Lodge Dinner Honors Ladd Sr.

A large crowd attended the Masonic Lodge dinner Friday night. A special tribute was paid to Earl Ladd Sr. for his many years as a lodge member.

Ladd was presented two 50 year awards and one 60 year pin. Making the presentation was Jimmy Willison of Floydada, Past Grandmaster of the Masons in Texas and Past Grand High Priest of York Wright Masons of Texas. In making the presentations Willison said "It gives me great pleasure to present these awards. Not very often a man has served this many years. We appreciate him for the many things he has done for the lodge as well as his community. This is a rare occasion for a man to receive a 60 year pin, and we wish him health, happiness and prosperity in the coming years.

Ladd's son, John, pinned the 60 year pin on him while Ladd senior's wife, Cammie, looked on.

"It gives me great pleasure to look around the room and see all the friends," Ladd said in response. "It reminds me of the time and hours spent in building this building. I want to thank all of you for this honor.

Following the meal, Mr. and Mrs. Ladd cut a large sheet cake decorated in blue with the Masonic emblem centering it. Sixty was inscribed on one end and 50 on the other, representing the awards Ladd received.

Era Of The Whistleblowers Is Launched

A keynote of the first American constitutional convention in 1787, was responsibility. It was a time when individuals were seen as responsible for forgoing their own destiny and those in public office held positions of trust.

Over the years, bad examples of "public servants" have tarnished the image of public service and the fact that there are many, largely unheralded, individuals in government positions who honestly do their jobs has been largely lost sight of.

Men such as A. Ernest Fitzgerald, who in 1968 courageously exposed the cost overruns of the C-5A cargo plane, have often done so at peril to their own livelihoods. As Fitzgerald describes it, "Pentagon chiefs in Mr. Nixon's White House and Mr. Nixon himself, as we later found out, decided I had to go; and I did..."

Fitzgerald, however, documented and exposed the dirty tricks directed against him, and regained his Pentagon position. Years later, in looking back on his "crime" - giving honest testimony before a Senate committee about the Defense Department's waste and over expenditures-- he wryly commented, "I committed truth."

In 1822, James Madison expressed stated that, "A people who mean to be their own governors must arm themselves with the power which knowledge gives." The public have a right and a responsibility to know. Officials have a responsibility to let them know.

During the 1989 hearings conducted on IRS misconduct and coverups by Rep. Doug Barnard Jr. and his subcommittee, he stated, "Our investigation indicates that there are serious employee integrity problems among senior managers at the IRS; inadequate internal investigations and punishment of senior-level misconduct; a pervasive fear at all levels of IRS over retaliation for the reporting of such misconduct; and, driving concern that publicly exposing wrongdoing by senior managers will tarnish the agency's public image..."

In early 1985, the National Coalition of IRS Whistleblowers was founded by Church of Scientology's FREEDOM magazine. Thomas Whittle, Editor in Chief of the investigatory news journal says the Coalition was formed "as it had become obvious that the public's right to know was being continually thwarted by corrupt IRS officials."

"Through the years FREEDOM reporters have documented many instances showing that IRS officials condone, coverup, or even participate in wrongdoing, rather than correct it," says Whittle, "They appear to have the attitude, 'It's better if the public does not know.'" Conversely the National coalition of IRS Whistleblowers, is rewarding - with rewards up to $10,000 - honest IRS employees and citizens who expose corruption within the IRS.

Paul DesFosses, president of the Coalition and 20-year veteran of the IRS stated, "I decided to blow the whistle when I became painfully aware of the IRS' illegal targeting of the Mormon Church. It wasn't an easy decision, but I felt it was the only thing I could do."

DesFosses noted that despite congressional scrutiny and new laws passed to protect taxpayers rights, the Coalition continues to receive voluminous reports from taxpayers abused by the IRS.

Offering this reward, in effect, launches the Era of the Whistleblower - one where honesty is rewarded and people are again held responsible for their actions, good and bad.

The address of the National Coalition of IRS Whistleblowers is P.O. Box 65471, Washington, D.C., 20035.

Texas Motorist Warned About Holiday Memorial Day Traveling

Memorial Day is approaching and with it brings the first outing of the summer. Major V.J. Cawthon, Regional Commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety says motorist should be aware of the increased dangers on the highways during this holiday season.

Driving defensively and expecting the worse from other drivers is one sure way to stay alert to the situations that lie ahead. If any travelling is to be done at night, then a check of our vehicle lighting is a must. Headlights, turn signals, tail lights, and brake lights are often the only way we have of communicating with other drivers.

Motorist should expect to see large volumes of traffic in and around our recreational areas. Keep in mind that the road conditions in these areas are not going to be as good as on the open freeway. Roads are often narrow, with generally two laned traffic and often times no shoulder. These situations call for reduced speed with a good eye on the road ahead. Always check out the shoulder area or right side of the roadway because this is where you'll have to drive if a vehicle should cross into your lane of travel.

One of the best preventive measures, to help reduce injury and death during a collision, is also the easiest. "Buckle Up", it can make a difference. Let's all help make this Memorial Day Weekend the safest ever. "Drive Friendly, It's the Texas way of doing things".

"The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness."

1. Who was the author of this wise saying?
2. Who was his father and mother?
3. For what architectural masterpiece is he best known?
4. Where may the above saying be found?

- Answers:
1. King Solomon.
 2. King David and Queen Bathsheba.
 3. Solomon's Temple, at Jerusalem.
 4. Ecclesiastes 2:14a.

Importance Of Fiber, Water In Daily Diet

Thinking of the best way to get an automobile is one way dietitian Lorraine Sparks gets her clients to understand just how important fiber and water are in their daily diets.

Sparks, who both teaches at New York University and heads her own diet counseling service, says "If your car's oil isn't changed regularly and its moving parts lubricated, it won't be long before it isn't running right. If you neglect giving your body the fiber and water it needs, your body will not perform the way it should."

Fiber and water are "natural cleansers," she says. "Insoluble fiber helps food wastes move through the intestines more quickly, promoting regularity and helping to prevent diverticular disease, an intestinal disorder. Flushing at least six to eight glasses of water a day through your body helps fiber do its job."

Sparks admits some people find it difficult to down that much water at first. "Many of us just aren't used to drinking lots of water."

Just what is fiber? It's simply the indigestible portion of fruits, vegetables, grains, nuts and seeds, the material that gives plants their rigid structure. Fiber helps the body eliminate wastes and seems to play many other essential roles. Fiber has been found to have a possible cholesterol-lowering effect in some people who have existing high cholesterol levels. Also, fiber may help to prevent certain types of cancer.

There are two types of fiber -- insoluble and soluble. Insoluble fiber, which helps to prevent and treat constipation and diverticulosis, is found in wheat bran, vegetables and whole grains. Soluble fiber -- found in some studies, to help stabilize blood sugar levels in people with diabetes -- is found in oat bran, barley, kidney beans and other dried beans and in some fruits and vegetables.

Given our taste for highly-refined foods, however, Americans don't get enough of either kind of fiber. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), men on average eat 17.5 grams a day; women only 12 grams -- far short of the 20 to 30 grams recommended by experts as potential protection against cancer and heart disease.

And scientists keep discovering more benefits from fiber. For example, preliminary studies of corn bran and rice bran, both high in insoluble fiber, indicate they may also help lower cholesterol.

To add fiber to your diet, nutrition experts recommend following these guidelines:

1. Start the day with a high fiber cereal. Check nutrition labeling on packages for those that are higher in fiber.

2. Eat at least five servings of fruits and vegetables per day.

Also include six or more servings of whole grain products.

3. Leave peels on apples or pears, and eat baked potatoes with the skins on.

4. At salad bars, remember that lettuce has relatively little fiber. Such vegetables as peas, corn, carrots and broccoli are better sources.

5. Drink at least six to eight glasses of water daily.

When adding fiber to your diet, increase amounts gradually, allowing your body, especially your stomach and intestines, to get used to the additional fiber. Too much fiber can interfere with the absorption of vital nutrients. And, it is a good idea to obtain fiber from food Forecasting weather conditions has become quite an art according to Judge R.J. Klump, local government meteorologist in charge of the weather station at Muleshoe. For about 60 years weather forecasting has been going on, said Judge Klump, and with growing accuracy, until today not only may the weather be pretty well stated for tomorrow or next week, but the general tendency can often be forecast for several weeks or months ahead of time.

Looking ahead into 1931, Judge Klump quoted Herbert Browne, long distance weather prognosticator at Washington, D.C. who predicts that the after effects of the drought of 1930 will be felt all through the middle and eastern part of the U.S.

Recent instructions from the Department of Agriculture on the growing of certain vegetable crops vital to defense has been received by S.T. Logan, county agent. There have been some questions by farmers in this county as to whether or not such vegetable crops could be grown under rules of the AAA. For the benefit of farmers in this territory we list the new order in regard to food crops:

"This is with further reference to our telegram of April 17, in regard to the need for increasing production of certain vegetable crops under the national defense program.

"In accordance with our telegram, the acreage of tomatoes, corn, peas and snap beans will not cause deductions with respect to the vegetable or total soil-depleting allotment for the farm if such crops are grown for processing."

Two relatives of the Pool family were among the five victims of the tragic automobile accident which occurred midway between Tahoka and Brownfield Monday night.

Drs. D.T. Rogers, 68, of Tahoka, one of those who lost their lives was the wife of a brother of Mrs. W.M. Pool, Sr. of Lubbock, mother of Lee and Myron Pool of Muleshoe.

Mrs. Calvin Edwards, another of the dead was the daughter of Mrs. Rogers and is a first cousin of the two Pools. Members of the Pool family attended services held in Tahoka Wednesday.

Others who died of injuries received in the accident were Mr. Calvin Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Riley of Lamesa.

In the last few days hail, hard rains, high winds have wiped out 30,000 to 40,000 acres of cotton, already up or the seed sprouting in the Muleshoe area. The was the estimate made by County Agent J.K. Adams after he had toured the south part of the county yesterday and he thought perhaps the estimate is conservative.

These acres will have to be replanted, some of it already has been reseeded, especially where severe weather wrought havoc last Thursday night and Saturday night north and east of Muleshoe, Monday night saw another chapter added to the story of weather damage to crops.

There was very little wheat acreage in the area, but what there was has been greatly reduced by the hail, some by as much as 50 percent. Conrad Williams, south of Stegall, had about that much damage on two sections of wheat.

Mobile Breast Cancer Screen Here May 30

The Mobile Breast Cancer Detection Unit of Odessa, which services Muleshoe, has received the certification of the American College of Radiology Mammography Accreditation Program.

Mammography is an x-ray examination of the breast, which the American Cancer Society and other medical experts see as the best means for the early detection of breast cancer.

The program is voluntary and is designed to insure that women receive optimum quality mammographic examinations. The process is done through a peer review evaluation of the facility's staff qualifications, equipment, quality control and quality assurance programs, image quality and breast dose. The accreditation must be renewed every three years.

The accreditation program was instituted because of the concerns of radiologists, other national medical organizations, and the public that qualified personnel perform and interpret mammograms and that dedicated mammographic equipment be used. The American College of Radiology received an American Cancer Society Control Grant which was used to pilot test the Accreditation Program.

Breast cancer will strike one in 10 American women. The American Cancer Society predicts that about 41,000 women will die of breast cancer this year. As there is no way to prevent the disease, early detection and treatment offer the greatest hope for survival.

The American Cancer Society recommends that women do monthly breast self-exams and have regular physical breast exams by a doctor. It further recommends mammography on the following schedule:

A baseline mammogram (for reference) between age 35 and 39.

A mammogram every one or two years between age 40 and 49.

An annual mammogram for age 50.

The Breast Cancer Detection Unit will be in Muleshoe on Thursday, May 30. You may call 272-4524 for an appointment.

Local Lineman Prepares For SPS Lineman Rodeo

A lineman from Muleshoe will be among those exhibiting work ability and safety skills during Southwestern Public Service Company's first lineman's rodeo on June 1.

The rodeo will pit SPS teams from all over west Texas and eastern New Mexico in a competition intended to promote good, safe working habits.

"Time is not the main factor in this rodeo," said SPS's Muleshoe Manager Ron Montgomery. "Performances are primarily judged on safety and correct working procedures."

Arturo Samaron, from Muleshoe, will be competing in the apprentice division. He works in SPS's construction services department.

The winning team and the winning apprentice from the company-wide contest will travel in September to St. Louis, Missouri, to participate in the International Lineman's Rodeo. Up to 300 teams from all over North America are expected at the event.

Journeyman linemen teams consist of three competitors--two climbing journeymen and a groundman--and compete in seven mandatory events. Apprentices participate individually in two events.

Each of the rodeo events relates to work which could be encountered by the linemen in their everyday job tasks.

"Arturo does a lot of these tasks everyday as he helps construct new lines which allow reliable electric service in the Panhandle and South Plains area," Montgomery said.

One of the contests is "pole climbing." A participant must quickly and carefully climb a pole, while carrying a small bucket containing a raw egg. As he descends, the lineman must carry the egg in his mouth.

Another event is the "hurt man rescue," in which a contestant must climb a pole and "rescue" a dummy that has been perched near the top. Proper ropes, knots and procedures are required by the lineman for the "rescue."

Montgomery said the "hurt man rescue" is an event that hopefully will not actually be done on the job. "Because of the emphasis we put on safety, you just don't see many injuries," he said. "Our employees are very professional and very safe."

The local lineman's rodeo is sponsored by SPS, in cooperation with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

It will be held Saturday, June 1, at Lubbock's Indiana Substation, located at the Clovis Highway and Indiana. The rodeo is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. and last until 3 p.m.

H.R. 1412 Vs The Brady Bill

Crime and violence is frustrating. This frustration is shared by people in our big cities and in our rural communities. The frustration is also evident in the Congress as lawmakers try to legislate solutions to the serious problem of crime.

In the current debate over how best to keep criminals from buying handguns, it's come down to two choices in the House of Representatives - H.R. 7, known as the Brady bill, and my proposal H.R. 1412, the "Felon Handgun Purchase Prevention Act of 1991."

H.R. 1412 is a straightforward proposal. Moreover, it offers a better way to accomplish what H.R. 7 (the Brady bill) will not - a fair, fast and accurate means of stopping convicted felons from purchasing handguns from licensed gun dealers.

My system relies on existing technology. It's the same technology used by stores and restaurants to instantly check whether a credit card purchase is valid or not. This technology can be used to create a toll-free number firearm dealers must call to obtain a background check on prospective handgun buyers.

Under H.R. 1412, every potential gun purchaser would be screened through a criminal recordkeeping system in a matter of minutes - unlike the Brady bill which does not mandate or require a criminal background check.

The system I am proposing is similar to a point-of-purchase instant background check system already at work in the state of Virginia. The Virginia instant check system has been in place for a little over a year now, and during that time it has produced a better record of felony apprehension and arrest than neighboring Maryland's seven-day waiting period.

Since my proposal will use existing technology, the cost of the system is affordable. I am not proposing a multi-billion dollar program to put a computer terminal or biometric finger-printing machine in every gun store. What I am proposing is a workable system that comes with the cost upfront, unlike the Brady bill which comes with hidden costs for many state and local governments.

Those who pushing the hardest for adoption of the Brady bill come from states that already have waiting periods. The Brady bill will not effect their jurisdictions.

However, for rural states, like my home state of West Virginia, the cost of the Brady bill could be devastating. First, small police departments would be forced to direct valuable and scarce resources from crime fighting to processing criminal background checks. Moreover, inadequate or faulty background checks could lead to expensive lawsuits, liability insurance rate increases, and even punitive or compensatory damage awards in certain instances.

I believe that crime is national problem and should be addressed accordingly. Unfortunately, the Brady bill amounts to a Federal mandate that places the cost and burden squarely on state and local governments. For a decade now, the Federal government has been shifting greater responsibilities toward state and local governments. But the truth is that while the Federal government has mandated states do more in areas such as health care, funding cuts have made it difficult for states to comply.

H.R. 1412 provides for a national program, with national funding. It requires the Justice Department to establish a national instant check system. And unlike the Brady bill, it provides states the resources they need to update and computerize criminal records.

In my proposal, I have worked to improve on the Brady bill. I believe H.R. 1412 is a workable alternative that will better accomplish the goal of preventing criminals from purchasing handguns from licensed dealers.

I also want to say that I feel sympathy for Jim Brady. Mr Brady is a victim of crime. However, the truth is that a seven-day waiting period would not have prevented John Hinkley from buying a handgun. Sadly, a seven-day waiting period would not have prevented the attempted assassination of President Reagan, and the maiming of Jim Brady.

I believe a more fitting tribute to Jim Brady would be increased Federal efforts in the areas of mental health research, alcohol and drug rehabilitation, and education. The roots of the crime problem must be addressed, not overlooked in favor of a superficial quick fix.

The approach I am proposing is better than H.R. 7 for many different reasons. It would help prevent criminals from purchasing handguns from licensed dealers. And, it would allow for the immediate sale of a handgun to any legal qualified individual, helping to safeguard the constitutional right of law abiding citizens.

Report From
U.S. Representative
Larry Combast

I am a free-trader in my philosophy. However, with any free trade agreement there must also be a fair deal for both the seller and the buyer. Congressional debate on trade with Mexico and the broader issue of trade agreements with other nations is at the root of the discussion over giving the President "fast track" authority to negotiate with Mexico and in separate General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) negotiations.

West Texans have more than just a passing concern over this important question of fairness. We live in the largest cotton-producing congressional district in the nation. The largest peanut-producing area in the state of Texas is Gains County, while Hereford area sugarbeet growers also have a vested interest in these trade negotiations. All these crops are affected by the World Market. For the Permian Basin and West Texas oil industry there are potential benefits from

Cotton Women Voice Concerns Over Textile Imports

The National Cotton Women's Committee will step up a national campaign aimed at increasing consumer awareness of the textile import threat to the U.S. economy.

The resolve came after NCWC leadership received briefings here from the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, USDA and the National Cotton Council on current U.S. trade proposals and actions. Included was a discussion of the Administration's stance on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and President Bush's quest for an extension of fast-track trade authority--a move that would leave Congress unable to amend trade agreements fashioned by U.S. trade negotiators. The women were reminded that an extension of fast-track, coupled with proposals currently under consideration by the GATT, would seriously undercut American cotton producers and the domestic textile industry. Two fast track disapproval resolutions, one by Sen. Ernest Hollings (D-SC), and one by Rep. Byron Dorgan (D-ND), are expected to see Congressional action before June 1 when the Administration's fast track authority expires.

Following the briefings, NCWC Texas Chairwoman Sharon King said, "The U.S. cotton industry would suffer significant losses under provisions of draft agreements on agriculture and textiles. Imports would displace 90 percent of our nation's textile and apparel consumption by 2001 under present GATT proposals. Any increase in imports of cotton products represents lost sales opportunities for U.S. cotton producers. . . opportunities which cannot be easily replaced through increased exports."

The Council estimates American cotton producers would lose potential domestic sales of up to 8 million bales while only gaining, according to USDA, about 400,000 bales in exports.

Mrs. King, the wife of a Midkiff, TX, cotton producer, discussed these concerns with House and Senate staffers as part of a week-long orientation that ended today. She was joined by 19 other NCWC developing the oil drilling and service industry of Mexico--if the negotiations are handled correctly.

Those who experienced the results of the last free trade agreement with Canada know firsthand that trade agreements do have their bad effects. I want to make certain that all the bad does not come down on the people of our area. Being so close to Mexico, we in Texas stand the most to gain from improved trade south of the border. That same closeness also means we stand a chance to be hurt the most. How those negotiations are handled is critical to fairness.

Opportunities in Mexico for drillers, geologists, oil field servicing companies and other support businesses could open jobs that require the technical skills and equipment of our region.

In meeting with the President on this matter, I have strongly urged him to establish a specific U.S. energy negotiating group to explore the many innovative arrangements possible for the development and production of energy in neighboring Mexico.

In the larger GATT negotiations, rules on domestic and export programs do not apply to China and the Soviet Union leaders who direct hundreds of cotton women volunteers in 14 states dedicated to promoting the American cotton industry.

The women also pointed out that a GATT agreement as now drafted could possibly undercut U.S. cotton producers by eliminating the Section 22 quotas governing imports of raw cotton into this country. This could set the stage for some less developed-country looking for currency to dump their cotton in the U.S. at below market prices.

"Uncontrolled surges of raw cotton imports such as this would disrupt out markets and the cotton program," Mrs. King said. "Farm income would be reduced and cotton program operating costs would increase."

During their orientation, which included stops at Cotton Incorporated's research facilities in Raleigh, NC, and Cone Mills denim plant in Greensboro, NC, the women I heard repeatedly that imports pose a serious threat to the U.S. fiber, textile and apparel industry which employs 2.2 million Americans and generates $50 billion in gross national product. Today, about 59 percent of the U.S. apparel, apparel fabric and apparel yarn market has been taken over by imports--a penetration that was only 28 percent in 1980.

The women pledged to accelerate "Grown and Made in the USA," a five-year-old campaign aimed at increasing consumer awareness of the textile import threat to U.S. agriculture and the U.S. economy. The women also will urge consumers to do their part by shopping for apparel and home furnishings made in the U.S. and encouraging local retailers to make more of these products available in stores.

The campaign is supported by the Council, Cotton Incorporated and The Cotton Foundation by a grant from Rhone-Poulenc Ag Company.

which are major competitors to U.S. cotton production. In fairness to U.S. cotton producers, I am seeking clarification of the Administration's negotiating strategy to ensure that West Texas cotton producers are not unduly harmed.

Even if negotiating agreements with new trading partners do result in lowering the barriers to trade, our own government-imposed regulations add to the cost of business and the price of U.S. products. For example, China has landed peanuts here in the U.S. at ten cents per pound below the cost of production. To rural communities, such as Gaines County, who are unable to recover from the full weight of China's exports, the threat of millions of pounds is hardly peanuts.

The pressure will be on our negotiators to obtain the type of deal that will gain favorable approval from the Congress. "Fast track" does not commit Congress to accepting whatever is negotiated by the Administration. If that trade deal is not acceptable, Congress can disapprove the agreement with a straight up-or-down vote.

I want to see what agreements end up on paper when our negotiators talk with Mexico and with GATT-member countries before I am satisfied with these proposed free trade initiatives. Without a doubt, I am a strong supporter of increased trade opportunities and recognize the benefits brought about by successful completion of these trade negotiations. However, the agreement for free trade must be a fair deal, or it will be on a fast track to nowhere.

Water Saving Tips

Drip! Drip! Drip! If you have a leaky toilet, the cost to you is much more than just a drop in the bucket.

Your leaky toilet may be wasting as much as 78,000 gallons of water a year!

Did you know that:

- A single leaky toilet can waste as much as 78,000 gallons a year.
 - That amount of wasted water is literally a lot of money down the drain. In one East Coast city, at $2.45 per thousand gallons, it would mean that this leak costs $191.10.
 - Researchers from the University of Illinois have found that 45 percent of all residential water is flushed down the drain. In fact, the average toilet uses five to seven gallons of water per flush.
- Fortunately, it's possible to curtail the amount of water your toilet uses by 15 to 40 percent. A Flusher Fixer Kit, from Fluidmaster, for example, can be adjusted for the most water-saving flush duration. This not only saves water, but money as well. If you're not sure whether your toilet has a leak, a free leak detector packet is available at many local home center and hardware stores.
