Tucker, Erin Sowder Receive Fighting Eagle Awards

Marc Tucker and Erin Sowder received the Fighting Eagle Awards at the 1992 Three Way Athletic Banquet held Friday night in the Three Way School cafeteria.

Carrying out the athletic theme, footballs, basketballs and stars (balloons) decorated the tables. A touch of glitter on the tables complimented the festive scene.

Jack Lane gave the invocation and Coach McInroe welcomed the guests. "Everyone in the community helped the athletes this year, but I would like to present a special award to a few people that helped a little extra. Special awards went to Joe Sowder, Robbie Sowder, Bobby Soliz, Butch Tucker, Renda Reeves, Kevin Reeves, Dennis Tournay, Roger Foote, Don Parker, Terry Pollard, Johnny Furgeson and Jeep Parker. These people helped by being score keepers, stat keepers, etc. Without their help we couldn't have accomplished what we did."

Coach Copley recognized all of the junior high boys involved in athletics and Coach McInroe recognized the girls. Junior high cheerleaders, Melanie McCaul and Britney Kirby, were recognized by Mary Furgeson and Randa Reeves.

she left, she expressed concern that the smaller children might not be able to keep up, but as they came in from the two and half mile hike, Mrs. Johnson was barely keeping up with the hopping, skipping and running little ones. Then they clamored to go around again! and they struck out. As they completed the five miles, Mrs. Johnson was heard to say, "My knees are like jello!"

Kelvin Johnson rode with his son, Daniel as the "Fearless Leader" of the group of bikers. "That's alright, Kelvin, lots of "Fearless Leaders" come in puffing at the back of the group!"

Theran Edler, a kindergarten student, gathered enough pledges to get a bicycle for his sister and a basketball for himself. Another kindergartener, had two pages of pledges.

Troop leaders for the afternoon bikers were Kristi Pederso and Tracy Pederson. Jennyslipper Ellen Ladd walked with the hikers in the afternoon.

A second grader, D.J. Dominguez and his little sister, five year old Sarah, rode their bikes. Tiny Sarah had training wheels on her little pink bike, but managed to stay up with the group on the two and half

M.I.S.D. Presents Numerous Certificates

During Monday night's school board meeting, Cindy Purdy, president, welcomed the guests, a group of high school students who went to state in one or more events. These events included State Track Meet, Lincoln Douglas Debate, Informative Speaking and the One Act Play.

Different members of the school board presented certificates to the students. Coach Johnson, Kerry Moore and John Gulley were also presented certificates. In speaking of the One Act Play cast Kerry Moore said, "With this group of 11 sophomores we have great years ahead. These kids have come a long way this year." "We are very proud of all of you, you have represented the school and community well."

Mrs. Purdy called the meeting to order and minutes of the previous meeting were approved as read.

In the open forum, Marsha Watkins, Cindi Chitwood and Magann Rennels, representing the junior class, met with the board and ask the board to consider letting the junior/senior banquet and prom be held in school facilities. Speaking for the group, Mrs. Rennels stated that the junior class always hosted the banquet and the parents sponsored the prom.

"This year our pre-game supper and the donkey basketball game were both successful, but the selling of the mums was not, and the juniors were running short of funds for the banquet," Mrs. Rennels said. "In the past the banquet and prom were held separately but over the years it got so expensive that the two were combined, to save money. This year the mothers prepared the meal and we used plastic forks to save money, we just didn't have the money to do otherwise. We shopped in Muleshoe 100 percent and the businessmen were good to us. We feel that the banquet and prom are a part of their education. It teaches them how to conduct themselves in a dress up affair and this is a once a year occasion."

"The Senior Trip has been stopped due to finances and I can see this happening to the banquet and prom."

They explained that Project Graduation was just for the graduates. They also asked the board to open the school for money making projects for the school.

No action was taken on this proposal.

Search Begins for 1992 Rural Minister

The search has begun for the 1992 top rural minister in Texas. "Each year a minister is selected for the honor from nominations made by lay leaders and congregation members," said Dr. Greg Taylor, program leader for community development in the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Anyone can nominate a minister."

Last year, two ministers shared the title of Texas Rural Minister of the Year for the first time. The Rev. John Will of Immanuel United Church of Christ in Spring and the Rev. Ken Kesselus of Calvary Episcopal Church in Bastrop were chosen from among 33 nominees.

The award is given at the annual Town and Country Church Conference held at Texas A&M University in College Station. This year's meeting, the 47th, will be held October 5-6.

"Choosing a minister of the year is a way to recognize the many contributions made by that person to the congregation and community," Taylor said.

The 1992 conference theme, "Wholeness Is More Than A Doughnut--Rural Ministers Need Care, Too," focuses on how the minister develops himself or herself inward and outwards for personal growth and the ability to help others, Taylor said. It examines the "spiritual, mental and physical well-being of the minister as important factors in the quality of the ministry."

To be eligible for the award, a minister should serve a congregation in a rural community or town with a population of 10,000 or less and must have served the nominating congregation at least two years.

Taylor said those making nominations should consider several factors--how the minister has encouraged congregation members to develop leadership abilities, how the minister has made a significant difference in community programs, contributions that the church and congregation have made to the community under the minister's guidance and what the minister has done for his or her personal and professional growth.

Nominations should be sent by August 1 to the Texas Rural Minister of the Year Committee, department of rural sociology, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843-2125.

Those seeking more information or wishing to submit nominations may contact the local county Extension agents or call Dean Boyd at 409-845-9390.

DPS Warns Watch Out For Children

Memorial day weekend, along with National Safe Boating week (June 7-13), will launch the recreational boating season in Texas. Unfortunately, Memorial Day weekend also is the most dangerous time of the year to be on public waters.

In 1991, there were 14 water related deaths during Memorial Day weekend, four involving boats. Eight of the deaths occurred on Memorial Day. There were a total of 225 boating accidents in 1991, resulting in 59 fatalities. In addition to the loss of life, the accidents also caused more than $645,000 in property damage.

In an effort to reduce water related accidents, the department would like to provide information and assistance to the news media. Ultimately, they are looking to get the word out to as many people as possible to be safe during the upcoming holiday and throughout the summer.

If you need information or would like to schedule a ride-along to see boating law enforcement in action, please call your local game warden. To the extent that it does not prevent them from serving the public through their regular duties, TPWD game wardens will make every effort to assist news reporters. Call Steve Pritchett at (512) 389-4626 for the name and phone number of your local game warden.

Lillie Belle Baker Funeral Services Held Monday

Funeral services for Lillie Belle Baker, 84, were held at 10 a.m. Monday in the Memorial Funeral Home Chapel of Tyler.

Burial was in West Memorial Park in Tyler. Muleshoe arrangements were under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. She died at 10 a.m. May 15 in Muleshoe Area Medical Center. She was born February 5, 1908 in Red River County. She lived in Muleshoe from 1928 to 1977, moving to Chandler at that time.

She married Joe Baker December 18, 1948 in Muleshoe. She was a member of West Side Baptist Church in Chandler and a homemaker.

Survivors include her husband, Joe; two sisters, Alda Odom and Mary Johnson of Muleshoe and several nieces and nephews.

DPS Celebrates Motorcycle Safety Awareness Month

Governor Ann Richards has proclaimed May as Motorcycle Safety and Awareness Month. Governor Richards talked of the success of the state's efforts to encourage motorcycle safety. "In 1991, we saw a 31 percent decrease in motorcycle accident fatalities. But we do not intend to settle for the success we have had."

In response, Henry Palma, Sr., Manager of the Motorcycle Safety Bureau of the Texas Department of public Safety announced the debut of a new public awareness campaign for its state-wide education program, The Course for Motorcycle Riders.

The new campaign includes television, radio, and newspaper public service announcements. It also includes posters and brochures to be placed in schools and motorcycle shops throughout the state. The new campaign theme line is, "In Texas, the thrills begin with skills."

The campaign explains the benefits of the course to would be and experienced motorcycle riders. The campaign also uses a spokesperson: Doug Polen, the 1991 World Superbike Champion.

The Course for Motorcycle Riders teaches riding skills to help riders avoid accidents and enjoy the road. Offered in two levels, basic and advanced, the course is challenging and fun for riders of all skill levels.

In the basic course, beginning riders learn proper techniques for turning, braking, emergency maneuvers, and street survival. In only one weekend or over the course of a few evenings, riders develop skills comparable to those of someone with two years of riding experience. Motorcycles and helmets are provided.

The advanced course is for experienced riders only. The curriculum includes high-speed maneuvering, emergency braking, braking on curves, avoidance techniques, and other riding skills. Due to the challenging nature of the advanced course, students are required to use their own motorcycles.

Both courses involve some classroom training. However, the majority of each class takes place on the riding range. This enables participants to practice each new technique as the course progresses.

Additional information about The Course for Motorcycle Riders is available by calling 1-800-292-5787.

Courses are offered in over thirty locations around the state. There is also a DPS Mobile Training Program which travels to areas without established training

VA Questions & Answers

Expenditures by the U.S. Department of veterans Affairs (VA) in Texas have given our state's economy a needed boost, according to Waco VA Regional Office director Al Poteet.

"The $2,258,247,490 that VA expended in Texas during Fiscal Year 1991 went directly into the local economy," Poteet said.

He said more than half of these VA expenditures, $1,217,975,220, went to individual veterans as compensation for disabling injuries or diseases incurred while in the armed forces, or as pensions for wartime veterans with limited incomes.

"The VA is proud to provide these services and benefits to Texas veterans," Poteet said. "There's a multiplying effect when this money is spent in the community."

He said that VA expenditures for Bailey County totaled $406,767. This included $371,413 for compensation and pension, $36,398 for readjustment and vocational rehabilitation, and $28,956 for insurance and indemnities.

Determined to lend a helping hand in the nation's war efforts, thirty of Bailey County's leading farm men and women have pledged themselves to set up a human chain of communication in order that emergency news may be put in the hands of every man, woman and child in the shortest possible time.

The plan was ordered into effect by the president, according to County Agent Sam Logan, and is being carried out in every agricultural county in the nation. In Bailey County, the Land Use Planning Committee, headed by H.E. Schuster, has assumed this responsibility, and in doing so has changed its name to the Agricultural Victory Council.

Victor Cox, who owns a strip of land east of Muleshoe called the "Muleshoe Hoss Ranch," will have a chance to get back in moving picture work with the movie "Hud," which is scheduled to be filmed in and around Claude soon.

Cox, a Hollywood veteran of 15 years recently signed an agent's contract with Paramount Pictures and plans to take part in the movie, if they have a part for him.

The movie would then have more than one tie-in with Muleshoe. It is taken from the novel "Horseman, Pass By," written by Larry McMurtry, who is a nephew of Muleshoe rancher Johnny McMurtry.

Southwestern Public Service Company crews are now in the process of constructing a new "East Muleshoe Substation," a new 69,000 volt transmission line from east of Muleshoe to provide power for this new substation, and new heavy conductor distribution circuits out of the new substation.

The new substation is being located on the corner of Avenue B and East Sixth Street and will have a capacity large enough to furnish service to all of the city area presently being served by the City Substation.

Cancer-Fighting Carrots Being Developed

Carrots may be the favorite food of Bugs Bunny, but soon they may become a favorite of people with cancer.

In the past, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station vegetable breeders focused their carrot research on improving the plant's flavor, appearance and disease resistance, as well as increasing the amount of carotene--the substance that gives carrots their orange color.

But following recent medical reports linking slowed cancer cell growth or, in some studies, cancer cell regression with the ingestion of high levels of beta-carotene, the scientists have added increasing beta-carotene levels to their list of carrot improvements. Beta-carotene is a carotene-like substance which, when broken down within the body, produces vitamin A.

Medical studies have shown people who eat beta-carotene-rich foods are at a lower risk of having the following cancers: lung, esophagus, colon, rectal, oral, skin and stomach. In one National Cancer Institute of Canada study of tobacco chewers in the Philippines, researchers observed a three-fold decrease in oral cancer cells after study subjects ate higher quantities of vegetables and fruits rich in beta-carotene.

"There are several reports that especially high beta-carotene has anti-cancer properties," said Dr. Leonard Pike, carrot research project leader at Texas A&M University and developer of the Texas "1015" Super Sweet Onion.

"We are now selecting for beta-carotene content over just general carotene content," he said. "We are not only improving the yield, the appearance and the flavor, but also possibly getting into a true health benefit besides nutrition."

Pike's research with increasing beta-carotene content in carrots is in its infancy; however, he hopes medical scientists who are experimenting with beta-carotene will incorporate his improved carrots into their cancer research soon.

"In the instances that I've talked with these people (medical researchers), they are very excited about working with us because most of their research now is a bit random when it comes to collecting samples at grocery stores," Pike said. "They pick up some product off the shelf, and they take it back and work on it in their lab. But they can't find or even identify the variety that they used the first time (for subsequent testing).

"But by working with us on the breeding program we're focusing on... if we take a sample, send it to them and they test it and it proves beneficial, they can tell us the results. And then we can come right back and incorporate that in our breeding program since we know the pedigree of the plant."

Developing any vegetable, such as carrots, for a particular trait takes years, Pike said. Because only one generation of plants can be produced a year, he said, it generally takes six to eight years to successfully develop a desired trait in a vegetable.

Although carrots with superhigh beta-carotene content may be almost a decade away, Pike said he believes that one day specially bred "designer" vegetables will be commonplace at grocery stores and will be marketed based on their particular, improved traits.

"We may even see the day when we see labeling that says what the percent carotene is (in a carrot)," he said.

The Power Of Women

To be successful in America today, a company has to count on the power of women. There are more than 127 million women in America these days—that's 51 percent of the population, some 6.2 million more women than men. Some 53.5 million of these women are in the workforce—women with added buying power.

Guilt-Free Strawberry Cheesecake

- Crust:
- 1 Reynolds Sure-Seal storage bag, gallon size
 - 30 gingersnap cookies (1 1/2 inch diameter)
 - 1 tablespoon sugar
 - 1/3 cup margarine, melted
- Filling:
- 2 packages (8 oz. each) light cream cheese, softened
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 4 egg whites
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

For filling, in a large mixing bowl, with an electric mixer, beat cream cheese and sugar until smooth. Add egg whites and vanilla and beat until well blended. Pour mixture into crust. Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until center is set. Cool on wire rack. Refrigerate until chilled.

For topping, in a food processor or blender, puree 1 cup thawed, sliced strawberries. Add 1/4 cup sugar and blend. Pour mixture into small bowl; stir in remaining 1 cup sliced strawberries. Serve over cheesecake.

Makes: 8 to 10 servings.

- Topping:
- 2 cups frozen sliced strawberries thawed, divided
 - 1/4 cup sugar

Preheat oven to 325°F. For crust, place cookies in a gallon-size Reynolds Sure-Seal storage bag. With a rolling pin or heavy smooth object, crush cookies into fine crumbs. (Crumbs should measure about 1 1/2 cups.) Add sugar and shake bag to blend ingredients. Pour melted margarine over crumbs and shake bag until well blended. Press crumb mixture evenly into a 9-inch pie plate.

Baste Your Meats and Vegetables

The key to effortless basting is to begin with a flavorful base. Miracle Whip or Miracle Whip Light Dressing has everything you need for a great primary basting ingredient. Just add a few more ingredients such as herbs and spices and then brush or spoon the mixture right onto your items while grilling to allow the basting flavors to sizzle into your food.

Meat Pies Bring Great Taste

Remember meat pies? You probably recall them as one of the first convenience foods available in the freezer section of the supermarket. Although they're a classic childhood favorite, those frozen little pot pies just don't compare to the homemade variety.

Homemade meat pies are an entirely different story. And they come in all shapes, forms and flavors whether cooked in a casserole or on a baking sheet.

"Meat pies are part of virtually all cultures," explained Linda Carman, director of consumer affairs for Martha White Foods. "Fillings can be made from an assortment of meats, and, crusts vary from biscuits to pizza dough to combread."

The Martha White Kitchen has created a sampling of meat pies that pair savory fillings accented with pork sausage with a variety of crusts.

A new version of the standby chicken pot pie, Savory Sausage Chicken Pie features a biscuit crust with a creamy sausage-and-chicken filling. The filling features the traditional vegetables--carrots, celery and onions--but this time, browned sausage complements the old-fashioned flavor.

The Italian version of a meat pie is a pizza turnover known as a calzone. The pizza dough is rolled out and then half is covered with the filling. Then the dough is folded over and sealed. The baked result is a tender, chewy crust loaded with a combination of meat, cheese and vegetables.

The Sausage Sweet Pepper Calzone has a colorful filling that showcases red and green bell peppers and onions sauteed with the sausage.

Or, the calzone gets an American touch with green chiles and Monterey Jack cheese in the Southwestern Sausage Calzone. Try using the hot style sausage for an extra zesty flavor.

Leadership Muleshoe Enjoys Steak, Beans

It was a bowl of red beans for some. For others, it was a huge tender fillet of steak cooked to your liking at last week's Leadership Muleshoe meeting.

Held at the Muleshoe Country Club, the drastic difference in the dinner served was the culmination of a contest recently held by members to secure Charter Business Supporters for the organization. Money made from this effort will go to finance the Democracy in Action Tour and an annual award scholarship for one member of the group.

The winning team that enjoyed the steaks was made up of: April Watkins, Chairman, Steven Noble, Margarita Posadas, Ronda Scott, and Mickey Trussell.

"Approximately $2,000 was made by the youth thanks to the generous support of local business people," said Carolyn Johnson.

Jody Field, president, called the business meeting to order. Special guests were introduced. They were Jack Wilson, new chamber manager and his wife, Barbara; and Mike McDearman, chamber president and his wife, Brenda.

Memorial Day Motorist Warned By DPS

Major V.J. Cawthon, Regional Commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety reminds us that Memorial Day signals the beginning of summer vacation. He stated, "During this holiday period there will be more vehicles on the roadways of Texas because of school being out and many families are starting their summer vacations. The danger of more accidents, more injuries and more deaths naturally go along with the increase of traffic."

"All available department of Public Safety Troopers will be on the road this holiday weekend and will be especially watchful for those individuals committing hazardous violations, especially those who speed and those who drink and drive," said Major Cawthon.

Defensive driving is the key to avoiding accidents. It takes 100 percent of a persons attention to be a good defensive driver. A good defensive driver looks at least fifteen seconds down the road ahead of him and is especially watchful for hazards and hazardous situations developing. A good defensive driver should always expect the other driver to do the unexpected. A good defensive driver is always on his toes, ready to react.

"Remember to buckle up. We want everyone to live to enjoy another Memorial Day and not be just a memory for someone else," Major Cawthon concluded.

Phil Gramm, Memorial Day

"A country that forgets the heroes who have given their lives to preserve its life will itself be forgotten," said U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, quoting the advice of an ancient philosopher.

Memorial Day, he said, "is a time to pause and commemorate the gallantry of those thousands of American heroes who have fought and died to preserve our liberty."

Memorial Day, 1992, marks the 125th official commemoration.

"As Americans, we have much to be thankful for on this Memorial day, but nothing more than the fact that ours is a nation worth protecting," the senator said.

Memorial Day was born in the wake of the Civil War as a reunited nation sought to honor the sacrifices of soldiers from both the Union and the Confederacy.

Long known as Decoration Day, it has been observed since 1868.

A&M Scientists Test Japanese Cattle

It sounds contradictory, but Texas A&M animal scientists are investigating whether one of the world's fattest cattle breeds can keep some of its fat and still be part of a lean beef program.

Wagyu cattle, treasured in Japan for their highly marbled beef, appear to be genetically predisposed to deposit more fat, especially the intramuscular fat that helps make beef juicy and flavorful. But they may also be better at converting what have come to be known as "bad" fats to "good" ones, according to Dr. Stephen Smith of Texas A&M and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Experiments at the McGregor station in 1991 showed crossbred American Wagyu have high ratios of monounsaturated fats to unsaturated fats. Monounsaturated fats are known as "good" fats with few health drawbacks except when consumed at very high levels, such as in an abnormally high-fat diet, Smith said.

The team is examining whether genetically pure Japanese Wagyu have more activity from an enzyme called stearyl-CoA desaturase, which converts saturated fats to monounsaturated fats.

"All animals have the enzyme," Smith said. "It's a question of whether we can get the activity high enough to change the fatty acid composition.

"Before we can even hope to do that, we have to determine how this enzyme is controlled and which tissues make monounsaturated fat."

Wagyu, selected over the centuries for their abilities as draft animals, have developed into a breed whose characteristics are difficult to match. The highest-graded Wagyu cuts are very expensive and usually given as gifts, often wrapped in wooden, velvet-lined boxes, Smith noted.

Raised primarily on feed and in geographically isolated areas of Japan, Wagyu have been allowed out of that country on only one occasion. Four bulls were sold to an American breeder in 1976, and all American stock are descended from them.

Smith traveled to Japan in November to collect purebred Black Wagyu blood samples. DNA from the samples will be used in the enzyme experiments.

Because all animals have the enzyme, Smith said, his team's work could have implications for producers of other meats, including poultry and pork.

While Smith looks at the genetic end of things, a member of his team is leading efforts to find the best ways to produce and manage beef similar to that from Japanese Wagyu.

Dr. David Lunt, superintendent of the McGregor experiment station, said such beef may be provided in part by a growing herd of crossbred American Wagyu cattle, as well as by Angus.

One of his recent experiments showed that crossbred American Wagyu could produce beef reaching the highest Japanese grading levels.

His team found that Angus, an American breed disposed to high marbling, did not grade out as highly as American Wagyu. Still, it reached marbling levels that would make it ideal for a middle level of the Japanese market, he said.

Both the American Wagyu and Angus were raised under conditions as nearly identical as possible to those in Japan.

Lunt, Smith and others are trying to determine if genetics, environment or a combination of both make Wagyu marbled so well, as well as the potential for making other breeds more Wagyu-like.

Lunt said U.S. markets do not offer as much promise for highly marbled beef carcasses. Except for steaks--in demand in restaurants and specialty markets--roasts and other cuts are too fat for American consumers and have limited market use, he said.

Producing beef economically for the high-end American market is an objective, but the best markets for such beef are in Japan, he said. Japanese cuts are done in strips or chunks for their traditional dishes, he said, and the entire carcass can be utilized.

He also said a well-educated Japanese populace will eat more and more lean beef for health reasons and because it's easier on the pocketbook than highly marbled beef. That means other U.S. beef probably has an even bigger market than the highly marbled product, he said.

"There's a lot of potential to sell USDA Choice beef over there," Lunt said.

Recent market liberalization means it's now possible for Americans to ship all the beef they'd like--if it meets Japanese consumer tastes, Lunt said.

Producing that beef is another matter, Lunt said, but he feels good about the long-term outlook for American producers wanting to sell in Japan.

He said he won't even hazard a guess as to the potential market size for highly marbled beef, but said other countries could catch up to U.S. efforts quickly.

"Development of this market niche is very, very much in its infancy. There are fewer than 10,000 head of Wagyu cross cattle in the United States now," Lunt said. "When we started working in this area four or five years ago, there were fewer than 200 head."

"What's interesting is the rate of growth of Wagyu herds occurring in New Zealand and Australia," he said, noting that in New Zealand alone, some 2,000 head of Wagyu are expected to be born as part of that country's first Wagyu calf crop.

Money Talk

Texas State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison addresses various issues related to personal finance and state government. However, these views are not intended to replace the advice of reputable financial advisers or other professional counselors.

It seems like everyone is talking about capital gains taxes these days. But not everyone is clear on what these taxes are. Capital gains taxes are federal on gains made from the sale of personal or investment property. Capital gains taxes are filed and paid with your federal income tax.

The capital gain subject to tax is basically the difference between what you sell the property for and your basis (your original purchase price plus the value of improvements you've made.)

For example, if you brought your home for $50,000 and sold it for $100,000 your gain would be $50,000 and subject to tax. But if you made $25,000 worth of improvements the basis of your home is $75,000. Then if you sell the home for $100,000, your capital gain is $25,000, not $50,000.

Talk to your accountant, tax consultant or the Internal Revenue Service about other expenses that can be subtracted from the sale price of your home in determining capital gain.

By buying a new home of greater or equal value within two years of selling your old home you can delay tax on the gain. If you are 55 or older, you can avoid tax on capital gains of up to $125,000 for married couples filing jointly. But this exclusion can be done only once in your lifetime.

The IRS publishes free brochures on the sale of property and homes. To receive your copy call them at 1-800-829-3676.

If you have a question, write Texas Treasury, P.O. Box 1268, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711.

Senator Phil Gramm Reports

The Gulf of Mexico is truly "America's sea," said U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm as he introduced legislation designed to preserve and protect the Gulf.

"The Gulf...is a critically important asset for states such as Texas which border the Gulf," the senator said.

He pointed out that the Gulf of Mexico is a major source of tourism, the largest producer of marine products in America and the greatest port for exports and imports.

Gramm's bill promotes the Gulf to the same level of protection as the Chesapeake Bay and Great Lakes programs.

"This bill will set up a major new environmental program, the Gulf of Mexico program," he said. "It establishes a funding stream of $200 million over the next five years, with 70 percent of that money going to a grant program to fund research and other activities by the Gulf states."

"I am firmly convinced that good science makes for a good environment. If we are to improve the quality of our environment, we have to have science on which to base our actions," Gramm said.

"We in the Gulf of Mexico region, and especially in Texas, are not about to get out of the petrochemical business, not about to relinquish our capacity to generate jobs, growth and opportunity for our people. We do, however, want to create jobs and improve the quality of the environment at the same time."

Gramm noted that research on Gulf environmental problems is already underway throughout Texas "to understand the relationship between regional industry and the environmental quality of the Gulf."

The legislation has already drawn support from the Office Management and budget and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Two reasons why it can save you money:

High Efficiency. The Dual Fuel Heat Pump makes the most of every energy dollar. It is as much as twice as efficient as your old air conditioner. So, you start saving money the moment you switch on your Dual Fuel Heat Pump.

Low Electric Rates. Residential prices for electricity are 21% lower in the SPS service area than they were nine years ago. (Can you think of anything else that costs that much less than it did in 1983?) Our prices are among the lowest in the nation.

Emergency Worker Counseling Program Successful

The pipeline explosion and fire in Brenham that killed several persons and injured others earlier this month brought dozens of Emergency Medical Services (EMS) workers and firefighters to the scene within minutes to attend to the injured and dying.

Now that the last ambulance sirens have faded and cleanup crews have swept up the destruction, emergency medical workers and firefighters are coping with their memories of the horror. And a new program is helping them face their feelings through talking with peers and mental health workers.

This new program, called Critical Incident Stress Management (CISM), was developed last fall when officials from the Texas Department of Health (TDH), the Governor's Office of Victim Assistance, the Texas Department of Public Safety, and the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation began working together to bring specialized stress debriefing to emergency medical personnel, law enforcement officers, firefighters and members of the public involved in troubling incidents. Then, within hours of the Brenham explosion, Ron Haussecker, Brenham EMS director, realized his crews might suffer in the aftermath of their emergency response and requested that TDH send a counseling team familiar with EMS and trained in Critical Incident Stress Debriefing (CISD).

"I think it has done a tremendous amount of good," said Haussecker. "My employees grew up here and went to school with a lot of the people who died or were injured. It really hit them hard."

TDH officials estimate that as many as 25 percent of emergency medical workers leave their jobs over the course of their four-year certification and that stress is the main reason. "Of the 42,000 emergency care attendants, emergency medical technicians, intermediate and paramedics we certify, probably 2,500 each year quit their work in EMS," said Gene Weatherall, chief of TDH's Bureau of Emergency Management. "Those who quit include paid and volunteer workers. The stress on volunteers, especially in rural areas, may be even greater because almost every call involves someone they know."

"Critical Incident Stress Debriefing is not psychoanalysis or psychotherapy," explained Paul Tabor, the bureau's CISD coordinator and a paramedic. "It simply gives the emergency medical workers a chance to explore and vent their feelings about the tragedy and their performance. We let them know their feelings are normal and the reactions they can expect, such as loss of sleep, appetite changes, withdrawal, headaches."

CISD teams ask to be reimbursed if possible for their travel expenses but do not charge for their services. Team members are volunteers who respond to local calls for assistance and are coordinated by TDH. Tabor expects TDH to establish at least eight teams of four members each throughout Texas. Each team would consist of a mental health clinician and emergency workers in the same field as those who receive counseling.

Some 200 mental health clinicians, police, firefighters, emergency medical personnel and others will receive training in basic and advanced critical incident stress, post traumatic stress disorder and peer counseling techniques June 25-28 at the Doubletree Hotel in Austin. Jeffrey T. Mitchell, Ph.D., and George S. Everly, Jr., Ph.D., will teach the courses. Mitchell developed the CISD process, and according to him, two to four percent of emergency personnel involved in a highly traumatic event may never recover from the effects of the stressful event.

For information on CISD training or to request a debriefing team, contact Tabor 512-458-7550. Later this year, TDH will have a toll-free number for emergency workers to call when they need a debriefing team.
