TUESDAY, NOV. 2 ELECTION DAY!

Again we want to remind everyone that Tuesday, Nov. 2 is Election Day. It should be a National Holiday. But as it isn't we are asking everyone to make it a holiday and go and vote and see that your neighbor votes. Let us show Joe Stalin that the majority rules in this country and not the minority. You will notice that we are not even mentioning which party to vote for or which candidate. What we want is for everyone to go to the polls and vote, when you get there you can vote as you please. That's more than they can do over in Russia. Like we said a few weeks ago, get yourself a sample ballot and study over the list of candidates and don't forget the amendments. If you do this you will be informed in advance and can vote intelligently.

Hope High School Basketball

By Luke Toyobo High School Coach

Seventeen boys have been reporting for basketball practice for the past two weeks to Luke Toyobo, high school basketball coach. The first game of the season will be on Friday night, Nov. 5, with Lake Arthur, here at Hope. The high school basketball squad will be divided into A and B squads this year with both teams playing a regular schedule. There will be two games on Nov. 5 with Lake Arthur, the B teams playing at 7 p. m. and the A team at 8 p. m.

The following boys have been reporting for practice: Alvin Melton, Kent Terry, W. G. Madron, Junior Newsom, Linn Harrison, Glenn Harrison, Thomas Harrison, Clarence Forrester, Baine McGuire, Dale Young, Harvey Taylor, Ray Jones, Jack Raley, Tommy Joy, Raleigh Newbill, Eugene Bates and Eddie Tunnell.

Running on the "A" team in early season practice have been Alvin Melton, Kent Terry, W. G. Madron, Linn Harrison and Junior Newsom. Of this starting five we have one senior, Junior Newsom, one junior, Alvin Melton and three freshmen, K. Terry, W. G. Madron and Linn Harrison. Running on the A team as alternates and indicating that they are out to make the A team are Glenn Harrison, Thomas Harrison and Clarence Forrester. These boys have been looking good in practice but they will be handicapped by inexperience and size.

Running on the B team have been Harvey Taylor, Eddie Tunnell, Ray Jones, Dale Young and Blaine McGuire. The B team has shown a lot of promise and after gaining some experience they should develop into a smooth working five. Blaine McGuire, Ray Jones and Harvey Taylor have been looking very good and showing a lot of promise.

The Yellowjackets will play a 25-game schedule with a few of the dates still tentative.

The schedule is as follows:

Friday, Nov. 5, Lake Arthur, here, A and B teams.
Friday, Nov. 19, Weed, here, A and B teams.

Senior News—The seniors are ordering play books. We hope to have the performance before Christmas. Monday night the seniors had a chicken supper at Youngs. We played games afterward and then ate watermelon. We had a nice time.

7th and 8th Grade News—The party given by Tootsie and Robert Wood was very much enjoyed by every one Monday night. We want to thank Tootsie and Robert's aunt, Miss Edna Wood, for helping us have a nice time. Babe Ann McElroy won the prize for the tackiest person there. The prize was a baby rattle. We want to thank Mr. Lipsett for letting us out the third and fourth period for 2 days. We were glad we didn't have to stay in the study hall. Jerry Dugman has been absent from school several days. We have no excuse for him. Barbara was absent from school Tuesday. Edward Madron, J. C. Blakney and David Sanders have been absent from school during this last week.

5th and 6th Grade News—Patsy Weisl returned from her trip to Oklahoma. We are glad to have her back again. Both grades have finished their readers. We will get our new books Monday. Most of the boys are getting ready to play basketball this week. There are still a few who have to stay in and study during Physical Education period because their grades are low. Mrs. Lipsett surprised us with a Halloween party Tuesday afternoon.

Third and Fourth Grade News—Betty Madron celebrated her 8th birthday last Wednesday. She was pleasantly surprised when her mother, Mrs. Bill Madron, walked into our school room with a birthday cake, pop and lollipops. Each of us signed our name on a birthday card for Betty. Then we sang "Happy Birthday." We have completed our first health books and now we are reviewing them for tests. We have been studying clothing and the different materials from which our clothes are made. Barbara Seeley made us a chart with samples of cloth on it. We are weaving a doll rug. Melissa Mae Jones is teaching the other pupils how to weave. We have cut up old hose and are learning to crochet a chain from them. Jackie Stephens and Gary Crockett are teaching the pupils to crochet on a spool. Exa Ann Teel was absent from school last Friday. She went with her mother, Mrs. Maurice Teel to visit Mrs. Martha Miller at Las Vegas. We surely did enjoy the nice Halloween party that Mrs. Floyd Greene and Mrs. Bill Jones gave us Tuesday afternoon. They served each of us with Halloween cake, cookies, pop, candy and ice cream. Many, many thanks to them for remembering us.

1st and 2nd Grade News—What a gay time our sweet tooth has had the past week. 44 cookie men came to school with Floyd and only two went home with him (in his stomach). It was hard to tell which were the better—the white or the pink men. Mrs. Jones really knows what we like. Another day 88 lemon drops came to school with Marie Cogburn. They all disappeared during the story hour. Maybe they don't like stories as well as we do. And on Tuesday Wendell Crockett and Bary Teel's mothers gave us the most wonderful Halloween party with orange baskets full of black and orange candies, orange and black cookies and colored pops. But you know a bunch of ghosts and goblins ate them all up (we were the ghosts and goblins). We think Halloween parties are grand. Tuesday must have been our big day. The first grade finished another book, the 2nd grade wrote to 1000, we saw a picture show of "Little Black Sambo". Mrs. Jones came to see our art exhibit and "Pie-dough" Jones came to find out why little boys go off and leave their pets every day. Things are very exciting at school. We don't dare stay home because we might miss a lot of fun.

True Wisdom

Lesson for October 31, 1948

WHAT is the most important thing in the world? What is worth more than anything else? Some would say Money; some Power; some Goodness; some Truth. Another answer is given by the writers of a group of books, two of which are included in our Bible. "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom," they say.

The books of Proverbs and Ecclesiastes in our Protestant Bible, and the books of Ecclesiasticus and the Wisdom of Solomon in the Apocrypha, all have this viewpoint and are therefore called the Wisdom Literature.

Other writers in the Bible divide the human race into the Good and the Wicked, or the Believers and the Unbelievers; but these writers see mankind as the Wise and the Foolish. The books they wrote (especially Proverbs) were intended particularly for those who are so far neither foolish nor wise—that is to say, the young.

Knowledge Is Not Wisdom

WISDOM (as these writers use the word) is not the same thing as knowledge. A person may know a great many things and still be a fool. Or he may not even know how to read and write, and yet be wise. Some modern writer has said: Knowledge is knowing what to do; skill is knowing how to do it; and virtue is doing it. Wisdom is all of these put together.

But the special feature of the "Wisdom Writers" is this: True wisdom begins with the fear of God. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom . . . the knowledge of God is understanding." In other words, wisdom without religion, without faith, is foolish after all.

We can see how in our times the story of the Nazis has shown this once more to be true. The German Reich of 1933-1939 had the best of the science of the world; they had scholarship and wealth and "know-how" in many fields; but they rejected God and defied his church—and so a nation was destroyed.

We too may profit by their example. We of the western nations have wealth and technical skills beyond any other peoples, we have the atom bombs—but have we the wisdom without which all these things are but as torches in the hands of madmen?

University on Ant-Hill

KNOWLEDGE may be expensive. It costs a great deal of money to know what it takes to be an engineer or a surgeon. Wisdom, strange to say, is less expensive. Consider where the "Wisdom Writers" tell us we may learn wisdom. One place is experience. "Experience keeps an expensive school, but fools will learn in no other—and hardly from that," says a more modern proverb.

Many of the proverbs in our Bible are simply distilled drops of experience. "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger," for example. Do you need an angel from the sky to tell you that? Another source of wisdom is just Nature herself. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard (lazy fellow); consider her ways and be wise." A lazy man is a fool; but how shall he learn to be wise? Not by reading books—just by watching the ants.

Some people think that Inspiration is always mysterious, and that the Holy Spirit would not stoop to inspire what we could learn in any ordinary way. But the Christian church, when it declares Proverbs (for example) inspired, expresses her belief that there is such a thing as Inspired Common Sense.

God may speak to us, and does speak—if we will listen—in the advice of our parents, in our everyday experiences, in the hard-working ant and the majesty of the soaring eagle. All truth is God's truth, even when we find it in our own backyard.

Government Predicts High Incomes for 1949

Noting that personal incomes set a record this year, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported that 1949 incomes should be just as high, even though they might slip a bit toward the end of the year. The bureau also foresaw a continued boom in employment.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve board said the buying power of the nation's farmers was now more than twice what it was before the war.

It estimated that 10 per cent fewer persons were working on farms at the end of 1947 than before the war, while non-farm population had risen nearly 20 per cent since 1937.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Get The Truth!

Called on my good friend "Cappy" Miller, who edits the County Bee, the other day. And hanging up on the wall of Cappy's office is this slogan for his paper:

"Remember there are two sides to every question. Get both sides. Be truthful."

A good slogan... not just for a newspaper—for people, too. Because there'll always be two sides to every question: the side of those who vote one way, and those who vote another—the side of those who enjoy a temperate beverage like beer or ale, and of those who swear by nothing but cider.

And from where I sit, once you've got both sides—and faced them truthfully, you realize that these differences of opinion are a precious part of what we call Democracy—the right of the individual to vote as he believes, to speak his mind, to choose his own beverage of moderation, whether beer or cider.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Proposes Moscow Mission, Rocks Foundation of U. S. Policy; Russ Ask Big Four Parley Renewal

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Bi-partisan unity in the U. S. was grievously wounded by the knife-edged Berlin crisis when, on the one hand, President Truman called a private conference with Under Secretary of State Robert Lovett and Secretary of State George Marshall to mull over the situation . . .

. . . and, on the other hand, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey summoned his foreign affairs advisor, John Foster Dulles, from Paris to find out for himself what was going on in Europe.

DIPLOMACY: Trip Canceled

To President Truman, for engineering the abortive deal to send Chief Justice Fred Vinson to Moscow for personal talks with Kremlin leaders on the atomic bomb, went the credit for producing the most heroically proportioned diplomatic faux pas of the year.

It happened very swiftly and very simply. Mr. Truman deciding suddenly to try his own hand at straightening out the tangled foreign mess, started making preparations to send Vinson to Russia.

THEN the state department heard about it. Robert Lovett, under-secretary of state, profoundly shocked, notified George Marshall who came winging frantically across the Atlantic from Paris to stop the President from committing what he considered a blunder of immense gravity.

The Vinson trip was called off, of course, and President Truman backed hastily away from the whole business after issuing an abashed note of explanation.

BUT THE memories lingered on. Mr. Truman, in the minds of those who knew or thought they knew about the international situation, had gone completely beyond the pale with this momentary, headstrong effort.

His campaign opponent, Gov. Thomas Dewey, at first wavered between righteous anger at what he obviously considered a deliberate flouting of the established bi-partisan foreign policy and elation that the Democratic candidate had made such a grievous tactical error.

And although the Dewey camp was astute enough to realize that its cause would benefit more if it magnanimously ignored the affair than if it leaped in for the slaughter, it nevertheless redounds to the New York governor's credit that he did not take advantage of this internationally dangerous situation for his personal gain.

Significance

Why was President Truman so widely and thoroughly castigated for making what he undoubtedly looked upon as a sincere, constructive attempt to clear up the Russians' "misunderstanding" of the problem of atomic control?

Because his intention of sending Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow represented a serious divergence from the basic characteristic of U. S. foreign policy—toughness with Russia.

MR. TRUMAN'S proposal amounted to a softening up of the laboriously built "get tough" attitude of the U. S. toward Moscow. It was tantamount to saying in a pleading voice, "Let's get together once more and try to talk this thing out."

Current history has proved that the kind of personal diplomacy the President sought to institute in the Vinson trip has been completely unavailing in dealing with Russia since the war. Moreover, insofar as personal diplomacy always tends to bypass the United Nations, it usually has an ill effect on international relations in general.

IN THE final analysis, a personal visit to the Kremlin by Vinson probably would have upset the entire, carefully fabricated structure of the policy upon which the U. S. is depending to defeat Russia's aims in Europe.

ANYTHING NEW? What, No War?

Answers to the question "Does Russia want war?" are a drug on the market, in informed and uninformed circles alike, but now and then someone comes up with a reply that is a little more imaginative than most.

ONE OF this kind has been furnished by an experienced professional diplomat—necessarily anonymous lest his identity become known to the Russians—who is attending the U. N. meetings in Paris. He said:

"There will be no war soon. The reason is that Stalin, the head of the peace party, has just had Andrei Zhdanov, the head of the war party, murdered."

(Zhdanov, who died several weeks ago, was one of the ranking members of the politburo where he was almost on a par with Molotov in power and influence. He had been talked of as a possible successor to Stalin. His demise was mourned with parades, pageantry and ostentation by Stalin, the boys in the Kremlin and the Russian people.)

"HE (ZHDANOV) urged immediate war. He argued that if Russia was defeated militarily she would win politically, since the resulting horror and chaos would cause a new, irresistible wave of communism."

"As long as Zhdanov was successful, Stalin gave him his head. When he failed in Yugoslavia, Stalin told him to lay off. Zhdanov defied the Soviet generalissimo. So Stalin got his head."

"This means that Stalin's waiting tactics have prevailed. There will be no war soon."

BIG FOUR: Come Again

While the U. S. state department was exerting all its influence to prevent a return to direct negotiations with Russia at this time, the Soviets were hammering away at the opposite course of action by demanding that Big Four discussions of the Berlin issue be resumed.

THE TWO viewpoints, starkly emphasized by the reception Mr. Truman's futile mission-to-Moscow idea received in the U. S., revealed with extreme clarity the broad gap now separating the East and West.

Russia's demand wasn't new. It was a repetition of Moscow's now well-established tactics in East-West relations. What the Soviets wanted was simply that the Berlin question be removed from the agenda of the U. N. security council and that discussions among the Big Four be resumed where they were severed last August in Moscow.

Andrei Y. Vishinsky, deputy Soviet foreign minister, handed a note to that effect to Juan A. Bramuglia of Argentina, acting president of the security council, who separately informed the U. S., British and French delegations.

IT WAS all wasted effort as far as the western powers were concerned. Neither the U. S., Britain, nor France wanted to get within shouting distance of direct negotiations with the Russians at this point.

One western spokesman commented simply, "The Russian reply is unhelpful." The Soviets, again, were making no concession to peace.

CHURCHILL: Grim Accents

At the British Conservative party's annual convention in Llanudno, Wales, Winston Churchill, never a man to deal in flimsy optimism when the going was tough, talked in grim accents about the world's peril.

HE WAS the old pre-war, no-appeasement Churchill as he warned against letting any French breach appear in the line of western resistance to Soviet drives.

To the United States he said, in effect: Keep those atomic bombs. Destruction of the U. S. atomic arsenal now would be tantamount to suicide.

"If it were not for the stocks of atomic bombs now in the trusteeship of the United States there would be no means of stopping the subjugation of western Europe by Communist machinations backed by Russian armies and enforced by political parties.

"BOLSHEVIK Russia is already heavily armed and her forces in Europe far exceed those of all the western countries put together. At the present time the only sure foundation of peace—and the prevention of actual war—rests upon strength.

He urged the West to "bring matters to a head and make a final settlement" before Russia produces a usable bomb.

Such a settlement, according to the view of the wartime British prime minister, could be arrived at only after the Russians had released their grip on satellite states, released the German and Japanese prisoners they "now hold as slaves," ceased to "oppress, torment and exploit" those parts of Austria and Germany they hold and called a halt to disruptive operations elsewhere in the world.

BUT CHURCHILL would not be a party to issuing any "false hopes of a friendly settlement with Soviet Russia." Actually, he said, the Berlin blockade may precipitate a war at any time.

ALIENS: On the Job

The U. S. is hiring scores of aliens, many of them in countries behind the iron curtain, to staff its 27-million-dollar international information program.

Leland J. Barrows, deputy director of the state department's office of information and education, told the senate appropriations committee that the department planned to add 278 aliens and 60 Americans to overseas duty by the end of the 1948 fiscal year.

WHAT WILL they do? Barrows said that the aliens—14 of whom will be added to the American embassy in Moscow—would be used primarily as translators, clerks, messengers and in other work associated with the U. S. foreign information program.

Testimony before the committee showed that the state department gained the committee's reluctant approval of its foreign-hiring plan, despite the objections of Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N.H.) who contended that it would provide a fertile field for Communist infiltration into government functions.

GEORGE V. ALLEN, assistant secretary of state, countered that there were certain jobs that had to be performed overseas that could best be done by aliens.

He said aliens could be employed much cheaper for certain tasks where they can be watched fairly easily, even though Americans may suspect their loyalty.

This departure from the norm in the business of hiring federal employees was a new wrinkle in the government that very probably will be attracting considerable public attention within the next few months.

Reverse Russian

Constantine Boldyreff is a man who wants to take the classic Communist concept of the necessity of revolution and apply it to Russia itself. Claiming to represent a world-wide Russian anti-Communist organization dedicated to the overthrow of the Stalin regime, Boldyreff believes that the great mass of Russia's 167 million people are ready for revolt.

Community Nests for Poultry House Advised

Installation Decreases Number of Dirty Eggs

Taking cognizance of the premium prices paid for clean eggs on the market, poultrymen with large laying flocks are giving increased attention to installation of community nests.

Dirty eggs brought 15 cents less a dozen than clean eggs when sold through Ohio cooperative eggs auctions in June, D. D. Moyer, specialist in poultry husbandry at Ohio State university, points out, adding that the owner of a large laying flock either has to take a cut in price, spend almost as much time cleaning eggs as in all other care of the laying flock or change the poultry house equipment to reduce the number of dirty eggs gathered.

Installation of community nests in place of the small box type will decrease the number of dirty eggs by 50 per cent, Moyer claims. They are easier to clean and can be kept free from parasites more easily than the ordinary little cubicles. Original construction cost also is considerably less than that of an equal amount of nesting space of the old type inasmuch as less labor and material are required.

The community nest recommended by the Ohio station is 8 feet long, 2 feet wide, 14 inches high in front and 30 inches high in back. The space is divided in the center so there are 2 4-foot compartments in the nest, providing facilities for 80 to 100 laying hens. The front half of the nest cover is hinged so it can be lifted for gathering eggs. The bottom of the nest can be hinged so it will swing down to dump the nest litter. Hens enter the front of the nest in the center of each compartment.

Materials required for construction include: 9 pieces of 1-inch by 8-inch by 8-inch for lid, front bottom ends and partition; 5 pieces of 1-inch by 10-inch by 8-inch for lid and back; 1 piece of 1-inch by 6-inch by 8-inch for lower front board; 4 pieces of 1-inch by 4-inch by 8-inch for cleats, nest perch and entrance lids; 1 piece of 1-inch by 2-inch by 8-inch for cleats for the ends and partition; 1 piece of 1-inch by 4-inch by 10-inch for bottom supports, with the piece beveled at the ends if hinged; 3 pairs of 8-inch strap hinges, and 3 8-inch hooks and screw eyes if the bottom is hinged.

WANTED: One Home

If a flock of Leghorn hens were to go househunting, they would look for just about the same comforts as their human prototypes.

Sufficient space, good ventilation, uniform temperatures, a sturdy foundation and floors are a few of the recommendations for housing the birds, according to suggestions in a revised extension bulletin on "Poultry Housing" issued by the University of Minnesota.

Like all construction, building a poultry house is an expensive proposition. As it is difficult to correct mistakes after the building is up, flock owners are advised to consider their problem and needs carefully before starting construction.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Plan to Bake Once a Week
(See Recipes Below)

Simplify Baking

WHILE OUR MOTHERS and grandmothers had more to do than those of us who are homemakers, they somehow managed to find an afternoon a week in which to fill the house with fragrant and delicious odors from the oven with weekly baking.

To me, this was one of the most delightful times in the whole week because then I, too, could get my hands into pie crust or sweet roll dough. It was great sport!

But, naturally, this was not the only blessing that came from weekly baking. We usually had delicious homemade bread as well as rolls or coffee cake for breakfast. To save time, the dinner for that evening was usually a baked one, a fragrant meat loaf or taste-tempting casserole with a delicious baked pudding for dessert. Then, too, the cookies jar was filled for the best part of the week, and that meant cookies for the lunch boxes and more delicious tidbits when we came home from school!

Are your families missing these treats? Then organize the household schedule at once so that you can bake once a week, and fill the larder with such delicious things as can only come from home baking.

But how can you make all these things in one day? Here's how: mix cookie dough and store in refrigerator; make ice box dough for sweet rolls, and store this, too. Bread dough can be mixed in the morning; or, if you are making quick breads, these can be mixed in a few minutes right after lunch.

You can plan the baking for any day of the week. We usually do it Friday or Saturday afternoon, so there will be a cake or pie in the house for Sunday, and, of course, bread, rolls and cookies for the whole week.

IT MAY SOUND ambitious to attempt all this in one day, but it really isn't once you get into the swing of it. Do all you can the evening before, and keep on hand such things as piecrust and biscuit mix. Refrigerator cookies, too, take no time at all to bake, and they're easily mixed ahead of time.

Refrigerator Rolls. (Makes 12-16)

- 1 cup milk
- 3 tablespoons shortening
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 yeast cake
- 1 egg
- 2 1/4 to 3 cups flour

Scald milk and in it dissolve shortening, sugar and salt. When mixture is warm add yeast cake, crumbled, and the egg. Add flour gradually and mix thoroughly by beating. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Place a piece of waxed paper over the bowl and hold securely with a rubber band. Store in refrigerator until ready to use.

This refrigerator dough may be used for cloverleaf rolls, cinnamon braid, fruit filled rings or pecan rolls.

 - 1 teaspoon caraway seeds, if desired
 - 1 yeast cake
 - 6 cups all-purpose flour

Let rise until doubled in bulk, about one hour. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for 10 minutes, reduce heat to 300 degrees and bake for 45 minutes.

 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 - 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
 - 1 cup mashed banana
 - 1/4 cup milk
- Cream shortening until fluffy, add sugar a little at a time, creaming after each addition. Stir in vanilla extract; add eggs and beat well. Sift all dry ingredients and add to shortening mixture alternately with mashed banana and milk. Pour batter into a well greased, heat-resistant square glass cake dish, eight-inch size. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 45 to 50 minutes. Remove from oven and let cool before spreading with the following icing:

- 3 tablespoons shortening
 - 1 1/4 cups confectioners' sugar
 - 2 tablespoons lemon juice
 - 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- Cream shortening; add confectioners' sugar and lemon juice, beating until fluffy. Add lemon rind if desired. Spread on cool cake.

Peppertree Inn By JEAN RANDALL

SYNOPSIS The loss of their family fortune, as a result of unwise property investments and the burden of the father's protracted illness, is accepted stoically by the Bristol family, including Professor Bristol, an invalid archeologist; his motherless daughter, Rosemary, and Simmons, a family "fixtured" for many years. The only property salvaged from the wreck of their fortune is Peppertree Inn, a hotel in Southern California. Rosemary is delighted with the prospect of running the hotel and with a move which will benefit her father's health. She jubilantly imparts the information to Kent Standish, her sweetheart since childhood days.

CHAPTER II

"But everything isn't all right, Kent. Far from it. We're practically paupers, it seems." Rosemary told him briefly but with many italics in her voice of the interview with the Professor.

"Don't give it a thought—money, I mean. I have enough for us all—the Professor and Simmons too, of course."

She raised her dark eyebrows. "We still have our pride, you know," she reminded him. "Besides, I've thought of a perfectly dandy way for us to make money. It's an inn."

"What's an inn?" "The hotel we own in California. I haven't had time to ask Simmons just what town it's in, but I will next chance I get. We're going out and run it, you see."

"No, you're not. You're not going anywhere, Rosemary, except where I take you. It's high time we got married. We've been engaged for months—"

She thought about this. "No, I don't think so, Kent. You've never asked me to marry you, you know. You just said you loved me, and asked if I loved you—"

"What else do you want?" he exclaimed, outraged. "That constitutes an engagement. Anybody will tell you so. Now don't let's waste time, darling. The first thing to do is get married; then we can plan where we'll live and all."

She was plainly disappointed. "Oh, Kent, I did want to run that hotel. It has such a darling name—Peppertree Inn. I know I'd make a successful hostess—"

He swept her into his arms. "You're a nice guy, Kent," she murmured against his shoulder. "I didn't realize that I was feeling a bit low until we had this talk. Not about the hotel—I still think that would be heaps of fun; but about Dad. Suppose this awful arthritis doesn't stop with his legs—gets into his hands? He couldn't write—"

"It won't," he said comfortingly, "but if it did years and years from now, he could dictate."

"Of course! And Simmons would always do everything else for him. If it wasn't for Simmons I—you—"

"We wouldn't be married, you mean? Well, we needn't argue about that because there is Simmons, Heaven bless him. Where shall we go on our honeymoon?"

"Yes, where? You've been everywhere, it seems to me."

"I have to go—in a few minutes. Madre is waiting for me. Come on now—come on! When are we to be married and where shall we go? Hawaii? We might spend a month there—"

"It would cost a lot of money, Kent."

"Well, I've got lots of money. Or at least Madre has."

Kent's Enthusiasm Troubles Rosemary

Rosemary freed herself. "Oughtn't you to be getting a job, Kent, if we're really going to be married?"

He grinned. "Why? Planning to be a mighty expensive wife?"

"No, I don't know. I don't think so. I've never paid much attention to what things cost. But men do get jobs when they're married. Before they're married, I should think."

"I have a job as it happens, only I haven't been able to work at it yet."

"What is it?"

"It's a sort of good will thing. You know my father's firm—Standish and Herriot—the fountain pen people. Dad always planned that I'd sort of travel about from one country to another where the firm has branch offices. That's why he had me specialize in languages. After he died, Madre kept up the good work by sending me around the world. So you see that if and when things get back to normal in the world, I'm all set. Like the idea? You'd always go with me, of course."

"Kent, honestly I think we'd better wait—till you get a job, I mean. Marriage is such an adult thing, or at least it ought to be. We shouldn't be depending on your mother for our income."

"But, Great Scott, Rosemary, it'll all be my money some day anyhow!

My father left scads. Madre's never kicked up any fuss about forking over. You know yourself what a sweet person she is."

"Yes, I know; but truly, Kent, that's not the point. I do think you should be working—earning a salary before we think of being married."

He grinned at her amiably. "What would you suggest? I've been trained for just one sort of thing. Want me to study bookkeeping, or take up clerking in a grocery store—something like that?"

"Have you ever talked to your mother about marrying?"

"No, but she knows how I feel about you. Haven't you been my girl since our dancing school days?"

"You must talk it over with your mother, Kent, truly you must."

"Planning to be a mighty expensive wife?"

You're her only son, her only child; you're all she has, and she's such a gentle little thing you have to be extra careful of her feelings."

"She's not so awfully gentle as you might think. That is, she is, of course, but you'd be surprised how hard it is to get her to change her mind once she's made it up."

"You mean about me? About your marrying me?"

"No, foolish. She's crazy about you. It's just that I've never talked to her about getting married and I never know how she's going to take things."

Madre's Conditions Shock Kent

Once again she was in his arms, once again his mouth sought hers. When the door closed behind him, she saw with surprise that her hands were shaking.

"Madre," said Kent insinuatingly, "got time to listen to your only child?"

"Always! Come in, dear." She dropped her book and put her head back against the silken pillows of the chaise-longue.

He drew a chair closer to her, took one of her hands in his and kissed it. "Smells like flowers," he told her. "Yes, I have got something rather extra special to tell you. Rosemary and I are engaged."

She laughed gently. "Do you imagine for a minute that's news to me, dear boy?"

"It seemed to be news to Rosemary." He joined in her laughter. "When I told her it was time for us to think of being married—Why, Madre, what's the matter?"

She sat up, pushing away her pillows. "Married, Kent? What nonsense, dear!"

He was nettled and showed it. "I wouldn't call it nonsense, Madre. Do you mind explaining why you do?"

"Cross with Madre, darling? Don't be." She patted his cheek with a soft hand. You just haven't thought far enough about this, that's all. How can you be married, Kent, when you haven't a position? When you can't support yourself, to say nothing of a wife?"

He stared at her in stupefied amazement.

"Is it necessary that I support anybody, dearest?" he asked.

"Of course it is, Kent. I know you've been chafing under your dependence on me. I've been dreading this talk for you because I can feel how it hurts you to tell your mother you know the time has come to start out for yourself. Don't mind it, darling. My boy is of course too much a man to go on living on money he hasn't earned." She lifted a hand to check his interruption. "It was different, of course, while you were being educated. It was part of my responsibility to prepare you in every possible way to look after yourself—and your wife, too, of course."

He took his whirling head into his hands.

"I never heard you talk like this before, Madre!"

"No. I'm talking to a man now, not just my son; a man who is thinking of marriage with a girl who—"

He jerked up his head, looked at her keenly. "Is it Rosemary? I mean, is there anything—You do like her, don't you?"

"Dear, you didn't let me finish. Marriage with a girl who deserves the best you can give her."

"That's better. Still... you must know jobs aren't to be picked off the nearest bush nowadays."

"Of course not. That's why I'm glad you have the training and the ambition to go far afield if necessary for your—bush."

"You mean—forget Dad's firm for the present?"

"Dear boy, I'm not presuming to give you advice. You have the equipment; you'll know better than I how to make use of it. Now let's not talk business any longer. Except just one thing more. Mr. Herriot is ready to give you any information you want about—well, finances. Your Madre isn't as blind as her boy might think. She's seen this coming, know that her big son was grown up in more than one way, and—well, Mr. Herriot will tell you. Kiss me, now, and then let's talk about Rosemary, sweet thing that she is! How is the Professor? When are you going to bring your girl here to dinner? When—"

The silvery voice went on and he supposed he must have given the right answers to her questions. When he left her half an hour later he was far too confused to think.

When he called Rosemary, he told her he would not see her that evening.

"Something's come up. Just a little matter of business which I think I'd better settle right away."

"Nothing wrong, Kent?" Her voice held a worried note.

"N-no. No, of course not. It's just that I had a talk with Madre and she said—"

"Oh, Kent! She—objects?"

"No, you darling goose. You do get the funniest ideas. Madre's simply tickled pink about you—about us; but it seems that I'm a big boy now, all grown up and everything. I'm to see Herriot tomorrow."

"Kent, how grand! That means you're to be taken into the firm, of course. But you won't see him tonight, will you? Why don't you run out and tell me about things?"

"Well—Rosemary, I think I'd better not. I sort of get to planning, you know, and I guess I ought to know exactly where I stand before I see you again. You sound all in," he said. "Scoot along to bed and rest up for tomorrow. I'll be out early in the afternoon and we'll talk."

Partly reassured she took his advice and sought her room. There had been nothing startling in what the doctors had said. Professor Bristol was barred from walking; otherwise he was doing nicely.

It was only when she thought of Kent that the girl felt uneasy. Not that she really was apprehensive over his mother's attitude. It was just—well, Kent seemed different when he telephoned; worried, if Kent could be worried.

Rosemary Admits Plan Is Sound

At four o'clock the next afternoon an harassed but determined young man took Rosemary in his arms and kissed her firmly.

"There's the very devil to pay, darling," he told her. "I knew it! I knew when you called me last night that something was terribly wrong. Tell me at once, Kent! Is it your mother? Somehow I've the feeling that it's your mother—"

"It's Madre all right but not the way you mean." He pulled her down beside him on the couch and put his arm around her. "I told her yesterday—about us, you know—and she—"

"She objected?"

"Keep your head against my shoulder, darling. It helps me to explain this confounded situation to you. No, indeed she didn't object to our being married. She's strong for it—under certain conditions."

"I see! It's the right marriage but the wrong girl. I—"

"Just looking for trouble, aren't you? You know perfectly well Madre thinks the world of you. She told me so yesterday. But she thinks I should be able to earn my own living before I attempt to earn yours."

"Well, that seems reasonable, Kent."
