Democrats Stage Revolt in Arizona

The "baby state" went into dizzy tailspin Tuesday night as the state's election began coming over the radio and continued to be in a dither until midnight Wednesday before the saw count in the governor's race finally settled down for a Republican victory.

Howard Pyle went into the lead from the very beginning and was only in danger a couple of times when his lead was cut to 249. This will be Ana Frohmler's first defeat since her political career began 24 years ago.

Pyle will be the third Republican governor to be elected in the state and the first one since 22 years ago when John C. Phillips was elected.

Ralph Barry was the only other Republican elected. He was elected on the superior court bench with four Democrats. Lorna Lockwood has the distinction of being the first lady to win a place in the superior court.

All other public offices were won by the Democratic candidates, both in the state and the county.—Gilbert Enterprise.

Mechem Will Center Action On Deadheads

When the big axe begins to fall on state house employees come Jan. 1, first attention will be centered on the "deadheads" Republican Governor-elect Edwin Mechem has announced.

"The people who have been performing their jobs in a proper manner and not engaging in political activities will not be bothered," he said. "But the deadheads must go," he declared.

He has estimated that approximately 200 to 300 of the present state employees will be replaced in the new administration.

Two Carlsbad Boys Found Guilty

On Saturday, Nov. 11, two Carlsbad youths were found guilty and fined by United States Commissioner Richard H. Robinson, for possession of assembled firearms within the boundaries of Carlsbad Caverns National Park. National Park Service regulations prohibit the carrying of assembled firearms through the park without prior written authorization of the superintendent. Park officials wish to call this regulation again to the attention of all hunters in nearby areas. The park, of course, is a sanctuary for all forms of wildlife and hunting is not permitted.

What the State Press Says About the Election

New Mexico voters in an unprecedented manner voted into office a Republican governor while placing all other Democratic state candidates in office in the recent election.

It was a revolt against John E. Miles, Democratic candidate for governor, who was running on his previous record as two-time governor, state land commissioner and U. S. Representative in Congress and a repudiation of Democratic state administration and the party machine and leadership. The revolt was centered chiefly in the Democratic East Side counties and independent Bernalillo county.

Voters quite obviously believed it was time for a change in the executive office which had been held by the Democrats for 20 years. And they have given Republican Edwin Mechem a chance to carry out promised reforms in the administration of the state. They were convinced of his sincerity in the hard hitting campaign he made against performance of the Mabry administration and the Democratic machine. It was a signal victory for the youthful Dona Ana County Republican.—Albuquerque Journal.

Ed Mechem of Las Cruces today is a young man with a mandate from the people. He has been elected to the governor's office on the Republican ticket against odds that most political dopesters thought were insurmountable. He will be the first Republican to sit in the governor's chair in Santa Fe since Richard Dillon finished his second term in 1930.

Mr. Mechem won in spite of the fact that Democratic candidates were elected to all other state and national offices by substantial majorities, with the possible exception that Paul Larrazolo may still have a slim chance to win the lieutenant governor post.

Mr. Mechem's election makes it plain that a sizeable majority of New Mexico citizens are not satisfied with the manner in which the governor's office has been conducted. They are looking to Mr. Mechem to make sweeping changes in the conduct of that office.—Albuquerque Tribune.

We imagine your life and ours will go along pretty much as they have been, even with a new governor in the state house. Ed Mechem made some tall promises and he's definitely on the spot now to deliver. Who DID kill Cricket Coogler?

The Republican campaign in New Mexico obviously was aimed at electing only one man—Mechem. Others on the ticket were expendable casualties of the political fray.—Hobbs News-Sun.

By now the Democrats should know that they can't cram just anything down the people's throats. So cocky sure that the east side would vote straight Democratic they waged a very poor campaign for John E. Miles. They weren't worried about the east side. Headquarters in Albuquerque were assured they would have Curry, Roosevelt, Lea, Chaves and Eddy counties in the bag. "Why these Texas and Oklahoma people do not know how to scratch a ballot, all they know is to vote straight Democratic."

Now they know, or do they? We wonder.—Hobbs Daily Flare.

All of the interpretation that can be put on the outcome of the election boils down to this: There was a heavy protest vote. Just what the protest was about is difficult to pin down. There are the probabilities—(1) Reluctance of New Mexicans to break the no third term tradition for governor. (2) General dissatisfaction over the disclosures of high political scandals in connection with the Coogler case and (3) Statewide unhappiness over the increase in assessed valuations resulting from the Donnell survey.

We don't think that anyone can accuse either Gov. Mabry or Congressman Miles of the remotest connections with the Coogler tragedy, but they nevertheless suffered irreparable damages in the disclosures that other state officials were in some degree under suspicion and because that state police chief was found guilty of torturing an innocent suspect in this case. Most New Mexicans, we believe, will agree largely with the legislative program announced by Edwin Mechem, the Republican governor-elect.

Mechem proposes that the Public Service Commission be abolished and its functions turned over to the Corporation Commission.

He calls for creation of a state liquor board to replace the present one liquor czar.

As for the Donnell revaluation survey, the original object has the support of Republicans as well as Democrats and despite all the shortcomings of the survey, it is doubtful that any administration could remain very popular after most taxpayers have had their valuations increased.—Portales Daily News.

The governor-elect calls for revision of the state purchasing department with changes in the law to require calling for bids on all state purchases, including insurance.

Mechem, an attorney, calls for legislation to set up a non-political judiciary for district court judges and supreme court justices.

He calls for a law to give the state police commission full power to select a state police chief and police personnel and urges that a merit system and tenure be provided for state policemen.

Mechem calls for a reduction in the state gasoline tax. The two-cent tax increase voted by the last legislature producer more revenue than was needed to provide the necessary retirement of highway bond indebtedness and a tax reduction seems to be in order.

The next governor says that "immediate attention should be given to establishment of a non-partisan board of education which will have the power to hire a qualified (state) superintendent of schools."

All in all, we think Mechem has an excellent legislative program. We hope the Democratic legislature will forget partisan politics and help carry out the program. If it doesn't, Mechem doubtless will go to the voters two years hence and ask them to elect legislators "who will help get the job done."—Carlsbad Current-Argus.

Edwin Mechem, 37-year-old Las Cruces attorney and Republican party standard bearer, became New Mexico's first GOP governor in some 20 years as Congressman John E. Miles conceded the race whose outcome was one of the nation's major upsets.

However, as final tabulations were counted, it became apparent that Mechem was the lone Republican to win office. A. M. Fernandez and John J. Dempsey were returned to Congress and Tibo Chavez became lieutenant governor-elect.

Eddy county stayed with the Democratic band wagon in every race, but failed to give Miles the expected majority of its boxes, chose Mechem and two of Carlsbad's precincts cast a majority for the GOP candidate.—Eddy County News.

HELL ON EARTH ENDED

The past 20 years with Democrats in control has indeed been a Hell on earth. It has ended with the election of Governor Mechem. Watch the pay-rollers go to work. We hope they are all kicked off immediately after he goes into office.—Lovington Leader.

Piling up decisive majorities throughout the state place, Edwin L. Mechem, Republican, in the position of governor of the state of New Mexico. Mechem the only Republican on the state ticket to do so, swept into office to defeat the Democratic candidate, John E. Miles, in the recent election.

A victory statement from the young Las Cruces lawyer said: "I am happy that the people of New Mexico have given me the opportunity to serve them for the next two years."—Ruidoso News.

Basketball News

The Hope High School Yellow Jackets will open their 20-game 1950-51 basketball schedule on Friday night, Nov. 17, at Weed.

Fourteen boys have been reporting for practice to Coach Luke Toyobo, with four starters returning from the 1949-50 team.

Boys reporting for practice include J. C. Blakeney, John Dawson, Clarence Forister, Glenn Harris, Lynn Harrison, John Harris, Ray Jones, Dolph Jones, Eugene Lee, Raleigh Newbill, Kent Terry, Sammy Trimble, David Sanders and Robert Wood.

Clarence Forister and Ray Jones are the only two seniors on the squad. The four starters from last year's team include Kent Terry, Glenn Harrison, Lynn Harrison and Clarence Forister. Three boys are fighting for the fifth place on the team with Ray Jones, David Sanders and Robert Wood all out for the fifth spot on the team.

The Yellow Jackets will play their first home game on Tuesday, Nov. 28 with Hagerman.

Modern Milk House Built Under Drive

Idea Could Be Used On Many Midwest Farms

Like most people, farmers have a desire to make use of all available space in and around their service buildings. Few, however, thought of locating a modern milk house under a driveway.

That this is possible is shown in the accompanying picture. Like so many midwestern barns, the two-story structure is located so that about half of it (extending from front to rear) rests on a ridge of land. In this case the ridge is about eight feet high.

Only that portion of the first floor, which is built on the low ground, is used for milking operations. This eliminated the job of excavating under the ridge. Also, however, it created the problem of building a milk house which would be convenient to the milking area and not be affected by drainage from the sloping land.

Since the driveway to the mow followed the ridge line, it was a comparatively easy job to construct the milk house beneath this natural dirt "ramp," and to connect it to the adjacent stanchion section of the barn. The roof of the milk house is strengthened with heavy steel beams.

Protein Supplement Cuts Swine Production Costs

Farmers with ample supplies of grain may be tempted to fill the hog self-feeder with corn and cut down on the amount of, or even eliminate, the protein supplement. Such a step is not as thrifty as it may seem.

Experiments have shown that hogs fed corn alone in dry lot require 11 to 12 bushels of corn per hundred pounds of gain. When a good protein supplement is used in the ration, 100 pounds of pork can be produced with five and one half to six bushels of corn and 50 pounds protein supplement.

With hog and feed prices what they are, this means that every bushel of corn fed with a good protein supplement is worth $2.25 to $2.75 per bushel, while hogs fed corn alone return only $1.50 to $1.75 per bushel of corn consumed.

Hogs fed grain and a balanced supplement will reach market weight in five and one half to six months.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Attempt Made to Kill President; Master Defense Plan for Europe Reportedly Agreed on by Allies

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

In a last desperate effort, North Korean troops attacked U.N. forces just short of the Yalu river as the war in Korea entered its dying moments. Chinese Red troops were reported to have joined the North Koreans in the last minute stand. U.N. forces totaling nearly 200,000 men continued to push northward in the final phases of the struggle.

TRUMAN:
 Escapes Assassination

For the first time in history an attempt was made to assassinate a president of the United States at his official residence. The plot came to an end in a blazing gun battle at the very steps of Blair House, the temporary White House.

The assassins were identified as Grisello Torresola, who died almost instantly of wounds, and Oscar Collazzo, seriously wounded, both of New York. The men were members of the Puerto Rican Nationalist party which started an uprising in Puerto Rico a few days before the attempted assassination.

Three policemen on duty at Blair House at the time of the attack were wounded. One of the guards, Pvt. Leslie Coffelt, 40, died a short time later in a Washington hospital. The other two were reported seriously injured.

According to best reports the two assassins approached Blair House, one from the east and one from the west. Collazzo opened fire first when within 10 feet of a policeman on duty at the steps of Blair House. Two other guards at posts near the steps opened fire on Collazzo.

Meanwhile, Torresola, within a few seconds of Collazzo's opening shot, opened fire in front of Lee House, which adjoins the Blair mansion on the westerly side.

Guards returned the fire and within seconds both would-be assassins were shot down.

Collazzo is reported to have told police that he and Torresola came to Washington "with the express purpose of shooting the President." On Torresola's body was found a letter and a memorandum both cryptic but indicative of conspiracy of the Nationalists to kill Mr. Truman.

The attack resulted in an immediate crack-down on the Nationalist party in Puerto Rico which has demanded independence of the United States.

The Communist party, afraid of being involved in the plot, immediately disavowed any connection with it and termed the attempt a 1950 version of the "Reichstag-fire frame-up in Hitler Germany."

TIBET:
 Invasion Ordered

The Indian government which had tried to appease both the east and west in the current battle for freedom, received a rude shock with the official confirmation that Communist China had ordered her troops into Tibet.

India had thrown its weight behind the move to seat Communist China in the United Nations. With the invasion of Tibet, Prime Minister Pandit Nehru found himself in a difficult position. Red armies were at the border of India and it appeared likely that Nehru would be forced to review his policies.

If Communist China and Russia continue their present partnership in foreign policy and exploitation of China's natural resources, the disappearance of free Tibet will bring a formidable combination of Communist-powers to bear against non-Communist India.

Nehru finds himself now in a very unfavorable situation in the struggle for dominance in Asia.

Headliners

"The time has long since passed when the world can be stirred to hope by general phrases of the Soviet Union about disarmament and peace and German unity," Secretary of State Dean Acheson said in rejecting a Cominform proposal for a unified Germany.

"You can have all the glittering front that's left in Europe today. I've had enough," said Barbara Hutton, American heiress who had four husbands, three of them European.

"It is useful for the American government to show in practice that it is ready to help other people rather than issuing propaganda as some other countries do," Premier Tito of Yugoslavia said in announcing his drought-damaged country would get U.S. aid.

EUROPE:
 Master Defense Plan

The will and a plan for the defense of Europe against any aggression was made known to the world when the Atlantic pact nations reportedly agreed on a unified army of about 50 divisions, strong fleets in the Atlantic and Mediterranean and a mighty air armada based in Britain and on the continent.

The plans called for General Dwight D. Eisenhower to be named supreme commander of the collective armed forces. The defense plan would reach full force as soon as possible and not later than 1953, it was reported.

The plan is a further step in the armament for defense program outlined in a recent speech by President Truman. The western world has accepted the belief that Russia understands only armed strength.

In the new plan, the U.S. would furnish five to 10 divisions, more than half the warships, all strategic bombers, and five to 10 groups of tactical fighter planes. France reportedly would provide 20 to 28 divisions; Britain about five; Belgium, Luxembourg, and the Netherlands five to 10, and Italy about 10.

Britain would contribute a smaller number of warships than the United States, but would share the major responsibility for sea power.

CASUALTIES:
 Climb to 26,701

The terrible price of war was brought home to the American people with the announcement that U.S. casualties in Korea numbered 26,701.

The latest tabulation included 3,683 killed in action, 18,682 wounded and 4,337 missing in action.

The official figure on total deaths was 4,125. In addition to those killed in action, it included 442 who died of wounds and listed as missing those whose capture by North Koreans and subsequent death was confirmed.

The army casualties totaled 23,140, the navy 252, the marine corps 3,133 and the air force 176.

CHAPTER I

Her raincoat was white, her high rubber galoshes were white and her umbrella of oiled silk was white with a bright red handle. Ensemble of a well-dressed young woman on a rainy day.

She smiled to herself, a rather wry little smile. She had never had really nice clothes before—bargain-basement stuff that didn't look so bad perhaps—but nothing really nice. And yet—

"Going uptown, Dorinda? I've a couple of letters I wish you'd drop at the post office."

She whirled around, startled, from the half-open door. Why was he always so quiet, she thought, with a quick gust of irritation. A big man, black and white like a Greek, handsome in a heavy, middle-aged sort of way. Not the kind of good looks she admired though many women might. Fay, for instance. He must weigh close to two hundred and yet he moved as softly as a cat.

But there was nothing of impatience in her voice when she spoke. "Of course," and after a barely perceptible pause, "Uncle Edward."

"Thank you, Dorinda."

She looked back into the house. At Fay, watching Edward from the living-room door. At Carol, Grandmother's nurse, hurrying down the stair, a brown-covered book under her arm. She put the book in Dorinda's hand.

"Mrs. Thorndyke asked if you'd change this at the library."

Dorinda smiled back into Carol's black eyes, then opened the door wider and went out.

Dorinda. Well, she was Dorinda. That was what he had said in the beginning. "Look like Dorinda, talk like Dorinda. You are Dorinda. Never forget that."

Dorinda Reviews Story Of Deception's Start

Did Dorinda think, "I like rainy days. . . . They shut me in. . . . I feel safe. . . ." Not that there was any reason why she shouldn't feel safe. Only the whole situation was so strange. As if one were walking on eggshells or balancing on a tight rope. Mustn't make a misstep. Would Dorinda say this? Would she do this? Five months now and still she felt as if she were an actress playing to an audience, wooing them into an illusion of reality she could not share. Only at night when she went into her room and shut the door could she relax. And times like now, alone and shut in by the rain.

"I may have a nice nature," she told herself frankly. "But I wouldn't do this for anyone. Not unless I was paid for it. A thousand dollars is a lot of money. My wrist is well and I could get a job now. In a couple of months I'll be back in Los Angeles with money in the bank and a trunk full of clothes. And this will all seem like a dream. Maybe rather a nice dream looking back."

Only there was Cleve. After she went away from here, she could never see Cleve again. Possibly, if he knew, he would understand. But she had promised not to tell, not anyone, ever. When it came time to go, she would go. And Uncle Edward would make the explanations. Cleve would think she didn't care, not even enough to say good-by. Probably he wouldn't want to see her again anyway. That expression his dark eyes held when he looked at her was for Dorinda, Dorinda La Croix who lived in a big house, who was a member of one of the oldest families in the village, who belonged, who wasn't an outsider.

She took her two letters to the window. The post-mistress was little and thin and endowed with a perpetual curiosity. She looked at Dorinda over her glasses and smiled grudgingly. "I wish I looked as pretty as you do on a rainy day. Rain always makes my nose red and my hair stringy even if I did pay ten dollars for a permanent. Here's your stamps."

She leaned closer. "You were in Paris, weren't you? And got to Lisbon when the Nazis came? And was shipwrecked coming home? I never did hear the straight of it."

"Uncle Edward told all there was to tell. I don't want to think about it." Dorinda slipped the two letters through the letter slot. "I can't talk about it," she repeated. That was what he had told her to say. "It's natural," he had explained. "You went through a harrowing experience and you don't want to relive it even in memory. You can't talk about it. That way, no one can trip you up on questions.

Now she told the postmistress a hurried good-by and went back again into the street. The rain had stopped but the sidewalks were like dark glass, shining and slippery under a black sky.

She went inside the general store which was long and, on this cloudy day, dim, smelling of coal-oil and apples and ham mixed with the pleasant aroma of coffee which a boy was pouring into the red-painted grinder. On the dry-goods side, a girl clerk arranged bolts of cloth on a shelf and farther back the proprietor talked to a salesman, who, his suitcases opened on the counter, listened and nodded in apparent agreement.

"I'm afraid you're mistaken," said Dorinda coldly. "I don't know you."

Dorinda smiled at the girl who turned at her approach. "Hello, Amy, I'm trying to match some yarn for Grandmother." She opened her handbag. The strand of crimson wool hung to her fingers as she held it out.

Salesman's Recognition Threatens Masquerade

Amy pursed her lips. "I think we've some like that. Only it's a new lot and sometimes the shade's a little different. How is your grandmother?"

"About as usual, I think. She manages to get up in her wheelchair now and then but not often. But she knits and reads and we hope it won't be long until she's up and around again."

As she took the wrapped package, the proprietor moved toward her. "Everything all right, Miss La-Croix? Did you get what you wanted?"

"Oh, yes, Mr. McGregor, exactly what I—" She stopped, her breath catching in a little gasp.

Behind the proprietor, the salesman she had noticed before looked at her, recognition in his eyes. "It's come," she thought wildly. "It's come."

She had thought it couldn't happen. Uncle Edward had said it couldn't happen. The town was only a few hours' drive from Los Angeles, on the coast but away from any major traffic course. People from the town might go to Los Angeles but people from Los Angeles would never come here. Besides, she had known so few people. She didn't know this man really. Only once in her rooming house a girl down the hall had asked her to go on a blind date. Dorinda, lonely as one can be only in a big city, had agreed. This man, she didn't even remember his name, was the blind date. She hadn't liked him, she had refused his plea for another meeting and had, from then until now, forgotten his existence. But she remembered that he was a salesman of some sort. And salesmen did come to small out-of-the-way places.

She looked away from his eager face, hoping against hope that he wouldn't speak to her. Yet steeling herself against the moment when he would.

"Why, Stella!" His voice was hearty, ingratiating. "It's Stella, little Stella—" He snapped his fingers. "What was the name now—Moore, wasn't that it? Last place in the world I expected to see you. Do you live here or what—?"

Dorinda raised her brows, the soft planes of her face stiffening. "I'm afraid you're mistaken," she said coldly. "I don't know you."

His jaw fell ludicrously, then he pulled his lips into a smile again. "Oh, come now, girlie, don't give me the brushoff like that. Don't you remember the night in L. A. at the Hofbrau with Jack and Millie and the fun we had?"

"I'm afraid you're mistaking me for someone else," Dorinda's eyes were like ice.

Mr. McGregor interrupted in a horrified tone. "Taylor, you're wrong. This—this is Miss LaCroix, a niece of Mr. Thorndyke. Thorndykes—one of the oldest families here." He sputtered slightly in his earnestness, striving at once to be convincing and apologetic.

Dorinda saw the trace of indecision that touched Taylor's face and took a quick advantage of his doubt.

"It's all right, Mr. McGregor. Just a mistake," she assured him graciously and walked swiftly away without another glance at the salesman.

But her heart was pounding. Maybe it was a mistake to come to the village so often. But Uncle Edward had seemed so certain. And it would look peculiar if she never left the house. Of course, a thing like this might not—probably wouldn't—ever happen again. She must in some way find out how often Taylor came here. It should be easy enough to avoid him. But had she really convinced him that he'd made a mistake?

Taylor Accosts Dorinda, Recalls Her Real Name

Her impulse was to hurry home but she remembered that she had one more errand to do—the book to exchange at the circulating library a few doors down the street.

The circulating library was a place Dorinda liked to go. Today, the small square room was like a refuge. A leaping fire in the open grate lit up the bright bindings of the books which lined the walls. A shaded lamp on the big flat-top desk in the middle of the floor shed a circle of orange light against the polished mahogany. The girl at the desk looked up with a smile as Dorinda closed the door.

"Oh, it's lovely in here, Anne." Dorinda laid her book down and went over to the fire. She pulled off her red gloves and stretched out her cold hands to the grateful warmth of the bright flames.

Anne Delahay came and stood beside her. Anne was one of Dorinda's favorite people. She had soft fair hair, wide gray eyes and a low clear voice, the whole enhancing a personality that at their first meeting had aroused an instant response in the other girl. If Dorinda thought, she were really what she pretended to be, she would have made a friend of Anne. For she sensed Anne felt the attraction, too.

"Isn't it a beast of a day?" Anne was saying now. "What are you doing out, Dorinda?"

"Oh, I like to walk in the rain," Dorinda returned absently.

"You seem to have a follower, Dorinda," Anne said, her lips quivering. "Or a secret admirer, perhaps? Anyway, a strange gent outside seems to be taking a great interest in you."

Dorinda held herself rigid. She would not turn to look at the man she knew must be there. A strange gent. That meant Taylor had followed her. Anne would have known any of the town people. He hadn't, after all, believed her.

She shrugged. "Why have I this strange power over men?" She shook her head at Anne in mock dismay. "I won't encourage him by looking but I think it's a salesman from McGregor's who pretended to mistake me for an old girl friend. Do you suppose that's a variation of the 'haven't I seen you before' gag?"

"Could be," Anne laughed. "Apparently he's still trying to follow it up."

"I'll put a stop to that," Dorinda announced firmly.

Playing with matches causes hundreds of children's deaths and serious burns every year. This little girl builds a matchstick house, but she may be building a bon fire if she happens to strike one of these matches by accident.

CHILDREN ARE COMBUSTIBLE

Thousands of Children Die Each Year From Careless Home Fires

One cold winter morning in Baltimore last January a young couple rose early, and after looking in on their children who were still sleeping, went a few doors down the road to open their filling station for the day.

The wife was cleaning around the office, the husband checking the cash when a terrified youngster burst in on them: "Your house is on fire," he shouted, "your house is on fire."

The woman gasped in disbelief, "My house, but . . ." That was impossible. She had left it just a few minutes before. Then in sudden horror she turned to her husband, "The children, John, the children." They ran up to the house where smoke could be seen from the kitchen window. It was impossible to get through the door, the smoke was so thick. Frantically the wife ran around to the side windows where neighbors were already tugging at storm shutters, the women hysterically calling to the four children still in the house. The mother rushed to the windows, started to claw at the shutters, managed to rip the wood off its hinges. She smashed the glass with her fist and pulled herself up into the smoke-filled room.

Rescues Children

Reaching the baby's crib, she crawled with the child in her arms to the window, lifted him out to a neighbor. The woman touched him and shivered. He was already dead. In the meantime, the father had made his way into a rear room, carried out their five-year-old son. Together the husband and wife brought the two other children to the window, just got outside and collapsed themselves. The four children, ranging from eight months to five years, were dead. Smoke and fumes had suffocated them. Firemen found that a kerosene oil stove had caught fire in the kitchen, created the poisonous gases that filtered through the rooms.

One of the youngsters apparently had tried to use the telephone but had lost consciousness, a neighbor reported later. The woman found the party line open when she tried to call the fire department.

The deaths were a cruel blow to the mother and father. But a fact that is more cruel is that it is not an unique accident. It is duplicated in many American homes every day. Thousands of children die in home fires every year. The National Board of Fire Underwriters reports at least 2,000 fire deaths are of children under five years of age, when it is unlikely that they can help themselves in an emergency.

Seeking the causes of fires in which most young children die, the U. S. Office of Education selected at random 800 cases reported in the newspapers.

They found: 165 were caused by stove explosions; 100 by people who tried to quicken a fire with kerosene or gasoline; some 31 children were burned to death while playing with matches.

In 300 of the fires the cause was never found, and the remaining 204 started in various ways, from defective electric cords to spontaneous ignition of oily rags and paint cloths.

Of these 800 children, more than half were under five. The survey showed, too, that in at least 250 cases the children were alone in the house.

Instructions for Sitters

A tragic fire broke out recently when six children were left alone in their upstate New York home overnight. All six children died in the blaze that spread so quickly neighbors couldn't get to their rescue. The parents had been visiting relatives just two miles away.

Children left alone need very few minutes in which to crawl into trouble, the National Board warns. There should always be an adult to Fortunately for this youngster, the portable heater she's playing with has a sturdy guard. Even with that she may get a serious burn.

watch over them. If baby-sitters are left in charge of children, they should be instructed:

1. In case of emergency, to get the children out of the house immediately.
2. To call the fire department after the children are safe. (Leave the number next to the telephone. If there's no phone, see that the baby-sitter knows how to turn in an alarm.)
3. Leave a number where you can be reached during the evening.
4. Always return promptly at the time specified.

Often children are left alone in a room if their mother has gone out to the basement for a minute or two. To safeguard against their creeping into mischief, nothing dangerous should be left within reach. Matches should be placed on a high shelf. If possible, children should be kept out of the kitchen. If they do go into the kitchen, see that pot handles are turned so they won't jut beyond the edge of the stove. Toasters, other electric appliances shouldn't be within reach of youngsters.

Since the stove was found by the government survey to have started one in two fires where the causes were known, that should be the logical place to start a fire-safety check of the entire house. There should be no trouble with a stove if it's properly constructed and tended carefully.

Guard Against Accidents

Perhaps the most important rule to remember with wood or coal stoves is: Don't use gasoline or kerosene to start a fire. They are dangerously explosive. The stove should be cleaned thoroughly before attempting to start a fire. All fuel should be stored away from it.

With kerosene or portable oil stoves, be sure that one you have is listed by Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc. It should be of heavy enough construction and so situated that it can't be tipped over by a child. It should be cleaned and when set down, placed on level floor to avoid tipping. Don't fill it or move it when it's lighted. When using it, be sure the room is properly ventilated. This is especially important in winter nights when windows might be closed.

For children's protection, always keep a metal screen in front of the fireplace to prevent sparks from popping.

Economical Cough Relief! Try This Home Mixture

No Cooking. — Makes Big Saving.
 To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen.
 First, make a syrup with 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.
 Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any drugstore. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.
 Put Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of splendid medicine—about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.
 And for quick, blessed relief, it is surprising. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, eases soreness. Makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.
FOR EXTRA CONVENIENCE GET NEW READY-MIXED, READY-TO-USE PINEX!

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

As we get older, stress and strain, over-exertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.
 If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's gives happy relief—helps the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Is Your Hobby Overly Generous?

By Lawrence Gould

Can a husband be too generous?

Answer: Yes, and not always because he has a guilty conscience. Any normal man gets pleasure out of making his wife happy, but the man who spends more than he can afford on buying his wife presents shows a lack of confidence in himself — or in her. He may be attempting to build up a feeling of his own importance, or trying unconsciously to "buy" love which he feels incapable of winning on his merits. If you know that your love is what mainly makes your wife happy, you'll limit your spending to the family budget.

When individuals find common symbols for these figures (like a national hero who becomes a symbolic "good father") they form a group with "common values to defend, a common enemy, a common leader, and a common standard of behavior."

Should your recreations help you "get ahead"?

Answer: In the main, no. Your pet sport or hobby should bring you release from the tension which pursuing your career creates, and if it is chosen to help you to get ahead, it becomes another form of work, not recreation. Assuming that it is innocent and harmless, the ideal recreation is something that you do purely "for the fun of it," and not for any practical good it will do you. Yet what you enjoy is really profitable in the end, since pleasure in itself gratifies primitive needs which cannot be safely ignored.

Do "parent figures" decide social groupings?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Roger Money-Kyrle in "Psychoanalysis and the Social Sciences." Each of us stores up in his unconscious mind a stock of memories which crystallize as "parent figures," and according as he feels these to be "good" or "bad," he imitates or tries to protect himself against

Coronary Heart Disease in Young

By Dr. James W. Barton

THERE ARE SO MANY middle-aged men and women afflicted with coronary thrombosis, commonly called heart stroke, that we have been thinking of this disease as only found in the middle-aged.

Some months ago I wrote about a group of members of the armed forces, in their twenties, who had been attacked by coronary thrombosis, from which some of them died. It is naturally hard to understand how such young men, who had likely joined the forces in A-1 condition, could be struck down during their war service.

In Archives of Pathology, Chicago, Drs. O. Saphir and I Gore report their study of the blood vessels of the heart of 13 soldiers between the ages of 18 and 29 who died suddenly of severe coronary heart disease. Their examination showed that the hearts of some of these gave evidence of old inflammation from infection some years before they joined the armed forces.

In six of these cases, the heart (examined after death) showed that some of the small blood vessels of the heart gave evidences of inflammation considered characteristic of chronic rheumatic inflammation, though other evidences or remains of rheumatic inflammation of the blood vessels were found in only two. In three of these six, and in four of the remaining cases, old inflammatory changes were present about the large coronary arteries.

What lesson do young men and women learn from the above?

It teaches that an inflammation of the lining of the blood vessels from infection of teeth, tonsils, gall bladder, and other organs, may cause a thickening of the lining of the blood vessels so that it is hard for the blood to pass through the vessels; blood pressure is raised and that part of the heart is deprived of its proper blood supply as with the larger blood vessels (coronary) which causes coronary thrombosis.

Sing Something Purple

The fact that music can bring certain color to mind has long been recognized by psychologists. Two of them, Henry S. Odbert and Theodore F. Karowski, found that—out of 148 college students—39 per cent were able to "see" a color or colors while listening to music. Of the number, 53 per cent were able to associate a color and 31 per cent felt a color response. Newton related colors to the diatonic scale in this manner: Do, red; re, orange; mi, yellow; fa, green; sol, blue; la, indigo; and si, violet. Attempts have been made to fashion color organs and other devices to express the correlation of color and music.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
A New Start

"ALL I WANT is a fresh start," says a tear-spattered letter from Vera, wife of Bill Taylor of Akron, Ohio. "Everything's gone wrong with us," she goes on, "and somehow we can't think how to get it straight. I am 29, Bill 30; we truly love each other, we don't want a divorce. But for two years since my mother died it's been nothing but bad luck, being sorry for each other, and being caught in a groove. We have two children—Tony, who is 6 and Buttercup, 4.

"A confused day like this," continues this discouraged woman, "I feel I have nothing to show for eight years of marriage. My dancing figure, my once pretty hair, my clothes, blankets, curtains, house and farm all a mess! My father and mother lived with us, both invalids, and Bill was wonderful to them, until Dad died in '47 and Mother the next year. They left us hospital and doctor bills of more than $4,000. Bill's salary is $4,800 when taxes are paid, and of that we pay $200 a month or a little more on the bills. Managing on what's left leaves me no room for anything pretty or easy. Now Tony has an eye trouble that will take years to cure; it means clinic visits and doctors, and, of course, anxious strain.

Wants New Start

"So I want a new start. I want to go back to my old office job, board the children with some good woman, see them week ends, and find a room where Bill and I can live for a year or two. Finding an apartment is out of the question. I want to wear smart shirtwaists again, and go to a show now and then. I want someday to start housekeeping with a refrigerator, new linoleum, a gas stove—I feel as if I had to get out or go crazy. The place hasn't been farmed since Bill's father stopped work 10 years ago. Just the sight of these run-down barns and sheds and orchards makes me sick.

"... hasn't been farmed..."

"Last year you wrote an article," Vera's letter concludes, "advising all of us who find ourselves bogged down, to make a plan. To look beyond the present, and spread imaginary wings, and lift ourselves on a plan. Well, this is mine. Can you help me talk Bill over to it?"

Vera, I'm all for a plan for you. But not your plan. Your plan already is clearly indicated; it was outlined when you married a country boy and went out to live on a small farm. You've let the farm, the children, your marriage, and everything else go to seed, and a completely new plan, splitting your family into pieces and practically abandoning the children, wouldn't work at all.

Wonderful Record

You say you've nothing to show for eight years; you've everything to show. And with some realistic planning you can have a lot more. Raising two children, caring for two dependent old persons, being nice to them—that's a wonderful record.

But naturally, with a shabby house, piled-up debt, anxiety about Tony, and a wood stove, you've been beaten down, and you don't see things as they are. At 29 you still can use a year or two in readjustment, and discover that the dancing figure, the pretty clothes, the washing machine and the new stove can all be attained, and undreamed of fun and achievement beyond that.

To pay off $200 a month on a debt is magnificent, and even in your discouragement you must see that that's going to clear off the four thousand in less than two years. Congratulations on your courage on that point.

Then I wouldn't let 42 acres lie idle. If Bill doesn't want to turn farmer, why, there are many couples in our country now, men and women trained for farm work in Europe, longing for a chance like the one you could give them, to retrieve that farm. Government will help them there, and help you, and who knows but when the man is farming the woman could sometimes help you indoors? You may be pretty sure she is used to a wood stove, and thankful to God when she can get wood for it.

Christian Worship

Lesson for November 19, 1950

SOME one has said that if the Christian church did nothing else but offer a regular opportunity for public worship of God, she would have justified her place in the sun. This is a rather misleading truth, for if a church did nothing but worship it would not be doing its whole duty, indeed it would not be a true church. As our Scripture plainly shows, worship disconnected from life is not only not good, it is sinful.

Dr. Foreman

Why Worship?

WHAT is worship, and why do we worship at all? We might define it as a meeting with God, both conscious and desired. "He shines in all that's fair," and in truth we are in his presence all the time. But we are not conscious of him all the time. When we are conscious of him, then one of two things happen. Either we hastily shut our minds and run away from him in fear, which is sin. Or we linger, feeling it is good for us to be here.

And then it is worship. Or again, we might call worship conversation between man and God. Every part of it is either our listening to God speak to us, or our speaking to God in some way.

Why worship? We worship because we love God. Otherwise it would be a bore, at best, or a kind of self-torture at worst. We worship because we need God. If Jesus needed both public worship and private prayer, so do we far more.

Why Worship Together?

PUBLIC and private worship cannot be substituted for each other. Readers of the Bible know how they were intertwined in the experiences of God's people, and how our Lord himself, who used to attend the synagogue services regularly, also sought God on the hills alone. A man who never meets with God alone in prayer will not know how to come to public worship in the true spirit.

We need to worship together with other Christians. We need this experience to strengthen our own prayer-life. We need it to keep us from selfishness in our prayers. Intense, earnest prayer, and full of faith too, may be seriously wrong if it is essentially selfish.

In corporate, public worship we are reminded that none of us stands alone; that God has many children. We need to worship together because it is one of the very few things, perhaps the only one, that all human beings can do as one.

Why Worship As We Do?

IT OUGHT not to be surprising that men worship God in so many ways, for there are all sorts and conditions of men. But within the Protestant churches, our differences are not important. Essentially we have much the same "pattern" of worship.

As you visit other churches from time to time, take note of any differences, not in a spirit of criticism but considering whether you might learn from them. What do you and they have in common?

You will agree that there are hardly any parts of a typical Christian worship service which we could do without. We need the prayers, for in them we all pour out our hearts together before God. We need the hymns and psalms, because they express the beauty and the joy of our faith; most of them are prayers set to music. We need the Scripture reading, because in it we hear the Word of God. We need the sermon, because it applies the Word of God to our own lives and problems. We need the offering too... why? But the offering is true worship only on one condition. Do you know what it is? After all, the real test of every part and variety of true worship is: Has this experience brought man and God closer together in spirit and in truth?

not Beauty alone...

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS...

This is Humphrey Radiantfire Circulator Model 40C—the medium size. Note how the radiant heat—just like heat from the sun—pours out through the open front while warm air rises from the grille on the top to circulate throughout the room, carrying warmth and comfort to every corner.

HUMPHREY RADIANTFIRE

Circulator

The Humphrey Radiantfire Circulator is beautiful. It's the kind of heater you will be proud to have in your home. Decidedly modern appearance and rich finish, with just enough chrome trim for sparkling good taste, make it the finest looking space heater on the market.

But beauty is not the whole Humphrey story... The Radiantfire Circulator gives you healthful, economical heat at the touch of a match. First, radiant heat pours through the open front to warm cold floors and the lower levels of the room. Then, warm air circulates through the grille at the top, carrying comfort to every corner of the room. The gas fuel makes it clean and odorless. And all this wonderful comfort costs just a few cents an hour.

A Humphrey Radiantfire Circulator is just the thing for a chilly room, a summer cottage, or even small homes. Come in today and see the wonderful things a Humphrey Radiantfire Circulator can do for you.

Produce Clean Eggs For Larger Profits

Buyers Will Pay Top Prices for Clean Eggs

Produce clean eggs. Thousands of dollars are lost by poultry raisers every year due to dirty eggs and the resulting deterioration takes place before they are marketed. The prevention of dirty eggs will not only increase the flockowner's income but will build a better market for eggs.

Dirty eggs offer a poor appearance, they cannot be stored successfully and it takes time and money to clean them. Consequently, buyers are willing to pay more for clean eggs which means more profit to the flockowner.

Eggs should be gathered at least three times a day in wire baskets and stored in clean, cool, moist place.

The production of clean eggs and handling them to maintain quality is not difficult. Deep, dry litter, good ventilation and nests well littered with shaving, excelsior, straw, or other nesting material, will keep the birds from getting dirt and stains on the eggs from their feet. Always keep hens in the house on wet, muddy days.

Immediately after gathering, eggs should be stored in the cleanest, coolest and most moist place on the farm. A cellar with a temperature of 45 to 60 degrees is very good.

Home Canning Resumes On Near Wartime Scale

The upward surge of food prices, reflecting troublous events in the far east, finds housewives everywhere mobilizing home canning brigades reminiscent of World War II.

"Veterans of the last home front stand are dusting off their pressure cookers and preparing to lay up record 'peacetime' supplies of fruits and vegetables", says Mary Ann March, chief home economist of Chicago Ekco Products company.

"Countless inquiries received by our test kitchen about the new low-pressure method of cooking indicate a revival of home canning on a near wartime scale," she says.

The low pressure cooker, developed since the end of the world war, permits more efficient canning of fruits, berries and tomatoes than was possible in the early 1940's, because its ability to operate at a pressure of only three and three-quarter pounds assures thorough cooking without destruction of these delicate foods.

Fresh Market Vegetable Tonnage Tops Last Year

The total tonnage of vegetables for fresh market during the 1950 summer season was approximately 4 per cent more than last year, the United States department of agriculture reports.

Substantially larger quantities of onions, watermelons, and cabbage, and more lettuce than last year, were noted in the report. Tonnages of celery, tomatoes and peas were down somewhat.

Consumption of Canned Milk Increases in U. S.

Annual consumption of canned evaporated and condensed milk averages around 20½ pounds per person, a recent survey revealed.

The heat treatment given in sterilizing evaporated milk makes it more easily digested, and therefore, ideal baby food. This use, plus use in tea and coffee, accounts for a large portion of the evaporated milk sales in the United States, the survey concluded.

Plant Starvation Lowers Corn Yield

Lack of Phosphate May Be Factor in Failure

By checking signs of plant food starvation on the corn you harvested this fall, you can take steps to increase yields next year.

For example, if the corn in your crib has a lot of ears like those in the accompanying illustration, the crop was starved for phosphate. The reason for this was that part of the silks came out too late to catch any pollen. The kernels were not fertilized and so failed to fill out. The unfilled rows or parts of rows make the ears lopsided and curled.

Crop starved for phosphate is illustrated by ears above. Ears are twisted and whole rows of kernels failed to fill.

You can add phosphate to the soil next spring through the use of fertilizer carrying this plant nutrient. But well-nourished corn needs other elements besides phosphate. It needs nitrogen and potash, too. So the surest way to keep your corn healthy and well fed and to get high yields per acre, is to give your soil a balanced supply of plant foods carrying all three major elements—nitrogen, phosphate and potash.

Good soil tilth is another essential for getting high corn yields. You can build tilth and put the soil in prime condition for growing corn, alfalfa and sweet clover, mellow the soil, loosen tight compactions below the plow layer and make the soil more porous so water and air can get in.

USDA Recommends DDT For Termite Control

The U. S. department of agriculture has come up with the answer for one of the farmers' serious problems—termites.

The USDA says a single treatment of DDT will prevent termites from attacking woodwork for at least five years and anyone can apply the treatment. Here's the mixture to use: 5 per cent DDT in No. 2 fuel oil. It will give wooden structures complete protection from termites.

Entomologists suggest digging a trench along the building's foundation—about 30 inches deep and about the width of a spade. Then the earth should be saturated at the bottom with the DDT preparation. The soil which is used to fill up the trench also should be saturated. Apply the treatment at the rate of one quart per cubic foot of soil.

Reasonable Care Will Extend Life of Pillow

Pillows don't need a lot of special care, but reasonable attention will extend their serviceability. They should be aired outdoors often in cool, dry air, or placed on a chair near an open window. Airing not only clears the pillows of possible dust but also helps prevent lumping of feathers. A simple daily routine is to remove cases and fluff the pillows when making the bed. Individual Lifetime Meat Quota Set at 55 Animals

Your lifetime quota of meat in terms of live animals represent 33 hogs, 10 lambs, 8 steers and 4 veal calves, a livestock publication reports.

That's provided you live to be 68.3 years of age—the life expectancy of a man born in the United States today.

The data was based upon actual consumption of the amount of meat eaten by the average person over a 52 year period. Since the turn of the century, average per capita meat consumption has been 67 pounds of pork, 61 pounds of beef, 7.5 pounds of veal and 6 pounds of lamb.

"Since the beginning of the century," the publication said, "the high point in per capita meat consumption was reached in 1918 at 163 pounds. The low point was 117 pounds in 1935. Since that time, however, meat consumption per capita has been fluctuating around 150 pounds per year."

Turkey, Pumpkin Pie Will Vie for Honors At Thanksgiving Table

AS THE FROST gathers on the pumpkins, it's time to start making plans for the bountiful feast of Thanksgiving. Here's an excellent opportunity for parading the colors of fall as well as the fruits of harvest.

Smart homemakers will plan the menu around simple foods, part of which can be prepared a day or two before the day of Thanksgiving. Then, they, too, will be able to be thankful for planning which didn't force them into the kitchen for the whole day.

With the menu I've planned for this special occasion, you may clean and stuff the turkey the day before. Refrigerate both bird and stuffing before putting together to avoid spoilage. That leaves only the roasting to be done on Thanksgiving.

Chestnut Stuffing (For 16-pound bird)

- 1/2 pound butter
- 1 pound chestnuts, cooked and chopped
- 3 quarts toasted bread cubes
- 1 1/4 teaspoons salt
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 1 1/2 cups hot water

Melt butter, and add bread cubes, salt, celery, onion, parsley, chestnuts and seasoning. Mix thoroughly. Add hot water to moisten.

When bird is stuffed, estimate the weight of bird by adding 25 per cent to the dressed weight so that total cooking time may be determined. Lay, breast side down, in a shallow baking pan, in a V-shaped rack. Bake uncovered at 325° half the estimated baking time, then breast up until the cooking is completed. Brush the skin lightly with unsalted fat, such as lard, to prevent blistering. If desired, cover with a cheesecloth, lightly moistened with fat, to prevent drying out. Remove the cloth during the last half of the roasting period if the bird is not evenly browned. Roast a 10-16 pound bird 18-20 minutes per pound.

Remove the cloth during the last half of the roasting period if the bird is not evenly browned. Roast a 10-16 pound bird 18-20 minutes per pound.

Glazed Onions (Serves 8-10)

- 3 dozen small white onions
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 cup stock or water
- Salt and paprika
- 2 tablespoons sugar

Peel onions, cook five minutes in boiling salted water, drain thoroughly, and turn into small baking dish with butter, stock or water, salt, and paprika. Cover and bake in moderately hot oven (375°) half an hour; then remove cover, sprinkle with sugar, and allow onions to brown.

Cranberried Sweet Potatoes (Serves 8)

- 2 cups cranberries, chopped
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 1/2 cup walnuts, chopped
- 1 tart apple, peeled and sliced

The regal bird, tender and brown from the oven should be placed on a platter large enough to hold it easily. Bright red cranberries in peach halves give it a lovely garnish.

Pumpkin pie appears at the table dressed up with leaves cut from thin slices of cheese. Make a leaf pattern from cardboard, place on thin slice of American cheese and cut out with sharp knife.

THANKSGIVING DINNER

- *Recipe Given

1/2 cup brown sugar
8 cooked sweet potatoes

Combine all ingredients, with exception of sweet potatoes, and mix well. Cut sweet potatoes in half and remove several tablespoons pulp from center of each half. Reserve pulp for later use in stuffing or as a vegetable. Fill hollowed potatoes with a cranberry mixture. Sprinkle with additional brown sugar for a shiny glaze. Place under broiler until hot and bubbling. Serve at once.

Perfection Salad (Serves 8)

- 2 tablespoons gelatin
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 2 cups boiling water
- 1/4 cup mild vinegar
- 1/4 cup pineapple juice
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup finely shredded cabbage
- 2 cups finely diced celery
- 3 tablespoons diced pimiento or red pepper

Soften gelatin five minutes in cold water. Add boiling water and stir until dissolved. Add vinegar, pineapple juice, sugar and salt. Chill. When almost set, stir in vegetables lightly. Turn into previously wet individual molds and chill. Unmold, garnish with lettuce, mayonnaise.

Custard Pumpkin Pie (Makes 1 9-inch pie)

- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 2 cups, cooked or canned pumpkin
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ginger
- 1/4 teaspoon cloves
- 1 1/2 cups evaporated milk, top milk, or light cream
- 1 9-inch unbaked pastry shell

Combine eggs and pumpkin and blend. Mix sugar, salt, and spices and add to pumpkin mixture. Blend in evaporated milk. Pour into pastry shell. Bake in a hot oven (425°) 15 minutes. Reduce temperature to moderate (350°) and continue baking 45 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean.

Mincemeat Custard Pie (Makes 1 9-inch pie)

- 1 9-inch unbaked pastry shell
- 1 1/2 cups mincemeat
- 3 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups milk
- Nutmeg
- Cheese

Line a 9-inch pie pan with pastry, fluting edges. Spread mincemeat evenly over pastry. Combine eggs, sugar, salt and milk; pour over mincemeat. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Bake in a hot oven (450°) for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate oven (350°) and bake 30 minutes more, or until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Serve warm with cheese.

Soft Water Ration Ups Milk Production Fifty Percent Increase Shown From Experiments

The effects of soft water on milk production of cows was reported at a recent meeting of the Sheboygan County Holstein Breeders association meeting at Plymouth, Wis.

Milk production of two test cows increased up to 50 percent when cows were switched from hard water to a soft water ration.

One animal, a high production Holstein-Friesian, had never exceeded an 80-pound daily production until fed soft water. The animal, Sethe Della Forber (Reg. No. 2,356-827) increased milk flow to 121 pounds, 50 percent greater than her previous high.

E. J. Culligan is shown above with one of the animals used in his aerated soft water ration test. The animal increased milk production as much as 50 percent when switched from hard water.

Previous records show that this same cow produced an average of 55.8 pounds of milk per day for three months following the birth of her first calf in 1946. After the second calf the following year her average was 68.6 pounds, and then the average was 55.7 and 72.1 pounds after the birth of succeeding calves. Thirty days before this cow was to have her fifth calf she was given aerated soft water to drink in place of the 19 grain hard water previously supplied. Her average production jumped to 102.7 pounds for the 90-day period following the calving.

The experiment was conducted by E. J. Culligan of Northbrook, Ill.
