Work of building a new bridge over Eagle Draw started in earnest Monday morning, with a large crew of men employed. The old bridge is being torn down and will be moved elsewhere possibly. Excavating for the abutments is now in progress. In about six weeks we may be crossing Eagle Draw on a new bridge. Don't that give you a grand and glorious feeling?

JOHN E. MILES

"I seek the support of New Mexico voters in this campaign on the basis of my lifelong interest in the future of our state. I have been fortunate enough to gain a broad understanding of New Mexico's needs and potentialities. I sincerely believe that my knowledge of the state and my experience in the service of its people will enable me to make you a good Governor."

Vote Ja, Vote Da

Adolf Hitler pulled off an election coup in March 1936. His black-clad storm troopers strong-armed 98.8 per cent of the German electorate into voting for the Nazi party list in a single-ticket Reichstag election. Last week the Kremlin's hirelings outdid Hitler, smashed his 14-year-old record, all but completed the job of making the Russian zone of Germany a vestpocket Soviet state and posed a major question for the U.S. and the West: What will Stalin try next in Germany?

As the Nazis had done in 1936, the Communists used threats and "storm troopers" (blue-shirted young toughs) to get out the vote in their trumped-up election. Voting was no trick at all. Each voter presented an identification card, got a ballot containing a single list of Communist-endorsed candidates for the Volkskammer (People's Chamber) or Parliament. Dropped in the ballot box, it was a vote for the party line. An opposition vote required writing-in and in the closely watched polling places that was a risky business.

In less time than it takes to count the votes in a small American city, the Communies announced the result, undoubtedly tabulated weeks in advance. They claimed that 98 per cent of more than 12 million eligibles voted and gave the National Front (Communists and Moscow-blessed fellow-travelers) 99.71 per cent of the total. Carrying on the farce, the Communistly announced that only 35,544 had voted against the party.—rather.

After reading the above article each and every citizen should realize the importance of voting in a free country. Here each voter goes to the polls and votes as they please. But the big trouble here is to get the people out to vote. We don't take it seriously enough.

Two years ago, only 52 per cent of the voters took the trouble to cast their ballots, a poor record when contrasted with other countries. In the last national elections held in Sweden, 82 per cent of the voting population went to the polls. The turnout in France and Italy exceeded 80 per cent. In Great Britain it was 76 per cent and in Canada, 74 per cent.

Every two years the newspapers of this country prints column after column urging people to go to the polls and vote. Whether it is that people don't read newspapers or what, but it is a fact that we take less interest in elections than any other place that we know of. A large turnout at the polls is the most effective answer free citizens can hurl at those who would enslave them. Please remember the date Tuesday, Nov. 7.

"Success—The American Way" . . . Finn Haakon Magnus arrived in America with only two dollars. Today he is many times a millionaire. He tells the secret of his success. Don't miss his story. It will appear in The American Weekly, that great magazine distributed with next Sunday's Los Angeles Examiner.

It Won't Be Long Now

Time will soon be here when every voter in New Mexico will be called upon to cast his ballot. Wonder just how many of us have already secured a sample ballot and have begun to study all of the candidates and their qualifications to hold the offices for which they have announced. The main question that should confront every voter when he gets ready to mark his ballot is whether the candidate is qualified to fill the office. Too many times the person elected to an office has no more business holding the office than the man in the moon. It is not a question of what the candidate promises but what will he be able to do. It he capable of filling the office with intelligence and dignity?

I have been listening to several candidates for State offices as they have been playing up the demerits of their opponents but have said very little about their own qualifications. I heard one candidate say that he was running against the Democrats because of the condition they had got the country in. This man had never stopped to think that the country is in the best economic condition that it has ever been. True we have high taxes but we have the money to pay them with. With few exceptions the people are getting along better than ever before. Such argument as the candidate was making will do more for his opponent than for himself. I think every citizen should study the character and qualifications of all the candidates and then vote FOR someone instead of AGAINST someone.—Lloyd P. Bloodworth in the Ruidoso News.

Rodges Urges Voters To Go to Polls

Democratic state chairman Ray Rodges called upon party leaders and members to work hard to get the vote out in the coming election.

Keeping in mind that the campaign has been hard-fought but largely unexciting, Rodges reminded that only the votes count which get to the polling places.

"The record shows that the vast majority of the public is Democratic," he said, "and if the people come out and vote we will come through this election with a very big majority."

"However, we must always bear this in mind, lethargy and indifference have lost many battles which rightfully should have been won and we can not afford to let down the rest on past laurels."

"I call upon every party leader and every party worker to put forth his best efforts that we may all participate in one of our state's most outstanding Democratic victories."

Miles Gains in State Tour

Nearing the end of a state-wide campaign tour, John E. Miles, Democratic candidate for governor, joined other candidates on the state ticket, together with Senators Clinton P. Anderson and Dennis Chavez, for a rally in Albuquerque to mark the final speaking engagement and public event in the 1950 campaign.

The public speaking events have drawn large audiences and lively welcomes were extended the touring parties in every town visited.

Campaigning on his record as a former governor and the Democratic history of progress during the past 20 years, Rep. Miles won instant acceptance among the voters during his tour. County chairmen and other organization leaders report that highly satisfactory vote-gains have been made throughout the state.

"Most people did not need to be reminded of the popular record attained by John Miles during his terms as governor," one prominent east side county chairman said. "We who have lived in New Mexico for several years and have enjoyed the benefits of better schools, fine highways and the practical application of progressive legislation secured by Gov. Miles, will certainly vote to continue the march of progress and the assurance of the kind of prosperity we have enjoyed in the past under Democratic administrations," he declared.

Walace Box of Artesia, Noah Buck of Cottonwood, Joe Torres of Artesia, Pilar Ordunez and Mrs. A. A. Smith of Hope returned Saturday from a business trip to Estancia Valley and Albuquerque.

Your Day of Decision

(EDITORIAL)

Time is running out on the 1950 general election campaign with only brief days remaining before the citizenry of New Mexico parade to the polls. These are the days of decision when voters must carefully examine the issues, or lack of issues, presented by both parties and be prepared to cast their ballot with intelligence.

The people of New Mexico must not fail to give serious consideration to this 1950 election. The ballot box stands between a free people and enslavement. The right to vote is the strongest defense against enslavement. Few people will deny this, yet huge numbers of Americans, who regard themselves as patriotic citizens fail to take advantage of their greatest privilege. In local elections it has been recorded that less than half of the eligible voters go to the polling booths, and even in national elections, in which men are running for the highest offices and in which the issues and principals of the utmost moment are at stake, millions of us simply ydon't take the trouble to vote.

The result, of course is government by a minority, there is no way to measure the views and opinions of the man who fails to exercise the right of franchise. Government of the people is possible only when the people make their stand known and that can only be done at the ballot box.

Nov. 7 will mark another election of great importance. The control of Congress will be decided. The Presidential campaign of 1952 will be strongly influenced by what happens in November. Policies which will determine the future of the nation, for good or ill, will be established.

In New Mexico the election has a very definite bearing upon the future of the state. Under the leadership of John E. Miles, candidate for governor, the Democratic ticket offers the voters public servants of long experience and the assurance that progress and prosperity will continue just as it has grown and developed under the Democratic banner for the past 20 years.

Don't seal the importance of this election short. Your one vote DOES count.

First and Second Grades: The first grade is running right down the road in reading. We just finished another book and how we love to read in the new one. When we have completed it we will take our workbooks home and surprise our parents with some of the things we have been doing. We like to study sounds laso. We play games with them every day. And we are learning to take just 10 numbers and build a road to 1000.

We have had two parties and we really enjoyed them. Mrs. Harris surprised Peggy on her birthday and we kept the secret although it was very hard to do. Peggy had many presents and a big gold birthday cake that we ate with punch and ice cream. Mrs. Hunter brought Fredda and Joan while Charles McElroy helped Mrs. Harris bring Linda and Mary. We like birthdays very much.

Our Hallowe'en party was a lot of fun also. We made our own napkins, Mrs. Hardin sent the cutest pop corn balls colored orange and having features of chocolate. Mrs. Cain sent orange pops and we let Barbara and Helen be hostesses. We bobbed for apples and ate crackers from a string. Our squirrel gaskets were filled with nuts and we had more fun trying to do everything. We really enjoyed frightening the children in Mrs. Lea's room when we had our masks on.

3rd, 4th and 5th Grade News—What an exciting time we had at our Hallowe'en party on Tuesday afternoon in our school room. We enjoyed bobbing for apples in big pans of water an deach one came up with a clean face and an apple, too. Thanks to Mrs. Young for the apples which added much merriment to our party. We had a hilarious time trying to pin tails on the black cat while we were blindfolded. We had tails all over the wall and door. Betty Madron pinned the cat's tail the nearest in place and received a sack of orange candy which she passed out to all of the pupils and visitors. We want to say, "Thank You" to Mrs. Warren Nunnelee for bringing us grape punch and cookies, Mrs. John Bush for the individual cakes, Mrs. Curtis Wilson for the popcorn balls and Mrs. Lea for the orange punch. We played a guessing game while we ate our refreshments. Several girls remained after school and washed dishes and it will be the duty of the boys to wash dishes after the next party. On Wednesday, Betty Dawson surprised the pupils with chocolate mints. What an enjoyable week after a vacation last week.

6th, 7th and 8th Grade News—We were sorry to lose Tommy Gene and Patricia Perry who moved to Roswell this week end. Josephine Blakeney and Sue Rae Summers rearranged the room library. They put all the reference books in one book cabinet, the story books in another and the supplementary books in another. This arrangement has simplified the library work. Our bulletin board display this week reflects the Hallowe'en spirit by showing cats, witches and brooms and pumpkins. Johnny Woods i s out of school a few days because he i sill. We hope he is soon well and back in school. We had two and one-half days of vacation last week. Most of us spent these days helping mother and dad at home.—Sue Rae Summers, reporter.

Buying Feeder Pigs May Prove More Profitable

Hog raisers in the future may find it easier and more profitable to sell their sows and buy feeder pigs already weaned, wormed, castrated, deloused, vaccinated, and started on feed.

This is the long-range program of a Wisconsin farmer whose "pig hatchery" output cannot meet the demand of a long list of customers.

The Weix farm in Dane County, Wisconsin, produces a special kind of healthy, well-started weaning pig. According to hog farmers and livestock authorities at the Chicago market, this system has many advantages—among them saving of time in search of good boars and sows and their year-around maintenance. This eliminates time, work and risk in raising pigs from farrowing to weaning. It means cutting down on expensive housing and the elimination of guesswork about the kind of pigs that will result in the use of each new boar.

Unloading Corn

When a wagon box is full of corn it is not necessary to pick part of the load off before the balance can be shoveled. When loading the wagon start at the rear and when the box is partly filled put in a board at an angle, as shown in the illustration. When the wagon is being unloaded start shoveling down the board. It will not be necessary to either take out the end gate, or pick any of the corn off. The idea saves much time and labor.

As WASHCOTE has an allergy to wool blankets, you can often eliminate the itching by taking an extra sheet and tucking it both over and under the upper end of the blanket. This can be done even with a small sheet or half a sheet, as long as it extends three feet down from the upper end of the blanket both underneath and on top of it.

Truman-MacArthur Discuss Korea Reconstruction at Wake Meeting; Dewey Says He Won't Run in 1952

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS and not necessarily of this newspaper.

Talks Lock Something

On the hot, lonely little island of Wake in mid-Pacific, President Harry S. Truman and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, two men who have had much to do with world destiny in the last few years, had a talk. After it was over a statement was issued which said the two discussed a number of subjects vital to world problems. According to the press release they talked about reconstruction of Korea, the possibility of a Japanese peace treaty, and the general agreement to strive toward peace in unity with other U.N. nations.

The meeting was of great interest to the American public from another angle. MacArthur and Mr. Truman had never met and their conflicting views on a number of subjects had been reported in the press during recent months. Reports of the meeting indicated that MacArthur had only a general idea of the topics to be discussed when he was asked to meet the President. It was also reported that Truman conducted the talks from an agenda scribbled on a pad.

Observers believed these reports gave an indication of the how and why of the meeting. The President had a number of topics to discuss with the U.N. commander and he limited the talks to that agenda. It was also suggestive, some observers believed, that Mr. Truman was acting in his capacity as President and commander-in-chief and not as a man seeking advice. On the surface the meeting was cordial. In farewell, MacArthur said: "Good-by, sir. Happy landing. It has been a real honor to talk with you."

But the other MacArthur seemed revealed when he said good-by to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff: "Good-by, Omar. Don't let them get you down up there."

To the observer not so close to hand, the MacArthur-Truman meeting seemed to lack something, although no one has been able to say definitely just what.

DEWEY:

A Bombshell

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tossed a political bombshell upon the national scene by saying flatly he would not run for President in 1952 and would back Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the Republican nomination.

The governor had no more than made his statement when other liberal Republicans, including Harold Stassen, backed the move.

"Under no circumstances that I can conceive," Dewey said, "will I accept the nomination for President in 1952, and I doubt if there is any possibility the situation would arise thereafter."

The Democrats had nothing to say about Dewey's announcement. President Truman when informed of it was reported to have murmured "that's fine" and continued his swim in the Pacific.

A number of political figures, however, recalled that the governor said shortly before he announced for the third term as governor of New York, he would not be a candidate for that office again.

The last time Eisenhower mentioned politics he said he did not want to identify himself with any one political party. He added that "I have no political connections, no political ambitions, and don't want any connections with politics."

Headliners

"Firm action in Korea must not fall as into a sense of false security. What happened in Korea has set world peace on stronger foundations. There may be time to build up a European army with strong aid from Britain, the United States and Canada." Winston Churchill told a cheering mass rally of the Conservative party.

"As for myself, my convictions as to the place and methods through which I can best contribute something to the cause of freedom have been often expressed. They have not changed. Here at Columbia University I have a task that would excite the pride and challenge the qualifications and strength of any man. I still believe that it offers to such an individual as myself rich opportunities for serving." General Eisenhower said in answer to Thomas Dewey's suggestion he become the Republican candidate for president in 1952.

THE DRAFT:

Furthers in Line

National Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey, worried about where the men are coming from for the draft, announced he might ask the President to erase almost all draft dependency deferments except for fathers. Later he said he even favored taking some men with children.

Hershey said it might be necessary to take some fathers if the goal of three million men in the armed forces by next June was to be met.

Meanwhile 28,000 young physicians, dentists and veterinarians registered for a possible 24 months' military service. Of the total, 1,522 face induction by January 15 unless they volunteer first.

If there are too few volunteers the army will begin an induction program November 15 by taking 300 physicians, 300 dentists and 50 veterinarians. Another 222 doctors, 200 dentists and 50 veterinarians will be called by January 15.

All doctors through age 50 eventually must register, but the first group includes only those deferred during World War II to train at their own or government expense and saw less than 24 months' service.

Investigators

Sen. Estes Kefauver, chairman of the U.S. senate crime investigating committee, confers with chief counsel Rudolph Halley and his assistant, Alfred Klein. Kefauver's committee has revealed major crime syndicates in a number of U. S. cities.

ELECTION:

Duty to Vote

As the date of the national election nears, the American Heritage Foundation, the non-profit citizens' group that sponsored the Freedom Train, stepped up its campaign of turning out a large vote.

The foundation is sponsor of the contest in which prizes of historical papers are being awarded to communities, counties, and civic organizations doing the best job in turning out the vote.

The campaign was designed to combat widespread voter lethargy which in the presidential election of 1948 saw more than 45,000,000 of America's voting population fail to go to the polls.

Two years ago, only 52 per cent of the voters took the trouble to cast their ballots, a poor record when contrasted with other countries. In the last national elections held in Sweden, 82 per cent of the voting population went to the polls. The turnout in France and Italy exceeded 80 per cent. In Great Britain it was 78 per cent and in Canada, 74 per cent.

Thomas D'Arcy Brophy, foundation president, said in launching the contest: "In this year of crisis it is more necessary than ever before that every citizen of voting age vote. A large turnout at the polls is the most effective answer free citizens can hurl at those who would enslave them."

Soon after election day a three-man board of judges will start reviewing the efforts of various communities and organizations in raising the voting levels in their regions. The judges are Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, director of the central intelligence agency; Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric company, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

In 1948, Utah had the best voting record with 74.6 per cent going to the polls.

SECURITY ACT:

Confusion in Europe

The new U. S. internal security act threw Europe into a state of confusion that bordered on the fantastic. Hundreds of businessmen, artists, and tourists scheduled to sail for America suddenly found themselves without permits to enter this country as a result of the state department's order that all visas be cancelled.

The order required all visas be revalidated and hundreds of travelers, thousands of miles from home, were told they would have to return to their native lands to secure new permits.

The state department's action was taken under that section of the security law which says no visas will be issued to persons who are now, or ever have been, members of the Communist, Nazi or Fascist parties, or affiliated with any of their organizations or subdivisions.

There was further confusion in that there was no ruling on the problem of eligibility for visitors or immigrants from Spain or Argentina, both of which have been mentioned as governments to which the anti-totalitarian ban might be applied.

Businessmen and manufacturers complained that the ban injured U.S.-German trade by keeping out businessmen already checked by allied authorities. About 90 per cent of all Germans are believed to have been members of Nazi organizations either by choice or compulsion.

The standing joke of Europe, seen in newspapers and on posters, read: "Visit America and see Ellis Island."

MOBILIZATION:

A Fight for Survival

A new cry for an all-out effort in the fight for survival was made by W. Stuart Symington, economic mobilizer. He called for higher taxes, stiffer curbs on credit and longer working hours.

He reported his agency is now getting organized for such price and wage action as may be needed, but hastened to add he believed it might be possible to avoid general price-wage controls in the immediate future "if we could get over the psychology of scarce buying."

Many observers believed that Symington was making a desperate appeal in an effort to head off further curbs.

Symington said: "We must have strong credit controls to cut down civilian buying... We must have much higher taxes, on a 'pay-as-you-go' basis, to keep purchasing power down to a level of available civilian goods."

To cope with Russia's superiority in man power, he suggested:

1. A "great step-up" in American production.
2. Return of older workers and women into the labor force.
3. Restoration of work hours, "at least part way" to the levels that prevailed during World War II.

Your Worst and Best

Lesson for November 5, 1950

"Within my earthly temple there's a crowd.
There's one of us that's humble, one that's proud;
There's one that's broken-hearted for his sins,
And one that, unrepentant, sits and grins.
From much perplexing doubt I could be free,
If I could once be certain which is me."

FROM some anonymous rhymester comes this complaint, which any of us might have truthfully written if we had thought about it. Which is me, anyway? I seem to have three selves. One is a good deal better than my everyday or ordinary self. On rare occasions he will do something or other so good it surprises even my best friends — it "isn't like me." On the other side is another self, much worse than my everyday personality. He too surprises me by acts or thoughts so dreadful I am afraid of him and ashamed too. Yet both these "other selves" are "me" too.

Dr. Foreman

Life is a Fight

THE TRUTH of the business is that life, when a man takes it seriously, is a fight. It is a war between your best and your worst self. Your two other-selves are there every moment, like ghosts, or rather like a bright angel and a dark one.

It is always possible to become a better man than you are; also, alas, it is possible to become far worse than you are. No man stays the same through life. He is continually pressing upward, or plunging downward, or varying between the two.

The possibilities for good, on the other hand, became real. His dark angel remained only a ghost; his good angel was simply his real self. At no point in his life was he forced to say to himself, "I wish I had . . . I wish I had not." And yet, even for him life was a struggle. We do believe he sinned. We do believe he was tempted; and if the temptation was real, then he could have sinned.

The Way to Win

CHRISTIANS are not exempt in this war of good against evil. We are not "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease" any more than Jesus was. We do not drift into the Promised Land. We have to fight our way uphill.

Yet Christians are expected to win. That is, God stands beside each Christian in his fight, and God's power is for the Christian's use. As Saint Paul says, with each temptation God provides a "way of escape." Our prayer "Lead us not into temptation" can always be answered. Sometimes it can be answered by ourselves. That is, we cannot leave the fight to God.

But we can win as Jesus won: sometimes by standing and doing battle where we are, sometimes simply by leaving temptation behind.

Is Alcoholism a Disease?

ONE OF the common temptations of millions at all times is alcoholism. It is popular to speak of this as a "disease;" and yet it is the only disease of which victims have actually cured themselves.

Dr. Brady, whose medical column is well known, reminds us that nobody ever got over migraine headaches, or heart disease, simply by deciding to be well. But men and women have got over alcoholism, essentially by deciding to be well, and sticking to that decision.

Alcoholics Anonymous, that well-known group of former victims, who have been very successful in helping slaves of this habit to become their best selves, use much the same methods we find in the New Testament: (1) staying out of temptation's way, (2) overcoming evil with good; and (3) laying hold of the "Power, not ourselves, that makes for righteousness."

INSPIRATION Final Rewards

AN EDITORIAL

IT IS A COMMONPLACE that often men who lead evil and irreligious lives prosper, while good people find it difficult to eke out a bare livelihood. That many take scandal from this is apparent in the oft-heard complaint: "It doesn't pay to be good."

It is unfortunate that some people should display an apparent envy of the good times and prosperous years enjoyed by others who pay no attention to God or His commandments. Surely the first impulse should be to pity and pray for those who must pay off in eternity for the evil they have done in the world.

Christianity teaches that God punishes the wicked. It also teaches that He rewards the just. Thus, there should be no scandal over the apparent good fortune of the wicked. Instead there should be cause to reflect on the rewards destined for those who truly and humbly serve God, patiently enduring the burdens and hardships which He permits them to experience.

Faith teaches that those who are faithful to God will one day enjoy a reward so rich, so vast and unending as to overshadow the greatest prosperity and happiness that any man could conceivably enjoy on earth.

It is this certainty of one day seeing God and sharing in His eternal kingdom that gives strength to those whose lot on earth is hard and difficult. Furthermore, even in the very depths of sorrow and suffering, they know the joy of a good conscience—a boon which the wicked must crave in vain.

What Christian knowing his faith and convinced of the justice of God, would change places with the godless whose only reward must be a transient and doubtful happiness on earth?

It profits a man nothing if he gain the whole world and lose his soul. History is full of examples of men who were rich and powerful yet in the end went to God in the dreadful poverty of unworthiness. On the other hand, consider how many seemingly insignificant and unsuccessful men and women have passed from life with the surest passport to heaven—a tried and tested love for Him who was their hope and trust.

GREEN GRASS OF WYOMING

By Mary O'Hara

There is rejoicing at the McLaughlin ranch when Nell receives a wire from Ken reporting that he has found Crown Jewel with foal and is bringing both of them to the ranch. Thunderhead, he says, is following at some distance, and Rob is warned to keep all the mares up. Beaver Greenway is notified in order that he may recover his filly. Rob again speaks of what must be done with Thunderhead. Ken returns Jewel and the foal to the ranch. Carey and Greenway arrive and Ken and Carey meet under the "monkey tree." Without hardly knowing how it happened, they exchange their first kiss, but Carey isn't sure about being "engaged."

CHAPTER XXIV

"I'm not going to let you go!"
"Don't said Carey, "I like it, Ken—"

"What?"
"I've just been thinking. We might call the first one Penelope." Ken looked disgusted. "Please don't start on those children!"
"Why not?" Carey suddenly threw her arms around his neck. "Oh, Ken! I feel as if you were my husband! You really are such a husband sort of boy!"

Ken tried to evade her arms, looking even more disgusted. "I don't want to be your husband."
"Why, you do! You know you do!"

"No—I want to be your lover. I want you to love me and forget all about those damned children."
"The oldest could have violet eyes like your mother."

Ken dropped his foot into the stream, lowering Carey so abruptly that she clutched him, screaming. Then he carried her to the bank and deposited her.

That was their last talk. After lunch the Cadillac drew up before the ranch house and Collins jumped out. Greenway came from the cowbarn, leading Jewel. The foal ambled beside her.

Collins took her from his master clucking to her like and old hen. He led her carefully into the trailer which was hitched to the car.

It was an unusually constructed trailer. In it, against the right side, a small box stall had been built. This was so that on the long journey, the foal would have this little stall to himself, could not be knocked down or trod upon by an excited mother, could either stand and ruminate, or repose upon the thick bed of straw which covered the floor. When he got hungry the car must stop and the foal would be put in with his mother to nurse.

Now the small creature would not follow his mother into the trailer. She turned her head and nickered to it anxiously, but it paid no attention. It looked at the Green, at the people who stood around, at the fountain in the center, at the house, the barn, and it was if it said, "This is all very interesting—let me have a little fun!" It began the ridiculous performance which is a foal's best attempt at bucking. The small curly switch stuck straight up, his nose went down, then his little body twisted and his hind legs shot into the air.

There was a roar of laughter which seemed to startle him. He righted himself, looked inquiringly around and whinnied.

Then he was almost destroyed by a tumbleweed that came bounding across the Green at him. He propped on four stiff legs and gave a loud squeal of fear. Jewel answered, nervously. The weed rolled past him and then stopped, hooked on a bramble. The foal stepped forward and stretched out his nose to sniff at it. The wind stiffened, the weed strained against its frail anchor, broke loose and sailed away with the foal galloping after.

Thunderhead Succumbs To Ken's Pleadings

"There's the name you've been looking for, Carey," called Nell. For a moment Carey was puzzled, and then, "Tumbleweed! Of course! How perfect, Mrs. McLaughlin!"
"Come, Tumbleweed!" called Carey, and she and Ken went to separate the foal from the weed.

Ken was sitting on the terrace, the next afternoon. He was alone on the ranch, his mother and father had gone to town. He was all packed up. In an hour or two, or whenever they came back, they would drive him in to town to have dinner there and then catch the eastbound express.

Miss Sartoris, in her white uniform, came down the Gorge with Penny. Penny, now two years old, was dragging a tiny cart on wheels. As they reached the terrace Ken called to her. "Come here, Penny—come here to see me."
"Go to your brother, Penny," prompted Miss Sartoris, seating herself in one of the terrace chairs and taking out her lacework. Penny did not need to be urged. She loved her brothers.

Miss Sartoris joined in the conversation and recounted the small adventures of their walk.

The sound of horses neighing came from the stables, then the sound of heavy hoofs coming down the Gorge.

Ken was sitting so that with the slightest turn of his head, the Gorge was in view. Now he saw the horse coming down it. The white horse. Thunderhead!

Ken did not move. Miss Sartoris went on chatting, Penny trotting from one to the other.

Thunderhead walked slowly to the fountain. Ken got up and went into the house, through the kitchen to the back porch where a halter and bucket of oats were always kept. He took the halter over his arm, the bucket of oats in his hand, and went out the back door, across the terrace and Green, down to the fountain.

As he approached Thunderhead and began to talk to him, he heard Miss Sartoris say, "Why, is that the horse everyone's been talking about?"

"I guess it is," said Ken easily. "Come on, Thunderhead, you've had enough to drink. How about some oats?"

Thunderhead swung his dripping mouth up, his head high. He turned it to look at Ken, grunting. Ken sat the oat pail on the stone rim of the fountain. Thunderhead put his nose down to it. Ken slipped the end of the rope up underneath the great neck with his right hand, took hold of it on the crest of the neck with his left, drew it over, tied it with the loop against a knot which had been put in the rope to keep the noose from slipping. Then, holding this with a catch under his arm, he put the halter underneath Thunderhead's chin, his arms on each side of his head. "Come on, boy! Stick your nose in this!"

Thunderhead thrust his nose through it and lowered his head into the bucket again as Ken fastened the buckle.

Ken's heart did not even miss a beat. He wondered at this. He led the horse around the Green, showed him off to Miss Sartoris. He said, "Want to see me ride him?"

Miss Sartoris was watching admiringly, "Say, Ken, that sure is a pretty horse!"

"Yes, he is pretty, isn't he?" said Ken bringing Thunderhead to a stop in front of the terrace. "Look, Miss Sartoris, what time is it? Have you got a watch?"

She consulted her wrist watch. "It's four o'clock."

"I want to go for a ride on him," said Ken. He slid off the horse. "First let's give Penny a ride. Want to ride the geegee, baby?"

Ken Gives Penny Ride on Thunderhead

Penny came out of the house to see what was doing. Ken lifted Penny up on to the stallion's broad back and the big black muzzle and face came around to watch her.

"Come along, Miss Sartoris, you hold her while I lead him."

Miss Sartoris clutched the baby by one foot and her sash and the little procession wound around the fountain. Penny laughed, pounding her little fists on the horse's withers.

Ken grinned at the nurse. "He's used to foals. He knows how they behave."

He lifted the baby off. "I'm going for a ride. Listen. If my mother and father come before I'm back, don't tell them Thunderhead came back, I want to tell them myself."

The nurse and Pearl promised. Ken vaulted on the horse again and rode off to saddle him.

Ken had his ride. It was only at the station, when he was saying goodbye to his mother and father that he told them that Thunderhead had come home and that he had put him in the box stall in the cow barn, where Jewel had been.

He added, "So he's there now. You can do whatever you want with him. Are you going to shoot him, Dad?"

Rob answered this casually, "No, of course not, Ken. Now that he's been caught, there's no point in shooting him. I'll have Dr. Hicks up to geld him. He'll be a better horse than ever, all the trouble over, and you'll have him to ride for half of your life. A magnificent animal! I can't tell you how happy I am this happened."

Next day Rob went for a ride on him.

Ride on Thunderhead Quickens Rob's Blood

With the thought in his mind of not putting too much strain on the stallion's self-control, Rob turned his back on the ranch house, the Gorge, the pasture where the mares were enclosed and took his way down the meadows, along Lone Tree Creek. Time and again he put Thunderhead at the stream to jump it—wider and wider jumps—jumps with a high wall of willows this side of the water—the other side, and every time the stallion sailed over hardly pausing to gather himself or to take off. What power! What reserve! Rob's blood began to run faster. He crossed the meadow to the place where the ground sloped up and away from the creek. One of the steep rock-slides separated it from the higher grazing land above. He put the stallion at the rock slide and let him have his head. He felt the muscles gather under him. There was slight roughness in the surface of the rock, here and there a vein of grass, an angle—nothing presented any difficulty to Thunderhead. The big hoofs seized every foothold unerringly. Where there was no foothold he seemed to advance by an irresistible inner force, there was a great leap at the end, and they were on the grass. Rob touched his heel to the curving arc of ribs and Thunderhead moved into a swift canter. Rob would try his speed now and prepared, with hands, heels, the tilt of his body, to give the signal, but Thunderhead read his mind and anticipated him. The canter became a gallop, a run, then that incredibly swift floating pace which seemed more in the air than on the ground. The hoofs reached, slashed at the ground, man and horse sailed forward, the hoofs reached, slashed again—

Thoughts zigzagged through Rob's mind uncontrolled. They struck into his heart. Recollections of his long war against this animal . . . give away . . . geld . . . shoot . . . kill.

At last Rob gathered the reins and turned toward the ranch. This would be the final test. On the way home they would pass the Six Foot Pasture where the mares were confined.

Thunderhead did not pass them unaffected. His body gathered and trembled. Rob held him with hands, knees, and voice. There were wild neighs and answering whinnies from the mares. They collected at the fence, crying to him to come closer. But he had been well trained. Under the saddle, he gave obedience.

Rob unsaddled him and rubbed him down, fed him, led him to water. There was no sweat on him. The ride had not winded him.

That night he told Nell he was considering replacing Banner with Thunderhead as the Goose Bar stud.

Nell's hand crashed on the piano keys. "Thunderhead!"

"Yes, Thunderhead!"

"But you were going to have him gelded!"

"Rob!"
"Well, a man can change his mind, can't he?"

Venezuelan Oil

Venezuelan oil is playing an important part in the U.S. plans for national defense, as created by the Korean situation and other threats to international peace and security. Petroleum writers are citing the vast potential of Venezuela and her current production rate of over 1,500,000 barrels a day as a vital reservoir for greatly increased petroleum needs.

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative—REMOVES WASTE... NOT GOOD FOOD

When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative—do as millions do—chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon—right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy—you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢.

Make Versatile Meals with Cranberries
(See Recipes Below)

Colorful Cranberries

WHEN YOU WANT to add color to fall and winter meals, try cranberries. They can be used in many versatile ways, with vegetables, as a sauce or relish, with meats and fowl and as desserts.

You'll enjoy the tartness which cranberries give to many foods, especially the bland and mild-flavored ones like fowl, ham and sweet potatoes. Their bright red color is a delight in other foods such as muffins or French dressing.

*Cranberry Ham Slices (Serves 6)

3 cups cranberries
1 1/2 cups brown sugar, firmly packed
1/2 cup water or apple juice
2 slices ham (3/4 to 1" thick)
2 tablespoons whole cloves

Mix cranberries, sugar and water (or juice). Cut edges of fat on ham in gashes. Place one slice of ham in baking dish and cover with cranberry sugar-mixture. Top with second ham slice and cover with remaining cranberry mixture. Stick whole cloves around edges of ham slices. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven until tender, about 1 1/2 hours, basting occasionally with liquid in dish.

WHEN YOU'RE looking for an elegant way to show off sweet potatoes or yams, you'll like them combined with cranberries, pineapple, peanuts and interesting seasonings.

Cranberry Yam Puffs (Serves 4-6)

4 medium-sized yams or sweet potatoes
1 cup cranberries, chopped
1/2 cup drained, crushed pineapple
1/2 cup chopped, salted peanuts
4 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper, nutmeg to taste

Boil yams until tender; peel and mash with a fork. Add chopped cranberries, drained pineapple, nuts and butter; mix thoroughly and season to taste. If mixture seems too dry, beat in 1 egg or 1/4 cup cream or evaporated milk. Divide mixture into 4 to 6 well greased custard cups and dot top with butter. Bake in a moderately hot (400°) oven for 45 minutes or until set. Loosen with spatula and turn out around roast.

BOTH BROWN and white sugar go into this old-fashioned version of cranberry sauce. Thinly sliced lemon rinds among the plump red cranberries give you a flavorful accompaniment to roast turkey or chicken on your festive board.

Cranberry Sauce (Makes 1 quart)

Cranberry Muffins (Makes 9-12)

2 cups bran cereal
1/2 cup dark molasses
1/2 cup milk
1 egg, beaten
1 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup chopped cranberries

Combine bran, molasses and milk, let stand 20 minutes. Stir in beaten egg. Sift together dry ingredients and sift into bran mixture. Fold in cranberries. Fill greased muffin tins about 3/4 full and bake in a moderately hot (400°) oven for 20 minutes or until done.

FRESH FRUIT and raisins are combined with berries to make this pie which is so good for cold months when other fruits are scarce. To make a picture-pretty pie and let the colorful filling peek through, make the top crust in criss-cross fashion, or use cookie cutters like stars, trees, leaves on pastry for a decorative effect.

Cranberry Pie (Makes 1 10" Pie)

4 cups cranberries
1 orange, quartered and seeded
1 apple, peeled, cored, quartered
1/2 cup seedless raisins
2 cups sugar
3/4 cup water
4 tablespoons tapioca

Pastry

Put cranberries, orange, apple and raisins through food chopper. Combine with remaining ingredients and let stand while making pastry. Roll out pastry to fit pie plate. Pour in filling. Arrange top crust. Bake in a hot oven (450°) for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate (350°) and continue baking for 30 minutes or until filling is set and crust nicely browned.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

PAVING A YARD

Question: We have a small space in our yard that is unpaved. We want to cement it. What sort of solution could we pour into this earth to deaden the roots of the wild greens that grow up there? We fear they might come up through the cement after it is laid.

Answer: If the cement is properly laid with several inches of thickness over well-tamped earth, I do not see how ordinary weeds, etc. could break through the cement. Lacking air and sunlight there will be no growth. I do not see that you have any reason to worry if the cement is thick enough and properly laid. However, if you wish to kill the growth before-hand, pour on a strong solution of rock salt or calcium chloride. There are also weed-killing preparations on sale at garden supply stores.
