Methodist Church

Sunday, March 21 is to be the final quarterly conference for this church year. Rev. L. E. Trone, the district superintendent for the Pecos Valley district of the church, is to be present to preach at the morning worship service. After the service, there will be a basket dinner followed by the business session of the conference. All members and friends of the church are urged to be present for these sessions.

Last Sunday evening, the Methodist Youth Fellowship studied the organization of the Methodist church and the beliefs and behavior of a Christian at their regular meeting, which was held at the home of Ruth Ann Cox. There were 15 young people present and plans were laid for a clean-up day at the church this Saturday, March 20. The young people plan to come to the church between 8:30 and 9 to begin work and will bring a sack lunch for a picnic when finished. The group also discussed organizing a young peoples choir which they hope to do in the near future.

A new hand railing has been installed on both sides of the steps leading to the entrance of the church. This has been a much needed feature for some time and is welcomed by all. The Wednesday evening service was held at the home of Owen Bulkeley and the growth, development and organization of the Methodist church discussed.

Every Sunday until Easter is a registration Sunday for the nationwide Church Attendance campaign the Hope Methodist church is participating. The aim of the campaign is to establish the practice of church going over this period of special emphasis so that it will carry over throughout the year.

Church of Christ

Monday, a road block was set up so that ditching could be started for the water main. A few hours later the mechanical digger had begun a great maze of ditches. It made one wonder whether he was in Hope or on the planet of Mars. Too, the water tank is beginning to rear its head over the Johnson grass.

Wednesday morning, Ray Zumwalt county commissioner, called to say the rock crusher would be here in a day or two, that the excessive banking of the road on the curves would be taken care of and the road black topped pronto. This is the best bit of news we have heard in a long time.

Miss Lessie Fisher, on her way home from an 11-day vacation, stopped by Hope for a few minutes Tuesday. Miss Fisher works in the telephone office in Artesia.

Mrs. Lou Madron was unable to be at church Sunday because of poor health. Mrs. Jake Cox was out of town Sunday. We miss them both. Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Cox may be able to be with us next Sunday. He has been removed from the hospital to the Glasscock home in Artesia. His eye is steadily improving and he is happy to be able to distinguish objects and colors now.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Watson of Van Wert, Iowa and their daughter Mrs. Louis Eddy and grandson Marlin of Osceola, Iowa, are visiting in the Owen Bulkeley home. They arrived Saturday morning in time to help uncover the furniture from the dust storm. Sunday the Bulkeleys took their visitors to the White Sands, Cloudercroft and other places of interest.

While the meeting was in session, a phone call was received from Charlie Butante, executive secretary for Gov. Looking Ahead—

In his message to Congress urging revision of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946, President Eisenhower said that for the swift development of atomic power, "the enterprise, initiative and competitive spirit of individuals and groups within our free economy are needed to assure the greatest efficiency and progress at the least cost to the public . . . The creation of opportunities for broadening industrial participation may permit the government to reduce its own reactor research and development after private industrial activity is well established."

After all, it was America's industrial know-how which permitted us to lead the world to the development of atomic energy. Du Pont, Westinghouse, General Electric and other great industries have built and operated the government's atom installations. Sparked by the competitive spirit, and the promise of revolutionary new developments in manufacturing, private enterprise can now take the uranium atom and begin to give mankind the fullness of its constructive benefits.

News and Views Of Washington

(By John J. Dempsey)

Washington — House debate on the first major appropriation bill to be considered this session—$1,169,000,000 to run the State, Justice and Commerce departments and the U.S. Information Service for the year starting July 1—has made it evident beyond doubt that New Mexico and the other Rocky Mountain states are facing a stiff battle for the federal funds to which they are justly entitled. This is particularly true of the public lands states.

The spirited argument over so minor an item as the appropriation for building of national forest access highways reveals clearly that the majority in the House is not greatly concerned about those faroff and less populated states. Despite the authorization of $22,500,000 made for national forest access roads, the Bureau of the Budget requested only $10,000,000. The House Appropriations committee refused to increase the amount to $15,000,000, the same amount appropriated for the current year. By a narrow margin we were able to put through an amendment adding $5,000,000.

In supporting the amendment I said in part: "The people of the United States wonder what is happening to our national resources. We are just not protecting them. Curtailment of this appropriation is costing the public many times what has been cut out of the amount originally authorized. The annual loss in unharvested timber, which has deteriorated and become worthless, is far in excess of $20,000,000. Many times that amount is lost to the ravages of forest fires because we lack proper access roads. The loss due to destruction of valuable watersheds is incalculable. This constant whittling down of forest highways appropriations is the farthest thing imaginable from sound economy."

Shooting of five members of the House when a fusillade of 25 or 30 bullets was poured from the gallery by Puerto Rican Nationalist fanatics into the House chamber was the most harrowing experience I have had in my five terms. It was a terrifying thing for every member on the floor, who realized he was a veritable "sitting duck" target for the would-be assassins. The attack served one purpose, however, by bringing out forcibly that neither branch of the Congress was adequately protected from such danger. The result has been a tightening up on issuance of passes to legislative chambers and the assignment of more guards. Other precautionary measures are under consideration. It was indeed a miracle that several House members were not killed outright and a score wounded. Those bullets came uncomfortably close to too many of us.

Hope, N. M. "The Town With a Future"

Editor and Wife Visit Hope

Mr. and Mrs. David Rodwell were in Hope Sunday to look over the town improvements. After visiting the Roods for a while, they went to the dam for a breathful of dust.

Mr. Rodwell, who comes from New York, is editor of The Artesia Advocate. Mrs. Rodwell, a Pennsylvanian, came West a few years ago to teach, and was so pleased with the country she persuaded David he should come for a visit. And of course, the inevitable happened. One refresher look at Nancy was enough to persuade him he was 100 per cent for all the dust New Mexico could conjure. And now there are three.

A Definition of Freedom

Some influential people today are saying that "the American way of life" is an abstract term, that our political and economic system is "too complicated for anyone to define." In my opinion they are either not thinking straight or they are deliberately seeking to lead Americans away from the basic principles of our system. It does have basic principles and there is an acceptable definition. And the more clearly our citizens can define our system, the more certain we are that its fundamental elements will survive.

A young man one time came rushing to Jesus and said, "What is the greatest commandment?" The Master might well have said to him, "Young man, there are many, many commandments. There is the Decalogue, of course, but there is a great catalog of additional commandments, all given to God. They are all important. Study and observe them all." Said the Master

But the Master didn't say this. On the contrary, He frankly said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength. This is the first and greatest commandment." And then he said, "A second is like unto it, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The Master continued, "On these two hangeth the whole of the law and the prophets." Thus, as Jesus saw it, the way of life that God had planned for man could hang on these two great principles.

We can hang the whole of our American way of life, I submit, on three great principles—faith in God, constitutional government, and a private enterprise economy. The Freedom Forum workshops, which are conducted on the Harding college campus, have developed a dramatic way of spelling out the full definition. Last week one of the workshop staff was on the program for the high school chapel period. Working with simulated granite blocks, he built, on the stage, "The Structure of the American Way of Life."

The Foundation

The big gray foundation stone, five feet across and 12 inches thick, bore the chiseled inscription: "A Fundamental Belief in God." On this, the speaker placed another great stone, a little smaller in dimension, on which was inscribed: "The United States Constitution — Designed to Serve the People." As the speaker placed each stone in the structure, he commented briefly on its meaning.

On the left side of this foundation formed by the two great stones, he began to build the column of political rights, a thick granite slab for each: "Right to Worship, Right to Free speech, Right to Assemble, Right to Petition, Right to Privacy, Right to Habeas Corpus, Right to Trial by Jury, Right to Move About Freely, Right to Vote Freely." With each stone, the speaker pointed up the significance of the right it contained.

A Great Structure

Then the speaker began to build a twin column of granite slabs — the American's economic rights: "Right to Own Property, Right to Choice of Work, Right to Bargain Collectively, Right to Go Into Business, Right to Opportunity, Right to Make a Profit, Right to Save, Right to Compete, Right to Contract." The speaker by now had a massive structure built, its two granite-like columns rising five feet above the foundation stones. Across the two columns he placed a binding stone inscribed, "Protected by Our Laws."

"Government agencies administer the laws which protect these political and economic rights," he explained. Then he placed the beautiful capstone on his pyramid-like structure. In the granite-like face of the stone was inscribed: "The American Way of Life," and just below this, "Our Freedom." And in the center of the capstone, the speaker thrust the stars and stripes, our Flag! Then he stepped back. The high school student body gave resounding applause.

This is a good way to define the American way of life to the school youngsters of our nation. And the definition it contains should be acceptable to all Americans of all ages.

News Release

From the Governor

All civic-minded citizens in the community have been urged to attend the state-wide highway safety meeting called by Gov. Mechem for Albuquerque March 20. The meeting is to be held at the Highland high school field house at 10:30 a. m.

"The only solution to the problem of accidents on our highways and city streets lies in the organization of the citizens of this and every community into a local safety council," said the governor.

Back in dear old Taos and every time I leave here and go to some other place I think more of New Mexico.

That weather in Cal you could slice it with a dull knife. There is too many houses for you to see the country. If you go fast you run over some thing, if you don't go fast something runs over you. Things is just too fast for a country boy.

The new grandchild cried so I decided that it had advanced far enough from the stages of evolution to keep.

I took a car ride with my other girl (Kathleen) and almost had one of them nervous tear downs before we got back to her home. Traffic scrambled like spaghetti and everybody trying to run over somebody else.

I seen Hollywood, that is the place where you go to bed with a beautiful dream and wake up with a nightmare. There is some beautiful angels out there but they have arms not wings, but with planes roaring over head, ambulances and police sirens screaming on the ground, about five days was all I could stand.

We took a plane and before I had time to look the hostess over and get the seat warm we was there. I wanted to spank the hostess. She was a pretty thing to look at, but the wife objected. Objection sustained as the man of the legal profession says.

All in all it was a wonderful trip, but just give me good old New Mexico with all its faults. The people is still friendly and they have not got enough money to get their nose up in the air yet like a new coffee pot spout and I can live and let the world go by. Let me live in a house in the mountains and be a friend of man where there is little of the sham and shallow pretense.

Beginning Sunday, Emmett Kelly tells the inspiring story of his life ... the story of how he overcame heartbreaking personal tragedy to bring laughter to millions. Read it in The American Weekly, that great magazine distributed with next Sunday's Los Angeles Examiner.
