Daily Got Started at Age 70, John A. Mathis, Sr., in Article

John A. Mathis, Sr., Artesia, 73 years old tomorrow, is the author of the April 17 article, "I Really Started at Age 70." In the article, he is based on the fact that he made at the 30th anniversary convention of the Life Insurance Company of the Little Rock, Ark., where Mathis is a member of the National Quality Award and was the oldest life insurance agent in the United States to win high honors with the company. The article:

Teaching school, keeping operating a fire agency, various other jobs, I began with the Southwestern Insurance Company of Texas in 1914. I was an agent with the company for 14 years and then for several companies for a total of 12 years. Finally in the age of 63 I joined the Life in Artesia.

I did not sell much insurance in my pocket all the time. Then in 1944 came a prospect whom I plan to go to and as a rule, I do not go without having a definite amount of information about the prospect because I am interested in Artesia. I am in the schools, the and our community want to make a better which to live. I try to all drives, such as the Red Salvation Army, and others, honored that I have won National Quality Award for years, because it means I have sold the business right and not be on the books, that I have conducted in such a way that I can interview with the best in town.

Two years ago I decided to get up about 6 o'clock every morning and do much thinking and planning for the day. I get down for breakfast about 7:30. I met a father and son there and we began to talk about his children's insurance. He had his brother's $25,000 life insurance, so I asked this prospect to like to increase the amount on his five sons to $50,000 for each one. Thus I prepared the program and got an application for $107,500 retirement income with a premium of $3025.

Life insurance selling pays big dividends for the man who can take a fountain pen and a broken down automobile and build the business that I have. You do not have to invest any capital. The company furnishes you with millions of dollars worth of goods to sell on consignment, and you do not have to pay for these until they are sold. You do not have to wait until you are 70 to get going in the business. You just have to do what I did at 70. This is a business no one can take away from you.

You sell your business when no one is present except you and your client and if you have sold it in the right way, it will pay you a dividend as long as it stays on the books.

Failure in selling life insurance is due to the lack of preparation, the lack of faith, and the lack of a plan. Success has to be planned and prepared. I believe an agent should have faith in himself and his policies and also have plans and carry them out.

You may have read last fall that the sea gulls and their young were starving in Florida. The sea gull was starving because for a long time they had followed the shrimp fishermen and had had an easy time picking up the shrimp as the gulls were thrown out to them. Soon they lost the art of catching fish, and they forgot to teach their young this art. Now they are starving because they depended on someone else to make them a living. This is the same thing that can happen to an agent who depends on his managers or the home office to sell his insurance for him and give him the premium.

I can look back over my 36 years of selling and name several men who have gone back in business from loans on their policies, after they had lost everything else they had. I can see widows who have finished paying for the home, and children who have gone to school on life insurance that I have sold. This is a great pleasure to me to know that I have assisted someone in helping himself. A life insurance sale is something with which everybody connected with it has a profit—the company, the agent, the examining doctor, the retail credit reported, the policyholder, the beneficiary. I have never sold many large policies and I think the reason is that I have not called on enough prospects who can buy these policies. I think we should call on one or more clients every day who can buy more than $5000 life insurance.

Money Orders to Be Streamlined Postmaster Says

The Post Office Department's age-old type of money order will become obsolete on July 1 and a new, streamlined type will go into use. Postmaster Jess Truett announced this week.

He said the department in the meantime has discontinued the use of postal notes, which were used as well as money orders for four years as an experiment in streamlining the money order system.

Postmaster Truett said he has not as yet received complete instructions as to the new money orders, but that they will be somewhat like the experimental postal notes.

Through their use, issuing will be expedited somewhat and the system will be much more simple than the old one.

One handy thing about the new money orders, the postmaster said, is the fact that they may be cashed at any bank, as well as any post office. All will then be cleared through the 12 Federal Reserve Banks in the nation.

The money orders will be in card form and are not to be folded, bent or spindled, as they will be a punch-type card and will be handled by machine.

MORE MILK PER COW, BUT MORE PEOPLE

American farms now have a million fewer dairy cows than they did 10 years ago. Today there are nearly 23 million cows in the country.

Cow numbers have dropped, but production per animal has increased. Today's dairy cow produces an average of just about 5300 pounds of milk and 211 pounds of butterfat. Ten years ago, she produced 4600 pounds of milk and 184 pounds of butterfat—a gain of 14 per cent.

But dairy production has not kept pace with the growth of population in the United States. The average person consumed 830 pounds of milk in various forms back in 1940. Today, John Q. Public uses about 794 pounds of milk a year.

Drillers To Battle Rockets In Two More Exhibition Games

Artesia Nine Wallops Roswell 8 to 1 in Game Here Sunday

Heading into enemy territory after repulsing the same opponent 8 to 1 in a game played here Sunday afternoon, the Artesia Drillers play the Roswell Rockets in the Chaves County capital tonight and tomorrow night. Game time is 7:30.

Up to last night, the Drillers had played 12 exhibition games, winning six, losing six. One game, with the Lamesa Lobos, was cancelled. Illness of some Lobo players was the reason.

It was a busy week end for the Drillers. On Friday and Saturday they played the Kansas City Monarchs, famous Negro American League team, losing both contests, the first 8 to 9, second 15 to 12. Playing on Sunday afternoon again in Artesia Municipal Park the baby team of the Longhorn League turned back the Roswell Rockets.

The Drillers scored one run in the third, three in the fourth, three in the seventh, and one in the eighth. Lone run of the Rockets came in the third.

When the Kansas City Monarchs, Negro baseball team, arrived in Artesia early Friday morning, long before the sun was up, efforts up to that time to find them a place to lodge and eat had failed.

John (Hop) Lester, parts, utility man at Guy Chevrolet, who knows baseball all the way and is an encyclopedia on the sport, got busy on the deal, despite the untimely hour.

In short order he arranged for places for the 23 players to stay. The Monarchs ate at Henry Clay's place. Persons who provided rooms for the Monarchs and number of players at each residence:

Mrytle Colman, six; a Reverend Pope, initials not listed, four; J. C. Johnson, four; Ruby Young, three; Nona Freeman, two; Stella Jones, two; Dempsey Theron, two.

These names are as of a list handed me yesterday morning. I was glad to get the information. Wish more fans would follow that example.

SPORTS ON THE HOME FRONT

Baseball Gives Artesia Zest As Season Premiere Nears

Whammo and bang-bang! Baseball season is like football all over again, only more so. Advent of pro ball here has given Artesia a shot in the arm and there's alertness than there's been a long time.

With baseball every day of the week end, covering the sport is tougher even than football, one game a week and has a similarity to the mad whirl of basketball.

My apologies to readers for not yet setting up a style on baseball coverage, making some copy inconsistent. That detail will be worked out this week, so the job can be done faster and better.

New Subway
The press box at Artesia Muni is brand spanking new and withal a good deal but in planning it the planners forgot that radio takes up a lot of room.

It's a parallel to the old Morris subway last fall. Out there the space shortage was solved and I'm hoping the same deal can be worked out at the baseball park.

By the time you put an official scorer, two on the p. a. system, and two or three on the radio, there's not much room left for the press. I was nearly crowded out at the game Sunday afternoon.

I had a seat on the bench but the push-button scoring machine was right in front of me and there was no room for my clipboard.

There should be some deal worked out so there'd be space for press as well as radio. The proposition Sunday likely was only temporarily but if it is planned that radio broadcasts shall be given of the games after the season officially opens, then some sort of space apportionment should be decided now.

Small American bats have the fastest heartbeats among animals.

It was the second game of the season for the Eagles. The preceding Sunday the two nines battled to a 4-4 tie in a 10 inning contest in Santa Fe Park in Carlsbad.

A half dozen Eagle errors, merged with the hitting power of the Skulls, contributed to the wallowing of the locals.

Ollie started on the mound for the Eagles, was relieved in the fifth by Fred Numez. Batteries were Ramirez and Pratt for the Skulls, Ollie and Gomez, Numez and Gomez for the Eagles.

The Skulls made only two errors got 10 hits; the Eagles six errors, and only a pair of hits.

Next Sunday afternoon the Eagles will again on their home diamond, contesting a Loving outfit, the potash nine.

Sanders Tops Junior Bracket In Classic Fort Sumner Relays

Duke City Group Receives 2 to 1 Artesia Welcome

With a two to one ratio, Artesia businessmen, members of Artesia Chamber of Commerce, turned out at 9 a. m. Friday to greet 15 members of the Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce, at a breakfast in Cliff's Cafeteria. The Northern New Mexico trade promotion contingent was on the third day of a state wide tour, came here to Carlsbad, were en route to Roswell. They left Artesia at 11 traveling in their chartered Greyhound bus, New Mexico C-15, driven by C. P. Nixon. Before their departure they were conducted on an eight-automobile tour of the town, seeing the city hall, veterans building, municipal park, country club, high school and junior high school, Alta Vista and Hightower additions, Numex and Conoco refineries. Police Furnish Guide Leading the motorcade on the city wide tour was a police department car in which rode Manuel Rodriguez and John Lemley. At the breakfast, Bill Siegenthaler, chamber president, was master of ceremonies. He introduced all of the 28 persons present and identified them by their occupations. Introduction of the visitors was by Carl Peterson, chairman of the wholesale trade committee of the Albuquerque chamber. Siegenthaler told the 43 persons at the breakfast that Artesia was "glad to have you break bread with us." J. D. Smith, chairman of the Artesia organization's good will and public relations unit, made a talk in similar vein. Speaking for the northern New Mexico group, Peterson said: "We call New Mexico our home. We receive our income here. If we make our money here we should keep it here. Money made in Artesia should be spent in Artesia. Try Artesia first for your wants. If Artesia can't supply them, then try Roswell, Santa Fe, or Albuquerque. "None of us shares in the dollar that goes out of the state." Booster Ties There were 28 Artesians present at the breakfast. The menu was eggs, ham, biscuits, tomato juice, and coffee. Some of the Albuquerque boosters wore uniform ties of scarlet embroidered in gold lettering with the zia emblem and "Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce." The visitors were: Chester French, Bill Kemp, A. Ray Barker, Jack Tobin, Jack Wentworth, Bill Briggs, Ernie Thompson, C. P. Nixon, Lee Hendricks, W. H. Beindorff, Welcome J. Erbe, Max Hood, Ray Lemons, Capt. Fred D. ### Bulldogs Baseball Team Plays Three Games This Week

Three games, two of them in Artesia Municipal Park, are on the schedule this week of the Artesia High School baseball team. Coach Cal Hall said the Bulldogs are slated to battle the Carlsbad Cavemen at 7:30 o'clock in the local park and at the same time Thursday in the same location the Roswell Coyotes. Winding up the week the Bulldogs journey to Hagerman to play a doubleheader Friday afternoon against the Hagerman Bobcats. The Bulldog nine hasn't been able to date to get into the win column. They have played five games, winning none. The Coyotes took a double header from the local nine, then the Bulldogs were defeated by the Alamogordo Tigers and the Hagerman Bobcats. In their last game the Cavemen trounced the Artesia team 12 to 3 in a game played Thursday in the Cavern City. District 5 baseball tournament is listed for April 24-25 but place has not been set. Coach Hall said. There will be only four nines competing. They are Artesia, Roswell, Hagerman, and Carlsbad. It will be Artesia vs. Roswell and Hagerman vs. Carlsbad in the opening round.

Supervisors at Boys Ranch Given Family Titles

A nine-member staff of adults is in charge of New Mexico Boys Ranch, the privately supported non-profit institution along the east bank of the Rio Grande 20 miles south of Belin. The 40 boys know their supervisors by affectionate family titles. The ranch manager, Cecil Prag, is known as "Uncle Cecil." The ranch mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Wilkey, are "Pop" and "Mom." "Aunt Frances" is Mrs. Frances Shaddy. The stockman, Toyo Shaddy, is "Uncle Toyo." The ranch farmer, E. M. Ulibarri, is "Shorty." The cook, Mrs. Ruth Hollandsworth, is "Aunt Ruth." The office secretary and crafts instructor, Neil Craig, is "Uncle Neil." The management believes this policy creates a warmer relation ### between the boys and their "ranch" family.

New Heated Oven At Guy Chevrolet Is Now Complete

Ben Caudle, service manager at the Guy Chevrolet, announced last week the completion of the special baked enamel painting tumbled-air heated oven in the body shop.

Caudle explained that he made inspection trips to different parts of the state to determine the type oven best suited for Artesia. After a complete study, he reported that the dust-free, sealed, insulated, automatic tumbler heated oven would better fit the needs of Artesia.

The service manager explained that with this oven, a double-enamel paint job, free of sheet-metal work, could be completed in one day. He also said that the tumbler air evenly heats all parts of the enamel, leaving a smooth, even coat. The air is kept between 190 and 200 degrees.

Newcomers at Shop Opening Praise Artesia

Mr. and Mrs. George Crapo, formerly of Miles City Mont., held a formal opening of their OK Rubber Welding Machine Shop, 900 South First St., Saturday, serving coffee and doughnuts.

In explaining their reason for choosing Artesia as their destination after travelling 6113 miles in search of a new home, Mr. and Mrs. Crapo gave most of the credit to attorney and president of the Chamber of Commerce, William F. Seigenthaler.

Crapo said that Seigenthaler's glowing report of the Sunshine State convinced him that this was the place to settle after enduring 10 months of the year in snow and mud in Montana during three years residence there.

The newcomers were both emphatic in their praise of the kindness and consideration shown them since their arrival here. "We only hope," Crapo said, "we can return that kindness to future strangers."

Mrs. Crapo, known as "Erney," works in the shop with her husband. They have one boy, Jerry, 3 years old.

A couple of weeks ago we mentioned the fact that the fishing regulations have been changed to permit trot lines or set lines of no more than 25 hooks for cat-fishing, whereas nothing was said of throw lines, the kind we fine we have to use, because we have no boat.

But Deputy Game Warden "Speed" Simmons explains that any kind of set line not controlled directly by hand, whether stuck in the bank, hung from a pole, thrown out with a weight, or fastened, as in the case of a trot line, is considered a set line, provided cut bait is used, it is properly tagged, and is run at least once every 24 hours.

All of which makes it look a little better for the mudcat men.

Arrangements are being made for wood and water for the camp, but each troop is responsible for its own camping equipment, cooking gear and food.

All troops were asked to prepare a "survival problem" before going to camp, for material for the problem may not otherwise be available at the site.

Spring Lake may be reached driving south four miles on highway 285 from the intersection of First and Main Streets in Artesia, then going one and three-fourths miles east. The gate to the road is on the south side of the road and leads to the west side of the lake.

If you are plagued with back trouble or backache, here's the mattress that you should try for relief. It's the Back Supporter—designed and built to give your back the type of support it needs! Here is a mattress that is designed and built so that it is actually firmer than one of hair or cotton. BACK SUPPORTER has helped thousands

The Back Supporter is upholstered in such a way that there is slight surface softness—arms and legs won't "go to sleep" but anyone with back difficulties may well get a very good night's sleep. When you use bedboards there is still the too-soft mattress between you and the bedboard. Correct this with the firm, level surface of the Back Supporter mattress. A very large percentage of the Back Supporter mattresses sold has been on the specific recommendation of doctors who are personally familiar with the product.

Something over 10 years was spent in developing and perfecting the Back Supporter mattress. Let us show you BACK SUPPORTER to help you ease your back trouble.

Burlap and Cotton Bag Supply Will Be Tight This Year
Look for a shortage of burlap and cotton bags this year, says County Agent Dallas Rierson. Supplies are tight because of war demands. Burlap and cotton are both high on the list of materials allocated to defense production.

The county agent believes that many of the bags now on hand can meet some of the demand. First, he says, bags handled carefully can be re-used. "Keep bags in clean, dry storage and don't rip them open," Rierson adds. "And put them back into circulation through your feed dealer."

Here is the front view of White's Mattress Factory at 604 East Second Street in Roswell, which offers the finest of mattresses, giving the maximum comfort that modern manufacturing methods can produce. When buying a mattress, insist on an innerpring Deep Slumber mattress from White's Mattress Factory at Roswell. These splendid mattresses are available through your local furniture dealer. You do not have to go to Roswell for them.

Neon Company Serves Entire Pecos Valley
The Neon Company at 409 West Greene in Carlsbad serves Artesia and the entire Pecos Valley. Tony Carter, the owner, has been in business in Carlsbad since 1927 and for a long time was the only sign shop there. He bought the present property and built the new building at 409 West Greene in 1948, in order to be able to manufacture all kinds of signs. Neon signs were added about a year ago. Carter says the Neon Company is the only complete sign shop for all kinds of signs—in the Pecos Valley.

Hobbs CC Mat Shows State's Mason-Dixon Line
A dash south of Artesia and north of Carlsbad is shown as the Mason and Dixon line of New Mexico in a souvenir place mat of the annual banquet of Hobbs Chamber of Commerce received here last week by Artesia Chamber of Commerce. The mat, a blueprint prepared by Superior Reproduction Company of Hobbs, shows Lea county as the "New Mexico cornerstone," occupying nearly half the state. Extending out of the "cornerstone" is a "return pipe line" three-fourths inch to Santa Fe, and a "financial pipeline to capital, 20 inch."

Cloudercraft is shown as the "only playground Texas has." Marked beside Ruidoso is "tut, tut, no gambling." Cloudercraft is shown as the "only playground Texas has." Marked beside Ruidoso is "tut, tut, no gambling." Cloudercraft is shown as the "only playground Texas has." Marked beside Ruidoso is "tut, tut, no gambling."

Other slogans in the mat include: "Oh yes, we have mountains in Lea County. Republicans had to come from some place." "Look, senators! An airbase you forgot." Along the Texas border: "Texas brags over here." Annual banquet at which the mats were used on March 29.

Music Fiesta Adds Collegiate Motif to School
Campus of Artesia High School and the streets around the building resembled a staging area at a Channel port Friday. Parked on the school ground back of the tennis court backdrop were eight chartered buses, four of them red and buff colored Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma line, the other four Greyhound. Also seen was a black coupe on which was stenciled Texas Teachers College, San Marcos. Number was XS 2990. Strolling around the campus were pupils carrying French horn, saxophone, and trombone. Auditorium was jammed. There were choral groups in their special uniforms. Vendors of popcorn, cold drinks, doughnuts, and candy bars were doing a good business. It was the opening day of the Southeast New Mexico Music Festival, and the hundreds of pupils coming to Artesia made the campus of the high school resemble a junior college. The ancients who originated the custom of placing flowers on graves believed that the dead enjoyed the fragrance of the blossoms. Power mowers kill 50 per cent of the nations pheasant population each year, according to the Department of the Interior.

We Like the Idea

WE RATHER LIKE THE IDEA of a vigilance committee in Artesia to help curb the growing disregard for traffic regulations and laws. It was born at a meeting last week of the Artesia City Council, and although it was not entirely original here, it is being tried out for the first time. How well it will work, time only can tell.

It is too bad it had to take two fatal accidents to bring about the wave of indignation in the community as to reckless driving, but that is so often the case, that we must be jolted out of our lethargy before we take action on anything. Something like too late with too little.

The trouble does not stem entirely from our young people, although they, perhaps, are responsible for more than their share of the recklessness, just because they are young and full of pep.

The adults as a whole are somewhat responsible, for we have noted many of them who drive with little regard for human life or rights or the property of others.

As to the young people, they need more parental guidance. Many times they need to be "grounded" by their parents, even if the law does not catch up with them. Too much freedom with the family car—or with one's own car—can spell disaster, and sometimes does.

The vigilantes cannot do the job alone, any more than the police officers can do it alone, for there will be many times when things will happen when there will be no representative of either group present to observe it.

However, the police officers are somewhat handicapped, for they can be spotted by the reckless drivers, whether they are on foot or in a car. But the vigilante, knowit to no one other than the council's police committee, can make his observations unnoted.

Other citizens—call them self-appointed vigilantes, if you wish—have the same advantage, the same privilege, and same duty. They should exercise them whenever they see activities which may imperil themselves, their children, or anyone else.

But we must also teach, even if it means strict attention to the traffic codes and more instances of drivers' licenses being suspended or revoked.

There's too much at stake, both for the offenders and their potential victims not to clamp down and clamp down hard.

If for no other reason than that expressed in the slogan of the National Safety Council, everybody should exercise care:

"Drive carefully, for the life you take may be your own."—A.L.B.

Should Pay for Costs

WE HAVE NEVER BEEN ABLE to understand why there should be so many arguments about collecting of public liability insurance.

Individuals or firms buying public liability buy it for their protection. They purchase it to take care of others in the event of an accident and if they are liable.

They pay their premiums out for that very purpose. Yet in more instances than should be necessary, it requires a law suit or the threat of a law suit to collect what an individual has purchased and paid for.

Most of the old line insurance companies will demand proof and they will argue if they think they have a point. There are other insurance companies not as large and perhaps operated in a manner to afford a lower rate and they will never pay a claim if they think they can avoid or escape it.

We have known of not one instance, but of many of them. And in order for the claim to be collected, it requires the threat of a law suit or perhaps the actual filing of a law suit.

Just why our state does not require these insurance companies to pay off these claims or halt these companies from operating in the state has always been a puzzle to me.

We have known of instances when such claims were brought to the attention of the State Commissioner of Insurance and action was taken to force the insurance company to pay the claim. We know of other instances where individuals are not able to secure any more action out of the insurance commissioner's office than they have been able to get out of the insurance company owing the claim.

As we pointed out the individual purchases and buys the insurance in good faith. He or she pays for it expecting that it will protect them in the event of an accident. They buy it for this purpose. The rate paid is in keeping with claims which must be paid—the rates are actually determined by the losses the insurance company pays.

And since this is the case, just why aren't these companies either halted from doing business in our state or required to accept and carry out the obligations they assume when they issue and accept payment for a public liability policy?

We believe the state insurance commissioner should do a little more checking into some of the companies operating in this state.—O.E.P.

Don't Ask Housewives

WE DON'T KNOW JUST WHAT Uncle Sam has in mind in the way of conducting surveys if and when price controls go into effect, but we are sure that he isn't going to be able to use the housewives.

Many haven't as yet recovered from the task imposed on them during World War II when they acted as spies, so to speak, on their own favorite butcher and grocer.

It wasn't fair to the housewives and it wasn't fair to the merchants. We are rather sure that the volunteers for this job won't be as plentiful as they were before.

And we are rather sure that the housewives aren't going to be "snoops" during this national emergency.

We can appreciate the fact that those in charge of the program have a tremendous task. It is a big job and it probably won't be any more successful this time than it was before.

Most of us recall that during the last war, if the price controls did work, then the merchandise wasn't available.

Perhaps the day and time will come when all of us will realize there is a limit to which we can let prices go and this is especially true regarding the foods of our nation.

But perhaps price controls can help and aid some—except we have already permitted prices to go out of all reason and they continue to advance from week to week.

But if those in charge of the price control program this year want surveys made to determine who is or isn't violating the top prices, we hope they will employ some of the government agencies which have the power and the authority to act.

There are such agencies and although they may be busy, the average citizen is busy too. And it certainly isn't fair, honest or right to ask

What Other Editors Are Saying

THE ANSWERS GO DEEP

Gambling? Doesn't everyone gamble? Why shouldn't Americans adopt the European attitude toward this subject, recognize the weakness of human nature, and legalize its vices in order to prevent their being criminally exploited outside the law? Hasn't the gambling instinct even a useful and constructive place in a society based on bold risk-taking?

These are questions being asked by some American and some American newspapers in connection with current exposures of gambling practices.

The answers go deep. They involve a recognition of the difference between a risk and a chance, between the courageous and intelligent ventures of genuine initiative and the lazy irresponsibility that wants something for nothing between the spirit of Daniel Boone and the spirit of Wilkins Micawber.

A state that draws a substantial revenue from its citizens' faith in luck is likely to find these same citizens putting decreasing emphasis on legitimate enterprise. The introduction of legalized pari-mutuel betting in many American states has by no means discouraged the vicious type of illegal book-making in those states. The gambling instinct appears to thrive on toleration and corruption appears to thrive on the gambling instinct.

Basically one's attitude toward this subject is likely to rest on one's concept of man. In its more casual and trivial aspects, the instinct to take a chance may be reckoned as no more than a light-hearted sportiveness; but carried, as it so often tends to be, to the points of deeply entrenched habit and even necessity, it is easily recognizable as a reversion to the primitive.

Men in the earliest stages of culture may have tried to win the irrational favors of incomprehensible divine powers by means which had nothing whatever to do with the laws that actually shape existence. But in what is proudly called a scientific age the concept of chance must more and more give way to the intelligent recognition of law as the determinant of experience. Even worship becomes at its finest the recognition of God as Principle as well as Love, and happiness is seen—and demonstrated—as effective conformity with undeviating laws of Love.

What is enduringly good never comes by mere chance. Democracy will not be preserved and extended in today's world by a sort of survival of the luckiest. Darwinian Pollyannas may hope to win solid benefits for society from legalizing that insubstantial and superstitious worship of chance which the parasites of democracy exploit for their own ends. But a more basic law of the universe makes progress contingent on clear thinking and hard work.

We are willing to "risk" (though not to "gamble") our reputation on that faith.—Christian Science Monitor.

While India starves

President Truman has nudged Congress again about sending wheat to India, his earlier request for two million tons having been caught in the legislative maze for more than three months now.

The Senate has approved the grant, but the rules committee in the House has proved a stumbling block.

Meanwhile, the food situation in India grows worse. A combination of drought, floods and locusts has destroyed food crops in virtually all parts of the country. Real famine will sweep India between now and next fall. Observers in southern India report families are already mixing sawdust with their millet, in a pathetic attempt to avert starvation.

The aid we can give India will provide no long-range answer to her food problem. The two million ton wheat grant is strictly an emergency measure. But with Congress dilly-dallying, the peak of the emergency may be reached before we provide any effective assistance.—Des Moines Register.

Surely there must be other ways and means to handle these tasks. The fact is that we believe that some of those placed on the payroll in connection with these programs should carry out their own checking and investigations and not expect some of the citizens to assume this under the guise of it being a patriotic duty.—O.E.P.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Uta Hagen

NEW YORK—By the time you bite the tip of your cigar and sit down in the living room to read this, it is possible that the announcement will have been made that Uta Hagen will act in George Bernard Shaw's St. Joan in autumn on Broadway.

The numerical position of a certain stock of interest you more "greatly, or perhaps it is the batting average of Ted Williams in spring training that holds you enthralled—but in the theater it is big and important news. St. Joan was the last ultimately and finally elevated Katharine Cornell to the Duse-Bernhardt-Minnie Maddern Parnell shelf, and if it could do that for Miss Kitz, it would be as kind to Miss Hagen, who seems as tall as Cornell and even more Junoesque.

Miss Hagen was covered with the green make-believe, with a towel spread across her chest and her blond hair up in curls, when I interviewed her today in her dressing room at the Lyceum before the matinee of The Country Girl. Brief, she was a mess. She couldn't have cared less.

It was about living in Greenwich Village that Miss Hagen told me. For 14 years, off and on, she has been a Villager, and she plans immediate change. Whenever she's in New York, that is, Miss Hagen already has made three year-long tours of the country, in 1947 and other chardons.

There is a legend that the village is a low and sinful place, fested with opium-eaters, and a further legend that anyone who brings up a child in this neighborhood is a slothful parent. Child the myth persists, need grassy fields, the old swimmir' hole and veniently-placed trees from which to fall and break arms.

"I do not," Miss Hagen said firmly, "consider that my child's upbringing has been neglected. I have a daughter, named Letitia, and she has spent the major part of her young life living, playing, sleeping and eating in the Village, and I think she is a very daughter, indeed. She smokes no marijuana, nor does she sleep around manfully and throw rocks at me.

"She is somewhat extroverted, it is true, and the other day at school knocked her two front teeth out, but this is less than anything. She grew up playing in the Washington Square playground and she is healthy, wise and talented."

THE NERVE CENTER OF THE VILLAGE is Eighth street, Fifth to Sixth avenues, a path full of curio shops, dairies, houses, bars and delicatessens. On Saturday nights, it overflows with tourists looking furtively for The Real Village, and on Sunday mornings it lies deserted and smelling of beer, as if with a hangover.

In the daytimes, however, it is a bustling and friendly street. Letty Ferrer—the product of Miss Hagen's since-terminated romance to Jose Ferrer, possibly America's foremost actor now—sleeps it daily.

The delicatessen man knows her, and the super-market clerk her healthy heads of lettuce. The soda jerk knows her, and the who sells papers. She walks up to school in Tenth street, near the maker's, and when spring turns the corner, she runs through the ington Square. Who is going to say she is a lost soul?

"We lived for a while uptown," said Miss Hagen, "and the one between Sutton Place and Washington Square North is sharp. I can let Letty go off by herself. It's so neighborly, you know her and call to her, and it's as if she lived in a small town, cosmopolitan small town. Uptown, I'd never let her go off by herself.

Of the enormous amount of phonies in the Village—the beards, unwashed, who make up in eccentricities what they lack in brains and who may be observed nightly at MacDougal and Mead streets, saloons seeking The Truth, and whatever temporary physical ailments they can pick up along the way—Miss Hagen is tolerant. "I don't mind them," she said. "They're harmless. Sure they're phony, what section, what city doesn't have its phonies? The only difference is, the way they look."

THE PLAY IN WHICH MISS H. IS APPEARING NOW is Odette's first after a long, erosive stay in Hollywood. It is an old work, but here and there the sparks flare, and you almost can see Odette trying desperately to shake off the influence of Moulin Rouge and the soft life, to recapture the beauty he had in Madame Butterfly. Uta's role is a complex and tiring one, and she gives full treatment, dominating the play quietly and forcefully.

Near the end of our talk, you almost could see her beginning to change, to drift away into the part of the country girl. The play was coming closer every minute, the make-up was hiding the blond hair came out of its curls and Miss Hagen was ready to get into costume, which, if I remember, is a slip.

It was only a matinee, full of coffee klatches from the subway. Uta Hagen's world was beginning to come alive, as it does every night at 8:40. I said goodbye, and all the way downstairs and to the stage door, I kept thinking I'd swap jobs with her in a second, you know—I almost would.

WALTER LOWEN, head of a well-known employment agency, expected an important client in his office who was very partial to a special brand of cigars. The one place in the neighborhood that carried this brand was that exclusive habit of movie stars and social arbiters, "21." Lowen summoned a new office boy and started to explain to him the location of "21" and what he'd have to do to talk his way past Jimmy, the guardian of the entrance gate.

"You don't have to go through all this," said the new boy loftily. "I've had a charge account there for years." (What's happened to that old capitalist system of ours?)

And in the same vein, Jack Smart, who plays "The Fat Man" in radio and pictures, points out one indubitable advantage of weighing three hundred pounds: you always know where your cigar ash is going to land.

New Type Hen Improves Eggs' Interior Quality

For many years, the poultry industry has been improving the exterior quality of eggs—increasing the size, hardening the shell, and even experimenting with the color. It has also made vast increases in the number of eggs produced per hen. Now the industry is focusing its attention on the interior quality, including the yolk, the white, and the flavor of eggs.

A major problem of interior quality of eggs produced in New Mexico is that the eggs are frequently graded low because of watery whites. An answer to this problem has been found recently through research at the New Mexico Agricultural Experiment Station, where a strain of hens has been developed that lay eggs with whites which are firm the day they are laid, and remain firm for a week or more.

This research was done by L. N. Berry, station poultry husbandman, who describes the procedure he used to develop the strain in Bulletin 357, "A Breeding Program for Improving Interior Egg Quality."

"Many of the eggs produced commercially in New Mexico have watery albumen when they are laid, but the condition is associated with stale eggs, and the warm climate here hastens albumen deterioration. It is a mainly a problem of heredity, but the climate adds complications," Berry points out.

In his research, Berry used the station's flock of Single Comb White Leghorns. The breeding program he developed, however, should be applicable to any breed of layers. The program involves selecting for breeding stock, females that lay eggs with firm albumen, and males whose daughters have the same characteristics. Berry found that selection of females alone will not improve the flock average. The sires must be progeny tested.

Cary Grant Can Play Any Kind Of Movie Role

One of Hollywood's most popular and versatile actors, Cary Grant, to be seen Wednesday and Thursday on the Landsun screen in M-G-M's new drama, "Crisis," has created more than a score of memorable film characterizations and has proved himself equally at home in comedy and straight dramatic roles.

Born Archibald Leach (but don't call him Archie!), in Bristol, England, he inherited his love of acting from his grandfather, well known on the English stage. As a boy his interest was electricity and while attending Fairfield Academy in Bristol he conceived a new theatrical lighting effect. He took his idea to the manager of the Princess Theater in Bristol and was permitted to install and operate it. This association with theatrical people aroused his interest in acting and when he was still in his teens, he ran away from home to join the Bob Pender Acrobatic Troupe. It was a group which specialized in eccentric dancing, stilt-walking and clown routines.

Four weeks later, his father took him home. For a year and a half, he resumed his studies and then ran away again to rejoin Pender. Knowing his son's heart was set on the theater, the elder Leach allowed him to remain with the troupe. The future film star specialized in knockabout comedy and, when the company sailed for New York City to appear at the famed Hippodrome in 1920, he went along.

After that engagement the no-longer neophyte actor, returning to England, spent two years with a stock company, with which he developed an ability to sing. Arthur Hammerstein signed him to a contract and brought him back to America to appear in "Golden Dawn" on Broadway. Other musical comedy engagements followed, including "Polly" with Fred Allen, "Boom Boom" with Jeanette MacDonald, "Street Singer" with Queenie Smith, and "Nikki" with Fay Wray. He also appeared in 12 operettas staged by the St. Louis Repertory Company during the summer of 1931.

After closing in "Nikki," young Leach set forth in an automobile to visit some friends in Hollywood. While there he met a director who was preparing to make a screen test of a young woman with whom the actor had appeared in a Broadway play. The test was made but the girls was not signed. Instead, when studio executives looked at the test, they became interested in the young actor who appeared with her. Two weeks later Archibald Leach was placed under long-term contract by Parahount. His name was changed forthwith to Cary Grant.

SCIENTISTS FIND SHADE MEANS CATTLE COMFORT

What it takes to make an effective summer shade for livestock has been worked out by U.S. Department of Agriculture engineers and scientists from the University of California.

Their method to help livestock "beat the heat" was to reduce the radiated heat that animals encounter under a shade shelter. The biggest sources of radiated heat are the ground surrounding the livestock shade, and the under side of the shelter roof.

The engineers found that radiated heat under shelters could be reduced in three ways, raise the roof height of the shade, place the shade on grassland rather than on bare ground, and cover the roof of the shade with hay.

Housewives and Farmers to Make Security Reports

"For the first time farmers and housewives will be making social security tax reports on their regular employees," according to Ralph H. Yowell, field representative of the Roswell Social Security Administration office. "These reports are due in the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue, Albuquerque, by April 30."

"You farmers should include in this first report all farm hands (including workers in your farm homes) who have been with you since Oct. 1, 1950, who have worked at least 60 days in the January-February-March, 1951, quarter, and who have been paid at least $50 in cash wages during January, February, and March."

Budget and Road CC Units First To Go in Action

Starting the ball rolling on committee appointments announced last week, two of the 18 committees of Artesia Chamber of Commerce will have sessions this week. The highway committee will have a meeting at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in which they will be joined by a delegation from Hope headed by C. B. Altman.

Other persons interested in North Eddy county highways are invited to come to the council, Manager Bob Koonce said. All members of the committee are expected to be present except Harvey Yates, who will be out of town on business but who will attend if his return is in time.

Starting a new type of budgeting and auditing committee, members of this unit will meet at 7:30 o'clock tonight with J. D. Smith, chairman, Thad Cox, and George Ferriman.

Heretofore the work has been by a committee chosen from among the directors. The former group will orient the new committee on its task.

Both the budgeting-auditing and the highway committee assemblies will be at the chamber of commerce, 316 Carper Building. The highway committee consists of J. W. Berry, chairman, Wayne Paulin, Ralph Hayes, Harvey Yates, and Louie Burch, while the budgeting and auditing committee is comprised of Jack Fauntleroy, chairman, George Davis, and Aub Fairey.

Sign Will Indicate CC Office Location

Expected to be up within a fortnight is a new sign indicating location of the Artesia Chamber of Commerce.

An order has been placed with Tesco Neon Sign Company of Roswell for installation of a sign that will be 6 1/2 feet long and 3 feet wide, extend horizontally from the third floor of the building. The sign, in green lettering outlined in white, will read:

"Chamber of Commerce." Decision to have such a sign was made before the chamber office was moved from its former location in the Artesia Hotel.
