THE WORLD TODAY—Scheele Could Clear Polio Confusion By Explanation

By JAMES MARLOW Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—If Dr. Leon and Scheele, surgeon general of the U. S. public health service, would just once explain publicly the difficulties with the antipolio vaccine, some of the confusion might be removed.

Scheele and the health service from time to time have issued statements, as confusion piled upon confusion, but no layman could understand what, if anything, was wrong with the vaccine or why the program has ground to a virtual stop.

In the 44 days since the government first okayed use of the vaccine, this has happened:

1—The government stopped use of the vaccine, then cleared some of it but not enough to keep the inoculation program going very long.

2—At least 82 vaccinated children have come down with polio, 60 of them after receiving vaccine made by Cutter Laboratories of Berkeley, Calif.

3—Scheele has met repeatedly with groups of advisers—his own specialists, outside polio experts, representatives of the six licensed vaccine manufacturers—and so far as the public can see the program is still up in the air.

4—Although the government in April withdrew all Cutter vaccine it has not yet said what if any connection there is between the Cutter vaccine and the polio which developed in 60 children who received it.

5—A split occurred last night between one manufacturer—and perhaps all six of them—and the health service after it laid down new testing standards.

SOME dates tell the story: April 12—The government licensed the distribution of the vaccine.

April 27—After several children vaccinated with the Cutter product came down with polio, the government withdrew all Cutter vaccine.

May 7—After more vaccinated children developed polio, Scheele called a halt to all vaccinations; his experts could check the laboratories of the manufacturers.

May 13—Scheele approved release of some batches—after his men had checked the plant—of vaccine made by Parke-Davis & Co., Detroit.

May 15—Scheele gave similar approval to some batches made by Eli Lilly & Co., Indianapolis.

May 18—The health service delayed the release of vaccine by all other manufacturers for "some days." None of it has been released since.

May 24—The health service said all vaccine "already used or re-cleaned" for use had been found safe with the possible exception

On the House

"ONLY THE RICH can afford an inefficient heating plant." A fuel dealer made this observation the other day when we were arranging for a spring overhauling of the little volcano our house sits on.

It's a job we like to have done as soon as weather permits the heating plant to be shut down for the season. In fact, there are two important late spring chores for most of us householders: (1) to give the furnace and smoke pipe a thorough cleaning to prevent summer rust and corrosion, and (2) to lay in a supply of fuel.

The reason late spring is a good time to order fuel is that a completely full oil tank leaves no room for condensation during humid weather, or if you burn coal you usually get a better price off-season. Of course, electric heat calls for none of this, and if you're burning gas you have no fuel shortage problem.

BUT RARE is the man who is satisfied with a past winter's heating cost. Fuel bills are so hard to pay that many dealers have started year-around budgeting plans. You pay them $15 or so per month the year-around. If there is anything left, you get it back; if you owe more, you make up the difference.

However, getting the most comfort out of the fuel is the main trick. Proper insulation, weatherstripping, storm sash and efficient furnace operation seem to be the principal factors.

If you think your operating costs are too high, the Institute of Boiler and Radiator Manufacturers suggests you make a rough test. Find several homes in your locality of similar age, size, construction, using the same type of heat (hot water, steam or warm air) and burning the same fuel (oil, gas or coal). Check the monthly fuel consumption and take an average.

"If your own costs run pretty close to the average," says the I.B.R., "your system is probably operating with reasonable economy. If there is a wide discrepancy not in your favor, get hold of your heating contractor. More than likely your contractor will save you his charges in reduced fuel costs."

FURNACE CLEANING is an inexpensive service offered by most fuel dealers. But you can do it yourself, too, say the heating

"Fly ash, which collects on the heating surfaces," these experts say, "should not be permitted to remain during the summer when moist air can combine with it and start corrosive action."

By opening cleanout doors in the heating plant, you can scrape all such collections to the openings with a wire brush. A vacuum cleaner will then pick it up. The smoke pipe should be taken down, cleaned and examined for any signs of rust.

"After removing all fly ash," the anthracite men advise, "apply a light coating of crank case oil to the heating surfaces to prevent rust. Cleanout doors should then be tightly sealed with asbestos or furnace cement and the smoke pipe should be resealed where it enters the chimney."

They contend that regular pre-summer cleanings and thorough checkups of all dampers, grates and other working parts can save as much as 15 per cent of annual fuel bills and extend the life of a heating plant by many years.

Those Funds Never Return
ONE of the strongest arguments that can be advanced for buying and trading at home is the statement that the dollars sent out of town never return here while those spent at home continue to circulate here.

That statement, we believe, is true. So the dollars we send away to the mail order houses are gone forever. They do not return here and they do not continue to circulate here.

The same thing is true when we spend our dollars elsewhere or in other communities. Those dollars remain in that community and they circulate there—not here.

There are a good many arguments that can be advanced to buy and trade at home besides this argument. It is the home town merchant who provides the payrolls here. It is the home town merchant who pays a license and taxes. It is the home town merchant who makes contributions and gifts and donations to the local causes.

It is buying and trading at home that makes prosperity in our community and keeps the dollars circulating here.

But the buying at home we preach to the shopper also applies to the merchant, the businessman and the professional man. If he or she expects others to keep their dollars at home then he should do exactly the same thing.

Yet there are too many dollars going out of Artesia every week that never return. Too many going out of town for instance for advertising when there are daily newspapers and a radio station here.

We do not see how we can consistently argue for folks to buy and trade at home with us when we spend our advertising or any other dollar elsewhere.

It comes back, this old business of buying and trading at home to apply to all of us.

We have to do more than preach buying and trading at home—we have to practice it.

And it is still true that the dollar we send elsewhere or that we spend elsewhere never returns while the dollars we spend at home continue to remain here and to circulate here.

The wise community keeps every dollar possible at home.

OIL INDUSTRY'S WEEK—Scientists Disagree When Synthetic Oils Available

By CHARLES HASLET
WASHINGTON (AP)—Just when synthetic oil products will be available commercially is a question to which you get different answers from different scientists.

But, he added, all the specialists agree "This time will come eventually, probably within the next decade."

That, in effect, is what secretary of Interior McKay says in a report to Congress on synthetic fuels research.

The report, covering the interior department's 1954 activities in the synthetic fuels program through its bureau of mines, said:

"In its research and development program on synthetic fuels, the bureau of mines is obtaining engineering and cost data for the day when industry will require such figures and has increased its more basic research work during the past year to learn more about the nature of the raw materials and their suitability for new processes to convert both coal and shale to oil."

The report listed three laboratories and two engineering plants operated by the bureau of mines "to accomplish this purpose." Of these, it said:

The laboratory at Laramie, Wyo., the first established by the bureau, is dedicated to a study of oil shale and related problems.

One at Bruceton, Pa., deals with the "road problem" of coal-to-oil processing.

The third, at Morgantown, W. Va., is concerned with conversion of coal to gas.

The experiment station at Rifle, Colo., was built to demonstrate methods of mining and retorting oil shale and converting crude shale to other fuels by refining.

At Gorgas, Ala., a joint investigation has been conducted on Alabama Power Co. property on gasification of coal underground. The project scheduled to end last July, was reactivated with the help of Alabama Power Co. to investigate a "promising method of underground hydraulic fracturing."

APPOINTMENT of a committee to survey oil and gas manpower at the request of the interior department's oil and gas division has been announced by the national Petroleum Council, an advisory group.

W. W. Vandever of Cleveland was named committee chairman. The department specifically asked that the new study include estimates of manpower engaged on July 1, 1955, in the petroleum and gas industries, "classified by functional divisions of the industries, occupations, skills and geographical areas."

ARTESIA BUSINESS AND INDUSTRIAL REVIEW

Complete Menus Are Feature Of Driller Cafe's Service

Complete menus—from full dinners to coffee and pancakes—are available for breakfast, lunch, and dinner at Driller Cafe, 328 W. Main.

Operated by Bill Thomas, Driller cafe is one of Artesia's longest-established cafes.

Thomas purchased it seven years ago in partnership with his brother Tommy. It was previously owned by Ray Carter and operated as Carter's cafe.

"We are operating a cafe at which the average man can afford to eat," Thomas says. "If he wants to take the whole family to dinner, he can do it again sooner with our prices."

Specialty of the house is "wop salad," which Tommy says is based on a recipe he brought with him to Artesia. It's an authentic Italian dish which makes a hit with Driller customers.

The cafe is open every day from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. Thomas is chief cook.

The business is jointly owned by the brothers, who also own the American Cafe.

Leone's Offer 24-Hour Roll Film Service

People most often visit Leone studio at 415 W. Main for roll film development.

It's Artesia's only 24 hour service center for roll film development and printing.

But the studio isn't limited to that service alone. It is equipped to handle nearly all photographic requirements on the premises. Specialties, such as color processing of still and color film, is handled by Leone through special laboratories in the Southwest.

Film brought in to Leone's one day are processed and available in prints just 24 hours later.

The studio also handles portraiture, copying, and commercial photography.

It's owned by Mrs. Lavene Smith and her daughter, Mrs. Ralph Thompson. Mrs. Smith, Mr. Thompson, and Mrs. Mildred Carroll staff the studio.

Mrs. Smith has been a part-owner of the studio for 14 years. She previously operated a photo shop in Las Vegas, N. M., for a number of years before coming to Artesia.

She guarantees fine photographic work which the most discriminating families can display with pride. Mrs. Smith has engaged in portraiture for more years than she likes to remember, and is adept at getting a subject to achieve a natural pose.

Also handled by the studio are cut film development, contact or jumbo size prints by machines, and enlargements clear up to 18 by 24 inch photos.

Radiator Firm Expanding Space, Service

Jack's Radiator Exchange & Service at 311 S. First is in larger quarters than ever and offering more services.

Jack's Stagg, owner, has announced his firm has taken over the entire building, formerly shared with a garage.

In addition to radiator manufacture, repair, and service, Stagg now offers lawnmower sharpening with Artesia's biggest automatic lawnmower and blade sharpening machine.

Stagg has earned a top local following for his economical and long-lasting repair of radiators, as well as radiator sales made possible by his own manufacturing set-up.

Stagg claims radiators and batteries are the most neglected parts of the average automobile. He aims to remedy the radiator part of the situation.

This is Artesia's only exclusive radiator sales and service center. In addition to service and repair, Stagg also assembles new radiators. He manufactures some 200 a year, sells them locally to auto dealers and operators of large truck and automotive fleets.

"We save most people with radiator trouble an amount of money that surprises them," Stagg declares. "When a radiator can't be put in shape by cleaning and a few simple repairs, a new core is usually needed."

Where many shops sell the customer a whole new radiator, Stagg just sells the core, if that's all that's needed. A new radiator would include brass water tanks

HOTEL ARTESIA'S dining room facilities are among the most complete in the city. Modern partitioning enables the hotel to provide room for either large or small parties and dinners. Half the dining room can be closed off for private parties, while the other half is reserved for the general public. Waitresses are friendly, efficient. Shown here are Ruth Green and Mickie Elmore. (Advocate Photo)

Payne Packing Company One Of Largest Local Firms

Since opening its doors five years ago, Payne Packing Co. of Artesia has become one of the largest privately-owned industries in Artesia.

Each year the company spends nearly $1 million buying cattle and hogs in the Pecos Valley. More than 7,000 animals are processed through the clean, well-equipped plant annually.

In the past 12 months the company has sold over 2 1/2 million pounds of beef, pork, and by-products in Eddy, Lea, Chaves, and Otero counties.

The firm employs four full-time salesmen maintaining contact with customers throughout the four county area. The plant keeps busy three big tractor-trailer rigs delivering its products.

Payne takes animals on the hoof, slaughters, then prepares the meat for consumption.

Payne's payroll has never been less than $75,000 annually.

It's owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Payne—he's easily recognized by the whip he always carries, frequently, as his trademark.

The Paynes went into business in 1950. For 28 years previously Payne had been a rancher. He has lived in the Pecos Valley 33 years.

On the company's payroll are 15 persons working full time.

Payne's offers a ready local market for beef—more than 90 per cent of the meat used in the Artesia plant is raised locally.

Payne, furthermore, is still planning on expansion of his business—he sees no end in sight to the steady customer support based on good value offered in Payne products.

Solomon reports for work she has a 24-hour supply of needles—nearly 1,500—to inspect.

Her highly developed sense of touch—she's been blind since she was 3—permits her to feel out minute defects in the needles. After each use, a hypodermic needle goes through a sharpening-sterilizing process.

The fragile needles are highly tempered tubes of steel which pick up rough spots in many ways. The points are blunted sometimes in puncturing the skin. Often they are dulled in cleaning pans.

Mrs. Solomon examines each of the needle's three bevels with her fingers. Rough spots are smoothed with a quick rub across an oil stone. Then Mrs. Solomon sorts the needles by size and places them in tubes. Formerly she used a gauge atop the sharpening stone to sort the needles but she doesn't use it any more because of her own proficiency.
