this young state. The fact that New Mexico entrusts this search to the School of Mines emphasizes the importance of the dry Southwest in particular, and the nation in general, for all sections are subject to drought.

This development is another proof—and the most sensational so far—of the wisdom of the expansion policy applied to the School of Mines about four years ago. That policy was opposed by many—a hangover, probably, of the willingness of certain interests, a few years before, to trade the college for a hospital.

We of Socorro have increasing reason to be proud of the School of Mines. Its national work for cloud-control, and its explorations for subterranean water in an area where water is life, are reiterations of the value which was built into the institution at its founding in 1889.—Socorro Chieftain.

"About 15,000,000 persons in the United States depend upon cotton growing, manufacturing and distribution for their livelihood."—U.S. Department of Commerce.

Assignment New Mexico

By G. Ward Fenley

Whether it's the federal spending, Red whet hunt, foreign policy, or the 1950 census, nobody is ever satisfied with what Uncle Sam does.

An estimate of 140,000 enumerators earning from $14.72 to $20.08 each daily for a total of 87 million dollars did, in the opinion of a lot of New Mexicans, a "lousy" job.

According to Albuquerque, Raton, Carlsbad, Portales, and Las Vegas, the enumerators missed 'em coming and going.

Failing by far to reach the estimated 125,000 Albuquerqueans are frantically searching for another 3000 to bring her total up to 100,000.

Gripes and More Gripes
Jimnie Barber of The Raton Range huffed and puffed and nearly blew Goat Hill over when the report listed a measly 7954—only 347 over the 1940 census. "Something's dead wrong," Jimmy concluded.

Somebody had already painted a large Chamber of Commerce sign on the outskirts of Carlsbad heralding a city of 28,000—which turned out to be 17,915.

Gordon Greaves almost blew his top, but cautiously advised the Peanut Capital to await the final outcome about Portales' population.

Las Vegas Optic resignedly sighed: "We have been outpaced by booming cities."

Roswell's 25,000 people pointed with pride—not that the city did not have 30,000—but to the fact that only Albuquerque and Santa Fe were larger in the census figures. The big thing to Roswellites was to outstrip Carlsbad—nothing else mattered.

Clayton with a small gain of 112 residents in the 10-year period shrugged it off with: "Anyway, we held our own."

Some Arizona dame told The Times' W. J. Hooten how to solve El Paso's census problems: "Let Columbus, N. M., annex El Paso and become New Mexico's largest city instead of Texas' sixth in population."

The Main Trouble
Like the man who invented the accordion (he's the guy who couldn't make up his mind how big was the fish he caught) most people had their hopes set too high. They saw a lot of activity, much building, tourists by the droves—so we just had to be a heck of a lot bigger than we actually were.

Census pre-estimates are kinda like the comparison of a bubble to a reputation. If you blow it, it's likely to burst. That's what Jack Sittin's bubble did—burst right smack dab in his face.

Same Old Story
It's the same old story. Everything has shrunk and shriveled. A 1939 dollar is worth while below 60 cents and in general things just don't go as far as they used to.

Only modern woman has grown bigger with eight out of 10 out of shape—and in the wrong places. Of 1661 measured, an AP release from a Department of Agriculture study says that only 126 are the perfect 36. Their bosoms, waists, and hips are in a pitiful shape to say nothing about jut jaws, knobby knees, suitcase feet, and blacksmith's biceps.

No Use to Argue
But it's no use to argue either about the ungainly size of women or the census figures. Best thing to do is to let it do like gossip and muddy water. They'll all settle quicker if we stop stirring 'em.

Heard of one man who was dissatisfied both with the census and women, after a few nips at the bottle, figured out this old world: "Bored is what people drink to overcome being and wind up stiff as a..."

There'll Be Fewer People
As Will Harrison of The Santa Fe New Mexican says, there may be fewer people if individuals keep on playing harmonicas and San Antonio Rose 26 times over and over in bars. A couple of guys got bopped on the head in the Duke City a couple of weeks back for such stunts.

Ceaseless repetition of one's own music in a hootch joint is dangerous and somebody ought to tell those people, wrote Bill.

Typos Are Dangerous Also
The Albuquerque Journal made a conscious pun in a heading: "Coast Cities Lack Bread; Bakers Begin Long Loaf."
The Tucumcari News said that a lady let out a long "sequel" when some Los Angeles Shriners spurted her with ethyl chloride.

The Gallup Independent had the movie scouts hunting an Indian girl to play opposite Clark Gable. And in conclusion

"A mid-century look at cotton indicates considerably more elements in its favor during the next 50 years than during the first half of the 1900's. As a feed and fiber crop for this state, cotton is still indispensable."—Oklahoma Cotton Grower.

"Cattle and cotton are a mighty fine combination."—The Progressive Farmer.

MARCH OF EVENTS

Demos Unmoved by GOP Demand for New Inquiry | Charge Silent Filibuster Against Tax Slash Bill

Special to Central Press
WASHINGTON—Senate Democrats aren't much worried about the latest GOP move in the Amerasia stolen documents case—a request for a separate judiciary committee investigation of how the Justice department handled the prosecution.

Even if the resolution for a new inquiry, asked by 20 Republicans, should get initial approval, Democratic leaders confidently predict the Senate would not launch the probe. Majority Leader Scott (D), Illinois, pointed out there was no likelihood of the same question going on at the same time.

GOP senators claim the Tydings committee, probing the Amerasia case, really was set up to direct primarily to investigate the McCarthy charges of Communism in the State department. That is their main argument for the second probe.

SILENT FILIBUSTER—House ways and means committee complain privately that a kind of silent filibuster is going on in the battle over an excise tax reduction bill.

Members say this is the real reason the committee has been at work on a bill behind closed doors since March 15 and still has set no deadline for completing its work. This is the way the situation is being analyzed:

Committees concerned with the tobacco industry want no bill because this far the unit has voted a cut in the tax on economy brand cigarettes and has not approved a corresponding reduction in the levy on standard brand cigarettes.

Members interested in preserving the 27.5 per cent depletion allowance for the oil industry want no bill and are doing their best to see there is none. They feel that if there is a bill, the oil depletion allowance will not be cut. If there is a bill, they cannot be sure.

In addition, Democrats are saying Republican committee members they can make campaign fire out of the majority party's failure to pass a tax measure.

TURNING POINT—Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross recently had reason to recall that the turning point in his life was provided by a piece of gooey candy in the hands of a University of Missouri co-ed.

Ross was teaching summer school at Missouri on a hot August day in 1918 when he noticed the girl absorbed in trying to eat the gooey candy and paying no attention to the journalism lecture he was giving.

It occurred to Ross that if he could not compete with this ravenous-looking candy for the girl's interest, he had better get back to newspaper work. Result—he spent the next 27 years with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, won a Pulitzer prize and became President Truman's press secretary.

The co-ed, whose summer candy prompted the turn, is now Mrs. Ernest Hemingway, former wife of the author, who lives at West, Fla., where Ross goes when his boss, the President, vacations.

CRIME HUNTERS ON "JUICE" TRAIL—Senate crime investigators are trying to track down alleged "pay-offs" by gamblers to municipal officials in the Florida area. This is one of the main reasons the probes have not started open hearings.

They feel they have sufficient documentary evidence to go ahead with hearings but that if they wait until the pay-off angle can be thoroughly exposed, they will have a complete picture of interstate, organized crime to present. So far the crime hunters have the information on pay-off "juice" as the underworld expresses it, but no downright proof.

Savings Bond Drive Is Still Falling Behind

While five counties showed marked gains toward their 1950 U.S. Savings Bonds goal, most counties and the state as a whole continued to slump in their objectives for the campaign which ends on July 4. Pearce C. Rodey, state chairman, said.

The state had attained only 47.72 per cent of its $1,657,000 quota, or $790,879.25, with more than half or 53 per cent of the banking days elapsed.

During the week ending June 17, New Mexico residents invested $108,637.50. The previous week's purchases had totalled $310,053.75.

Rodey said counties showing marked gains toward their goals during the week were: Guadalupe, 29 per cent or $3,881.25 of an objective of $13,000; Luna, 26 per cent or $5,750.25 of a $22,000 quota; Santa Fe, 21 per cent or $35,175 of a $164,000 quota; Roosevelt, 12 per cent or $2700 of a $19,000 quota, and Bernalillo, 10 per cent or $50,362.50 of a $498,000 quota.

Three counties have already passed and far exceeded their quotas. Residents of Torrance County have bought Savings Bonds to the tune of 190 per cent of quota with $7,612.75 purchased over a $4,000 objective. Socorro County has reached 167.08 per cent, and Lincoln, 160.54 per cent, Rodey said.

The state chairman said quotas for each county are based on that county's ability to purchase derived from total non-governmental bank deposits, savings accounts, income to individuals and performance in past bond drives. It is relatively harder for some counties to make a small quota than others to reach a larger.

In last year's Opportunity Drive on the same date, New Mexico had attained 80 per cent of $2,350,000 quota, with the number of weeks remaining in accounting period.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

BOB RISKIND, the Hollywood writer, had his most disturbing experience when he ripped a picture to shreds one evening, concluding with the flat statement, "It's the worst piece of tripe I ever saw."

At this point, a man in the room remarked, "I wrote the picture." Riskind tried to repair his fences by mentioning individual scenes that had struck his fancy. "Yes," he concluded, "I guess it wasn't nearly as bad as the one they showed here last Saturday night. That really hit the all-time low." The man said solemnly, "I wrote that one, too!"

A little girl named Elsie who is a neighbor of Neal O'Hara asked her mother what became of an automobile when it got too old to be driven any more. O'Hara recorded the disillusioned mother's reply for posterity. "Elsie," said, "that's the easiest question you've put up to me in a long while. Somebody just persuades your father it's a used car as good as new."

Majority War II Vets Benefit By GI Bill, Which Is Now Six Years Old

The GI Bill, a law passed June 22, 1944, to help World War II veterans get back into the swing of civilian living, is six years old.

During the six years the act has been in effect, a majority of the nation's 15,300,000 World War II veterans have benefited by one or more of its three major provisions. In New Mexico, an estimated 45,000 veterans have shared in the benefits, according to Gene A. Robens, manager of the Veterans Administration regional office in Albuquerque.

The three provisions are education and training at government expense, government-guaranteed and insured loans for homes, farms and businesses, and a readjustment allowance program to help tide veterans over during periods of unemployment or slack self-employment.

Here's the record of the GI Bill to date in the nation as a whole and in New Mexico:

Education and training—About seven million former servicemen and women, at some time or another, have attended school or training on the job or on the farm under the law's educational provisions. This program so far has cost more than 10 billion dollars for tuition, supplies, and subsistence allowances.

At the close of the Spring term this year more than 35,000 New Mexico veterans had received educational and training benefits, at an estimated cost of more than 56 million dollars.

In the nation, veterans spent altogether more than 95 million months in the classroom, at the work bench and on the farm, or an average of about 15 months of training per veteran.

Only 4 per cent of all veterans who have been in training—or around 300,000—have exhausted their entitlement to further GI Bill training.

Under the law, most veterans must start their courses by July

Readjustment allowances—These other seven years to go, ending for the majority of veterans on July 25, 1957. Because the program still has a long life ahead of it, VA has advised veterans that there is no need to rush into the program without thinking things over carefully.

During the six years of the GI Bill, about nine million veterans draw readjustment allowances that totaled 3.8 billion dollars.

In New Mexico, veterans are paid benefits by the State Employment Security Commission, of which Benjamin D. Luchini is chairman. Funds for the benefits are supplied by the Veterans Administration. Up to April of this year, Luchini reports that his commission has certified to the VA a total of 31,481 veterans who received payments ranging from one week to the maximum of 52 weeks. Payments have totaled $14,687,214.

Four thousand five hundred and forty New Mexico veterans have exhausted their benefits by receiving their maximum entitlement in most cases, $20 a week for one year.

VA's experience has been that the average veteran found a job after having been on the readjustment allowance rolls for about a month and a half, despite the fact that benefits could extend in most cases to 52 weeks.

Purpose of the program was to provide some financial assistance to veterans who were out of work, partially employed, or if self-employed netted less than $100 a month.

Headlines Mirror Towering Historic Drama of the Week

Dramatic suddenness of President Truman's action in ordering immediate naval and air aid to South Korea to repel the Red forces from the north caused a flurry of "war talk" in Artesia.

The move of the Reds against Korea, however, did not come in the same thunderbolt manner as did the attack on Pearl Harbor, which plunged America into World War II.

There have been open moves made many times and long before as an omen of what was to occur so Artesia residents and residents of other American towns were conditioned for the President's action.

Nevertheless the action was full of drama and released a white heat of interest here.

While the situation changes daily and yesterday's headlines are history before new ones are written, Artesia citizens likely will see significance in headlines. Just before the Rubicon was crossed, one heading read: "Red World Too Weak To Wage War Says Dulles."

Other salient headlines: Navy Plans to Start Building Giant New Aircraft Carrier. Open Drive to Put U. S. Weapons on West Europe Front. B-50D's to Replace B-29's at Walker Base. Extension of Draft Voted. U. S. Rushes Arms to Korea. 70 Air Group Wins Approval—Jets Join Britain.

SQUARE, FOLK DANCING CALLED OFF TONIGHT There will be no square and folk dancing at the girls' gymnasium at Artesia High School tonight, but the program will be resumed at 8 o'clock Friday evening of next week.

The square and folk dancing is a part of the summer recreation program.

Soil Saving Among Fundamentals In Developing New Eddy County Farm

Drive four miles northwest of Artesia and you'll find a farm that telescopes decades into a half dozen years, one that within that time has encompassed the whole range of activity from raw to productive land.

Here is a farm that was started when soil conservation was lifted out of the dictionary and put to work, a step coming right on the dust bowl years.

It takes considerable brow-wrinkling for a town dweller to follow the talk of leveling, aprons, structures, ditches, crop rotation, fertilizer, and all the hard work and sweat that goes into making a farm pay off in cash.

Even an eye more used to the corner drug store than the cotton growing in the south 40 however, can see and the mind can readily understand results for the results are right there.

Here are 400 acres, including 30 acres in cotton four acres of corn, five acres of permanent pasture with its orchard grass, fescue, red clover.

There's 40 head of cattle, including 17 registered Herefords, 100 Hampshire red and Hampshire white chickens, an orchard with cling and Elberta peaches, cherry trees, grapes, and boysenberries.

On the highest point of the farm is a modern six-room house of stucco over adobe, with a lawn, garden of verbenas, and nearby are Chinese elms, Arizona cypress, and a hedge of Russian olive.

Two wells are pouring out a copious supply of water, flowing into ditches that irrigate the fields.

There are patches of sweet sudan. Just were does soil conservation fit into the picture?

The entire farm represents soil conservation for the owner is a man who observes, studies, makes use of what he studies, experiments.

and knows the results down to a fraction.

With that type of thinking it is only natural that soil conservation has a fundamental part in the farm, as natural as bacon with eggs.

In practicing soil conservation the owner is acting in line with word from the United States Department of Agriculture that recently said:

"Conditions this spring presented the most pessimistic soil blowing outlook since the late '30s largely because of the general lack of precipitation throughout the central and southern portions of the region since last fall resulted in poor moisture conditions over a great area and because of the severe winter.

"Rainfall deficiencies during the first three months were greatest in the New Mexico portion where a total of only .71 inches fell during that period."

Practices Summarized
What are the soil conservation practices on this farm?

One is the old established rule of crop rotation, from alfalfa to cotton, with one field plowed up yielding two bales to the acre:

Others are bench terraces on 15 acres supplemented by drop structures, planting sweet sudan, and using phosphates on pasture.

Farming Not Sideline
Six years ago this was undeveloped land. Today it is land that is paying off in cash. It isn't a big farm as farms go but it is an efficient and ably-operated one.

Ray Zumwalt, the owner, likes the independence his farm brings, likes the farm way of life. He isn't considering his land merely as a place where cotton is manufactured. His home is on the farm and the farm is the center of his life, not a sideline.

He likes cotton because it is a quick cash crop. Zumwalt also favors Hereford cattle, and the liking isn't altogether financial. He grew up in a ranch country.

Zumwalt was for years a teacher and principal of the lower school at Cottonwood. He likes to teach, likes children, but he also likes to farm, and derives slightly amazed amusement as folks who place a higher rating on teaching than farming.

Although he doesn't go into detail, one can tell from his talk that developing that farm hasn't been done with a wave of the hand.

He has a grand sense of humor and admits he had a lot to learn about farming that was accomplished by work that sometimes didn't get results.

Known as Ray, his full name is Floy Raymond Zumwalt. He was born in Lincoln County. His father was for 39 years farm supervisor for Southern Pacific.

Zumwalt has been a resident of Eddy County for 24 years. He is one of the five soil conservation supervisors of the Central Valley soil conservation District, and is also an adjutor for federal crop insurance.

This area is roughly defined as extending to a point seven miles west of Artesia, two miles south of Seven Rivers, 26 miles east of Artesia, and four miles north of Lake Arthur.

Supervisors are Herman L. Green, who lives southeast of Artesia; Vic Parker, the chairman, west of Cottonwood gin; R. G. Gooden, southeast of Artesia; Fletcher Collins, Artesia, and Zumwalt.

Heading soil conservation work in the Artesia sector is the U. S. Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation Service, 106 West Main, Artesia, with Keith J. Dampf as work unit conservator.

The Zumwalt family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Zumwalt and their three sons and one daughter. Sons are Hunt, 16, who this summer is a chairman measuring cotton land for the Production and Marketing Administration; Perry, 13, and Roby, 5.

Daughter is Gayla June who was 3 years old one day this week and who was thrilled to tell about the milestone in her life. Her middle name is derived from her birth month.

Zumwalt is pleased at Hunt's work this summer, saying it will give the boy valuable training. Hunt as a student in Artesia High School, active in work of Artesia Chapter of the Future Farmers of America, and an excellent public speaker.

He is to represent the chapter in the public speaking contest at the Future Farmers state camp, July 31-Aug. 4, at Camp Scott Abel in the Sacramento.

Hunt is at work preparing the draft of his speech that will have the theme of supervised farming.

In previous contests, he won the district contest and was state runner-up.

Next step in the current contest series would be the 11-western state regional, then the national in Washington, D. C.

Perry, Hunt's brother, will attend the new junior high school in Artesia next session. Roby attends Park School.

Wages paid steel workers in the United States in 1949 totaled more than $2,000,000,000. The amount would have been even greater had it not been for strikes.

EAST GERMANY swallows another bitter Communist-dictated pill in renouncing all claims for 2,000,000 Germans to live in the Sudetenland (black area) of Czechoslovakia, the area over which Adolf Hitler threatened war in 1938 at Munich. At end of World War II Czechoslovakia expelled Germans from the area. Now East Germany recognizes the expulsion as a "final solution." This latest Red reshuffle follows recent decision to set East Germany's boundary at Oder-Neisse line, giving part to Poland as appeasement for land taken by Russia.

Size Limit Question For Trout Given Thorough Test By Anglers

The question of whether to take the size limit off trout or whether to leave it on comes up again and again during each year, according to Fred Thompson, director of fisheries for the Department of Game and Fish.

"This must be the time of year when fishermen are again concerned with the problem," Thompson said "so it might be well to say a few words on that subject now."

In 1946, discussion of this phase of trout fishing became almost violent among the sportsmen of the state, so the Department of Game and Fish conducted an experiment at that time to support its stand that the size limit on trout was a beneficial regulation. In the test, conducted at the Lisboa Springs Fish Hatchery, one angler from each of four Game Protective Association (Las Vegas, Santa Fe, Albuquerque and Belen) participated.

On April 16, 1946, the fishing started at 10 o'clock and lasted for about two hours. According to Thompson, who directed the experiment, here is what was tried:

A total of 60 trout were caught with flies on which the barbs were either bent or broken off. An attempt was made to remove the flies from these fish with extreme care.

But 51 fish were caught with barbed hooks and no special care was used in removing these fish from the hooks.

Then 60 trout were caught with bait (worms and salmon eggs) and moderate care was used in removing these fish from the hook.

On the other hand, 61 trout were caught with bait and before the fish were removed from the hooks they were allowed to flap about in the sand and dirt for a few seconds until they were covered with debris. The fish were then taken off the hooks with no special care.

The fish caught by all four procedures were kept in separate tanks for a period of 10 days. The results were as follows: In the first experiment, three of 60 fish died, all died on the first day. An over-zealous angler jerked three trout from one of the pools and slapped them against cement wall in the background. These fish were nevertheless, counted in the total.

In the second experiment, three fish out of 51 died on the first, fifth and 10th days. In the third test, two fish died out of 60, lost on the first and fourth days and on the last test two fish died out of 61 and those fish died on the fifth and eighth days. Of the total 232 fish caught only 4.3 per cent died.

According to Thompson, fish caught on a barbless fly appear to have the best chance of survival; removing fish from a hook with dry hands seems to have no ill effect; fish covered with sand and grit suffer no more damage than those which are not and fish caught where a vital organ is not affected will almost always survive under normal conditions.

The question of the size limit on trout has continually come up because some fishermen claim that if the undersized fish are put back in the stream they will die of injuries received when they are caught.

"We do not feel this is true," Thompson said, "and we would be willing to repeat the experiment again to support our stand that a size limit on trout is a good thing."

Hatching Eggs Are Dipped To Check Disease

That control of Newcastle disease in chicks might begin even before the chicks are hatched, by treatment of the hatching eggs, was the theory advocated by hatcherymen in an effort to aid disease-control measures. But before such measures could be recommended by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, it was necessary first to determine what effect, if any, there would be on the hatchability of eggs.

To determine the effect of disinfectants on hatching eggs, poultry specialists of the Bureau of Animal Industry conducted tests with three commonly used products. These were sodium hydroxide, or common lye, quarternary ammonium disinfectant, and sodium orthophenylphenate. They were used in various solution and the eggs immersed for five minutes to guard against the transmission of Newcastle disease from the shell surface. Incubators usually are treated before eggs are set.

The sodium hydroxide was used in a 2 per cent solution, the sodium orthophenylphenate in 1 per

Dan Dailey Stars In 'Willie Comes Marching Home'

There is great news for film fans in the Landsun Theater's next attraction, "When Willie Comes Marching Home," opening Sunday. With this 20th Century-Fox picture the master director of drama, John Ford, turns his veteran hand to the creation of one of the season's most eagerly anticipated comedies.

Willie of "When Willie Comes Marching Home" is the popular young star, Dan Dailey, and he is the subject of one of the freshest and most ingeniously comic ideas ever to be made the basis of a motion picture. For in it Dan plays a strictly home town boy who patriotically is the first to enlist in the Army upon the declaration of war, but just can't get to go overseas.

Much as Bill Kluggs tries, he is rated too good a gunnery instructor to be spared for combat. Worst of all, while all the other boys in Bill's home town of Punxatawney are going off to war Bill suffers the ignominy of being stationed as an instructor right in his own home town! To his great chagrin, the town's first hero becomes, in the town's mind, its first-class slacker and goldbrick, through no fault of Bill's own.

Finally, though, Bill's big break comes, and he goes on a whirlwind expedition to Europe; within a few days he flies the Atlantic, is dropped over France, joins the Underground, escapes to London with Nazi secrets, is returned to Washington for top-secret conferences, and, before he knows it, is back home on furlough. Nobody believes he was even away, it all happens so quickly. And it looks as though Bill is still to be in the town's disgrace. But Washington sends for him to be decorated, and this time, when Willie comes marching home, he is a great hero.

Co-starred with the ingratiating Dan Dailey in the title part are glamorous Corinne Calvet, who made her American debut in "Rope of Sand" and who here plays a French Underground leader, and lovely Colleen Townsend who has the role of Willie's childhood sweetheart, the girl next door.

Featured as Willie's father is the veteran comedian, William Demarest. Bill has worked with another great director, Preston Sturges, many times. The supporting cast includes James Lydon, Lloyd Corrigan and Evelyn Varden, the Broadway actress who distinguished herself in Darryl F. Zanuck's "Pinky."

By Thomas J. Mabry GOVERNOR

"Look for his good points, not his bad; speak well of him, ignore his faults; see his accomplishments, not his errors, for by so doing you give him strength, and no one is perfect."—Frank Emery.

A reader who has the mistaken idea that the governor has something to do with penalties meted out to drunken drivers wants to know why they get away with light sentences, not always jail, and that frequently drunken driving charges are reduced to cases of reckless driving.

The matter of sentencing all offenders rests in the hands of the courts, justice and district. The governor, quite properly, has no control over the courts. I think my position on drunken drivers is pretty well known. I have never yet pardoned one from confinement for this offense, except in two cases, and that was where both the judge passing sentence and prosecuting attorney who prosecuted asked that it be done.

It is sometimes hard for the public to understand why some offenders get a lighter sentence for the same kind of offense that draws for another a more severe penalty. That is also something which rests entirely with the courts.

The law, in most cases, prescribes not a fixed, but a minimum and maximum term. For example, "not less than one nor more than 10 years," the law reads. The judges do give varying sentences under such statutes. They take into consideration the character of the offense and of the prisoner; the circumstances of the crime and the personal record of the accused. No two judges are likely to feel the same about what should be the sentence, taking into consideration the example which should be set as a deterrent to others, the protection of society and the punishment justified and chances of rehabilitation of the offender.

It would be well if there could be more uniformity in sentences with respect to some crimes, no doubt. And yet, if the law fixed a hard and fast rule which the judge would be required to follow, there would be little chance for the exercise of that judicial discretion which is intended to allow consideration for the past life of the prisoner and the impulses which gave rise to the criminal act; there would be no opportunity to give advantage to the less evil motive and less perverted moral code of the man charged. The minimum and maximum sentences do give the parole board an opportunity to give recognition to the convict who is truly repentant and whose conduct in prison gives reasonable promise of his reformation.

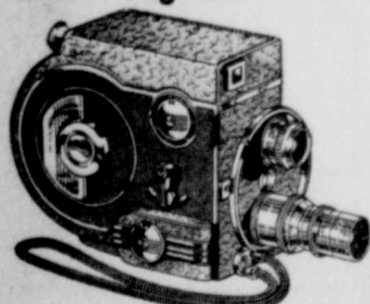

Since I have been governor I have invariably followed the recommendation of the board of pardons and paroles, or the judge passing sentence, at no time going over the heads of the judges or this board to exercise my own ideas of justice and mercy. The governor might in all cases act on his own judgment, as we know. He is not bound by the board's recommendation. The constitution gives him full and complete authority in such matters. But I have never felt it a good practice to so use it.

We cannot expect busy businessmen and women to accept places on this and other important state boards if they know that their judgement and discretion is to be overridden by the governor just to satisfy his own idea of what should be done.

I can point to the administration of our state prison since I have been governor as an example of what it is to have good men in

Summer Upsurge On Labor Front Seen In State

The summer upsurge in employment is raising New Mexico's economy to new levels. Construction reaches a new high as trade and service establishments prepare for the summer tourist season. The only dark spots in the employment field are coal mining and lack of moisture which is affecting agricultural activity.

The largest number of construction workers are employed at or near Albuquerque and Santa Fe. However, housing units and commercial buildings are going up in practically all areas in the state. Many towns are adding to their school facilities. Several hospitals are under construction and several more will be started during the summer. Road jobs are underway in all sections, but use of heavy equipment has reduced the number of workers per mile.

Petroleum mining has increased employment somewhat. Deep-test drilling around Hobbs has been accelerated. In spite of this increased activity, oil field workers are unemployed in Farmington and Hobbs.

Reopening of lumber woods operations and sawmills has been completed. Lack of timber in the Raton area caused some woodsmen to migrate to other areas.

Coal mine workers in the Raton area are hard hit by closing of the Phelps Dodge operations. Recruitment of these workers for Montana mines is being done. Gallup miners are on a one or two-day week with prospects of less work ahead for the summer.

About 700 workers were given temporary jobs by the Census Bur-

Protection From Hog Cholera Is Immunization

By Dallas Rierson (Eddy County Agent)

Immunization against hog cholera is about the farmers' only protection against costly losses from this disease, which is usually most severe in mid-summer. Producers should immunize against the disease before it appears in the community and certainly before it appears on the farm. When hog cholera hits the farm, losses are bound to follow, usually very severe losses.

After hog cholera appears, some of the losses can be prevented, if all pigs are treated promptly with eau. A large proportion of these workers just entered the labor market for this job.

Preparation for the tourist season has already added more than 800 workers to trade and service payrolls.

The continued dry weather has retarded agricultural activity and is causing considerable anxiety concerning crops. The wheat harvest has been damaged to the extent that local labor will be sufficient for harvesting. Cotton chopping is retarded two weeks at least, as large areas had to be replanted after the heavy winds. Farmington fruit was all frozen and tomato growing will be the only activity in that area.

anti-hog cholera serum or with serum and virus. Even with this treatment, some losses are inevitable. In some Midwestern states last year, losses occurred even after treatment with the serum virus method. The Bureau of Animal Industry proved this to be a variant of the regular virus.

Regular serum treatment did not give adequate protection against this variant, but the Bureau has studied the variant and the area in which it occurred and has made the following suggestions:

Pigs should be vaccinated before they are weaned. The standard dosage should be increased about 50 per cent. Vaccination of pigs before weaning helped. Where pigs were vaccinated before weaning with 50 per cent increase over a normal dosage, losses were prevented. Remember, if you vaccinate in time with an increased dosage, you will avoid the appearance of hog cholera and possibly the appearance of the variant. You can treat young pigs more cheaply than you can older animals, and the dosage is smaller.
