Monday, October 24, 193 Texas "Ragamuffins" Aggies Riding High Wide and Grinning In Southwest Footbal

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Oct. 24 (P)-The Texas Aggies, given the affectionate tag of "Ragamuffins" because of their rags to riches football story, ride high, wide and grinning in the Southwest Conference todays.

The spindly - shanked kids who couldn't beat anybody last season are licking almost everybody this year. They have won five in a row, including two conference games in which they lashed the league's acknowledged leaders -Texas Christian and Baylor-and they go up to Fayettesville Saturday to swipe at tough, vengeful Arkansas.

What happened to turn this squad of misfits into the finest football machine in the Southwest-a team Coach George Sauer of Baylor says will compare favorably with mighty Maryland? Sauer made the statement after his Bears had taken a decisive licking from the "Ragamuffins" Saturday. He was qualified to speak. Baylor was beaten by almost the same score

Bryant has a 194pound line, which he says is the smallest in college football (There are high school teams in Texas with lines that big), and he has a fullback who played six-man football before coming to college. And there's a one-armed guard named Murry Trimble, who's doing quite a job for Bryant.

BECAUSE OF THE CONTROVERSY surrounding the 1955 Law Regulating the SIZE and WEIGHTS of VEHICLES on New Mexico Highways, the TRUCKING INDUSTRY respectfully submits the following FACTS about MOTOR TRANSPORTATION. We believe the ECONOMIC FUTURE of NEW MEXICO rests squarely in the hands of the THINKING CITIZENS and further that, same future will largely depend on whether a KEY INDUSTRY ... TRUCKING ... will be halted in helping that progress.

For TWELVE years and SINCE 1948 . . . whether by Law or Highway Department Directive . . . Trucks have been of the following Sizes and Waight

DeMILLE'S SECRETARY POISONED

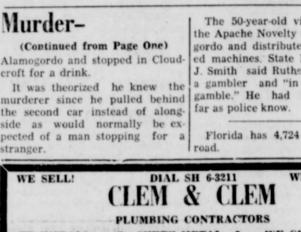

Sheriff's Sgt. Virgil Parker carries wine bottles from Finigan home. Bottle in his left hand is the one which contained poison.

Mrs. Rose Jones Finigan

MYSTERY DEATH of Mrs. Rose Jones Finigan, longtime secretary of film great Cecil B. DeMille, is believed solved by California authorities. Mrs. Finigan died after sipping wine which apparently contained poison. She shared a taste of the wine with a neighbor, Mrs. Dolores Hoyle, 26. Both women became violently ill. Later, Mrs. Finigan was found dead in bed. Investigation disclosed that her brother-in-law, Carl Finigan, 65, used a wine bottle as receptacle for an insecticide of lye and arsenic. She had been DeMille's secretary for 25 years. (International Soundphotos)

EW YORK-"You are cordially invited," the telegram had begun and because of what it went on to say, you had separated it carefully from the other wires inviting you to come look at three daughters of Helen and "Which do you like best - and film of a famous Tasmanian matinee idol.

What it had gone on to say was that there was a party for Noel Coward in the Essex House Garden Room at the customary witching hour of 5 p. m. Well, as a Coward fan from 'way back, who oth hoots at and yet enjoys his cracked-tenor singing and greatly admires his play-writing craftsmanship, you figured that was one you'd make. You figured that way despite the grim, deadly there early. If you remembered rightly, he had an intelligent and sharp distaste for king-sized gatherings of people all talking at once. You knew all that, and yet you had come anyway, and after you had slipped through the door you stood there and eyed the expected scene-smoke, noise, crowds, et al. You turned to a small man with eyeglasses. "Where's Coward, anyway?" you asked. He stared. "Who?" he asked. "Listen, have a drink. The bar's right there in back of you."

IT WAS HARD TO KNOW where to begin. There were huge knots of people everywhere, all talking at once, and you knew you wouldn't find dear Noel by sound. Someone once wrote that his rarified British accent sounded like the clattering of typewriter keys-but in this gathering, you knew he'd sound like a noiseless. You picked out one knot and approached it. "Hey," the man in the center said, "I was just telling these people about the time the girl approached Will Jones in London on that trip we made, remember . . ." You smiled bleakly and listened to the story for the sixth time. It wasn't very funny to begin with. You looked closely but no Noel. You could tell; there wasn't a creased trouser in the lot.

You turned away and buttonholed a man who looked as if he knew about'things. "Where's Coward?" you asked. He frowned. "Darned if I know," he said, "-but how about Mary Martin? In the green dress over there. Want to talk with her?

Any other time, you assured him. Mary Martin was not meant to talk with in the midst of smoke, noise and crowds. Forlornly, you resumed your travels around the room.

"YOU SEEN COWARD ?" you asked a television writer you knew. He shrugged. "I think he went to wash his hands," he said. "Look, have you met Miss Blotz here? You have things in common. You both breathe." You smiled nervously at Miss Blotz and sidled away. and you could see another guest back Miss Blotz to the wall and start telling her how terribly, terribly green her eyes were

After a while you felt like the Wandering Jew, doomed to walk endlessly and aimlessly forever. All you saw were glasses, cigaret ashes on the floor, hands groping for small hot dogs on toothpicks and a sea of cigaret-fume clouds. With each passing minute, the noise grew louder. Those who attack the raucousness of women matinee-goers have never seen a crowd of freeloaders at a party for a celebrit

Around seven, there was a slight thinning of ranks, and you swept the room with your eye like a panoramic camera. No sign of the master. You made a last desperate try. "Where," you asked a passing press agent, "is Coward?" He smiled cheerfully. "Ch," he said, "he's gone. He was here, but he's gone."

One of these days you'll have to catch up with Getr Noel again. But not at a cocktail party. You've been kicking yourself for missing that new kind of dishwasher, ever since.

It has to be that way. If the ite. question didn't have a simple clear cut answer, everybody would get confused and contestants would start suing the sponsors to collect the $100,000. The questions asked by small children would ruin any TV quiz show, stump any panel of experts --because they often can't be answered simply and easily. A child's queries reflect the collision of a small mind 'with all the wonder that lies about it. Any child can ask a question that would take a 70-year-old philosopher weeks to explain - or even leave him dumbfounded.

As children get older and shyer they cease to ask these life-prodding questions. They pull down the curtain on their doubts and thoughts, and we miss looking through the little open windows by which we felt we knew them. Helen and George are wise parents. As each of their children passed through the question-asking stage, they jotted down the child's question Later in life, at the right time, each of the girls will be given a record of what she wanted to know

Here are some typical questions asked in recent weeks by Leila Jim
