bigwigs of Naziism and Fascism hastened hither and yon. There was mystery in the air, and it made the allies shiver.

The last Finnish bullet had hardly thudded into a Russian breast when scow Berlin and Rome began concentrating their diplomacy in the Balkans, lately an allied stronghold. To Germany fell the task of mediating between two friends who are themselves enemies, for both Italy and Russia have interests in the Balkans. Probable outcome would be a three-cornered deal with Hungary and Rumania in the mid-Both Russia and Hungary would agree to conclude non-aggression pacts with Rumania, then the Soviet would come to terms with Italy. Their peace (if not their independence) guaranteed, the Balkans would thus keep producing oil and foodstuffs for Germany. The allies would be frozen out.

This conclusion made sense in the light of at least three important developments:

Iron Guardists

At Bucharest, Rumania's King Carol suddenly received a pledge of loyalty from 250 leaders of the suppressed Nazi Iron Guard, many of whose members had either been imprisoned or had fled to Germany. Only possible explanation for such an about-face was that Carol had begun co-operating with the Reich.

Without warning Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini sped to a rendezvous at Brennero, a tiny town on the Italo-German frontier.

the world waited expectantly, high Nazis in Berlin nodded knowingly and dropped strong hints that Italy was about to reaffirm emphatically her allegiance to the Rome-Berlin axis. Observers expected some announcement of German-Italo-Russian collaboration in the Balkans and elsewhere.

For Mr. Welles

Better informed on this skullduggery than any allied or neutral chancellor was Sumner Welles, U. S. undersecretary of state whom President Roosevelt sent to Europe in search of a meeting ground for peace. Far from gullible, Mr. Welles was nevertheless being played by the dictators for all he was worth. Observers recalled that he had no sooner ended his first visits to Rome and Berlin than Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop scurried down to Italy, scurried back to Berlin, then scurried to Brennero with Adolf Hitler just as Mr. Welles was ending his visits in Paris and London. This indicated that the dictators were hastening to patch up a peace plan which Mr. Welles could file in his brief case. Since the allies had refused to talk peace, a gesture from the dictators might woo the U.S.

But if Mr. Welles got any such plan after Brennero, observers were pretty sure it featured a definitely victorious peace for the dictators. Probable alternative: A Moscow-Rome-Berlin triangle.

HOUSING:

Farm Project

United States Housing authority now has a loan power of $800,000,-000, of which $626,636 has been advanced for USHA's major activities, slum clearance and urban low rent housing projects. Now before congress is the Wagner-Steagall bill (passed by the senate) which would double USHA's loan power and include $200,000,000 for one phase of housing thus far ignored by the U. S., namely, the farm.

Whether or not the Wagner-Steagall bill passes, Franklin Roosevelt decided recently to get his rural housing program started. USHA was authorized to lend $2,522,000 for financing 1,300 new farm houses in

BUSINESS:

Tax Time Indices

In mid-March John Q. Public could procrastinate no longer. To meet the first quarter U.S. income tax deadline he filed some 8,000,000 individual and corporation returns, mostly at the last minute.

Though treasury officials could only guess, they figured March collections from this source would be $605,000,000 compared with $505,000,-000 last year. Watched even closer, however, were results from three changes in the law:

(1) State and local government employees are paying this year for the first time. Early estimates placed this "take" at $16,000,000 from 2,600,000 persons; the treasury expects much more.

(2) For the first time since 1936 corporations are free of the controversial undistributed profits tax,

(3) Large corporations, formerly assessed 161/2 to 19 per cent, depending on amount of profits distributed to stockholders, are paying a flat 18 per cent this year.

Allergic Child May Be Upset In Many Ways | Topics

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

F AN infant or young child breaks out with hives or a skin rash, most mothers now-adays know that some food which disagrees with the youngster or to TODAY'S which he is aller-HEALTH gic or sensitive is the cause. Most | COLUMN adults also know when they have hives just about which food is responsible.

There are, however, other symptoms due to foods of which many mothers are not aware, Dr. H. A. Slesinger, Windber, Pa., points these out in Hygeia, the health magazine.

"Eczema in infants is usually caused by the presence of certain proteins in cow's milk which the child cannot tolerate. It is now possible for a child to be allergic (sensitive)' to his own mother's milk. Many of these babies will recover > completely and never have any more symptoms of allergy. Others will remain allergic to milk and must be kept on a milk-free diet for many years. Still others become allergic to other substances and will develop various symptoms.

Even a change in Dr. Barton temperature affects some individuals sometimes almost taking away their breath or causing a stomach upset.

Dr. Slesinger says that the most satisfactory method of dealing with the allergic child is to try to remove the offending food from his diet, and the offending substancepollen, feathers, furs-from his surroundings. When the food or other substance is difficult to remove from his diet or surroundings, then a process of trying to make him less allergic or sensitive to this food or other substance should be used. This is done in the case of food by starting with small amounts of the food daily and gradually increasing the amount until he is able to eat the usual serving without the development of any symptoms.

Age Important in Treatment of Hernia

Two brothers consulted a physician regarding "lump" in the lower abdomen which was really a 'threatened'' rupture or hernia. As they disliked the idea of an operation and the injection treatment was not in use at the time, the physician advised abdominal exercises—lying on back and raising legs (knees straight)—and the wearing of a light truss to prevent threatened hernia from becoming worse.

In one case the results were most satisfactory and the "lump" completely disappeared, even when the truss was removed. In the other case the hernia became worse and operation was performed. Later, in the apparently cured case, there was no sign of hernia for 15 years until a heavy "lift" was made and the hernia "came down." Operation gave fine results as the abdominal muscles were in good condition.

What about trusses to control a rupture or hernia? In those whose abdominal muscle tissue is poor, in those who fear operation, and in those whose hernia is unsuitable for injection, the wearing of a properly fitted truss gives both comfort and

I have seen a number "apparently" cured by exercise and the truss, but as in the case above mentioned the later history of the case might reveal a return of the hernia.

Can a rupture be cured by wearing a truss alone, that is, without exercise? Dr. Ralph Coyte, in the British Medical Journal, says:

"Concerning the chance for cure by wearing a truss, I should like to say that there does not appear to be any chance after the age of four. Even before the age of four, the chance of curing a hernia by simply wearing the truss is very small and depends on one important point. That is that once the truss has been applied no further protrusion (pushing through) be allowed until the truss is discarded, which may be only after several years." It would be well for parents to consult their physician if their youngster under four has a bernia. They should not wait, hoping that it will disappear without treatment.

CHICKEN DEATHS CAN BE TRACED

Immediate Post Mortem Will Aid in Finding Disease.

By DR. F. R. BEAUDETTE

Immediate post mortem examination of all chickens and other birds that die is the only means of knowing the causes of death. Records at the New Jersey agricultural experiment station indicate that over a period of years one can learn to expect certain diseases to occur at certain seasons of the year, but occasionally a new disease appears.

In general, however, pullorum disease and bronchitis come in the spring and are followed by coccidiosis and parasite problems. In the fall paralysis, pox and the respiratory infections appear. In mid-winter the mortality goes down and the diseases are of a miscellaneous character.

Birds are subjected to diseases caused by viruses, bacteria, fungi, protozoa, nutritional deficiencies and various external and internal parasites. These diseases are as numerous and as complicated as are the diseases of other species of animal or man, and, for this reason, their solution is equally as difficult. In fact, there exists in chickens or birds a disease to parallel almost any disease in any other animal. Thus, chickens have malaria, tuberculosis, typhoid, tumors and pox, all of which are adapted to the bird. At the same time, they have a few diseases actually acquired from other animals such as swine erysipelas and tularemia.

However, chickens are the least source of infection for other animals or for man among all of the food-producing animals. Moreover, an egg from a healthy hen is bacteria-free which makes it the only food of animal origin of that na-

Expert Advises Culling

All 'Counterfeit' Cows If all the "counterfeit" cows, or animals which do not live up to high standards of efficiency, were sent to the butcher, a surprising improvement in dairy farm income would be noted, says E. J. Perry, extension dairyman at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, Rutgers university. Not only would there be no surplus milk, but there also would be more land to devote to more profitable farm commodities. "The part that efficient cows play in building dairy farm security cannot be overemphasized," Mr. Perry points out. "It is well known that 10 good cows will yield more profit than 20 average cows, and the 10 will place less milk on the market. For instance, 10 cows averaging 8,000 pounds of milk will produce 80,000 pounds of milk in a year, while 20 cows averaging 5,000 pounds each, will have a total yield of 100,000 pounds. The feed cost for the two kinds of cows will not be very different. "When several cows of average rating or below are mingling with efficient cows in a herd, the tendency is to keep more cows in order to obtain the income needed. The poor cows eat up some if not all of the profit which the good cows may have made.

Separator Losses

How many dollars' worth of butterfat are you losing each year in the skimmilk from your separator? A sample taken to your local creamery or cream station can be tested. The cow tester is glad to render this service also. If operating efficiently, the average farm scparator should not leave over 0.05 per cent butterfat in the skimmilk. Better let your dealer do your separator adjusting. Some chaps professing to fix any bowl may leave your machine in such shape that as much as one-tenth of your butterfat will be

Caring for Colt

A little attention given to the feet of colts and young horses may make a difference in the value of the horse when ready to work. When colts' feet are allowed to become uneven and crooked, it is almost sure to affect the feet and legs permanently. Keeping the feet trimmed and shaped up properly allows normal development of the legs and prevents defects in the feet and legs. Poorly shaped feet and crooked legs that have resulted from neglect can be corrected in some measure by proper trimming of the feet.

BORROWED MONEY

By R. H. WILKINSON (Associated Newspapers-WNU Service.)

HE trouble started over a newspaper advertisement. It was one of those after-Christmas sale affairs, in which Kilby's, one of Boston's leading department stores, offered a limited number of genuine Paris-mode gowns, individually designed, for less than one-half their original value.

"It's a tremendous bargain," Judith Leighton told her husband. There'll probably not be another like it this year.'

Milt Leighton, the husband, rus-iled his magazine and said; "Umm." Forthwith Judith screwed her lips into the pout that usually produced satisfactory results, and curled up on the divan at Milt's shoulder.

"It isn't as if I were asking for a new dress," she cooed, "or even needed one. It's simply that this sale offers a good chance to save money. You do want me to save money, don't you, darling?" "Yeah," said Milt absently.

Judith clapped her hands. tomorrow and get one! The very first thing! Oh, darling, you're sweet!"

"Get one what?" Milt looked over the top of his magazine and scowled. "Why, the dress, of course! You just told me I could get it.'

"I just told you you could get a new dress? You're crazy! Its the first time I've heard dress mentioned! Moreover, where do you think I'd get the money? Only last week you took my last five dollars for belated Christmas gifts!"

It was time to act, and Judith was a good actor. Her eyes flashed.

"Milt Leighton, you told me not two minutes ago, that I could have that dress; you can't go back on it now. If I let you get away with one lie you would think you could do it all the time.'

well. Go buy the dress-and pay

"Youll have to give me the money. The sale is strictly cash." Milt laughed gratingly and held out his hand. "Listen, darling, do you see an apple in that hand?" "Whatever are you talking about? Of course I don't."

'Then I can't give it to you, can "Give me what?"

"The apple.

"What apple?" "The one that isn't there."

Tears filled Judith's eyes. 'Milt Leighton, you're the meanest husband I know! You're mean, mean, mean!

Milt shrugged.

"Well, I can't give you an apple if I haven't one, can I? And for the same reason I can't give you money. Empty hand, empty pock-

He grinned boyishly, and Judith fled to her room and sobbed in bitter solitude. The next morning Judith remained in bed, pretending sleep, until Milt had left for the office. Piqued a little because he hadn't waked her or apologized, she lingered over her breakfast and schemed evilly. At ten o'clock she called Tom Staler on the phone. Tom and his wife were the Leighton's closest friends.

"Hello, Tom," she cried gayly, when Tom's voice came over the e. "This is Judith . . . Oh, fine Yes, we had a grand Christmas. Thanks so much for your gift . . . By the way, Tom, Im going to ask you a very special favor. I'd like to borrow $25. For a day or two. It's an assessment at the club. Christmas baskets, you know."

"Why, of course, Jude, shall I send someone over with it?"

"No. I'm coming in town and I'll get it myself. And thanks a mil-

Judith hung up and found that her forehead was damp. Already a sensation of guilt had begun to beset her. She tried to shake it off, tried to convince herself she was doing what was right, and found the task impossible. Only with an effort did she put thoughts of Milt from her mind and concentrated on how smart she'd look in the new Paris dress. But picturing the new dress stimulated the sensation of guilt and wrongdoing a hundred fold. And in the end she submitted to the insistent urge of conscience. Sighing heavily she called Tom again and told him she wouldn't need the money. The assessment had been called off. Which didn't sound very sensible, but had to suffice. Feeling greatly relieved, Judith decided that she'd make a complete job of the thing by being nice to Milt. In fact, she'd be so nice he'd feel chagrined and remorseful. And so when Milt returned home 'national emblem.

he found his wife in a surprising pleasant state of mind.

"You are right, darling," she cooed at him across the dinner table. 'Im sorry I was so ugly."

"About what?" said Milt, dipping his soup.

"The dress, silly. The one in Kilby's. I decided last night after going to bed that it was selfish of me to expect a new dress so soon. I'll have to get one next month anyway, and," she smiled brightly, "I guess I can wait. It will make things easier for you won't it, darling?"

"So," said Milt, "you decided all this last night, eh?" "Yes. I stayed awake for hours.

That's why I was late in getting up this morning.'

"Hummm," said Milt. "That's odd, because I had a stroke of conscience, too. I decided that not letting you have the dress was being a little hard-especially when Kilby's was having a sale, and I really could save by letting you buy now." He paused, and buttered a slice of bread. "So I went down and ordered one for you. You're to have a fitting tomorrow."

Judith's eyes grew wide. "Darling! You-you bought one? Butyou said you didn't have the money!"

"I know it." He bit into the bread, watching her steadily. "And I didn't have any. So I went over to see "I knew you would! I'll go down Tom. I happened to be there when you called up.

"When I called up?" Judith asked breathlessly. "I-I called twice. Which time were you there?"

Milt swallowed and speared a baked potato with his fork. He was scowling. Judith felt her heart sink.

There was a breathless moment of suspense, an eternally long moment, and then Milt grinned. "The second time," he said. "To be honest, darling, that's why and when I decided to buy you the dress."

Silting of Reservoirs

Buries Big Investment

When a stream is dammed to form a storage reservoir it represents an investment for service in irrigation, power, municipal water supply, flood control, or recreation-or a combination of these. When the "Oh," said Milt. "I see. Very gates of the dam are closed the reservoir begins to fill with water-and also with sand or silt that settles and reduces the storage of serviceable water.

The silt deposit is the result of soil erosion. This is where the soil conservation service workers come in. As publicly employed specialists they are interested in both ends of the silt movement-in keeping the silt on the land and keeping it out of

Since 1934 the staff has been gathering definite information as to the rate at which reservoirs are being silted. They know of examples of is played silently because it is too was at first laughed to scorn, and completely filled reservoirs in which original investments have been wiped out by silting. By balancing the injury to farms from loss of soil, against damage to reservoirs from silting, these specialists are getting the facts on which to base control policies, to suggest fair apportionment of the expense of keeping the soil in place and so preventing filling of reservoirs.

Carl B. Brown, in charge of the reservoir investigations, points out that as a practical matter the effect of reservoir silting is likely to be even worse than the destruction of the original investment in the storage plant. As a rule such reservoir is located at the most favorable point for economical storage. If the service to the community requires a replacement, the substitute is likely to cost more than the original and the value of preventing silting can fairly be reckoned on the basis of the replacement cost.

It is just a hundred years since Frederic Sauvage, inventor of the propeller, died in abject poverty in a little hotel at Le Havre, France. Sauvage was a military engineer who left the army to devote himself to shipbuilding. After 10 years of painstaking reinclude a religious orchestra search he invented the ship's propeller which was to supplant padthe motions of playing on their in- dle-steamers and increase speed Sauvage received little honor which is directed toward the gods, during his lifetime. His invention while he was in prison for a paltry debt of a few hundred francs, unscrupulous rivals stole his idea and started to produce propellers. Powerful shipping companies fitted their vessels with Sauvage's invention, but when he tried to sue them his case was thrown out of court. He died a bitter, poverty-stricken man.

THE GIFT WIFE

O RUPERT HUGHES - WNU SERVICE

By RUPERT HUGHES

SYNOPSIS

On board the Nord-Express, with Ostend as his immediate destination, Dr. David Jebb is bound for America. With him is five-year-old Cynthia Thatcher, his temporary ward. On the train they meet Bill Gaines, former classmate of David's. David tells Gaines of his outstanding weakness—an overwhelming desire to drink. He feels the urge coming to him again, and wants to safeguard the child, who is returning to America with him. During a stop, Gaines leaves the train to buy Cynthia a present. The train leaves without him. Then Jebb is painfully injured in a minor accident. A fellow passenger revives him with a drink, which makes his desire for liquor all the stronger. At the next stop David and Cynthia leave the train. David begins drinking. The next thing he is conscious of is a strange sort of chanting. He looks around, dazed and sick. A door opens and in walks a strange Negro, closely followed by a woman, heavily velled and dressed in flowing robes. She tells him that he is in Uskub, that her name is Miruma, and that she is the "gift wife" of the Pasha, who has another wife, and who is husband in name only to Miruma. She knows nothing of the missing child. Learning that David is a surgeon, Miruma tells him of a powerful man in Uskub, Akef Bey, whose son is slowly dying. Jebb operates on the boy and saves his life, thus earning the family's deep gratitude. Jebb is surprised by a visit from the Pasha, who has heard of his prowess as a surgeon. He wants Jebb to examine the wife he loves, Nahir Hanim, who is ill. Jebb examines her, with Miruma as an interpreter.

Jebb answered: "She is too ill to feel it much-but you needn't tell her so. Just tell her I shall not give her much pain, and that it is necessary for me to find out what causes this condition."

Though Miruma sought to reassure Nahir Hanim, she yielded rather from inability to resist than from

And so at last, with Miruma holding the trembling hands of the panic-smitten Nahir, Jebb placed the point of the needle against the white skin, at the fifth intercostal space; set his thumb along the needle as a check, and pressed it backward, inward, and downward, with the uttermost nicety, avoiding bone, and artery, and cartilage, and throbbing

Nahir Hanim quivered with a twinge of pain, but she watched Jebb's eyes. She saw his intense frown dissolve in an arch of exultance: of that exultance surgeons feel on tracking a hidden trouble When he lifted away the needle, the cylinder was filled with an evil fluid.

He nodded his head and again he became very solemn.

"What ees eet, effendim?" Miruma whispered.

"Come with me to the Pasha, madame."

He turned to nod and smile as reassuringly as he could to the anxious patient, and went into the hall where the Pasha rose to his feet with many questions. Miruma trans-

"Pasha Effendi weesh to know do you know what eet ees?"

Jebb answered: "Empyema of the pericardium."

Miruma threw up her hands in dismay. The Pasha nagged her to translate, but she could not. Jebb tried to describe what he meant. "The heart-you understand, the heart?" "Ah, yes-yes-geonul."

"The heart hangs in a kind of a sack called the pericardium. It has a little fluid to lubricate it, but the pericardium of Madame Nahir is not well. It is filled with thick liquid like this in the tube. And her heart | cle to hold it back. must beat through it like a man wading through heavy snow. It grows wearier and weaker. It cannot beat much longer. Tell him."

The brows of Miruma were beautiful with pity for the old Pasha, and she told him as gently as if he were Jebb answered: "I think I can save her. I think-I hope-I believe so. If I operate there is at least a chance for her. It is a very hard operation. But without it there is no chance. One cannot always be sure of a diagnosis, but here I am sure. I know; I can see. If the pericardium is not opened and drained at once, she will die, and die soon. If I am given freedom to act, I can save her-I think. I am almost sure.'

his beloved to the goodness of Allah and the skill of the Americali.

Jebb was more alarmed than he dared confess. He felt the need of skilled help. He could think of no one but Murison to hold the instruments and hand them to him as they were needed.

After the deed should be done, a trained nurse was sadly to be desired. Lacking such an aide, he turned to Miruma.

"I need someone to care for Nahir Hanim afterward-to help me. Will you?"

Miruma did not trust herself to speak. She nodded.

"And now I must find Murison. Explain it to the Pasha, please-ma-

All he saw of her face was her eyes. They were enough. They widened and deepened with understanding of an inner meaning he had hardly realized himself till the moment. In a seizure of confusion he dashed from the house.

CHAPTER VI

Nahir Hanim was too weak to be very curious. The ebbing of her life had brought its own anesthesia to soul and body. Her chief emotion was a dim wonder, like moonlight wavering through a fog. A part of her was detached from the total of her.

The soft-hearted Murison was far more terrified than she. He stood fighting off womanly tenderness and whispering to himself to be a man, lest Jebb despise him.

The doctor selected a scalpel of medium size and, holding it like a violin bow, drew it across the skin, which parted and drew back like silk. Then he incised the thin strawlike covering of the fascia of the greater breast muscle, and pressed the blade through its stout fabric. "Some retractors," he said.

Murison felt the room rocking. "The retractors, quick!" Jebb repeated sharply, and he fitted them

Clamping one end of a severed vein, he picked up the other with the "Hold this!" He gave the forceps into Murison's white hand; while he snatched up a catgut thread, looped it over the mouth of an artery, and knotted it with a dexterity a sailor would have envied. And so he did with all the small arteries he was compelled to cut.

"Give me a couple of toothed for-ceps, quick." Murison handed him a cartilage knife. "Hell," growled Jebb as he snatched two forceps himself, and delicately fastened one of them in the wall of the pericardium. "Hold this, and be careful," and he put the forceps in Murison's grip. 'Don't move."

He seized the wall a little lower down in the other forceps, transferred them to his left hand, with his right reached for the scissors and made a slight incision, which he Miruma translated the message of lengthened a trifle with a probe-

out. See 'em scatter!"

At last, with every faculty at work, his task of reconstruction was finished. He had come safely through a thousand dangers, and he breathed deep.

It was a long and busy week before Jebb felt that Nahir Hanim could safely be entrusted to the care of Miruma and Murison, though he had schooled them in all the tasks and problems that were likely to arise. Meanwhile Gani Bey was flourishing in the radiant household of his father and mother. He felt that he had a right to set about his own business.

Jebb called upon the Pasha and after as much delicacy of palaver as his curt soul could manage, he broached the hateful subject of compensation.

'Your servant can never repay you for your service by mere paras and piastres, Jebb Effendim, but may he ask what you would consider a fair recompense?"

His smile turned to a grimace of pain as Jebb answered crisply: "Twelve hundred pounds."

"Mazallah! It is the price of the wife herself."

Having led him into the noose, Jebb tightened it.

"I will throw off one thousand pounds of my bill, Pasha, if you will release Miruma Hanim and restore her nekyah."

"You ask me to-to divorce my

"If I wanted to marry her, should I be leaving Uskub tomorrow, for-"You leave Uskub forever! What

"And," Jebb added, "you will save one thousand pounds of my fee." "You think my wife Nahir is well enough to leave?" "With the instructions I have given him, Murison Effendi can bring her back to health in two or three months."

"And you truly think it will help her to recover if I inform her that I shall put away the gift wife?"

"It will help more than all my

"Then your servant will obey your instructions in everything."

"Miruma Hanim shall have her talaq and her nekyah?"

"On my honor, and as soon as the court will grant the decree," and once more: "You are sure you are leaving Uskub forever?"

"Tomorrow without fail. If you could have my money at my hotel-'

"It will be there, effendim. For your skill, I shall pray Allah also to reward you. For your journey, Allah emanet oloon!"

Jebb had, indeed, resolved to leave Uskub forever, and Miruma forever. The fierce demands of his duties to the lost child cried out against him for his neglect, though he felt absolved to a degree by the necessity of earning funds and saving the lives perishing at his very feet. But now there was no further excuse to give his conscience.

He had come to know Miruma better, through the veil, the actual veil she wore and the impalpable yet impenetrable veil her self-respect, her duty, the danger of their situation drew about her. And he had come to love her and desire her with a passion his heart had never dreamed itself capable of entertain-

He planned to hurry forth to hunt the lost child. He dreamed that he stumbled upon her without delay. He imagined himself telegraphing Miruma to join him and go with him to America as his wife.

And then his thanks choked in his throat. A chill hand seemed to reach from the fog and throttle him. It was his curse that had brought him to Uskub with infinite disgrace, with a deep shame that he had concealed only by cowardly silences.
His curse forbade him to marry any woman, least of all Miruma. He thought long and fiercely over | in its schools.

"That ought to please you, old his farewell to Miruma. He wrote man; we're turning the yellow devils | many letters and tore them in pieces. Worn out and nauseated with life, he dashed off and sealed the curtest message of all, with no hint of the love that neither had expressed in a word, and both had understood with all their hearts.

Miruma Hanim-Madame:

I leave for Salonica by the next train. I shall hunt for the child until I find her. I will let you know when I do. Fehmi Pasha has promised me on his honor that he will grant you at once a talaq and restore your nekyah in full. I should like to be assured of this. You might send me word, if it is not too much trouble. My permanent address will be the Union Bank, I Graben 13, Vienna (Vivana). Austria.

With all good wishes, Yours faithfully, DAVID JEBB.

CHAPTER VII

Salonica, the Hot Springs of Ancient Greece, seemed pretty ancient to the Yankee surgeon who came in an express train and took a cab to the Grand Hotel d'Angleterre.

Hellwald and the British consul had helped him over the important matter of his missing papers, had provided him with a substitute for his lost passport and a teskere, or license to travel; had coached him in the important intricacies of Turkish machinery and given him cordial letters to the representatives of Great Britain and Austria in Salon-

When he left the train he was compelled to have his teskere vised by a Turkish official, who took it in charge until he should leave the town again.

"Will the effendi look through his papers and see if by chance he is holding another teskere of mine?" he asked.

He did not fail to slip a little baksheesh under the documents on the desk. The recorder ransacked his files graciously

"Daveet Jebb Effendi could not have passed through Salonica-at least not openly and legally."

Jebb dissipated the menace of this suggestion with a further insinuation of baksheesh and hastened to his cab.

At the Austrian consulate Jebb was received with the distinction due his recommendations as a friend and a physician. He also learned that every effort to trace the missing child had ended in negation.

He visited the American consulate, but the consul had been summoned to Constantinople, and his office could give no help.

At the British consulate they had much proffer of aid but no encouragement. One of the attaches, a younger son of a noble house, but smothered under the simple style and title of Cranford Banbury, Esq., was especially courteous.

He took Jebb to the office of the Polis Comiseri, introduced him, and translated the commissioner's account of his vain efforts to find the Banbury insisted on Jebb's dining with him.

'You're in a blue funk, old man, and you oughtn't to be alone." "I'm always alone," said Jebb

"Well, I'll do my best to make Salonica an exception. There's not much to occupy an Anglo-Saxon in Salonica unless you're interested in politics. We rather feel we're sitting on dynamite. The Young Turks are in power but they have an Augean stable to clean up, and the old Sultan isn't dead yet.

'What have they done with the old Sultan?"

"Why, haven't you heard? He's here-here in Salonica. Fact! He is a kind of prisoner de luxe, settled in a wonderful villa built ten years ago by an Italian for the Allatini family. Now the government has turned it into a gilded cage for the ex-Sultan. They didn't quite like to treat him as we did Charles I, but he's a problem, and no mistake. The old tarantula may pop up any day and there are people enough eager to help him back to his web. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Doomed Giants

Whales, the largest mammals in the world, are threatened with extinction. For many years increasingly large whaling fleets, with huge floating factories for extracting the oil and other products, have been operating in the South Antarctic ocean. In the last 10 years Norway, the chief of whaling nations, has made over $300,-000,000 out of whale-oil.

Every year an average of 40,000 whales are killed, and now that the price of whale-oil (invaluable for making margarine and fats for high-explosives) has increased from $65 to $200 a ton, the chase will be even more ruthless. Whales breed slowly.

The Saga of a Home-Made Trailer; Texas to the New York World's Fair

A Texas journalist built himself a trailer, loaded in his wife and 11year-old son and started on a 2,000 mile trek for the New York World's Fair with $50.00 in his pockets. His experiences are recounted in the following story:

By TOM CAUFIELD

(who covers police, fire alarms, boll weevils and all news in and about the Brazos Bottoms of Central Texas for the Waco Times-Herald).

WORLD'S FAIR, New York-Frances and the eleven-year-old and I have seen the Fair and all the folks back in Waco told us it couldn't be done on the Caufield bankroll. The speedometer on Ancient History II reads 2,000 -niles from Fifth and Austin; the wallet is out $50, and we've got $10 left. I've just wired the boss for the $25 he promised me to get home on, and if the chewing gum and bailing wire on the trailer and jaloppy don't relax their holds during the homeward 2,000 miles, we shall have made the whole junket on $85.

We spent a little over $1.50 each per day on the Fair itself, counting admission at the gates. Thomas, the elevenyear-old and Frances, the woman who tells me how to drive, and I walked and walked and looked and stared, finally becoming convinced that the best parts of the Fair are free. We could while away two weeks here looking at the free shows, and never repeat and never suffer from what the slick paper writers call ennui. We are leaving only because a wolf is howling at a door bearing the coat of arms of a certain small town newspaperman in Texas

We ate dinner at one of many restaurants in the Fair grounds. My wife had chicken and mushrooms with coffee for 60 cents. I ate a salisbury steak with coffee for 60 cents, and lamb chops for the boy cost 75 cents. For lunch we had hamburgers and pie, which ran us 20 cents each. It costs a nickel for pop or root beer at any of a dozen stands. We got to the Fair for lunch one day and had dinner there that night. We had breakfast in camp next day, lunch at the Fair and pulled out late that afternoon for home.

Seeing New York

You can see something of New York while you're at the Fair, for the mere cost of gasoline. The night we arrived, we took a 50-mile drive across town, way to Times Square, then back to camp. We had a volunteer guide—one of the officials at the camp.

The policemen go out of their way general while we waited for an opentop bus next morning for a sightseeing trip in Manhattan, In fact, any New Yorker goes out of his way to help a Fair visitor.

We felt so much at home that when we parked our car to catch a bus to the Fair on our first day's visit, we forgot to make a note of where we left it; just walked away from it like we would have done in our own home town. And believe it or not, we found it when we came back in the rainwith the help of some of the passengers on the bus.

Bear in mind that the cost of coming to New York depends on how you are willing to come. We had a camp trailer, slept in it, using a trailer camp once, a cabin one night during a pourtions and get a free foot treatment to ing rain, using school grounds twice with the permission of rural neighbors, and parking three times at filling stations. World conquest! The dream of dictators and of national leaders down through the ages is to be accomplished, for there is One who has the authority to claim such a place of leadership who will one day rule, for then "the kingdoms of this world" will have become "the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and He shall reign for ever and ever" (Rev. 11:15). While we await His coming to take the throne are we to sit idly by? No indeed, for even now Christ has all authority and He has commissioned His followers to go out and to serve Him in all the world by making disciples in every nation.

I. The Obedient Disciples (vv. 16,

The Lord never fails to keep His Word, but often His followers miss great blessing because they fail to keep their appointments with Him. He had told His disciples that after His resurrection He would meet them in Galilee, and we read that gayety is obtained by doing the they met Him at the appointed lazy daisy flowers in bright and place. One trembles to think of varied colors. Number Z8548, 15 what they and we might have missed if they had failed to meet

> His promise to us is just as true and definite. "Where two or three are gathered in my name, there am I in the midst of them" (Matt. 18: 20) applies to us today. If we meet Him at the appointed place, blessing will come to us and will flow out through us to all the world.

Observe that "some doubted." that is, they were perplexed and uncertain about the risen Saviour. If they persisted in their lack of faith we know that it must have shut them out of a great blessing, but at the same time it did not hinder the Lord's gracious ministry to His other disciples.

II. The All-Powerful Leader (v.

Quietly and without any fanfare. Jesus announced that all power was given unto Him; or as the Revised Version more appropriately translates the word, "all authority." He does have all power, but He has more. He has the supreme authority which gives Him the right to rule over the entire creation, heaven and earth, spiritual as well as material.

No man in his right mind has ever laid claim to authority over even so much as the earth, but here is One who without hesitation or qualification declares that to Him has been given all authority in heaven as well as in earth, that is, over the entire creation. Surely it is God Himself who here speaks to us.

III. The Great Commission (vv. 19, 20a).

"It is the sublimest of all spectacles to see the risen Christ without money or army or state, charging this band of 500 men and women with world conquest and bringing them to believe it possible and to undertake it with serious passion and power. Pentecost is still to come, but dynamic faith rules on this mountain in Galilee" (Dr. A. T. Robertson).

Such faith and such a commission call for a worldwide mission. The church or individual without a worldwide missionary vision assuredly does not have the viewpoint of Christ. Observe also that it is an evangelistic mission. We are not called to entertain the world, nor primarily to improve the social order. Our business is to "make disciples," that is, true followers of Jesus Christ, which they can only become through accepting Him as Saviour and Lord.

IV. The Abiding Presence (v. 20b). There is no other statement of fact (for it is more than a promise) anywhere or by anyone that can compare with the assurance of Christ that He is with His witnesses always, even unto the end of the age. Consider first of all who is to be with us, namely, the Son of God, the risen Christ, the One with all authority in heaven and earth! Then note that He is to be with His disciples "always." How important that is, for as we well know, the inspiration of even the greatest human leader largely goes with him to the grave. The Lord Jesus, on the other hand, is with each one of His children always. What assurance that fact brings to His witnesses.

At The Movies By Nancy Jane

Margaret Mitchell, who wrote 'Gone with the Wind," is perhaps the only author whose friends and neighbors traveled to Hollywood to help turn a book into a picture.

Wilbur G. Kurtz, artist and historian, and his wife, Annie Laurie Fuller Kurtz, of Atlanta, Georgia, conducted the research for the David Selznick International Technicolor film which will be shown starting April 5, on the Ocotillo screen, after three years of preparation.

The Kurtz family and Margaret Mitchell's are Atlanta neighbors, and the relationship is one that has extended over three generations. Mrs. Kurtz's father Captain William A. Fuller, of the Confederate Army, was the man who was responsible for the capture of James Andrews and his twenty-two raiders, in April, 1862. His plantation in Clayton, Georgia, handed down by his father, is in the exact locale of Tara, the fictitious O'Hara estate in "Gone with the Wind."

Kurtz and his wife were summoned to Hollywood on Thanksgiving Day in 1938, to serve as echnical aides for the production. which has clark Gable, Vivien and is being released by Metro- home. Goldwyn-Mayer.

As an artist and historian, school, Emma Jean Estes. Kurtz maintains a studio in which he has assembled photographs and records of the pre-war South. Sunday. Margaret Mitchell is a frequent visitor there. As a result of his familiarity with the people, the period and the novel, Kurtz was offered the post as research expert, with his wife collaborating With his dual equipment as historian and artist, he not only provided actual material for the picture but made water color sketches to aid the technicians.

An outstanding example of the unique type of assistance furnished by Kurtz is the train shed when appears on the screen in replica of the original building in Atlanta. Kurtz owned the plans, drawn by an architect named E. A. Winceht. There are a great

Spider Monkeys Are Thin

Spider monkeys get their name because they look thin and spidery, seem to be all legs and tails. Most spider monkeys have no thumbs, use their paws only as nooks while climbing. The glory of the spider monkey lies in its tail. In zoos, spider monkeys stretch their tails out between the bars to pick up peanuts lying on the ground that they cannot reach or pick up with their fingers. Brazil is the native home of spider monkeys.
