Williams Turkeys Ready for Market

As the month of November rolls around, our thoughts center on Thanksgiving. Thanksgiving means turkeys and turkeys in this area mean Mr. and Mrs. Bryant Williams of Hope, New Mexico. At the present time, they have slightly over 4000 birds.

In the past, Mr. and Mrs. Williams have had the turkey eggs shipped to them and then hatched in the local hatchery, but they hope to have live polts flown in for their turkey crop next year. Mrs. Williams says, "In the past, we have been troubled with diseased eggs and we feel that if we buy live polts that it will reduce our initial losses." The Williams' farm is equipped with seven electric brooders to care for these polts.

The special concentrate which is fed these turkeys is the greatest expense, but this scientific preparation improves the texture of the fowl and adds to their market value.

Mr. Williams furnishes the majority of the families in this area with their turkeys for Thanksgiving, as well as shipping them to Albuquerque, Roswell and Carlsbad, New Mexico; El Paso and Lubbock, Texas.—Southwest REA News.

Yes sir, the above item is absolutely correct. The people of Hope are also good boosters for the Williams products. We eat turkeys at Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Years and most any time of the year, especially in the dark of the moon.

Loco Hills to Have Electricity

The following article was featured in Artesia's advertisement in the November issue of the New Mexico magazine.

"Situating in the sandhill country of Eastern Eddy County on Highway 83, the impact of oil production in the Loco Hills vicinity upon the New Mexico economy is tremendous.

A $263,464 project, including 105 miles of power line and a 5000-KVA substation, serving 201 rural homes and 98 oil wells at the outset, will be completed this year by the Central Valley Electric Co-operative, Inc., of Artesia. The families who keep vital petroleum flowing in these critical times, as well as ranchers, will soon enjoy the advantages of electrical service.

Eventually, about 400 oil wells will be operated electrically near Loco Hills, for increased efficiency in either routine or emergency operation. Central Valley Electric purchases power from Southwestern Public Service.

Officials of the cooperative and Artesia civic leaders have worked ceaselessly to insure this benefit for Loco Hills.

The contractor, The City Gas & Electric Company of Fort Sumner, has received most of the material for this project. The remaining material is due to be shipped within the next few days. All equipment for the 5000KVA substation is scheduled to be shipped within the next 30 days. If this material is received as scheduled, progress of the construction will be speeded up.—Southwest REA News.

Hope to Have Free Library

Miss Alice M. Lewis, field librarian for the state library commission was in Hope last week and made arrangements for the opening of a free circulating library in the town hall. About 500 books will be sent as a starter. Several of the high school girls will be in charge of the library which will be open several afternoons a week.

Special Church Services Sunday

Next Sunday, Nov. 26, there will be special church services at the Methodist church with Sunday School at 10 a. m. Morning services at 11 a. m. Sermon by L. B. Trone, district superintendent. Covered dish luncheon in the basement at the noon hour. Evening services at 7:30 p. m. Missionary talk on Portuguese West Africa by Mrs. E. Cooper. An offering will be taken for missionary work in foreign lands.

Mrs. Ida Shelton Dies in Denver

Graveside burial services for Mrs. Ida Louise Shelton, long-time Eddy County resident, who died Friday evening at the home of her daughter in Denver, will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday in Carlsbad cemetery with the Rev. J. Melvin Ray officiating.

Mrs. Shelton, who lived in Hope for 42 years, was 74 years old. Her late husband was a farmer there.

Funeral services will be held in Denver at 2:30 p. m. and the body will be sent here for burial.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Jay Leek of Carlsbad and Mrs. Bob Lippard of Denver and a sister, Mrs. Emma Smith of Houston.

Pallbearers will be Roy Jacobs, M. C. Moore, Tom Woods, Wayne Cowden, Ray V. Davis and E. W. Hodnett.—Carlsbad Current-Argus.

(EDITORIAL)

Last week one morning at the breakfast table, Bryant Williams gave orders that his tuxedo should be cleaned and pressed and his shoes shined because he is leaving for Washington, D. C., right after the first of the year, to contact Jack Dempsey in regard to having the Hope Retard Dam cleaned out and an extension of about five feet put on top. As a goodwill offering, Mr. Williams could bring along one of his A-1 turkeys and present it to Jack Dempsey which would put Mr. Dempsey in the right frame of mind if anything would. But to lay all jokes aside, we think Mr. Williams would be the right man to go to Washington to try to get something started in regard to our dam. It's a sure thing we are not going to get anything without asking for it.

For the last 50 years, Lawrence Blakeney has been the main wheel horse and the standard bearer for the Republican party in the Hope precinct. Now that Mr. Mechem has been elected governor, we think it is not more than right that Mr. Blakeney should be rewarded for his untiring efforts during the past half century. We are going to see Bill Dunnam about this and perhaps something can be worked out.

Last week we read about some boys getting killed and injured in a car wreck due to reckless driving. The other morning we saw a Hope high school student come down the main street in Hope and when right in front of the post office, he swung to the right and made a sharp turn to the left. He was one of these smart squirts that we have mentioned before in the News. Drivers like this is what causes accidents and accidents sometimes kill people or injure them for life. Let's try and do something about this fast and reckless driving past the school and through the streets of Hope.

I like hunting season because it brings out the boy in a man. I have never seen such preparation as our friends make for camping. Well after its all said about the most fun in hunting is in camping out. When you find a man who likes to fish and hunt, you find a pretty good man. They had a lot of fun in spite of zero weather.—Lloyd P. Bloodworth in the Ruidoso News.

I wonder if Mr. Bloodworth has ever heard about the hunters who take a bottle or two of snake medicine along with them and lay around camp doctoring up on snake medicine. One hunter from Texas got as far as the bar in Mayhill and there he stayed. When he got home he bragged about what fun he had had on his hunting trip.

Thursday, Nov. 23, was Thanksgiving Day. There was not much activity around Hope. A few families celebrated with a big dinner and others had their dinners out. Some went to the football game at Hobbs and others just stayed at home. Just as a reminder we might state that the First National Thanksgiving Day was proclaimed by George Washington, Nov. 26, 1789. Abraham Lincoln revived the custom in 1864 appointing as the date the fourth Thursday in November. The day is observed by church services and family reunions; the customary turkey is a reminder of the wild turkeys served at the Pilgrim's first Thanksgiving feast.

Mrs. J. C. Buckner and son Hollis spent Thanksgiving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Buckner in Roswell.

The town board is making arrangements for a party on Saturday night, Dec. 8 at the town hall.

Prices Lower For Turkeys Than in 1949

It looks like a better turkey year for Carlsbad customers.

A survey of grocery stores indicated that the Christmas bird may be nearly 10 cents a pound cheaper than last year. And all stores said there will be plenty of turkeys available.

From a farm at Hope, that raises several thousand turkeys a year, from the Texas plains around Lubbock, from Brownwood and even as close as La Huerta, turkeys are being brought to Carlsbad. All over the Southwest it's a banner year for the turkey crop, grocers said.

Decrease in price prospect is due to the increase in turkey supply and to the fact the price was "extra high" last year, one retailer noted.

"The larger the turkey, the cheaper its price per pound," he pointed out for prospective purchasers.

He estimated price range to be established at his store next week as starting from somewhere in the low 50s and a top price of not over 69 cents. Another retailer gauged his price range as 55 to 65 cents, compared to last year's average 65 to 73 cents.

A third grocery said that its frozen turkeys were a specialty that Carlsbad would get a better price on than any other New Mexico community. Toms will be 49 to 59 cents, the manager said, with hens priced from about 65 to 69 cents.

Frozen turkeys ranging about the same in price were reported at a fourth store.

Several hundred turkeys raised by a Hope farmer and rancher, Bryant Williams, will be on the market here and about 150 turkeys raised by Francis G. Tracy, La Huerta farmer, already have been sold to retail trade.—Carlsbad Current-Argus.

We want to make a correction on the above item. Instead of several hundred turkeys, Mr. Williams has raised over 5000 turkeys this year. He finds a ready market for his products in El Paso, Carlsbad, Alamogordo, Lubbock and Amarillo and Hope.

Eddy Countians Invest in Bonds

Residents of Eddy County invested $31,467.75 in U.S. Savings Bonds during October, L. B. Feather, chairman of this county's Savings Bonds Committee, has reported. This amount helped to boost sales in the state last month to 11.3 per cent over those in September and 7.7 per cent over August.

"Series E Bond purchases month by month are more indicative of trends than total sales of all three series combined, as given above," said the chairman. "Investments in F and G Bonds usually reflect purchases by organizations and so-called 'heavy' investors, and are naturally not on a monthly basis," he pointed out. "Whereas, one purchaser in the county might invest $100,000 in Series F's or G's, it would take two thousand six hundred and sixty-six (2666%) people each buying a $50 bond (costing $37.50) to equal that amount."

"Series E Bond purchases totaled $25,368.75 last month in this county," continued Mr. Feather. "In September the total for E's was $28,818.75 and $12,300 in August."

"This month and next a special campaign is underway to enroll as many wage and salary earners as possible on a payroll savings plan," the chairman said. "Over 21,000 large firms already offer this easy, automatic method of buying bonds to their employees. We see no reason why the 2½ million firms employing fewer than 100 people each should not offer their employees the same privilege."

"Employees pay taxes, insurance, etc. on the installment plan and they should have a chance to buy bonds the same way," concluded the chairman.

Card of Thanks

May God richly bless the ones who so kindly helped us with their words, deeds and floral offerings during the illness and death of our loved one.—W. M. Keller, Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Keller and family; Mr. and Mrs. Pete Jackson; Mr. and Mrs. Gene Kinder and family; Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Keller and Mary Jane Davis.

Funeral Services For Mrs. Keller Held Saturday

Funeral services for Mrs. W. M. Keller, 63, who died in a Denver City, Texas, hospital last week Thursday, were conducted at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Artesia Methodist Church with Rev. R. L. Willingham and Rev. E. Cooper officiating.

Mrs. Keller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Riley Ashlock, was born July 24, 1887, in Kentucky and on her 17th birthday married William M. Keller in Texas.

They were the parents of six children, four of whom are still living. They came to Hope in 1910.

Survivors are her husband, William M. Keller; two sons, Aubrey of Ventura, Calif., and R. Hoyt of Riverton, Wyo.; two daughters Mrs. Pete Jackson, Carlsbad, and Mrs. Gene Kinder, Denver City; four grandchildren; a brother and four sisters. Paulin Funeral Home of Artesia were in charge of the arrangements.

The time is 7:30 and the price is only 25 and 50 cents. The horror is mixed with touches of humor making it a very interesting play. We will take sewing in Home Ec after Thanksgiving. We hope we will not make a laughing stock of ourselves. We are having six weeks tests this week and hope we can at least pass. The Home Ec girls wish you a Happy Thanksgiving Season and hope you will be one of the lucky ones to have turkey on Thanksgiving Day.—Babe Ann, reporter.

Premature Pasturing May Ruin New Alfalfa Stand

A little premature pasturing can ruin what is now a fine stand of new alfalfa, Michigan State college extension authorities report. Seedlings with spring grain crops have brought good stands.

But with good growth, some farmers may be eager to use the crop for pasture late this fall. This, the crops authority says, will weaken the plants so they may be killed during the winter.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Republicans Make Sweeping Gains For Both Senate and House Seats; Korean Situation Is Called Serious

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western News-Service Editor's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

An estimated 80,000 Chinese Communists are reported driving southward (broken arrows) in an attempt to split U.N. forces. U.N. troops withdrew, although some units were surrounded and cut to pieces. Observers report the Korean situation serious.

ELECTION:

Republicans Gain

Taking the administration by surprise, the Republican party made sweeping gains in the senate and house in one of the most hotly contested national elections in years.

As final tabulations were being completed, observers believed that the Democrats would retain 49 senate seats and the Republicans would have 47. To all practical purposes the Republicans will have a working majority in the senate and will control legislative voting with the aid of rebellious southern Democrats.

In the house the Republicans made sweeping gains, but not enough for control.

Most startling aspect of the election, in the opinion of most observers, was the defeat of such men as Democrat Sen. Millard E. Tydings of Maryland and Sen. Scott Lucas of Illinois.

Lucas was the Democratic majority leader in the senate and Tydings was a strong supporter of the administration and the state department.

In Ohio, Sen. Robert A. Taft won a resounding victory over the labor-Truman purge attempt. Foreign policy played an important part in Taft's campaign and the results of the battle may shake the foundations of the Republican party. Some observers saw Taft's victory as a plain indication that the people were not happy with the administration's foreign policy.

The administration took another blow in Connecticut. Republican John Davis Lodge ousted Fair Deal Democrat Chester Bowles in the governor's contest. Democrat Sen. Erien McMahon, however, was re-elected.

In New York, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, twice-defeated Republican nominee for president, won a third term as governor of that state. The governor's running mate, Lt. Gov. Joe R. Hanley, was defeated by Sen. Herbert Lehman. Here again was evidence of that trend where neither Republicans or Democrats were able to sweep all offices. This split across party lines was evident in many sections of the country.

In California, Republican Gov. Earl Warren, seeking a third term, won re-election over James Roosevelt, son of the late President. Rep. Richard M. Nixon also defeated Democrat Helen Gahagan Douglas in a senatorial battle.

In a congressional fight that attracted nation-wide attention, American-Labor party Rep. Vito Marcantonio of New York, the only minor party representative in the house, was unseated by a Democratic-Republican-Liberal coalition formed for the sole purpose of beating him. Marcantonio's foes charged that he followed every twist and turn of the Communist party line during his service in the house.

As final tabulations were compiled, observers agreed that Democratic control of the senate and house was so slight it did not constitute a safe working majority. As a result, the next two years will see a number of bitter battles on legislation and much of it being passed or killed by incredible small margins.

Headliners

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey added a marathon television show to his list of political-campaigning devices. He had Mrs. Dewey on the show with him a while. He asked her, "Why don't you take your hat off." She replied, "Because my hair's a mess. Why do things like this happen just when I need a permanent?"

"The Communists committed one of the most offensive acts of international lawlessness of historic record," Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in his report on Chinese intervention in North Korea.

George Bernard Shaw, Irish author and wit, who died at the age of 94, for years had kept the world in a whirl with his use of words. Here are some Shavianisms: Success—"The secret of success is to offend the greatest number of people." Truth—"The truth is the one thing nobody will believe." Love—"Sir, there are two tragedies in life. One is to lose your heart's desire. The other is to gain it."

KOREA:

Situation Serious

The war in Korea which seemed on the verge of complete victory for the United Nations forces took a dangerous turn with the invasion of Chinese Communists. Political observers termed the situation serious, including Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the U. N. commander.

According to available reports, between three and six Chinese divisions crossed the boundary between Manchuria and Korea and went into battle beside the North Koreans. The immediate military result was a withdrawal of U. N. troops south, in some instances as much as 50 miles.

MacArthur summed up the situation by reporting that the North Korean army was finished as a fighting force in October by the inflicting of 335,000 casualties. This included 135,000 Reds who were captured.

His communique on the situation said: "In the face of this victory of U.N. arms, the Communists committed one of the most offensive acts of international lawlessness of historic record . . ."

There are available in Manchuria about 300,000 troops—veterans of the Chinese civil war—which could be thrown into the battle immediately. Another 300,000 are believed to be either in Manchuria or North China.

The dangerous question now facing the free nations is what attitude the Chinese will take to MacArthur's charge that "alien Communists" have entered the war.

Whether the Communist world is prepared to take this colossal step is a secret, most probably locked in the depths of the Kremlin.

If the Communists are ready to take this risk it may mean the start of World War III and the end of the world as we have known it.

GERM-WARFARE:

Infected Rats Found

One of the most frightening and horrible discoveries of the Korean conflict was made public when the army disclosed it had found five thousand rats and mice innoculated with deadly plague and other germs in a secret laboratory near Pyongyang.

The army reported more than 5,000 rats and mice were innoculated with such diseases as bubonic plague, encephalitis, and euryrady fever immediately after the U.N. landing at Inchon.

Only 380 of the carriers were alive when discovered and 200 of these were mad from hunger. None were believed to have escaped from their sealed cages, though fleas from the dead animals might spread disease.

The project was reported under the supervision of a Russian woman scientist who fled northward after the landing.

The animals were kept in cages in groups of from two to 20. They were well fed and their furs sprayed with a chemical that encouraged the multiplication of fleas.

The discovery will provide a clue to the type of germ-warfare experimentation Communist countries might be carrying out and give the free nations of the world an indication as to what horrors the Communist will resort.

After four years the United Nations had lifted its diplomatic ban against the Spanish government. The action accomplished two objectives:

1. It withdrew the 1946 recommendation to all U. N. members that they withdraw ambassadors and ministers from Madrid.
2. It lifted the 1946 ban against admission of Spain to the U. N.'s specialized agencies.

The United States, however, will not return an ambassador to Madrid. President Truman said publicly recently he would not appoint one.

The U. N.'s resolution left intact the condemnation of the Franco regime for its aid to the Axis during World War II.

The United States voted in favor of removing the boycott which was spearheaded by Catholic Latin American nations.

Ban Is Lifted

Revolutionist

Pedro Albizu Campos, Harvard graduate, leader of the Nationalist party that threw Puerto Rico in turmoil, was arrested after the attempt to assassinate President Truman. FBI agents were trying to connect him with the attempt on the President's life.

WORLD WAR III:

Thunder Can Be Heard

The capitals of the world trembled because many observers believed they heard the thunder of World War III on the horizon.

The thunder was caused by Communist China which adopted the attitude that "American intervention in Korea signals an intention to invade China."

All Communist dispatches and broadcasts hammered out the same recurrent themes:

1. The Chinese Communists will oppose "American imperialist aggressors" with concrete action.
2. American use of the atom bomb will mean retaliation in kind.

Observers were further troubled because the Chinese evidently meant business. From three to six Chinese divisions had been identified in action in Korea against United Nations forces. They forced U. N. troops to make withdrawals, and, from early reports, intended to continue their march south.

No one in his right mind can overlook the fact that China could be the strongest nation in the world. The Chinese Communist armies already are estimated at 5,000,000 men of whom 1,000,000 are in Manchuria. Peiping recently announced organization of 5,500,000 armed militia, bringing the country's armed strength to more than 10,000,000.

International Show Opens November 25

Cattle Class Prizes Largest Ever Offered

The 51st International Live Stock Exposition will be held this year in the Chicago stock yards from November 25 through December 2.

Increased prize money for the show should help to encourage the exhibition of top livestock from both the United States and Canada, exposition officials reported.

Prizes for all cattle classes will be $61,370, the largest total ever offered. Many prize increases made in other breeds to mark the occasion of the golden jubilee show of 1949 are retained this year.

Dr. A. B. Weber, of Kansas State college, will judge the steers again this year. He is the only American to judge these classes since the exposition departed from the custom of having foreign judges two years ago.

Other features in connection with the international that have been familiar in the years since 1900 include the grain and hay show, recognized as the world's largest competitive showing of farm crops.

An international grand champion steer is shown above with owners, Cleo Yoder of Iowa, Henry W. Marshall, exposition chairman, and Dr. A. D. Weber who is slated to judge steers again this year.

The increase in cost of farm operation has been accompanied by some phenomenal changes in the composition of expenses. Machinery expense made up only 14 per cent of the total in 1935-39 while in 1947-49 it accounted for 21 per cent. Also, farmers are spending proportionately more for feed, fertilizer and crop expense than they spent 15 years ago.

These changes have been accompanied by a substantial increase in man labor efficiency on farms.

Farm Expenses Increased Five Fold in Past Decade

Farm expenses have increased almost five-fold over the past decade and not many farmers would care to return to the "good old days" of low expenses—if they had to accept the level of income that accompanied them.

Improved Seed Flat

An idea that might be useful when growing next spring's plants is the seed box with removable sides as shown in the above illustration.

The sides are nailed together and attached to the bottom by means of hooks and screw-eyes. When the plants are large enough to be transplanted from the flat, the sides are unhooked and lifted up from the bottom, the soil with the plants in it remaining undisturbed on the bottom board. The plants are then easily separated and pulled up. When ready to use again, the sides are hooked to the bottom, and the flat filled with new soil. Very little root disturbance will result when the small plants are cut from the mass of soil with earth clinging to their roots.

the yards last year to reduce livestock losses through bruising.

The yards will keep seven-month records on every livestock trucker bringing livestock to the yards. They will check arriving loads for dead, cripples or obvious bruising.

At the end of the program, drivers with the best records will be rewarded at a truckers' jamboree which contest officials will hold April 6 in the international amphitheatre, home of the International Livestock Exposition.

Livestock farmers will benefit most from the campaign since they share a large part of the cost of this annual loss.

'Aim' Pullets for Top Fall Egg Production

Will your pullets be in top production this fall when egg prices are best? They should if you "aim them" by practicing good management, using careful sanitation measures and feeding sufficient amounts of a balanced ration, poultry experts report.

Too many good poultrymen are still inclined to allow their growing pullets to coast along on range or a poor growing ration. Since growing pullets are not producing income, some producers are willing to grow them at the lowest immediate out-of-the-pocket cost. What they should realize is that they are building the production machines that will pay off during the fall and winter months.

It must be remembered that pullets must consume sufficient feed for body growth and sexual maturity before laying any eggs. It is just a question of whether to grow out pullets during the growing period or at the time they should be producing eggs.

To get pullets in production early, poultry experts recommend getting them on clean range, feed them ample quantities of the best ration.

Tight Rope

By Allison L. Burks

Stella Moore, unemployed secretary, masquerading as Dorinda LaCroix, is recognized by a salesman with whom she once went out on a date. Stella has taken the position because she has been told it will help keep the real Dorinda's grandmother alive. Dorinda died in a life boat as she and her uncle Edward were returning to the United States after the Nazis had invaded Paris where Dorinda was living. Stella's masquerade is known only to Edward Thorndyke and his cousin, the beautiful Fay, who is in love with Edward and plans to marry him. Anne Delahay, town librarian and Stella's friend, notes the salesman has been following Stella. She tells Stella that the man showed a suspicious interest in her.

CHAPTER II

But when she came out of the library, Taylor had gone. If he were lurking somewhere near, she did not see him.

She was, she congratulated herself, rid of him. But when she came into the open country once more, it seemed to her she could hear footsteps behind her. She listened intently and knew she was right. Someone followed her, someone who hurried when she hurried, lagged when she lagged.

He came closer to her. He had a sallow, fox-like face, exultant now, as if he felt in waiting for him she had admitted that he was, after all, no stranger to her as she had claimed so short a time before.

"Hello, Miss LaCroix alias Miss Moore, alias—or is that all? What's the game really? Are you Miss Moore masquerading as Miss LaCroix or was Miss La Croix merely having a little fling in town as Miss Moore? So you've decided to wait and talk it over, eh?"

Uncle Edward Perturbed By Dorinda's Report

"I wanted to be done with this once and for all," Dorinda said shortly. "I don't know whether you're sincere in pretending you know me or not. But I do know that if you follow me any farther, I shall complain to the police. I fancy it wouldn't do you any good with your employers if you were arrested for annoying one of Mr. McGregor's customers."

He glared at her through narrowed lids. "So you're going to bluff it out, are you? Don't you think I know that you and the Moore girl are one and the same? Maybe you're up to some kind of racket. I wouldn't know. Come on, admit you're stalling."

"You heard what I said," Dorinda's voice gave no indication of the panic inside her. "I'm going into town again and lodge a complaint against you." She took a step back toward the village.

He lifted his hat in ironic courtesy and walked away from her.

Although it was not yet six o'clock, darkness had fallen when Dorinda turned in at the Thorndyke gate. Windows were pale yellow oblongs in the dark walls of the house.

Inside warmth closed in about her. The softness of thick red carpeting under her feet, the paneled walls of dark oak, even the curving graciousness of the wide stairway, and best of all, the closed door behind her that shut out the darkness, gave her the feeling of a small animal that, pursued by the hounds, has at last reached safe haven.

The illusion of sanctuary was shattered as Edward Thorndyke appeared in the door of the living room. Odd, she was like this with him. At first there had been a strangeness, naturally, but as the weeks went by, the strangeness was gone. For a while she was more at ease with him than with anyone else—they were partners in a harmless conspiracy. Not even with Fay had she had that feeling of partnership, for she was aware of Fay's disapproval even though Fay had in the beginning persuaded her to come here.

There was a rattle in Edward's suaveness when he spoke. "You're late, Dorinda. I don't like this—your being out in the dark. I was afraid something had happened."

"I saw someone who knew me—not really knew me—but had been out with me one time back in Los Angeles." The words stumbled on her lips. She had done nothing, yet her impulse was toward apology.

Whatever he had expected, it had not been this. Wariness touched his face, wariness and an emotion almost akin to anger. "But you told me you knew nobody there!"

"I didn't. Not really know anyone. But even though I wasn't there long, there had to be some contacts. This—this was a salesman who took me out to dinner once."

"But you'd known him before that?"

"No, I only saw him the one time. You see—"

He interrupted her, a note of relief in his voice. "Here's Fay. She'd better hear this."

Fay, beautiful, disturbing Fay. Dorinda remembered the first time she had seen her in that dingy office room ten stories above the street. She had thought then that Fay surely must be the loveliest woman in all the world. She wasn't young—in the middle or late thirties perhaps, though you never thought of age in connection with her. But it had taken years, more than youth could know, to acquire that finished, flawless perfection of her strange beauty.

"We've run into a little trouble," he said shortly. "Whether it's serious or not I don't know. Go on, Dorinda. Wait, where's Harriet and Lana, Fay? We don't want them bursting in on this."

"Upstairs," she told him.

Edward Thorndyke had been at the desk.

"Lana's dressing and Harriet's helping. You know—or rather you don't know—what a complicated process that is. They'll be occupied for another hour at least."

"Good." He turned back to Dorinda, nodded for her to go on.

Stammering a little under their close and undivided attention, she recounted the happenings of the afternoon. "And I couldn't make him believe me," she finished, a little desperately.

It must have been a full minute before Fay's husky voice punctured the silence.

"Evidently this man, this salesman, is determined to make trouble. But I don't see what he can do if we act wisely ourselves." Her vivid eyes shifted to Edward's face. "I think it's time for the final curtain anyway, Edward. After all, we've accomplished as much as we hoped to do. Your mother is much better, as well in all probability as she will ever be. Don't you agree with me?"

Dorinda Recalls Details Leading To Taking Job

"I expect you're right. I had planned to wait a little longer but perhaps this way is best. We'll send my little 'niece'"—he smiled at Dorinda—"back to town in a couple of days. Will you be sorry to go, my dear?"

"No," she said simply. "I'll be glad. Instead of being easier, this masquerade, as Fay calls it, has been getting more difficult all the time. I guess I wasn't meant for deceit."

Edward sighed. "I was afraid you felt like that."

She saw a flutter of white as she rounded the turn in the stair. Mrs. Thorndyke's nurse came down a few steps to meet her. "I was looking for you, Miss Dorinda. Mrs. Thorndyke has been asking for you. Stop and see her for a little while before you go down to dinner, will you?"

"Of course, Carol." Mrs. Thorndyke, Dorinda thought, was the one person about whom she had no mental reservations. She really loved her. During these last few months she had almost come to believe that Grandmother really did belong to her. She'd hate leaving her. And Cleve? It was as if a voice whispered the words. She pushed the thought away from her. She wouldn't, she mustn't, think about him.

Eighteen months before, Stella Moore, not yet become Dorinda, had lost both father and mother in one fatal accident when the car in which they were riding stalled on the track before an eastbound train. In that single moment, the girl's whole life had changed. She had been preparing herself for college the following year. Now she had to prepare instead to earn her own living. The small amount of money left had been barely enough to take her through business school and to bring her to Los Angeles.

So she came to the city. But it didn't prove a city of the angels to her. She found work readily enough but she made no friends and she was almost unbearably lonely. And then a final misfortune occurred. She fell and broke her wrist.

It was not a complicated fracture. With the aid of youth and good blood, it was healing rapidly, but it would be weeks before she could use it. She had only a little money left. And what kind of work could a stenographer with a broken wrist do? She had about come to the conclusion that there was none when she saw the advertisement.

"Wanted," it said; "young woman to appear in amateur play. Must be brown-eyed blonde. Ability to speak French essential. No experience required. Excellent pay." And the address.

Dorinda 'Exact Type' Needed for Scheme

It was an answer to prayer. An amateur play. A weak wrist wouldn't be a detriment there. And she could speak French—she'd been brought up on French. Her father, a soldier in the last war, had married a pretty Parisian—her mother—and brought her home.

But her heart had sunk when she reached the address, for the office room and even the hall outside was thronged with blondes, real and synthetic, pretty and plain. It was evident she wasn't the only girl in Los Angeles who wanted an easy job. Or perhaps all these others had theatrical ambitions. Surely there couldn't be much chance for her.

Edward Thorndyke had been at the desk. Many of the girls he dismissed with only a cursory glance, without even reading over the answers on the printed form. "Not the type," she could hear him say curtly.

By the time Stella Moore reached the desk, there had been four girls instructed to wait. She made a fifth and Edward had said, "That's all I can see today."

The four other girls were all, like herself, brown-eyed blondes. Edward had sent them, one at a time, into an inner office room. They must have left by another door for none of them came back.

Fay had said at once, "You're exactly the type we want, Miss"—she consulted the form she held in her hand—"Miss Moore."

She had questioned the girl briefly, then explained to her, as Stella Moore learned later, she had not explained to any of the others. They did want an actress for an amateur play, but it was a very peculiar sort of amateur play.

Fay touched past history sketchily. Old Mrs. Thorndyke, who suffered from a long-standing heart ailment, had been seriously affected by the death of her daughter, Laura LaCroix, in France. Not only that but she had worried about the situation of her granddaughter, Dorinda. Dorinda's father had died years before and upon the death of her mother, she was left without even sufficient funds to come to the United States. Laura had lived well, even extravagantly, but her income was derived from a trust fund which terminated at her death.

Of course, Fay explained, they could have wired money to France, but Dorinda was only twenty, frail and inexperienced, fearful of the trip. War was imminent. It had eventually been decided Edward would go after her and bring her home.

Wires had been pulled, passport difficulties overcome. But it had all taken time and Edward had reached Paris and taken Dorinda away only a few hours before the Nazis marched in. They reached Lisbon, and, after some delay, secured passage on a homebound vessel. There were days of strain, a darkened ship, constant fear. And then the ship was torpedoed. They spent a week in an open boat. Just before the rescue came, Dorinda died.

In the confusion her death was never reported.

ALL THAT FOOD brings a happy grin of anticipation to 11-year-old Kjell Tomter, in Oslo, Norway, as he uses his hunting knife to open the CARE package sent to him by friends in America. He is just one of thousands of children who have received CARE packages since 1945.

WORLD RELIEF

CARE Sent 9,500,000 Parcels Of Food to Europe in Five Years

An organization rarely talks about a customer it loses. But CARE, the overseas service agency which is unique in so many respects, can lay claim to this distinction, too. In the files at its headquarters office, 20 Broad St., New York city, is a recent letter it is proud to show:

"You are losing a good and regular customer," the writer stated. "Since late 1946 you have handled my orders for parcels of different types addressed to my mother in Germany. You can hardly imagine how much joy each of your parcels brought to her, the safety she felt with the so urgently needed food in her pantry, the words of praise about the quality of the contents, the never-ending gratitude.

"Now there will be no more packages to her. She is coming to this country to spend the rest of her life with her now only son. Without CARE parcels to keep her alive, I doubt she would be coming. This is why you are losing a customer, but you are not losing two true, very grateful friends."

Expands Operations

While it rejoices in the "happy ending" for this mother and her son, the Cooperative for American Remittance to Europe approaches its fifth birthday with one primary concern—to continue to aid the millions of people who can not come to this country and must have help brought to them.

With a record of over 9,500,000 packages of food, clothing, textiles and other supplies—valued at $100,000,000—delivered to date as a gift from Americans, CARE within the few short years of its operation has far outgrown the geographic boundaries of its name. From Europe it has spread to Israel and Asia—to Japan, Okinawa, the Philippines, India and Pakistan.

Its types of services have also grown. To the standard price CARE packages of supplies it has added "food for the mind"—a book fund program whereby cash contributions in any amount are used to provide new American scientific and technical books for overseas schools and libraries, so that doctors, engineers, teachers, farmers, can gain the latest knowledge in their field. This program, launched in cooperation with UNESCO, has penetrated to Thailand, Ceylon, Burma and Jordan in addition to the package areas, until a total of 24 countries are now receiving some form of CARE aid. And going from "theory" to "practice", came the newest $10 CARE package—a plan to help farmers in India and Pakistan grow more of the food their countries need.

Founded in 1945

CARE remembered, too, the many persons overseas who have no uncle in Milwaukee, no ex-G.I. friend in Arkansas, no one in all the United States to whom they could appeal for help. For them, the agency developed its "general relief" plan, which permits Americans to order packages for a type of person or group—"a Greek orphanage", "a stenographer in France", "a widow in Manila". Such gifts, like orders for designated relatives and friends, are delivered safely and promptly, in the donor's name, with CARE returning a receipt signed by the recipient.

All of this has come about since November 27, 1945, when 26 major United States welfare agencies—with the approval of President Truman and the state department's committee on voluntary foreign aid—incorporated CARE as a joint, non-profit, person-to-person relief to war-devastated Europe.

But CARE's program for European relief has not always operated smoothly. In Czechoslovakia, for instance, CARE closed its offices on July 31, 1950, upon orders issued by the government. That country, like many other Communist dominated lands, did not like the goodwill CARE was creating.

After the office was closed a statement supposedly issued by Herbert Lass, director of CARE in Prague, criticized the organization. Communist thinking could be seen in the statement:

Buys Food Wholesale

"I (Lass) see now quite clearly that CARE, as well as other so called charitable American institutions, is serving merely the interests of American imperialism. Its main purpose is to create wrong impressions of the American standard of living. Its true goal has become apparent in a recent statement of Wallace Campbell, a member of its board of directors, who called CARE "an important factor in American foreign policy."

To operate most economically, CARE buys its supplies in wholesale lots; assembles them in strong wire-bound cartons in a Philadelphia packing plant, and stockpiles them in a network of warehouses abroad. There they are tapped for delivery as orders are airmailed to CARE missions across the oceans from the agency's New York headquarters and the local CARE offices that have been opened throughout the United States. Its fifth year finds CARE stockpiles boasting 25 varieties of parcels, ranging from $4 to $15.50 for a holiday turkey package.

Non-Profit Agency

Its fifth year also finds CARE operating as efficiently as any American big-business corporation. It has cut costs to the point where for $10—price of most CARE packages—it can deliver overseas a food parcel whose contents alone, at current retail prices, are worth $13.20 here. Yet CARE still manages to save 16 to 20 cents on each parcel, and since it is a non-profit agency these savings are used for free package distributions to families and welfare institutions in areas of greatest need.

Looking back, CARE feels proud of its record. But it also looks ahead.

"Despite the Marshall plan funds," says Paul Comly French, CARE's executive director, "individual help is still needed overseas, not only in war-depleted countries but in the many new republics now struggling to establish better ways of life. So long as such help is needed, CARE will continue its vital task: To get immediate person-to-person aid from Americans to the men, women and children whose health and resources must be rebuilt."

Cheerful Giver

Lesson for November 26, 1950

TAKE a good look at a piece of money. Let it be in any form at all; "hard money," "folding money," a check, a money order, scrip,—anything you can shove across a counter and buy something with. Let us say it is your own money, and that you earned it yourself. Just take a look at that piece of cash. Do you recognize it? You should; for it is nothing less than a piece of your own life.

Dr. Foreman

Money is Life

YOU got rid of something quite valuable to get hold of that piece of money. Time, certainly; you are poorer than you were 24 hours ago, poorer in time, for you have 24 hours less to live than you had then. But you are richer in money, for you did not have this money then, if it is the return for your work during that time. You lost time but you gained money; in other words the money represents time, which in turn spells life.

Look at it in another way: You put out a certain amount of energy for this bit of money. You plowed a field or you raised some chickens or you laid some pipe or you taught some children or you sold a bill of goods. Whatever you did to earn the money, it tired you a bit. You put out the work,—and the money came back to you. Money is time, money is energy. Furthermore, money is knowledge.

Why is a skilled workman paid more than an unskilled one? Not because he works harder or sweats more. He is paid more because his work is better, and his work is better because he knows more. Now, what would life be without time, energy or knowledge? Not much!

Life Comes from God

AMONG the many differences between a Christian and a non-Christian is this: the Christian knows too much to say, "My life is my own, to do with as I please." Consider those three elements of life: time, energy, knowledge. Time itself is certainly God's gift, the Creator's gift. None of us can make a moment of it. We can accept it, use it; or we can waste it; but it was given us in either case.

Energy cannot be created by you or me. Each of us has a certain (and a different) amount; we inherit it; we are endowed with it; but only God in the long run is the source of energy. To make a long story short, life is God's gift, not our creation.

Now if that is true it is also true that our money is also, just as much as life itself, ours only as a trust from God.

Stewardship

"STEWARDSHIP" is the word which recognizes God's right in our lives; it is the word which describes the principle of life for those who honor God as source of all they are and have. When the proverb-writer says, "Honor God with thy substance," he has just said, "in all thy ways acknowledge him." No man is likely to do what is right with his money who habitually does wrong with his life.

Now there are two principles brought out in our Scripture about stewardship of money in particular. One is this: God looks on what we have, not on what we haven't. A widow who gives one tiny coin, if that is all she has, is more generous than a millionaire who has just given half a million to Charity. Second is the principle of willingness. The Lord loves a cheerful giver. Sour givers, regretful givers, stingy givers, no. But the Lord does love the man who gives with a smile. It isn't how much you give, it isn't the fact that you give, it's HOW you give. Is your heart generous in the first place?

To keep peanut butter from losing its oil and getting too dry, store the jar upside down. Once it does get dry, though, you can soften it up by adding a little peanut oil, olive oil, or salad oil, and mixing it thoroughly. Or, mix some horse-radish with it and you'll have it moist again. In fact, the horse-radish improves the taste of the peanut butter so much, it's a good idea even if the peanut butter isn't too dry.

If honey turns grainy before it's used up, set the container in a saucepan of hot water, with a couple of sticks of wood under the honey jar so the water can circulate under it, and let it stand for several hours. Keep the water hot, but not boiling, and the honey should return to normal.

INSPIRATION
The State and God

AN EDITORIAL

FROM WHAT SOURCE do governments derive their authority? Many people would off-handedly reply: "From the people." But when they are asked from whence the people receive power, they can only answer: "From God."

"There exists no authority except from God," St. Paul teaches, "and those who exist have been appointed by God." The nature of man calls for civil authority, and since God created man with this particular nature, He is rightly regarded as the ultimate source of all civil authority.

So far as God's law is concerned, it is immaterial whether a government is an absolute monarchy or a liberal democracy. It is only when a government defies the over-all sovereignty of God and impinges upon man's natural and God-given rights that it ceases to be moral and no longer commands respect and loyalty.

Such was the case when Nazism overspread Germany and all the familiar devices of totalitarianism were employed to keep the people in subjection.

Hitler's government was founded on the idolatrous doctrine that man exists for the State rather than that the State exists for man. What this defiance of Divine authority meant is recorded in the incredible excesses and inhumanities which made Germany and the countries which later came into the Nazi orbit veritable hells on earth.

The totalitarian heresy is being perpetuated today in countries now under Communist domination. It is the Hammer and Sickle rather than the Swastika that now marks the concentration camps. Meanwhile, freedom of opinion and of religion is denied. There are no free elections, no free newspapers—only a system of control and intimidation that reduces men to slavery. Wherever Communism flourishes, the name of God is mocked.

So long as Communist governments defy God's authority they can never be condoned. These governments today are witnesses—even if negatively and unwittingly—to the need and value of respecting God's supreme authority. So long as Communism usurps the place of God in human lives and seeks to strip men of their essential dignity and freedom, so long will justice and reason cry out against it.

Let Turkey Take a Second Bow.
(See Recipes Below)

Turkey Topics

MR. GOBBLER can score several triumphs after the big feast is over if he's dressed with the proper trimmings. Even the smaller turkeys which are purchased for small families have much good eating on them, and certainly the large ones do, too, even though you may have had the whole big family around the table.

As long as the bird can still be sliced, serve the succulent slices just as they come from the bird, with salad or for sandwiches. Then when you get to the smaller pieces, put them in delicious pie, creamed dishes, and casseroles.

*Turkey Pie (Serves 6)

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 5 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Few grains pepper
- 2 1/2 cups milk
- 1 1/2 cups diced cooked turkey
- 1/2 cup cooked lima beans
- 1/2 cup cooked whole kernel corn

Cheese Pastry

Melt butter in saucepan, blend in flour, salt and pepper. Gradually add milk, cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add turkey, lima beans and corn; heat. Pour into 6 individual casseroles and top with cheese pastry cut in turkey shapes. Bake in a hot oven (425°) for about 12 minutes, or until pastry is lightly browned.

Turkey Pilaf (Serves 6)

- 7 tablespoons cooking oil
- 4 mushrooms, finely sliced
- 3 tablespoons finely shredded green pepper
- 1 tablespoon tomato puree
- 1 cup light cream or top milk
- 1/4 cup sour cream
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 2 cups diced cooked turkey
- 2 medium onions, sliced
- 1 cup raw rice
- 3 cups meat stock or bouillon
- 1/4 cup blanched, fried almonds

Heat three tablespoons of cooking oil in heavy pan. Add sliced mushrooms and cook over fairly high heat for two minutes. Add green pepper and tomato puree. Stir in the light cream or top milk and sour cream very slowly. Add mustard, one teaspoon salt, the pepper and mix well. Add diced, cooked turkey. Heat two tablespoons of the cooking oil in a heavy skillet and brown sliced onion until crisp. Add browned onion to turkey mixture.

To prepare rice, heat one tablespoon of the oil in a heavy pan, add rice and remaining teaspoon of salt. Cover with meat stock or bouillon and bring to boil. Cover pan with waxed paper, then lid. Bake rice in moderate oven (350°) for 25 minutes or until tender. Mound rice on a serving dish and pour hot turkey mixture over. Scatter almonds that have been fried in the remaining cooking oil, over the top.

  - 1/4 teaspoon salt
  - 1/2 cup butter
  - 1/4 cup grated cheese
  - 2 to 3 tablespoons water

Turkey Corn Casserole (Serves 4-6)

- 2 cups cubed, cooked turkey or chicken
  - 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
  - 1 12-ounce can (1 1/2 cups) whole kernel corn

  - 1/4 cup grated American cheese

Gradually add stock; cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Quickly stir sauce into eggs. Pour over turkey mixture. Top with green-pepper rings. Mix crumbs with cheese; sprinkle over top. Bake in moderate oven (350°) 30 minutes.

Bones, Skin and Scraps For Rich Stock

To prepare broth, crack the bones if possible. For the cracking use a steak pounder, a mallet or a pair of pliers. If you can't crack them go ahead anyway for you'll still get a good broth. Place bones in a sauce pan. Add water to cover, 1 small onion, a carrot, a few ribs of celery, and soup herbs if you have them. Simmer 2 or 3 hours. Strain, cool promptly, then store in coldest part of refrigerator.

Cream of Turkey Soup (Serves 4)

- 2 tablespoons butter
  - 2 tablespoons flour
  - 1 1/2 cups turkey stock
  - 1/2 cup cream or top milk
  - 1/4 to 1/2 cup chopped cooked turkey meat
  - Chopped parsley
- Prepare a sauce of the butter, flour and stock. Set over hot water, add stock and meat. Heat. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve very hot garnished with parsley.

Turkey in Toast Cups (Serves 4-6)

Combine one 10 1/2-ounce can condensed cream and mushroom soup and 1/2 cup top milk; blend; heat; add 1 1/2 cups diced, cooked turkey and 1/2 cup chopped canned pimiento. Add some of hot sauce to 1 egg yolk; stir into remaining hot sauce. Heat thoroughly over low heat. Serve in toast cups.

Modern Medicine Studies Old Witch Doctor Cures

NEW YORK, N. Y.—His face grotesquely painted, his gourd rattles beating, the tribal medicine man's antics may be just a lot of mumbo jumbo to the casual observer. To modern medical researchers however, this weird artist of healing has a lot to contribute.

They know there is still much to be learned from the medicine man.

In their efforts to catch up with the hidden knowledge of medicine men, many modern laboratories have "gone native." At Western Reserve university, navy scientists are experimenting with over 1,000 plants which have been used by Indian witch doctors. Some of the results may make medical history. One herb, possibly the most remarkable so far, has totally neutralized the virus of polio in experimental cultures. This substance is now being tested on animals.

Product of no modern laboratory, quinine, one of the most precious of all drugs, came to us from the primitive medicine men of South American Indian tribes who first used the bark of the cinchona tree to relieve fever.

The American Indian used the foxglove plant, source of digitalis, for heart ailments long before the white man came along.

Knew of Aspirin

Centuries before aspirin was produced by western science

South African and American Indian witch doctors administered willow bark to patients suffering from aching joints. And willow bark contains the salicylate which gives our aspirin its pain killing properties.

Dr. Erwin H. Ackerknecht of the University of Wisconsin medical school recently pointed out that, until the discovery of the sulfa drugs, only one specific remedy—Dr. Paul Ehrlich's salvarsan—had been man-made in the modern laboratory. Measure this against the achievements of the witch doctors who gave quinine, ipecac, emetine, curare, picrotoxin, ephedrine, cascara sagrada and countless other remedies.

Home-Made Ladder

A light ladder is a great convenience about the farm as it can be used in the fruit trees, repairing the telephone line, or for any of many jobs. To make the ladder shown above use a straight pole, six or seven inches in diameter. Fasten a wire or ring around it about eight feet from the large end. Then split the pole and spread the two parts. Make a hole in each half for the bottom rung. After it is in place put a wire under the bottom rung and twist it tight. Cut notches for the rungs above and nail them in place. This will be found a most serviceable ladder.
