Crowds at Fire

WHEN NUMEX REFINERY was host to a fire Thursday night, police had a job on their hands controlling the traffic and crowds which speedily accumulated after location of the blaze was generally learned.

It is to the credit of police that the road was quickly cleared of cars and spectators so that fire equipment was unhampered in its movement

But the case does point up a recurring problem: People love to watch fires, regardless of the personal dangers involved or the inconvenience it may cause firefighters.

Fortunately, fire trucks were used Thursday night at NuMex only on a standby basis. The fire was controlled by the refinery's crew, which is specially trained to fight the kind of fires that occur in a refinery.

However, had the fire been larger and had the volunteer firemen's trucks been pressed into service, the initial congestion of the area might have hampered their movements

Fire buffs who chase fires should be careful they do not enter the block where fire equipment is located.

It should be pointed out that police are constantly doing a better job in blocking off fire areas. A little public cooperation will help even more.

No Red Light Turns

RIGHT TURNS against red lights weren't abused, the motoring public would never have brought on itself the newest traffic regulation to hit Artesia-the ban against right turns on red lights.

They have been, however, and accidents and injuries have resulted.

Drivers have not always been careful to stop before making the turn. Pedestrians who rightfully are crossing the walk in front of the driver seeking to make the right turn have been imperiled by motorists' eagerness to make the maneuver.

And traffic which is moving at right separated from one another at the pound. There should be adequate shelter for the dogs, especially the puppies who are impounded.

When food is thrown in and there is no such segregation, smaller dogs are left in the lurch unless they're unusually pugnacious.

Neglect of the city dog pound near Municipal Park and Driller Park is not willful or purposeful. It seems rather to be a matter of not knowing the standards for such things.

Perhaps now that information is available near at hand these standards can be bet-

Detention Home Shows Leadership

SOUTHEASTERN NEW MEXICO is showing its aggressive leadership again in uniting behind a project to build a juvenile boys' detention home near Artesia.

It will be the first of its kind in the state. Not within recollection has this corner of the state united in a vigorous joint campaign for a worthwhile project as it has behind the detention home.

It is an example of the strength which the tri-county area of Eddy, Chaves, and Lea counties can throw behind a project.

Leaders in the movement for the detention home will not be satisfied just with getting the home built and in operation.

As they see it, if the home can be built economically with adequate construction for a minimum of money raised through public subscription, it will stimulate other judicial districts to follow suit.

There is no doubt these three rich counties could put up quite a pretentious project. They are not going to do so, in the belief it would scare away from like projects other judicial districts not so well-heeled.

The steering committee, which is composed of civic leaders from Hobbs, Lovington, Roswell, Carlsbad, and Artesia and the district judges, also has a vision for the future expansion of the project.

Presently it will serve the immediate need: Housing delinquent juvenile boys until disposition of their cases is made. No longer will the boys be put in jail.

While they are at the home, some attempt will be made at rehabilitation by a trained superintendent, who will also be the district probation officer. The state provides a salary of $9,000 a year for this man. For that price, districts should be able to hire well-oualified men.

However, boys can be held at the home for a maximum of only 30 days under present law. That is not enough time for a thorough rehabilitation program to be put into effect.

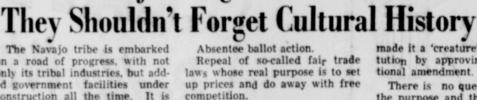

The civic leaders have a vision that in time such juvenile detention centers as are to be built near Artesia can be expanded into rehabilitation centers. Laws can be changed to permit such centers to keep boys longer than 30 days.

Then, rather then sentencing a boy to crime's finishing school at Springer as the boys industrial home has come to be known, a youth may be sentenced to the rehabilitation center.

A single state institution such as Spring-

NEW MEXICO EDITOR ARE SAYING-

The voters of New Mexico, who are registering so many loud complaints against the present highway commission, their policies and their plans created that department by approving a constitutional amendment. We, the voters of New Mexico, were going to get the highway department out of politics so we made it a 'creature' of the constitution by approving a constitutional amendment.

There is no question but what the purpose and the intent were good but what we accomplish well, it has left plenty to be desired.

There was a day and a time when the governor could issue orders and instructions but that isn't true today.

Gov. Ed Mechem cannot do a thing about the highway commission. It is true he named the members but he never names but two of them on the commission and in control regardless of the appointees of the governor.

So we can't blame the governor for not helping us or for the situation that prevails today. We created this situation by approving the constitutional amendment and the governor had nothing to do with it. - Las Cruces News-Sun.

Deputies Seeking Sheriff's Post Develop Public Service Campaign CANDIDATES FOR EDDY county sheriff ,at least the two of poena range the three who are now deputies, seem to be developing the pattern for this year's campaign tacticts: The public service campaign.

Deputy Sheriff Carl Hawkins, for instance, had the New Year's gimmick about putting signs under windshield wipers saying "If you have had one too many leave you car where it is and the sheriff's office will watch it for you. Happy New Year."

Now the Roswell Record's correspondent, Bob Koonce, has an article in that paper noting Deputy Sheriff Oscar Lusk of Artesia is waging an intensive campaign to clean up the road sides. Deputy Sheriff Lusk suddenly has become aware, although he has been here for a year and a half, that there are bottles and papers and what not along the road.

The story concludes "Deputy Sheriff Lusk is a candidate for Eddy county sheriff." Deputy Sheriff Ed Price of Carlsbad, another candidate, has not yet shown himself as a cagey opportunist who can turn an appointive office in the county government to his advantage in conducting a public service campaign for sheriff.

We thing this is a wonderful thing. Deputy Price, for instance, might come out with a story that he has noticed a lot of cars with only one headlight and urges motorists to check their headlights. Deputy Lusk might follow up his service campaign with the observation that dead animals on the highways are repulsive to tourists, and motorists hitting animals should stop and shovel them off the highway.

Just what the other three candidates who are not now deputies are going to do in the way of public service campaigning is unknown. Lacking the vehicle of holding office in county government, their public service contributions would lack the semi-offi-

Koonce, who is also the parttime news editor for radio station KSVP, noted in a modest radio item the New Mexico magazine piece on Artesia contained none of the nastily commercial aspects of the Sun Trails job. angles to the driver wanting to make the right turn has been disrupted, not infrequently, by the driver turning right against the signal.

It is probable the obnoxious driving, habits of a few impatient motorists have brought the wrath of traffic experts and police in the form of the new law.

Artesians have been given due warning by the police department the turns are going to be illegal. An educational period is in effect before the clamp-down begins. It might be wise to get in the habit of not making right turns now, before tickets are issued for the offense.

Improper Dog Pound

THERE IS NO QUESTION the city needs a dog pound and needs to control stray dogs who roam the city.

Stray dogs singly or in packs do a great deal of damage in the city. They menace property and they menace people

At the same time, the city is under an obligation to conduct its control program in a humane manner.

The city's dogcatcher has done the best he can with the facilities placed at his disposal.

However, those facilities are not proper, according to the Cavern City Humane Society of Carlsbad, which, incidentally, is seeking to organize an Artesia chapter.
