Valuable Ore Found Near Artesia

What is claimed to be a rich deposit of gold, silver, copper and lead has been uncovered on Twelve Mile Hill east of Artesia, in spite of the general belief there are no base metals in this area.

Ten claims have been staked at old turquoise diggings on state land within sight of Highway 83, after prospecting has turned up free gold and silver and copper and lead in ore form, as well as quantities of turquoise.

Charles (Bud) Eaker is credited with making the discovery of the deposit, which is about 10 feet under the surface in the form of a thrust. The top of the thrust is about four feet wide and it runs in a general north-southerly direction.

Active with him in quietly prospecting the thrust have been Tom Franklin and J. O. Stewart. The three men and two of Eaker's sons-in-law have staked four claims, while Stewart and associates have staked six more. Each is 600x1500 feet.

The men have been working on the thrust about six months, during the last of which they increased their activities, having surveys made, staking their claims and recording them.

Assays on mine run show the conglomerate to contain about 2 1/4 per cent of copper, 2.17 per cent of lead and 1.64 per cent of silver. An assay report on gold content is expected this week.

It is estimated the ore and free metal, without gold or turquoise, is worth $19.50 a ton. But the men feel that as they go deeper they may find even richer deposits.

For the present, it is planned to strip mine, but later it may be necessary to sink shafts and crosscut. — Artesia Advocate.

Jesse Bates Writes From Tennessee

Last week the editor of the News received a nice letter from Jesse Bates who is now stationed at Murfreesboro, Tenn. He writes: "Just a few lines to let you know that both Lillian and I enjoy the paper you are sending. Seems as though with all the letters we get we still don't get all the news. I have a job this time with the Air Force that I thought I would never have anywhere, anytime. It is rather easy but still has a lot of responsibility. I am registration clerk with the 314th Air Police Sqdn. Lots of pencil pushing as well as filing. We have approximately 3000 cars on register along with personal weapons and pets. I have to keep a four-way filing system on cars that really means a lot of work. I hope this finds you and yours fine, as well as all the friends I have in Hope. Let me thank you again for the News which I get regularly. Sincerely yours, Jesse Bates."

Those present were D. W. Carson, chairman; Bryant Runyan, secretary-treasurer; Oris Cleve, Geo. Casabonne and Bryant Williams, members and Clem Weindorf, district engineer.

Water Users Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Hope Water Users association was held Monday night at the Altman Cafe. The matter of enlarging the canals was discussed. Candidates nominated were Charley Barley, Joe Clements, Charley Cole, W. B. Durham, Lyle Hunter, Henry Coffin, Mark Fisher and Bill Madron. The election will be held next Tuesday at the telephone office.

November Cavern Travel Decreases

Total number of visitors to the Carlsbad Caverns during the month of November 1950 was 20,357 compared with 21,129 during November in 1949. Total number of visitors to the Caverns to date is 4,583,435.

Civilians Must Be Prepared

At this time when war clouds are getting darker and it looks as if we might be plunged into a third world war at any time, the following letter from Gov. Mabry is well worth reading and taken into serious consideration.

"There is no disputing the fact that all the free world today is tense and uncertainty and frustration confronts us wherever men—hoping and working for peace—turn. But out of it all comes the brighter picture of more unity, less partisanship and more dependence on our experts in the military and diplomatic fields. Let's hope and pray that a solution will be found and in the meantime we civilians at home must prepare for our own defense.

Civilian defense against disasters of all kinds is one of the most important problems facing our state today. We were caught short in World War I; we were caught short at Pearl Harbor and we were again caught short in Korea. We must not be found unprepared in case of another world-wide catastrophe.

New Mexico's planning for civilian defense is progressing. At the present time most of the larger cities have completed a civilian defense organization. While the state civilian defense council and the civilian defense director are co-ordinating all work done by local organizations in the state, it is in the final analysis up to the local communities to perfect their own civilian defense plans; at least that is what we have been told by Washington up to this time. I am in hopes that Congress will give us more aid, particularly in the strategic spots like one or two we have here in New Mexico.

We hope that war is not just around the corner. We are merely buying insurance which we hope we will not have to use, but it will save countless lives should disaster strike our state.

I have been very gratified with the co-operation New Mexico has received from many organizations and groups, as well as from town and city councils. The Boy Scouts of America, the Girl Scouts of America, organized labor, the Medical Association, the Hospital Association, the American Legion and other organizations have come forward and offered the state their facilities and their co-operation in setting up a civilian defense program.

The Board of Finance has advanced sufficient funds to staff the headquarters of the State Director of Civilian Defense to the New Mexicanian Defense. The Board has also advanced Western College at Silver City to conduct a state-wide program for training fire fighters. Fires will be one of our chief hazards in case of emergency.

The next legislature will be called upon to provide funds for civilian defense activities and I hope adequate funds are made available.

The American Red Cross has offered its state-wide services to all individuals who desire to take first aid training courses. It has also volunteered its services in training student nurses. Every adult in New Mexico should be trained to give first aid. Such training should be obtained even though there was no possibility of any general disaster.

If there is any community in New Mexico that desires to set up a civilian defense program and has not yet done so, the state office of civilian defense, headed by Brigadier General Charles G. Sage, the adjutant general and his assistant, Major Edward Oakley, will be happy to provide all possible help."

Raise Funds For Hospital

As a means of helping raise funds to build a new hospital in Albuquerque for the benefit of the people of New Mexico, the Hope WSCS of the Methodist Church sponsored a silver tea, which was held at the home of Mrs. Bryant Williams Thursday.

The hospital is to be known as the Bataan Memorial Hospital, and will serve people of every race, creed or station and will be under the direction of the Methodist Women's Society of Christian Service.

Mrs. Tom Harrison was called to Stephenville, Texas, Tuesday by the serious illness of her brother Bill Dickerson. Curtis Harrison went with her.

Universal Bible Sunday, Dec. 10

Many of the churches of this area will observe Universal Bible Sunday on next Sunday, Dec. 10. This annual observance, sponsored by the American Bible Society, falls midway between Thanksgiving and Christmas. This is the period during which millions of Bible readers throughout the world join in using a selected daily list of Scripture passages suggested by the Bible Society. For years many of our church people have been following this annual reading program.

Universal Bible Sunday is recognized as an important observance in the life of the Church and is listed in the calendar of religious celebrations. The theme selected this year is "The Bible—A Light and Guide." An attractive two-color poster painted by the well-known artist, Robert A. Graef, illustrating the theme, will be on display in the churches. Specially prepared church bulletins will be distributed at the services.

Special Prayer Service Held

A special service of prayer was held in the Methodist Church on Wednesday in view of the critical world situation. Special guidance was invoked on behalf of the President of the United States, as well as for all world leaders who are seeking at this time to find a way of peace, world security and better relationships between nations. The Secretary of State Dean Acheson, has asked that meetings of this kind should be held all over the country.

For the past two days we have had a right smart spell of cold weather. It was so cold it froze the school news up solid. Hope it thaws out by next week.

Next Tuesday, Dec. 12, takes place the Hope Water Users election. There is quite a bit of interest taken in the annual event. The Water Users election and the school election are two occasions when the Hope voters like to get out and vote against their neighbor. But after it is over, every one is friendly again—maybe.

Unless a miracle happens, it looks as if the UN forces will be compelled to evacuate Korea. Just think of the loss of lives and the destruction of military stores and nothing accomplished. We don't know who is to blame or if anyone is to blame, but we do know that it is a terrible thing to have happen.

In everyone's mind there comes the questions of why was not MacArthur given permission to bomb supply centers in Manchuria, when the National China officials offered to furnish a million or two men, why was not their offer accepted? Of course we don't claim to know as much as the high army or political leaders, but it looks as if there has been a mistake made someplace.

Before long now we will be reading the list of appointments that sheriff elect Bill High will make. We have heard via the grapevine of who some of his deputies will be, but nothing definite. Oh, yes, we did hear that Ed Price had been appointed chief deputy, the announcement being made several months ago. We will be anxious to hear who will be deputy in Artesia and Hope.

The bridge over Eagle Draw is nearing completion. The steel is going up and being bolted together. The new bridge is about two feet higher than the old one which will make it necessary to do quite a bit of filling and widening. But that won't take long with the modern machinery that we have nowadays. The question has come up several times about what we are going to call the new bridge. Some say one thing, other say another, but we say why not call it "Mabry Bridge"? Well, why not? Has anyone any objections?

We may not be engaged in World War III as yet but we could be most any time. Therefore we should complete our civilian defense organization at the earliest possible moment. If you can roll bandages, drive a car, cook in quantity, nurse the ailing or injured, care for children, type, keep records or run errands, you should be registered at the Red Cross headquarters. Along with many others, we don't think it could happen here, but we aren't nearly as sure about that as we were a year ago, a month ago, or even yesterday. A strong civilian defense organization here may serve the same purpose as an insurance policy—life insurance.

But we do know that the UN will have to undergo some changes. There are over two dozen nations signed up for their own mutual protection, but when something like the Korean situation comes up, this country bears the brunt—furnishes more men, supplies and capital than any of the others, still the other countries have just as much to say about what should be done as we do. If the UN is to be a success every nation should do their share in the matter of furnishing troops, military supplies, etc. We shouldn't be asked to do it all. Of course we know that England and France and a few other countries have helped some, but other members have only furnished their moral support which don't help much in a war when you must kill or be killed.

In speaking of Rev. and Mrs. TenHaken, who is in charge of a mission at the Mescalero Indian reservation, Loyd P. Bloodworth in the Ruidoso News says:

"A man's life is not measured by what he has but by what he does with what he has. If David Livingston had not buried himself in the heart of Africa he would probably not been known outside of his own little circle. As it was he became the greatest missionary of our modern times. "Except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone, but if it die, it springeth up and bringeth forth much fruit." Ruben TenHaken may not draw a big salary for his work as a missionary, but when the trophies are passed out at the end of the trail, I predict he will have one."

I would rather have something like that said about me than have a million dollars.

Produce Clean Eggs For Larger Profits

Buyers Will Pay Top Prices for Clean Eggs

Produce clean eggs. Thousands of dollars are lost by poultry raisers every year due to dirty eggs and the resulting deterioration takes place before they are marketed. The prevention of dirty eggs will not only increase the flockowner's income but will build a better market for eggs.

Dirty eggs offer a poor appearance, they cannot be stored successfully and it takes time and money to clean them. Consequently, buyers are willing to pay more for clean eggs which means more profit to the flockowner.

Eggs should be gathered at least three times a day in wire baskets and stored in clean, cool, moist place.

The production of clean eggs and handling them to maintain quality is not difficult. Deep, dry litter, good ventilation and nests well littered with shaving, excelsior, straw, or other nesting material, will keep the birds from getting dirt and stains on the eggs from their feet. Always keep hens in the house on wet, muddy days.

Immediately after gathering, eggs should be stored in the cleanest, coolest and most moist place on the farm. A cellar with a temperature of 45 to 60 degrees is very good.

Home Canning Resumes On Near Wartime Scale

The upward surge of food prices, reflecting troubled events in the far east, finds housewives everywhere mobilizing home canning brigades reminiscent of World War II.

"Veterans of the last home front stand are dusting off their pressure cookers and preparing to lay up record 'peacetime' supplies of fruit and vegetables", says Mary Ann March, chief home economist of Chicago Ekco Products company.

"Countless inquiries received by our test kitchen about the new low-pressure method of cooking indicate a revival of home canning on a near wartime scale," she says.

The low pressure cooker, developed since the end of the world war, permits more efficient canning of fruits, berries and tomatoes than was possible in the early 1940's, because its ability to operate at a pressure of only three and three-quarter pounds assures thorough cooking without destruction of these delicate foods.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Vishinsky Names Only Conditions On Which Russia Will Make Peace; Weather Hampers Allies in Korea

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Asia is the danger spot of the world today, most observers believe. The above map shows point of Communist aggression and countries being aided by the United States. China Reds now dominate Tibet, and observers theorized Nepal may be next.

UNITED NATIONS: Formula for Peace

Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky in a slashing, abusing speech in the United Nations general assembly outlined a series of conditions which he said must be accepted before there could be world peace. He made it plain that there was no other possible ground for the settlement of east-west differences.

The main condition of Vishinsky's speech was the demand that the Chinese Communists be allowed a seat in the United Nations. Russia has long battled for admission of China in the U.N., but the tone of Vishinsky's speech was much stronger than it had been on other occasions.

The main points of Vishinsky's demands:

1. A pledge not to try to get around the veto.
2. Unconditional prohibition of the atomic bomb.
3. Armed forces under exclusive control of the security council.
4. Aid to backward countries under international control.
5. Development of international trade without discrimination.

These were the demands reportedly given to Secretary-General Trygve Lie when he visited Prime Minister Stalin during his trip to Moscow in May. Lie's refusal to accept them is believed the reason the Russians opposed his re-election as secretary-general.

Many observers saw a threat in a part of Vishinsky's speech. He said if these demands were ignored it would be idle to think of peace being achieved through the U. N.

KOREA:

In Ice and Snow

In ice and snow, with the mercury often below zero, United Nations forces in Korea continued a slow advance against Communist troops.

Snow and ice made operations slow and dangerous. Supply routes far to the rear were blocked making it necessary to depend on air drops.

Military leaders reported approximately 100,000 Chinese and Korean Communists were established in a 60-mile line below the great hydro-electric plants on the Yalu river border between Korea and Manchuria. An all-out battle in the area was expected.

The advance has been carried out behind devastating air attacks by the U. S. air force.

American officers said the advance was progressing "well," but just how fast they go depends a great deal upon the weather. In many of the mountain passes wind had piled snow 10 to 12 feet deep.

Meanwhile, the Russians are making new threats concerning the Korean conflict. Among other things, they charge that Japanese soldiers are now being used in Korea.

According to the Soviet, a Chinese-Russian treaty calls for their intervention whenever Japanese troops are used against the Chinese.

Some sources believed this could be another step in the Russian plan for justification of her throwing men and planes into the conflict. Others believe, however, that Russia would not take such a step.

TRUMAN:

Champions Fair Deal

President Truman held a press conference and declared—in the face of G.O.P. claims that the November election had killed his fair deal—that he would continue to press for adoption of his whole program as long as he was president.

If the Republican party thought their victory had taken any of the starch out of the President they were disappointed. He said he would present his full program to the 82nd congress when it convened in January.

To the surprise of everyone present at the press conference he did not seem disturbed by Republican gains in congress. He brushed off his reverses as normal in a non-presidential year. He added that practically all the Republican victories could be traced to local situations. Most observers were inclined to agree with him in that respect.

Then the President got down to some definite statement:

Secretary of State Dean Acheson is going to keep his job—period.

General Douglas MacArthur reports that American troops in Korea have plenty of clothing.

Surveys are still going on to determine whether price and wage controls are necessary. They'll be imposed as soon as there is need for them, but he doesn't think the time has come.

He could be convinced this country should send an ambassador to Franco Spain, but he hasn't been convinced so far.

He doesn't agree with Taft's recent statement that higher taxes could lead to inflation.

There will be further conversations on the proposed Japanese peace treaty within a few weeks.

PROFITS LEVY

Battle Shapes Up

From all indications a severe battle is shaping up over President Truman's proposed $4 billion excess profits tax. The tax bill in all probability will be presented to the "lame duck" session of congress but the President has no assurance that it will get approval, especially in the senate.

If the proposal fails in the "lame duck" session and is presented in the 82nd congress, observers believe Republican strength will show itself for the first time and a great many changes will be written into the bill.

As of the moment, the U. S. chamber of commerce branded the tax "un-American" and urged congress to cut Federal nondefense spending by at least $6 billion instead of approving the levy.

A Republican substitute for the bill was vetoed in the house ways and means committee. Democrats on the committee criticized the GOP proposal as one that would hit small business and favor corporations with income swollen by the defense program.

The President's plan calls for a tax of 75 per cent on excess profits of corporations, with the four-year period 1946-49 used as a yardstick to determine what profits are abnormal.

A barrage of other protests against the levy was received by the house ways and means committee.

All this would indicate that no action will be taken on the bill this year although it will be ready for consideration. What the new congress will do about the proposed tax is anybody's guess.

The battle will be bitter and may have a great influence on the 1952 presidential election.

NPA Chief

William H. Harrison, standing, national production administrator, ordered a 35 per cent reduction in civilian aluminum supplies and warned that the action will result in some unemployment and higher prices for aluminum products next year. The order is effective January 1, 1951.

DEFENSE:

Nerve Center Moved

The air force announced that headquarters for the nation's defense against air attack will be moved from New York to Colorado Springs, Colo. The move takes the nerve center of air defense of the U. S. 1,650 miles from the Atlantic ocean, deep into the interior for safety reasons.

The move emphasized the fact that the oceans surrounding the country are no longer a barrier against attack. The swing to the west also lent emphasis to the strategic concept that if present tension with Russia should erupt into World War III, the gravest danger of aerial blows against the United States would focus on the northwest "gateway."

Observers pointed out that guided missiles, conceivably with atomic warheads, could be fired from submarines lying a few miles off the present headquarters at Mitchell Field, N. Y., thus destroying the defense center with one blow.

The center now controls both the east and west air-defense forces. Some 800 military and civilian personnel will be assigned to the new center. Lt. Gen. Ennis C. Whitehead will be in command.

EUROPE:

Prewar Production

Western Europe, with American aid, increased exports and industrial output above prewar levels, the economic co-operation administration announced.

The report was an encouraging trend in the west's battle against communism. The gains must be increased, however, to support the load of arming for defense against communism.

The E.C.A. said: "The urgency to rearm has emphasized the importance... for western Europe of continuing its progress toward the economic goals of the recovery program. The required expansion in military production cannot be achieved unless Europe's economic base is further strengthened."

Atomic Dogtag

Corp. Doris J. Apgar is shown with the army's new self-developing photographic dosimeter, a device which measures the extent of exposure of individuals to atomic radiation. The "atomic dogtag" is simple, inexpensive to produce and is worn about the neck. Readings can be obtained in about one minute after exposure to radioactive rays.

Stella Moore, as Dorinda LaCroix, has developed a real affection for Grandmother Thorndyke, whom she is deceiving by posing as her granddaughter who died in a lifeboat at sea after the ship in which she was fleeing Paris and the Nazis with her Uncle Edward Thorndyke was torpedoed. Edward and his fiancée, his cousin, the beautiful Fay Thorndyke, had set up the masquerade because they feel—they made the spurious Dorinda believe—that it would be fatal to tell Grandmother Thorndyke of Dorinda's death. Dorinda finds Lana, daughter of Edward's Aunt Harriet, distasteful. A romance begins to develop between Dorinda and Cleve Adams, a neighbor.

"Why not? You know where I live, don't you? One mile straight down the beach with only one house between—the stately mansion of the fabulously rich Van Sillars. By the way, Van Sillar himself is in residence again. I saw him sunbathing as I passed by. A beautiful hunk of man, my child. Mind you don't linger as you pass his gate. The current news is that he's getting a divorce from—what is it, his fourth or fifth wife? The wives generally do the divorcing, so I'm told, but this time it seems he's the plaintiff for a change. For why, I wouldn't know. How do you like that sewing—society gossip, little one?"

"Well, I don't know Van Sillar or want to for that matter, and it doesn't alter the fact that I can't come this afternoon."

"Don't look so sad about it. The pups'll keep until tomorrow."

But he looked a little puzzled as if some hint of her perturbation had touched him.

He laid one brown hand over hers. "Maybe this will sound foolish but I'm saying it anyway. If you're ever in a jam or need help, I'll be standing by."

He broke off with a chuckle. "Willing and ready, that's me. Fees reasonable. Terms strictly cash. What's the matter with us, Dorinda? We're playing heavy tragedy. You're not saying good-bye forever, are you? Leave me, Lord Cleveland, I love you but cruel fate demands I wed another!" That sort of thing.

Hawley Reports Death Of Salesman, Taylor

Dorinda laughed. "Maybe I'm trying to be mysterious. Mystery in a woman is supposed to be fascinating, isn't it?"

"You're not the type, my child. If you're going in for mystery you want to dye your hair black and wear something long and slinky. You aren't a Nazi spy, are you, honey?"

"Certainly I am, but don't tell the neighbors. Maybe we'd better go up to the house, Cleve. Uncle Edward will wonder where I've gone."

They climbed up the wooden steps, followed the graveled driveway past the kitchen garden and the golden privet hedge that divided it from the clipped grass lawns, to the front of the house.

"There's your uncle. I'll bet he's never even missed you."

Across the green turf they could see Edward Thorndyke. He stood on the small portico leaning against one of the white columns, and appeared to be talking earnestly to a man who stood on one of the steps below.

As Dorinda came in sight, Edward raised his voice and called to her. "Dorinda, we've been waiting for you." And as she came up to the steps, "This is Mr. Hawley from the sheriff's office."

Edward's black eyes were on her face. They were trying to tell her something, trying to warn her. But his voice did not break from its customary smoothness as he went on. "You remember telling me about the man who accosted you in McGregor's store yesterday? Well, it seems he—a salesman, wasn't he?—was killed in an automobile accident last night. There are, Mr. Hawley tells me, some rather peculiar angles about the affair and the police are making inquiries trying to find someone who knew him."

Fred Hawley was tall and young and lean. He had red hair and a fair, sensitive skin which flushed easily as it flushed now when Edward said, "This is my niece, Dorinda LaCroix. You already know Cleve Adams. I presume."

"Well, Miss LaCroix, it's like this. You see—Hawley stopped, moistening his lips. One could almost see his struggle to marshal words into proper sequence. "This is what I wanted to ask you. Were you at the Silver Slipper in Westport last night?"

Whatever she had expected him to ask, it had not been this. She stared at him in astonishment. "The Silver Slipper? I don't even know what it is. I never heard of it."

"It's a roadhouse just this side of Westport."

"Not the sort of place my niece frequents," Edward interposed stiffly.

"This Taylor—he was a salesman from Los Angeles. Early this morning his car ran off the beach road a couple of miles this side of Westport and smashed up on the rocks below. You know how the road from Westport runs along the cliff until it turns inland the last half mile to Trentville. Another motorist found him at daylight this morning. It's pretty dark along there and last night the road was wet and slippery and at first we thought it was just an ordinary accident. But there were some queer things about it.

Fred Hawley was tall and young and lean.

"In the first place, there hadn't been any traffic to speak of late last night and we could trace Taylor's tire marks back along the road for a couple of hundred feet. They sort of weaved from one side of the road to the other as if he might have been drunk and of course that's the first thing we thought of, although we couldn't smell any liquor on him and he didn't have any in the car."

Dorinda Must Account For Meeting Taylor

"And we found out later in the morning that there couldn't have been any mechanical difficulty. His car turned clear over and lit on the top when it fell. The top was smashed in but there wasn't a thing wrong with the steering gear or lights. We had a mechanic from the garage look it over."

"Taylor was thrown out. His wrist watch was broken and stopped at twenty minutes to one. Dr. Hanlon said that seemed about right. He'd been dead around six hours when we found him."

Hawley's eyes swept their intent faces. He was more at ease now, absorbed in his own story.

"We figured he was coming from Westport. And the first place we inquired, we hit the jackpot. The Silver Slipper. We weren't so lucky as it sounds maybe because that's the only place anywhere around where you can get liquor late at night."

"Well, Taylor had been there. He'd come in a little before twelve. The bartender, Steve, remembered him. It was a quiet night, what with the rain, and Taylor stopped at the bar and asked Steve if his watch was right."

"About that time a girl came in and went into the back booth and Taylor said, 'There she is now,' and went after her. They stayed for about half an hour. Taylor had a couple of beers and the girl had a gin fiz. That was all. A few minutes before twelve-thirty, the girl got up and left and then Taylor came up to the bar and told Steve good night. He definitely wasn't drunk and Steve said he was grinning all over his face and seemed mighty pleased about something. He went out at twelve-thirty. You understand, the bartender was keeping his eye on the clock as it was getting along toward closing time."

"Now it's a queer thing, but neither Steve nor Tony, the waiter, saw the girl's face. She had on a big black hat and Tony said she sort of bent her head down when he waited on them. He was pretty sure though that it wasn't any girl he knew and he knows most of the girls, by sight anyway, around Westport and Trentville, too.

"But he could see that she was slim and under medium height and that she had yellow hair that came down around her shoulders. And then we saw McGregor when we checked back at the store and he told us about Taylor speaking to you. He said he had the impression Taylor followed you."

"So you can see why I had to ask you about the Silver Slipper, Miss LaCroix. This was Taylor's first trip here so he couldn't have been much acquainted in town. You know girls change their minds sometimes about talking to fellows and there aren't many blonde girls around this part of the country. I guess I could count 'em on one hand."

Dorinda was a little pale but her brown eyes did not waver. "It was just as Mr. McGregor said," she admitted. "Taylor spoke to me and he did follow me. But I don't suppose we exchanged a half dozen sentences altogether. I told him if he didn't stop annoying me, I would lodge a complaint against him with your office. I think he believed I meant what I said for he went off and that was the last I saw of him." She drew a long breath, feeling a sense of danger skirted.

"At any rate, I certainly wasn't at the Silver Slipper last night. Uncle Edward could have told you that. Why, we played cribbage until quite late—the clock in the hall was just striking twelve when I went upstairs. So you see it couldn't have been I."

Hawley smiled for the first time. "I sort of hoped I'd find you were that girl when I came here. Now since I've met you, I'm sort of glad you're not. I won't bother you folks any more. You understand we've got to follow up everything we can."

"Oh, certainly," Edward's frown relaxed. "Naturally, I dislike anyone connecting Dorinda with a man of that character even in thought. But I understand you had no choice but to make inquiries. You'll find, I haven't the slightest doubt, that the man was too intoxicated to handle a car. Or it's possible he might have had a heart attack."

Fay Appears Piqued At Edward, Dorinda

"On the surface it seems there was no reason the accident should have happened. But I expect you're right. Dr. Hanlon's handling the autopsy this afternoon and he'll find out just how much of a load he was carrying. Or it could have been a heart attack, as you say." Hawley pulled his hat down on his sandy hair. "Thank you, Miss LaCroix. Sorry to have troubled you."

Edward was grumbling as Dorinda followed him into the hall. "This is an unfortunate thing to happen just now. We don't want any attention focused on you."

He laid his hand on her shoulder. She could feel his touch, heavy and warm, through the brown sweater. "You're a sweet child, Dorinda."

Fay stood in the door of the living room, her cold blue eyes watching them. "I think you were more disturbed than Dorinda," she said dryly.

Edward whirled, startled. He was incredibly quick on his feet for so large a man. He took one step toward Fay. "You heard?"

She bent her head. "I was just inside the open window. I didn't see any object in joining you but naturally I wanted to know what had happened since I've let myself become involved in your affairs."

"Our affairs, Fay," Edward corrected softly.

Fay's icy face softened. She leaned toward him, her lips curving. Then awareness caught her. She drew herself back.

"I'm afraid we're boring Dorinda, she said crisply. "Don't tell me you've forgotten your little 'niece.' Her tone was heavy with irony. "To get back to the matter in hand, I don't believe I'd let the situation bother me. It will all have blown over in a day or two. Hawley is satisfied. He won't be back."

"Perhaps you're right. But I don't like it."

"Why not? It has nothing to do with us. At least Taylor won't be prowling around trying to find out what Dorinda is doing here."

"Better Taylor than the sheriff. There might have been ways of keeping Taylor quiet."

AROUND THE HOUSE

When linoleum becomes worn and dull looking, you may want to paint it. Linoleum manufacturers advise against this; paint manufacturers recommend it. No one seems to feel it can do any harm, but it's been proved that the paint will crack and peel before it's endured much traffic. If you're determined to go ahead with it, though, any ordinary enamel is all right for the job, provided you remove all wax first.

YEAR'S GOOFSPOTS

Safety Council Reports Humans Still Have Silliest Accidents

By PAUL JONES

Director of Public Information National Safety Council

So you think flying saucers are fantastic? Then just take a look at what the National Safety Council has dug up this year in its annual search for odd accidents!

Monkeys that drive cars into people . . . boats that crash into autos on dry land . . . collar buttons that send collars buttoners to the hospital . . . fish that are run over by autos while swimming . . . fallen angels that bust their bones.

Still think flying saucers rate the No. 1 goofspot? Read on!

You may have suspected that some accidents are caused by monkey business. But it remained for Alice, a trained chimpanzee, to clinch it. Riding her motor scooter before an enthusiastic crowd at the St. Louis zoo, Alice became so giddy with applause that she zipped off the stage in a showy exit, ran down Trainer William Rogers and banged him up, but good.

It is relatively seldom that boats and automobiles run into each other. But it happened at Maysville, Ind., when an uninhibited motor boat leaped out of the White River and crashed into a car parked 20 feet in on dry land. Result: one dented hull, one dented fender and one red face—the latter on Mr. Emmett Holsapple, who explained that he had neglected to close the throttle as his boat neared shore.

If autos can be struck by boats on land, why can't fish be run over by autos while swimming? They can—and were in 1950. J. V. Short was driving along the flooded street in front of his home in Toledo, Ohio, when he struck and killed two fish that had migrated from a pond in his yard when high water caused it to overflow.

Swivel Chair Accident

No man who ever struggled into a dress shirt will be too surprised at what happened to John H. Bradford, of Richmond, Va. As director of the state budget, Mr. Bradford has pulled out of some mighty tight squeezes—but none as tight as the collar he tried to button one night in dolling himself up for an important party. Director Bradford fought so fiercely that he had to go to the hospital for emergency treatment of severe finger bruises inflicted by the collar button. He switched to sport shirts.

Gary Wilmer, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., hopes for the best in the hereafter, of course. But he also hopes that he makes out better as a real angel than he did on his pilot run. Playing an angel in an amateur theatrical, Mr. Wilmer came down to earth with a bang when the cable supporting him above the stage snapped as he floated in mid-air.

And in Gledale, Calif., ex-City Manager Charles C. McCall has applied for state compensation with the claim that he swiveled so vigorously in his swivel chair that he hurt his back. (You lugs who don't rate swivel chairs—wipe off that smile!)

Every mother, doctor, policeman and fireman knows that any small boy has an irresistible urge to stick his head into places it doesn't belong. Cases in point:

Mickey Holloway, of Birmingham, Ala., was as pleased as any two-year-old boy would be at his fascinating ability to make faces at his older sister. The faces were even more satisfactory, Mickey discovered, when they were framed between the bars of the bannister in his home. You guessed it. His head got caught between the bars. Firemen pried him loose. Even his sister felt sorry for him—a little.

But the boy who emerged head and shoulders above any other headsticker-into of 1950 was young Philip Burrows. Phil also was only two years old, but he had the advantage of living in Hollywood, Calif., where they do things more spectacularly. So Phil chose to steal headline honors by getting his head stuck in, of all things, a toilet seat. Even the firemen, accustomed to this type of crisis, were impressed as they went to work with a saw to dethrone him.

4-Year-Old Escapes

At Cannon Ball Beach, South Africa, H. W. Lewis drove his car over a 100-foot cliff above the sea. A thorn tree on the brink caught the car, held it fast. Mr. Lewis climbed out to safety with a scratched thumb.

To avoid that tired and run-down feeling, four-year-old Brian O'Connor of Woodlawn, Md., suggests hurrying out to lunch. That's what he did when his mother called him to his noonday meal. Seconds later a six-foot, 1,500-pound tire—fugitive from a road scraper—crashed through the wall of the room Brian had just left and demolished the spot where he had stood.

It is no uncommon thing during a parade to see a man waving a flag. But even in these topsy-turvy days it is somewhat startling to see a flagpole waving a man. Yet that's what happened during a Fourth of July parade in Springfield, Mass. Henry Lefevre, watching the parade from a third-story window, leaned out too far, lost his balance, plummeted toward the ground, grabbed the top of a flagpole jutting from the window. Old Glory dipped in deference to Henry's weight, but he managed to hold on until he was pulled through a second-story window.

Roadhogs undoubtedly have caused many a traffic accident, but seldom so literally as in Coal Valley, Ill., where a horse ridden by Karen Dahm tripped over a pig waddling complacently down the center of the road. The horse fell on Karen, who suffered from bruises and shock. So did the pig.

Dog Shoots Master

Every year, at least one field mouse leaves the field to get in an automobile and cause an accident. This year the roving rodent hitched a ride in a car driven by Francis Jetty of St. Louis. It was discovered by Mrs. Jetty, who just did what came naturally. Her startled husband drove off the road and banged into a hydrant. Mrs. Jetty went to the doctor. The car went to the garage. The field mouse went back to the field.

It's getting so it isn't even news any more when a dog shoots a man. But the thing that folks couldn't get over when John Schlittler's dog shot him in the arm at Graham, Tex., was that it looked like the pooch did it deliberately. The trigger-happy hound sidled over to John's gun, sniffed it, glanced contemplatively at his master, then raised his paw and pulled the trigger.

Less painful but even more embarrassing was the experience of Policeman Donald Otto of Detroit. As the young patrolman was strolling with his girl friend on his night off, his service pistol let go and shot off the seat of his pants.

The last thing in the world nine-year-old Theron Longley of Bow, N. H., expected as he wound up for a hot cadenza on his trumpet was that he would blow out four teeth. But that's what he did! Inhaling prodigiously for a final triumphant blast to a stirring march, Trumpeter Theron swallowed a denture he had been wearing since an automobile accident two years before.

When Kenneth Wayne Christopher was taken to the hospital in St. Joseph, Mo., for injuries suffered when his vehicle crashed into a fixed object, doctors weren't able to get a word out of him. One reason was that he was only nine months old. His accident occurred when the stroller in which he was riding coasted across the floor and snacked into a chair.

Boats Demolish Bridge

When officials of the Motor Vehicle Bureau suggested to Motorist Carrie Miller of Newark, Ohio, that she drop in and get her driver's license, she took him literally. Her car went out of control in front of the bureau's office, crashed through the door and injured two bureau employees. Driver test postponed!

In January the towboat Franklin D. Roosevelt rammed and damaged a pier on the railroad bridge over the Illinois River near Pekin, Ill. In September another towboat struck the same pier and finished the job of demolishing it. The name of the boat? The Harry S. Truman.

Flying saucers, roll back to your cupboard. Things are screwy enough as they are!

Record Cranberry Crop Forecast for Wisconsin

A record production of 969,000 barrels of cranberries is forecast this fall, agricultural department officials report. The prospect is 15 per cent above the previous record of 907,700 barrels in 1948. Production in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Oregon is above last year. Washington's crop is above average but below that of last year the agricultural department said.

Chicago Yard Conducts Truck Safety Program

The livestock truck is Number One around the Chicago stock yards these days.

Frank Flynn, general superintendent, says trucks now haul around 70 per cent of livestock received at the world's largest livestock market. Twenty years ago it was only 3 per cent.

The livestock trucker will play the major part in a new phase of the Chicago safety program begun at the yards last year to reduce livestock losses through bruising.

The yards will keep seven-month records on every livestock trucker bringing livestock to the yards. They will check arriving loads for dead, crippled or obvious bruising.

At the end of the program, drivers with the best records will be rewarded at a truckers' jamboree which contest officials will hold April 6 in the international amphitheatre, home of the International Livestock Exposition.

Livestock farmers will benefit most from the campaign since they share a large part of the cost of this annual loss.

'Aim' Pullets for Top Fall Egg Production

Will your pullets be in top production this fall when egg prices are best? They should if you "aim them" by practicing good management, using careful sanitation measures and feeding sufficient amounts of a balanced ration, poultry experts report.

Too many good poultrymen are still inclined to allow their growing pullets to coast along on range or a poor growing ration. Since growing pullets are not producing income, some producers are willing to grow them at the lowest immediate out-of-the-pocket cost. What they should realize is that they are building the production machines that will pay off during the fall and winter months.

It must be remembered that pullets must consume sufficient feed for body growth and sexual maturity before laying any eggs. It is just a question of whether to grow out pullets during the growing period or at the time they should be producing eggs.

To get pullets in production early, poultry experts recommend getting them on clean range, feed them ample quantities of the best ration.

Sharing Our Faith

Lesson for December 10, 1950

SCRIPTURE: Acts 8:1-13; 18:1-7; I Corinthians 9:16-17; II Corinthians 5:17-20; Philippians 1:12-18; 2:12-18.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 1:8-17.

A COMMON sight in cities of ancient times was the "libation." Statues of gods or goddesses stood at every prominent corner, in every yard; they were as numerous as billboards today. Before one of these statues some one would be pouring out wine from a cup or goblet, an offering of thanksgiving or dedication. Saint Paul even used the libation as a figure of speech to describe himself. My life, he said to his friend Timothy, is being poured out—there was not much left of it, but all of it, every drop, would be poured out as an offering to God.

Dr. Foreman

Miser of Life or Spender?

PAUL was no miser of life. If life was a full cup, it was not a cup with a tight lid, not like one of your grandmother's jars of very special preserves to be saved and saved but never used. Paul was a spender of life. Whatever God had given him was to be poured out, not to be saved.

There is something in every one's cup of life; something that spoils if kept too long, something fragrant and beautiful when poured out in service.

The miser of life finds that life at last turns sour on him. The spender of life finds that as he has given, in the same measure it will be given him.

Faith Can't Be Hoarded

ONE very important part of the Christian's life is high-lighted for us in this week's Scripture: his faith. Indeed, faith ought not to be a part of life for the Christian. Faith is no more a "part" of life than sunshine is a part of the out-of-doors. Without the sunshine there might as well not be any out-of-doors. So without faith the Christian's life would be mere existence.

The question is: What do we do with our faith? Do we keep it for ourselves alone or do we pass it on?

Last summer a man tried to get a grocery store to take back 100 pounds of sugar which he had laid up during World War II. He had hoarded it till it was hard as rock and he could not use a pound of it. (The grocery would not take it back, and it served him right.) Faith is like that. It is sweet and good—but only if we use it and share it, not if we keep it.

What Is Sharing Faith?

SHARING your faith means helping others to have a faith at least as strong as your own. All around us there are persons who have no faith at all. They are discouraged, blue, bewildered, at loose ends—in the sad old phrase, they are lost. Sharing your faith means sharing it with just such people.

With some things, the more you give away the less you have left; but the arithmetic of religion is different. The more you give away, the more you have. Shared faith is living faith.

talk about it. A person can "give a testimony" in a prayermeeting, and share faith that way; but this is not the only way. A person who merely talks about faith is a little like a gardener who is proud of his own garden and brags on it, but never helps his neighbors with theirs.

How Can We Do It Every Day?

REMEMBER, what we are really trying to share when we "share the 'gospel'" or "share Christ" is not an argument, a set of propositions. The big thing is not arguing other people into becoming Christians.

Very few persons have ever become Christians because some one talked them into it. Talk has its place, and every Christian should be eager to say a good word for Jesus Christ at every chance. But good words for Jesus have their best effect when they come from a life that is really His.

INSPIRATION Honesty & Humility

AN EDITORIAL

A HUMAN TENDENCY is to excuse the evil and magnify the good in ourselves. Honesty is too often a forgotten virtue when it comes to self-analysis. It is nevertheless essential if we are to cultivate a proper relationship toward God and neighbor.

Honesty with ourselves involves a high degree of humility, one of the virtues most pleasing to God.

Humility should mark every approach to God. Humility is not exaggerated self-abuse, but a calm realization of our inherent weakness and inclination toward sin. In not seeking to conceal or ignore our faults, but willing to correct and repair them, we can be sure that God will bear compassion toward us.

He will not refuse to infuse strength and grace into our souls. With His aid, we shall grow in spiritual stature and in the process gain the peace of soul which is the greatest boon we can possess.

Humility is the only wise policy where God is concerned. It is also the only way in which we can live in peace and friendship with our fellow men.

Humility teaches that every human creature—with no exceptions whatever—is precious to God. It rejects the notion that we are superior to others in His eyes. It scorns the delusion that personal gifts of fortune or talent are marks of divine predilection.

Instead, it teaches that Christ is in every man; that the only sane and proper way to treat others is as brothers of a common Father. It reminds us that all are called to a partnership some day in God's eternal kingdom.

Humility does not mean that we must find everyone temperamentally agreeable. We cannot enjoy every man's company; the traits and ways of some bore or annoy us. But if we keep constantly aware of our own errors and shortcomings we shall not be harsh in judging our neighbor.

Mr. Dan Goldsmith, 3024 Curron Road, Louisville, Ky., owner of Coogla Cut Rate Store at 935 West Broadway, says there just aren't enough words in the English language to praise HADACOL correctly. He says he knows most folks don't realize what a change HADACOL can make in their life if their systems are deficient in Vitamins B₁, B₂, Iron and Niacin.

Here is Mr. Goldsmith's statement:

"Before I started taking HADACOL I was run down and nervous—and had a hard time sleeping nights. With my work in the store I have to spend sometimes 14 hours a day on my feet. Since I am in the retail business I saw how many folks were asking for HADACOL so I decided to try it myself. After the first couple of bottles I could tell a definite improvement. Now I have all the pep and energy in the world, my nerves are steady as ever and I really do get a good night's rest. HADACOL is wonderful—I not only take it, but recommend it to all my customers. I praise the day Senator Dudley J. LeBlanc put HADACOL on the market."

HADACOL Is So Different
Thousands are benefiting from HADACOL... whose systems lack Vitamins B₁, B₂, Iron and Niacin. HADACOL is so wonderful because HADACOL helps build up the hemoglobin content of your blood (when Iron is needed) to carry these great Vitamins and Minerals to every body organ—to every part of the body. Give remarkable HADACOL a chance and if you don't feel better with the first few bottles you take—you get your money back. Only $1.25 for Trial Size; Large Family or Hospital Size, $3.50.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv. © 1950, The LeBlanc Corporation.

Good Dairy Barn Lighting Essential

Speeds Up Work, Aids
 Sanitation Problems

Good lighting in the dairy barn is not only convenient, but necessary.
 For it speeds up work and helps the dairyman with his sanitation problems.

Farmers, therefore, are cautioned by agricultural engineers to wire their barns so that they have plenty of illumination on the job, around the job and going to and from the job. For these purposes, it is recommended that lighting outlets be located every 12 feet on the center line of the litter alley and every 20

The above picture illustrates lighting outlets at 12-foot intervals on the center line of the litter alley and every 20 feet on the center line of the feed alley.

feet on the center line of the feed alley.
 If more illumination is desired than can be obtained from the above plan, a second line of lights can be placed in the litter alley over the hind quarters of each row of cows.
 Flood lights on the outside corner of the barn, or conveniently placed yard lights, will help prevent accidents by illuminating the farmer's path from the barn to the house. If a milkhouse loading platform is used, it also should be well lighted.

Oriental Blight Strikes Italian Chestnut Trees

What America has learned about combatting chestnut blight may turn out to be a blessing for Italy.
 The same oriental blight that ravis now raging through the chestnut forests of Italy where the nuts are considered a sort of second crop against hunger.
