FAMILY RE-UNION

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Dickerson last Sunday the following enjoyed a most excellent dinner at a reunion of the children of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smithee: Will Smithee and family, Will Donnell and family, Mrs. Jim Smithee and children, J. N. and Scott Smithee and their wives E. C. Smithee of Knoxville, Tenn., Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smithee and Bob Dickerson and family. Four daughters, three at Tulia and one at San Antonio, were unable to get here.

Several other relatives and family friends visited with them in the afternoon, and an altogether enjoyable time was had.

Mrs. G. S. Morris left Lockney Sunday week for Ft. Bliss in response to a message that her son, Frank, who is stationed there, had received a broken leg in a motorcycle accident.

Brother Wilkins was in the office this week, and in the course of our conversation said Sunday would likely be his last here.

Would we be out of place to suggest that every member of his church and all others who can, go to hear what will practically be his farewell sermon?

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bain and children returned Monday from a visit of several days with Mrs. Bain's mother and sister at Waxahachie.

On the 16th of September Mr. and Mrs. Beth Joiner were surprised with a supper party at their home in honor of their second wedding anniversary.

They had just returned from Lockney and just at supper time were indeed surprised by the half dozen guests who arrived for supper with them.

The supper of chicken, salad, cake, iced tea and other 'goodies' were enjoyed by all, as also were the fruit and watermelons.

Those who attended the party were: R. W. Thomas and daughter, Miss Lonis, Misses Hester and Gertrude Gordon, and Messrs Eugene Gordon and Lem Love.

A guest.

SMITH-SELF

Miss Addie Smith and Roy D. Self were married September 14th, at the Methodist parsonage, Rev. Wilkins officiating.

Mrs. Self is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Smith, and is a most estimable young lady.

Mr. Self is from Stanton, and has been here for several months.

They expect to make their home at Stanton after harvest is over here.

The Star extends hearty congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Self.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES

Rev. R. A. Clements, Presiding Elder of the Plainview District, was here Tuesday in the interest of the final work of the Methodist Church for this Conference year.

Don't forget that Sunday is our last day before Conference. We should be glad to have not only a good attendance of our church people but any of the town who will come.

The official board for the past year, together with Rev. Clements and wife, enjoyed a most excellent dinner with Rev. Wilkins and wife at the parsonage.

Besides Rev. Clements and wife, those present were: Messrs and Mesdames J. G. Fort, T. L. Anderson, Ples Skeen, J. E. Minyard and R. E. Douglas, and Miss Naomi Finley.

It was a most enjoyable occasion and one not soon to be forgotten.

Hon. Jno. R. Edwards of the A. & M. College was here to see about placing a county Agent in this county. He made a very convincing talk on the subject, and we hope the Commissioners Court will see fit to take his suggestion.

H. C. Ware, the County Agent of Swisher County brought them over and Mr. Wilson the County Agent of Floyd met him here and took him to Floydada.

Clair Meeker has been quite sick for several days with typhoid fever. He is reported to be improving some at this writing.

Last Saturday Floydada ran over our team to a score of 53 to nothing. They had a much heavier team and more experience, some of the boys having been playing for six or seven years.

It was a very unfair game as to weight and we dare Floydada to bring a team of our boys weight and see who is the most skilled.

R. H. McClure of Floydada, was a visitor here the first of the week.

Mrs. Luther Brown of Lockney who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. G. T. Morrison, near Rock Creek, for several days, is real sick with typhoid fever. Her husband came in Wednesday.

J. B. Porter and wife and Mrs. Z. C. Fogerson left Wednesday for an extended visit to Paducah, Seymore, Burnett County, San Antonio, and other points where they will visit for quite a while.

H. J. Cavet and Mike Allred of Tulia, were here Monday on their way to Quitaque and other points below the "cap".

WASHINGTON SIDELIGHTS

U. S. Sam's Sword Hand Made Stronger

WASHINGTON.—The establishment of a war plans division in the general staff of the army and creation of a war council have been announced by Secretary of War Weeks, through publication of an order by Gen. John J. Pershing, the chief of staff, directing reorganization of the general staff.

General Pershing's order is the consummation of a plan originated by Secretary Weeks whereby there would be organized within the general staff a special war staff ready for the call to war at a moment's notice, with its organization perfected to the point of functioning as it should in time of war.

"Through the plan worked out by General Pershing and General Harbord, the assistant chief of staff," said Secretary Weeks, "we will have a well organized war staff, which can function for war at a moment's notice without crippling any branch of this general staff at home."

General Pershing, as chief of staff of the armies, is the head of the war plans division created in the general staff, which will counsel from time to time with the war council, consisting of the secretary of war, the assistant secretary of war, and the chief of staff.

The order reorganizes the general staff into the five following divisions, each under immediate control of an assistant chief of staff. Personnel division (first division). Military intelligence division (second division). Operations and training division (third division). Supply division (fourth division). War plans division.

The war plans division is to be so organized as to enable it, in the event of mobilization, to furnish the nucleus of the general staff personnel for each of the general staff divisions required at the general headquarters in the field.

Views of Sawyer on Rehabilitation

THE question of hospitalization of the World war veterans is one embracing many important features which have heretofore been unnecessary in the construction of proper hospitals for the care of civilian sick, according to Brfr. Gen. Charles E. Sawyer, the President's physician and military aid.

"There is nothing too good for the World war veteran who is trying to regain his health and re-establish himself in civilian activities," he says. "A vocational training program which is carried out on the basis of entertainment and hospital occupation is unfair, both to the World war veteran and to those who have the responsibility of operating such an institution."

fectly arranged special apartment in which vocational training can be carried on. There should be an industrial branch of the educational system. There should be an agricultural course.

"Some have an idea that there is such a difference between the various classes of patients that each must have a separate institution in which to be treated. With that view I am not in accord. I know after a third of a century contact with all classes of patients that it is perfectly possible for all classes of cases to be treated in the same institution. It is unjust to stamp any as defectives."

Disarmament Demonstration by Women

MOVEMENT for a world-wide demonstration for disarmament participated in the women of all nations, to be held on Armistice day when the international conference convenes in Washington, has been initiated by organized American working women through the National Women's Trade Union league. Telegrams inviting participation of a score of women's organizations of the United States and the organized women in 48 nations which sent delegates to the Second International Congress of Working Women in Geneva have been sent out on behalf of the National Women's Trade Union league by Mrs.

Raymond Robins of Chicago, its national president.

"To strengthen the governments in their desire to disarm by giving unequivocal expression of the women of the world," is the purpose of the demonstration.

The text of the message of the National Women's Trade Union league to the women of 49 nations, signed by Mrs. Robins, contains the following: "President Harding has set Armistice day for the opening of the momentous disarmament conference at Washington. When we remember the joy that went up from the people of all nations in thanksgiving that peace would once more dwell on earth, no other day would lend the same significance throughout the entire world as this anniversary of November 11, 1918.

"Since that day the aftermath of the war, with its hunger, suffering and misery, has appalled the conscience and paralyzed the spirit of mankind. "The governments will be strengthened in their desire to disarm if the women of the nations will give unequivocal expression to their will."

Farmers Plan to Burn Corn in Winter

IOWA farmers are attempting to mature the largest corn crop in the history of the state, with no prospect of a market, and Minnesota farmers are preparing to burn their corn this winter instead of buying coal, farmers told the interstate commerce commission in its investigation of freight rates on grain and hay.

By maintaining abnormally high freight rates the railroads will lose the traffic on the coal which the farmers would use if they could sell their corn, as well as that on the unsold grain. T. E. Castman, a Minnesota farmer, told the commission. Lower freight rates on grain and hay, he said, in reply to questions by members of the commission, would increase the volume of traffic in a number of ways.

edence in consideration over the carriers, a "commercial" industry.

Dr. E. G. Mourse of the Iowa State Agricultural college was put on the stand by the grain men to establish that costs of producing, transporting and marketing the grain were more than the prices received by the farmer.

E. H. Cunningham, secretary of the American farm bureau federation of Iowa, and a practical farmer, said that while the railroads probably were suffering as the result of the present readjustment, he believed the situation as regards a basic industry like agriculture should be given pre-

All witnesses agreed that the market price of grain included transportation costs and that the price paid the farmer was in every case the market price less the cost of handling and freight. Decreased rates on grain would not reduce the market price of grain.

DEATH LIST IN SAN ANTONIO GROWING DAILY

Property Damage Expected to Run Into the Millions—Relief Work Rushed

THOUSANDS ARE HOMELESS

Cloudburst at Night Sweeps People Away and Wrecks Hundreds of Homes

Dallas.—Late reports show that more than 100 bodies of flood and storm victims in the lowlands along the San Gabriel River in Williamson and Milam Counties have been recovered.

San Antonio reports the recovery of 60 bodies; many still missing.

Property losses still mounting into the millions.

This cloudburst was probably the most destructive of a large number of storms in Texas Friday night and Saturday.

At Austin and in the immediate vicinity of that city tornadoes of great violence swept away much property.

Much of the territory south of Temple toward the Rio Grande was visited by heavy rains and windstorms. Communication was cut off and trains were unable to run.

The flood in San Antonio was particularly devastating and spectacular, sweeping in at dead of night Friday night and early Saturday morning. The San Antonio River runs through the business district of the city.

San Antonio, Texas.—Revised figures Sunday afternoon of the unidentified dead so far have been brought up to 42 in the flood area.

Commissioner of Fire and Police Phil Wright has reduced his estimate of dead from 1,000 to 300.

Many more bodies are visible in the tree tops in the flooded area, and are being taken to three general morgues that were established after the public mass meeting held at the City Hall to plan relief work as quickly as they are recovered.

After the meeting, Red Cross relief headquarters were established to cooperate with the army field kitchens that have assumed the task of feeding the thousands of families made homeless by the flood.

The property loss still stands around $10,000,000. Thousands are homeless.

All fire apparatus has been put to work pumping out the cellars in the flooded area, and health authorities are taking preventive measures to eliminate any chance of disease from unsanitary conditions.

Shortly after the mass meeting of citizens, Mayor O. B. Black issued a proclamation defining the deadline in the stricken area. A cordon of soldiers from the Sixteenth Cavalry, Ninth Infantry and military police was thrown around the area.

All branches of public service are out of commission, the city being without water, lights, telephone or telegraph service.

To guard against a possible conflagration, city officials are bending their first efforts to repairing the wrecked water mains.

One feature of the tragedy is the fact that the rush of water came as a flash, without warning, or even expectation, at an hour when the entire city, save the few all-night places of business, was asleep.

In some parts of the city, according to residents whose homes for a time were surrounded by the rushing torrent of water, the flood reached a depth of from 12 to 15 feet.

Boy Scouts worked beside regular troops from the army camps near by, who serched ruins for victims, aided the helpless and guarded the business district and southern residence district, masses of strewn wreckage, against looting.

At noon Saturday the water had receded almost to the normal river gauge. This was attributable to the fact that Olmos Creek, which brought the "cloudburst" flood into the San Antonio River, has its origin in the northern part of the city.

One of the most widely picturesque death holes in the whole course of the river was at the South street crossing, where the roaring torrent twisted homes together in a broken maze against telephone poles that swayed like toothpicks.

In different directions came the piercing scream of a woman or child, or the deeper tones of a man, all crying for help against the torrent which no thing or person could stand long. Scores of automobile lights and spotlights sought to pierce the gloom together with flashlights and kerosene lanterns borne by men and women who were anxious to help.

The raging flood waters of Alazan Creek, in the southern and western portion of the city, swept away hundreds of Mexicans, negroes and a few whites, according to reports received from residents along the creek. Thousands of inhabitants of the lowlands along the creek are homeless. Hundreds of houses were demolished and washed away, while others were hurled miles down the creek in the rushing torrent. Devastation spreads for hundreds of yards on each side of the creek, which was reported 30 feet high in some places.

Reports of the death toll along the Alazan Creek were indefinite, ranging from 160 to 1,000. The Sheriff's department received a report that 80 were drowned near the South Flores bridge. Twenty were reported found at the International & Great Northern bridge, the supports and approaches of which were washed away. Debris, lumber and houses were piled high against the bridge.

Military headquarters were established at the corner of Grayson street and Avenue D and later moved to the Federal Building, where Colonel Benjamin A. Poore was placed in command of the military forces in the city.

Lieutenant Colonel Leon B. Kromer, assistant chief of staff, and captain Frank P. Stretton, Provost Marshal, were among the leading advisers to Commissioner Wright.

Before the flood had receded in the Alazan Creek on the West Side, where loss of life was heaviest, soldiers from Fort Sam Houston and Camp Travis threw a pontoon bridge together and began dragging for bodies.

One Sergeant pulled out nine bodies, principally women and children.

Thirty Drowned Near Taylor

Taylor, Texas.—Thirty Mexicans were drowned on the farm of J. M. Bowren, 10 miles from here, according to reports reaching here. Many farm buildings, much machinery, and many head of live stock were washed away and crops damaged to an untold extent in the rush of waters following a 23.42-inch rain, which fell between Friday morning at 3 o'clock and Saturday noon, turning the placid San Gabriel River, six miles from here, into a raging maelstrom, destroying all in its path.

Trains Not Running

Dallas.—No trains were running on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas between San Antonio and Temple Saturday, according to H. E. McGee, general manager. Several bridges and a considerable amount of track are washed out, he said. The Katy depot at San Marcos was filled with five feet of water, and meager reports received at Smithville from Austin are to the effect that several lives were lost there. The International & Great Northern tracks are washed out between Austin and San Antonio.

Relief is Ready

Washington.—Instant relief has been made available for victims of the Texas storm and floods, the American Red Cross announced here Saturday. In view of hurricane warnings sent out by the Weather Bureau some days ago, southwestern headquarters of the Red Cross in St. Louis got in touch with its agents in Texas and a plan for coping with such a situation as has arisen was worked out.

Severe Cyclone Near Hutto

Hutto, Texas.—A very severe cyclone struck the east side of town Friday at 7:15 p. m., wrecking the Baptist Church and the homes of Mrs. Smith, Ward Miller, Perry Saul, Owen Saul and Al L. Evans and Olander's garage and barn. The twister nearly wiped out the negro part of town, entirely destroying the negro Baptist Church, and eight negro houses.

Over 18 Inches at Austin

Austin, Texas.—Property damage estimated at $25,000 was done and several persons were injured in one of the heaviest rains in the history of Austin here Friday night and this morning. Austin here Friday night, Fred Morris, University of Texas weather observer, reported 18.25 inches of rain fall between 7 o'clock Friday morning and 7 o'clock Saturday morning.

Little River Five Miles Wide

Temple, Texas.—Reports reaching here from Sparks declared that the Little River near that town, was five miles wide in places, Saturday night, and that traffic over the M. & T. was suspended.

Relief for Flood Sufferers

San Antonio, Texas.—Comprehensive action for the relief of flood sufferers here were taken at a joint meeting of city and county officials, representatives of civic organizations and citizens generally.

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE IS HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

San Francisco, Cal.—An indictment charging Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle with manslaughter in connection with the death of Miss Virginia Rappe was voted late Tuesday by the San Francisco County grand jury.

The vote of the grand jurors, it was reported, was twelve to two for a manslaughter true bill.

The true bill, it was said, will be returned this week in the Superior Court.

San Francisco, Cal.—Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, next to Charlie Chaplin the children's favorite film comedian, but privately known to the gay motion picture colonies of Los Angeles and New York as a thorough Bohemian, occupies a cell in the city jail, held without bail in connection with the death of Miss Virginia Rappe, a beautiful film actress, which followed the latest and probably the last of the famous private Arbuckle jollifications.

The party was held Monday. Miss Rappe was removed from Arbuckle's suite in the luxurious Francis Hotel that afternoon, suffering agony. She died after lingering for days under treatment for alcoholism, an erroneous diagnosis. Her death now is claimed to have been due to an internal rupture which cause peritonitis.

When he came in Saturday night from Los Angeles, Detective Captain Matheson placed his hand on the comedian's shoulder and verbally charged him with murder.

DODSON WARNS CALOMEL USERS

You Cannot Gripe, Sicken, or Salivate Yourself If You Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea. If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your drugget and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money. If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you'll wake up feeling great, full of ambition, and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it. Advertisement.

Insects Big Pest

Insect pests cause an annual loss to the world's field crops of $125,000,000, according to the report of the entomological branch of the Canadian department of agriculture, which is carrying on an "antiwaste" research campaign to discover effective counteractives. The botany branch of the department claims to have saved $40,000,000 a year by its crusade against smut and its control of late blight and rot of potatoes.

GREATNESS NOT ON SURFACE

Reporter Had Perceived Nothing to Indicate That His Companion Was a Man of Note.

Every one is entitled to one chuckle in days like these, just as every dog is entitled to one bite. Hence this story of Sinclair Lewis, which is being repeated with vicious enjoyment by a lot of the lowbrows.

It appears that Lewis was a guest at a dinner not long ago at which a number of newspaper men and other low forms of life were present. The guests were introduced to their hosts in this fashion:

"Gentlemen—this is Mr. Smith, Mr. Jones and Mr. Lewis."

Mr. Lewis sat next to a reporter. The reporter talked of politics, the next war, heat, Babe Ruth, the big fight and other bourgeois things and said no word of literature.

Mr. Lewis became first uneasy and then unhappy. When he could stand it no longer he turned to his neighbor with a gray laugh.

"Ha, ha!" said he. "You did not when we were introduced think that I was the fellow Sinclair Lewis, who wrote 'Main Street,' did you?"

"No," said the reporter.—Boston Globe.

Stung.

Walter—Thank you very much, sir. Diner—What do you mean? I haven't given you anything.

Walter—No, sir, but I bet a half dollar that you wouldn't tip me.

Diner—Oh, you did, eh! Well here's a nickel. Now you're out 45 cents, and serves you right for your confounded impertinence.

A Feeling of Security

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy. The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

Subscription Rates
 One Year $1.50 ix Months $.75 Three Months $.40

Advertising Rates Given Upon Request.

We have been here in charge of the Star for ten months. During that time we have devoted our energy and time to help build up our town and county.

We have given to Briscoe county enough free advertisement to have paid for our plant. We have tried to help our people here and to interest others in the county. It has been a hard struggle for existence—yet we have never hesitated, never knowingly failed to boost that which has had for its end a better and more progressive community. We have tried to be a chamber of commerce, a publicity bureau, thru whose channels we have attempted to give all the good news and suppress all the bad.

Only through the medium of advertisement, as the subscription list hardly pays for itself, can we expect to get by. Yet, if we had been dependent upon the home merchant alone for our advertisement, we would have closed our doors at the end of the first month.

Now stop to consider. Whenever a new family moves into our community means that $1000 or thereabout, is dropped each year thereafter into the cash drawer of our merchants. Each merchant is supposed to get his part.

About the first thing a new comer does is to drop into the office and subscribe for the Star. He watches the ads. He sees that only two or three Silverton merchants advertised. He sees Lockney, Plainview and Tulia firms carrying ads. He soon decides there is something wrong here, and in the course of time changes to other towns to do his shopping, as you know that many have done and are doing today.

The merchant who is so self-centered as to think he can get along without advertising is sure to find business growing dull.

There are over twenty firms doing business in Silverton. On an average we have only four who advertise. Every one should advertise, for the good of the town and himself. It is easier to keep customers at home than to draw them from other territory. The returns are always greater.

Now the time has come when we must have more advertisement, and this question confronts us: "We have the space for sale and expenses to meet. Can we conscientiously cater to the merchants of Plainview, Lockney and Tulia who want our space, or should we hold it for home merchants who never take it?"

For ten months we have held it; for ten months we have catered to the home merchant; for ten months we have waited and hoped; for ten months the home merchant first; for ten months we have fought an uphill fight.

The home merchant who does not advertise fails to appreciate what it means to him, fails to realize the part played by the local paper, fails to read the future.

And until there is a change, until you decide the space in this paper is worth taking, and wont let your customers read your ad, you can expect them to read your competitors ads from Tulia, Plainview and Lockney.

The limit has been reached. We men folks should become alarmed at a statement of fashion makers for our clothes. One of these fashion experts has just announced that men's clothing styles this winter will have a "bustle" effect. As one of the men folks we draw the line on this bustle business, and the merchants that expect to sell us a suit this fall had better leave off the bustle. Won't we men folks look smart going down the street humped up behind in a bustle fashion? If these clothing experts think they are going to put a bustle on this writer, they have another guess coming.

—Lockney Beacon.

When the Star editor was just a small kid, we have a faint recollection of the fashion experts putting one by the women about like the above. If we have a correct idea of that dim past, dim as far as fashions are concerned, it worked to perfection, and we believe, but are not sure, that it made quite a hit with the ladies, and that the bustle effect at that time became enormous or at least very lengthy.

Are the females of the specie weaker than the male? Do they fall for things that the stronger sex will refuse? We have no doubt but that the editor of the Beacon will have a chance to observe the bustle effect on the fashion plates that hang out on the street corners of Lockney. They will take to the bustle idea like a duck to the water.

"We have a bureau whose duty is to read each week the country newspapers from all over the country. There is not a paper of any consequence in our trade territory that our bureau does not get. This bureau looks over these papers and when we find a town where the merchants are not advertising in the local paper we immediately flood that territory with our literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants use their local papers," said Herman Rosenfield, advertising manager for Sears, Roebuck & Co. —Aux.

The Lockney Beacon was 20 years old last week. The present editor-owner has been in charge for eleven years and has built it up from a $1,250 plant to one worth over ten times that amount, and is running one of the best edited paper on the plains. We hope their 21st year to be the most successful up to date.

An Adventure Romance

—9—

"Can't I?" said Miss Thornton, with a new edge to her voice and something in her eyes that made them look as though they were passing in review all the unchaperoned years since first she made her debut as an independent scullery-maid at Mrs. Blunkum's feed-house. "I shall change nothing here," she concluded. "When Randy—Mr. Randolph comes back, he shan't find his place cluttered with females."

Mr. Milyuns turned on her a gaze that was complex with admiration and a realization that he was on the way to biting off more than he could chew. He decided to sidestep.

"Can you be in this afternoon?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," said Pamela. Involuntarily glancing at the door and betraying a half-formed intention to watch that portal night and day until death or Mr. Robert Hervey Randolph arrived; "I'll be in. Why?"

"Mrs. Milyuns and my daughter Eileen will call on you at about five," explained Mr. Milyuns. "Just one more matter and I must go," he continued. "Your income amounts to something over eight hundred dollars a month. I shall pay it in advance until you get settled and have a chance to catch up."

"Please send me only half," said Pamela, as she rose to say good-by.

Mr. Milyuns took her hand, dropped it, and started toward the door; but before he got there, he stopped and turned.

"My dear," he said, losing for the moment his birdlike, chirpy pose, "I don't want you to think of me as just your banker. I knew your father and your mother, and their fathers and mothers before them. I am fond, by old usage, of every drop of blood that runs in your veins. You won't forget that, will you?"

Pamela stared at him, swept toward him, threw her arms round his neck, hugged him, dropped her face on his shoulder and wept. Mr. Borden Milyuns stood very erect, his bald head held high, his pink cheeks puffed out, and his eyelids blinking at the rate of fifteen to the dozen in a vain effort to fan back an amazing lachrymatory inundation.

"There, there!" he said, patting Pamela on the back. "Who would have thought it, you adorable, lonely little girl?"

Pamela threw up her head and smiled through the sudden summer shower.

"I know it was ridiculous," she said. "But I couldn't help it. You made me like you all of a sudden, and I just had to, because you've had a bath and you look so clean inside and out." She kissed him as she broke away.

"I see; I see," said the astounded Mr. Milyuns, and beat it.

At two minutes after five the doorbell rang again. In spite of the fact that it was almost exactly the hour which Mr. Milyuns had set for the arrival of his wife and daughter, Pamela couldn't help hoping—but in vain. It was with a slightly resigned air that she received Mrs. and Miss Milyuns instead of Mr. Robert Randolph.

Mrs. Milyuns flew to her, set hands on her shoulders, searched her face with eager shrewd eyes, and said:

"Borden indeed told me the truth about you, my dear. May I kiss you?"

Pamela extended one cheek to the salute while her eyes wandered off to size up the tall, blonde, cool young person that she surmised must answer to the name of Eileen Milyuns. Being the product of two shorts, how on earth had she managed to grow so long? Her face was regularly beautiful, as though it had been carefully made to order like her clothes. She appeared as passive as a Palmer snowscape.

After a little skirmishing for position, the three ladies seated themselves in a triangle, into the center of which the well-trained Tomlinson ran a tea-wagon.

"Now," said Mrs. Milyuns, having emptied and put down her cup, "let's forget the sheer romance of the situation, my dear, and get down to practical problems. The first of all things, as you must realize, is the necessity of getting you a companion. Would you care to be our guest in Madison avenue until you can pick one out?"

"I would put clothes ahead of a housecat," murmured Eileen.

Her mother ignored the remark and kept her eyes fixed on Miss Thornton's perplexed face. That young lady seemed in no lack of something to say but rather in search of words and the plunging courage necessary to the saying. She drew a long breath and delivered herself of the following:

"Really, it's most awfully kind of you, but, as I told Mr. Milyuns, Tomlinson is such a dear that I am going to continue him as my companion."

"Tomlinson!" exclaimed Mrs. Milyuns, and then smiled indulgently for the first time during the interview, being under the impression that at last she had run into something appropriately naive in the bearing of her new charge. "Of course you can keep him on, but you must realize that you can't live here without a woman in the house."

"Oh, yes, I can," said Miss Thornton, a little breathlessly. "I have a feeling—I can't explain it exactly—that this apartment is a one-woman setting. As I said to Mr. Milyuns, I don't want to clutter it with females."

A silent laugh crept into the eyes of the marble-skinned Eileen; something inside of her sat up and took notice. She glanced round the room and murmured:

"Mother, she's absolutely right. I'm for her."

"Right! Eileen!" exclaimed Mrs. Milyuns, flushing in her indignation at finding a traitor in the home camp. "I don't know what your generation is coming to. The impossible is never right."

Having taken up her suave cudgel, Eileen was in no haste to lay it down, and may it be pointed out right here that Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton had the rare faculty of enlisting the nearest bystander to assume her battles for her, thenceforth becoming a charmingly interested onlooker, ready to watch the tide of her own fortune from the vantage-point of an entirely impersonal detachment.

"That's where you slipped, mother," continued the quite unruffled Eileen. "There's nothing impossible to our generation. Impossibilities are our food, drink and raiment. We're like those surprising orchid things that defy the usual laws and live on air."

"Yes," remarked Mrs. Milyuns; "any new air. But I didn't bring you here, Eileen, to be a stumbling-block to—Pamela, who is suddenly faced with problems in the solution of which she deserves our sympathetic assistance."

"You've hit the nail on the head again, mother," parried Eileen. "You're not in sympathy with her, and I am; so you'd better hand over her check, and tomorrow morning at ten I'll be here to help her cash and spend it—necessary." She turned to Pamela with a twinkle of anticipation in her eyes.

"How about it?"

Pamela smiled back her bubbling smile, and then suddenly grew grave.

"Do you think I could order by measure?" she asked, and remarking the hurt astonishment on Eileen's face, continued in rapid but nevertheless halting explanation: "You see, it's Mr. Randolph. This is really his apartment, and he may be back almost any—any day. I—I don't want to miss him. I—I wouldn't be out when he comes, for anything."

"H'm," interjected Mrs. Milyuns, but before she could make any further progress along that line, Eileen was on her feet and saying good-by among these other things:

"That's all nonsense. If Bobby found you here just as he left you, the first time he decided to turn up, he might never appear again. But if he finds you after two or three unsuccessful calls and just one day's shopping, he will never leave. Tomlinson will have to throw him out."

"Tomlinson couldn't," said Pamela, with calm complacency.

Gradually the sure shot made by Miss Milyuns began to take effect. The thought of new clothes—new smart suits, airy evening nothings, filmy undergarments, and solid-silk hosiery—stole Pamela from her intention of eternal vigilance and led her to say:

"After all, I will go with you, if it really isn't asking too much of you."

Thus was Mrs. Milyuns side-tracked for keeps, and on the following morning the two young ladies were wafted down-town in Mr. Milyuns' best limousine and proceeded to open a chain of credit-accounts, on the bare say-so of Eileen and in the name of Miss I. P. Thornton, that spoke volumes for the former's exclusive taste in fashionable purveyors and financial ability to humor it. Possibly the two would have shopped up to the moment of the present writing had it not been for the fact that Pamela knew all about money from the short end.

"I have finished," she suddenly announced.

"Finished what?" asked Eileen.

"Finished shopping," said Pamela. "I've been keeping account, and I've spent almost the whole check."

"The whole check?" exclaimed Eileen. "Why, you haven't touched it. That's the beauty of charge accounts. You can keep your checks to look at. I've got some that father gave me three years ago."

Pamela smiled a smile of much wisdom and made for the nearest exit. As a matter of polite formality, when they reached Fifty-ninth street, she asked Eileen to come up for lunch from the bachelor's buffet in the basement, and she could not help a slight feeling of had promised herself elsewhere.

"But I'll break away and come for tea at five, if you'll let me," said Eileen. "I simply must help you try them all on."

"All right; do," said Pamela. Inwardly pleased that she would have some one beside Tomlinson upon whom to flash the first dazzling vision of her metamorphosis.

The first thing she did when she reached the apartment was to ask if Mr. Randolph had called; the next was to summon the office of Milyuns, Branch & Milyuns on the telephone to know what steps had been taken in the new search. She was somewhat surprised to learn that the entire firm had gone out to lunch in a body, and still more startled at the information, obtained three hours later from the same supercilious voice at the other end of the wire, to the effect that none of them had come back. She was young; she believed it.

There is no doubt that in five minutes more Mr. Gloem would have assumed full sway in the late apartment of Mr. Robert H. Randolph had not a long procession of parcels begun to arrive in the nick of time. Tomlinson brought them into the bedroom, one, two, three at a haul, and Pamela herself out the knots with Mr. Randolph's best nail-scissors and laid out the gowns, filmy fold upon filmy fold.

By the time Eileen turned up the apartment looked like the stateroom de-lux of a millionaire young lady returning from Paris with nothing to wear and preparing to swear to it before all the customs officials in Gotham. Tomlinson was ordered to fill the cellar with wrapping-paper, tissue-paper, cardboard boxes and string, burning what was left over in the back yard.

As soon as sufficient space had been cleared for action, the two girls set to work, and were soon involved in such an orgy of "trying on" as only the healthiest stamina of youth could have endured without falling over in a dead faint from exhaustion. Even Eileen divested her person of everything but, and experimented with such dear garments as it seemed impossible Miss Thornton could get round to in the allotted time.

Having tried to show the public how charming was Pamela in and without her cheap clothes, no puerile and gasping effort will be made in these pages to measure the effect upon her of the latest creations of the raiment dream-gods of Fifth avenue. Suffice it to say that, in one hour's twinkling of the eye, she became such a radiant vision as chokes more words down into the pit of a man's stomach, makes his jaw work like that of a fish on a hot sidewalk, fills his eyes with the bleeding light of calf-love and inspires his hands with an overmastering desire to reach for it.

For two, four, six days, a week, two weeks, Pamela lived in breathless anticipation of the moment when she could burst upon the eyesight of one Robert Hervey Randolph, and when all these days—and weeks—passed without any news of him, her lips that were made to smile, to kiss, and to bless the air with words softly spoken and carried on the fragrance of clean young breath began to droop pitifully.

Mr. Milyuns' efforts in several directions had so far proved in vain. He had advertised in every paper in Gotham, from the New York Epoch to the pink Police Gazette; he had offered rewards; he had set traps and was now supporting a large corps of rapidly fattening individuals who called themselves "plain-clothes" men—a name that would have fitted them admirably had the last syllable been omitted. His net results were the information that Mr. Randolph, in a reprehensible state of intoxication and at seven o'clock of the morning of which he had disappeared, had exchanged his well evening garments at a second-hand emporium on Sixth avenue for a suit of thick and eighteen dollars in cash, stating, as he left the place, that he was thinking of going South for the rest of the winter.

POINTS OUT HUSBAND'S DUTY

Writer insists no man may stand in the light of his wife's domestic ambitions.

"Puzzled husband" writes us that he is sorely tried by his wife's ambition to bake the family bread, and other things. His domestic affection and spirit of chivalry will not permit him to tell his wife the truth—that the bread is almost as heavy as a paving stone and quite as indigestible. So he goes to work every morning with a heavy heart and an even heavier stomach, and is bedeviled with gripes and abdominal pains all day. Greene M. Farley writes in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer:

Not only that, but his wife is a constant reader of domestic science departments and she uses him as an experiment station. This last week, he says, he had biscuits that would do for sinkers on a fish line and an angel cake that could not be differentiated from old putty. The heartrending feature is that she asks him with a bright smile how he likes it all, and he cannot find it in his breast to tell the wholeheartedly.

All this is getting on his nerves and on his stomach and on his conscience. In the course of a little time he feels his life insurance is going to be due.

Should he tell her the truth, or should he suffer in silence and let her go ahead and collect the life insurance?

If life is worth anything to him he might conclude to tell her the truth and let her go ahead and procure her divorce. She might find a second husband with a cast-iron digestive apparatus and the present husband ought not to stand in the way of his wife's career as a domestic scientist.

Tricking Fate,

Every Hindoo must have a son to perform the proper rites in his behalf so that he may be released from purgatory after death. Especially cursed, therefore, is he whose fate is to be sonless. One such, a Brahman, propitiated the god Vishnu and obtained a boon. He asked for a son, but, since a son was not in the man's fate, Vishnu refused. Twice this happened, but the third time the Brahman asked that his meriments might be shared by gods and men alike. This was granted. He then went home, locked his door and, with his wife, began to sing and dance. Thereupon, all the gods and men, by the terms of the boon, were compelled to sing and dance with him, and the business of the universe was brought to a standstill. "Stop!" begged the gods. "Only when you grant me a son," answered the Brahman. And he had his way.—W. N. Brown in Asia Magazine.

Where Ice Makes Crops.

We are accustomed to think of Alaska as a moist part of the world, but except in the southern portion it is rather arid, having a rainfall insufficient for the production of crops.

When an area is first cleared for planting the soil is moist enough, being frozen nearly to the surface the year around. Then the ice in the ground gradually melts, so that the first few crops require only a slight rainfall—the melting of the ice furnishing sufficient moisture to the roots of the growing plants.

In the course of a few years, however, the ice recedes to a depth of six or more feet, and this reservoir of moisture is no longer available for the crops. It then becomes necessary to resort to various expedients, such as "mulching," for hindering evaporation and economizing the available water.

Education may not make a dull man bright, but it improves his manners.

A Tale of Blood

The blood is to the body what steam is to an engine. If the steam runs down, the engine slows up, and if your blood runs down, you slow up. Your food doesn't digest as it should, you don't feel rested in the morning and you are out of sorts generally. Over fifty years ago Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was put on sale in the drug stores to help people whose blood was in poor shape, and ever since then has been doing wonderful things for men and women all over this country. PETITION ASKS THE REMOVAL OF PRYOR

ACTION UNDER NEW LAW CARRIES SUSPENSION PENDING FINAL HEARING.

WALKER SAYLES APPOINTED

Stephens County Man Will Discharge Duties of Office Until Case is Settled.

Austin, Texas.—By direction of Governor Neff, Attorney General C. M. Cureton has filed suit in the Twenty-Sixth District Court of Travis County asking the removal from office of W. G. Pryor. Judge Cooper Sansom after the filing of the petition issued an order suspending Pryor and in another order appointed Walker Sayles of Stephens County to discharge the duties of Prison Commissioner for the duration of the suspension from office of Mr. Pryor. Under the order Mr. Pryor is not to receive compensation as Prison Commissioner and shall no longer discharge any of the duties of that office until the case has finally been heard and determined unless by proper motion the order is hereafter set aside. Pryor will be given opportunity to be heard at the next term of court.

Mr. Sayles is not appointed Prison Commissioner under the order. He is only to serve during the suspension of Pryor and discharge the duties of Pryor's office, receiving the same compensation allotted Pryor heretofore. In the event Pryor should win the suit he can recover from the State the amount of compensation lost during his suspension, according to the Attorney General's Department. Mr. Sayles was formerly Mayor of Breckenridge.

This suit was brought under the act of the first called session of the Thirty-Seventh Legislature providing a method for removal of Prison Commissioners.

The petition for removal of Commissioner Pryor is signed by Attorney General C. M. Cureton and Assistants W. A. Keeling and E. F. Smith. In the petition it is said that "his excellency, Hon. Pat M. Neff, Governor of Texas, has directed in writing the Attorney General of Texas to bring a suit to remove the defendant from the office of Prison Commissioner of Texas," and that in his written communication to the Attorney General, the Governor charges:

"First: That W. G. Pryor has been and is now guilty of malfeasance and non-feasance in office.

Second: That W. G. Pryor has been and is now incapable and unfit to discharge the duties of Prison Commissioner.

Third: The W. G. Pryor has heretofore and now willfully fails, refuses and neglects to discharge the duties of his office."

BODY OF MISSING MAN DISCOVERED IN A WELL

McKinney, Texas.—Finding of the badly decomposed body of Hardy Mills, 35 years old, in an abandoned well on the Will Baxter farm, six miles southwest of McKinney, at 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon clears up the mystery of the disappearance of Mills from his home on Sept. 2. He lived three miles northwest of the city.

Noticing human tracks around the well, Baxter looked down in the well and saw the body lying partly out of the water which covered the bottom of the well. Bailing wire had been run through the lower part of his mouth and passed down and tied around his waist to hold the head down. The body was weighted down by a piece of iron and a large rock.

ONE THING SHE HADN'T LOST HEARD AND HEDED APPEAL

Pupil's Statement of Fact Probably Gave Music Teacher Occasion for Deep Thought.

A well-known music teacher in Atlanta was giving a lesson to a talented but careless pupil and was rapidly losing all patience with her. Finally, at a most complicated part of a difficult piece, the pupil lifted her hands from the piano and made a wild dash for her handkerchief to stop a threatened sneeze. It was the last straw.

"Was there ever such a girl!" exclaimed the teacher, thrusting her own handkerchief at the offender. "You lose your position, you lose your fingering, you lose your handkerchief—you lose everything!"

"Not quite everything," said the pupil with a smile. "I haven't lost my temper."

Sexton Rather Spoiled Effect of Preacher's Discourse by His Prompt and Literal Obedience.

A country negro preacher was speaking at length to his congregation of the many things round us that are shrouded in mystery, and of which we know little. As he warmed to his theme, he became most eloquent, and frequently repeated the oft-quoted saying: "More light! Oh, for more light!"

His surprise may be imagined when, after one of these utterances, the old sexton, who had been dozing since the beginning of the sermon, woke with a start, then got up, tiptoed softly into the vestry, seized two additional candles and, ascending the pulpit stairs, placed them beside the two already there, and in a loud whisper, heard all over the church, exclaimed:

"Yo' shore got to do with these; there ain't no mo'."

SYNOPSIS.

Warned by his physician that he has not more than six months to live, Falling sits despondently on a park bench, wondering where he should spend those six months. A friendly squirrel practically decides the matter for him. His blood is pioneer blood, and he decides to end his days in the forests of Oregon. Memories of his grandfather and a deep love for all things of the wild help him in reaching a decision.

The squirrel was very close to him. And Dan seemed to know by instinct that the movement of a single muscle would give him away. So he sat as if he were posing before a photographer's camera. The fact that he was able to do it is in itself important. It is considerably easier to exercise with dumb-bells for five minutes than to sit absolutely without motion for the same length of time. Hunters and naturalists acquire the art with training. It was therefore rather curious that Dan succeeded so well the first time he tried it. He had sense enough to relax first, before he froze. Thus he didn't put such a severe strain on his muscles.

The squirrel, after ten seconds had elapsed, stood on his haunches to see better. First he looked a long time with his left eye. Then he turned his head and looked very carefully with his right. Then he backed off a short distance and tried to get a focus with both. Then he came some half-dozen steps nearer.

A moment before he had been certain that a living creature—in fact one of the most terrible and powerful living creatures in the world—had been sitting on the park bench. Now his poor little brain was completely addled. He was entirely ready to believe that his eyes had deceived him.

Bushy-tail drew off a little further, fully convinced at last that his hopes of a nut from a child's hand were blasted. But he turned to look once more. The figure still sat utterly inert. And all at once he forgot his devouring hunger in the face of an overwhelming curiosity.

He came somewhat nearer and looked a long time. Then he made a half-circle about the bench, turning his head as he moved. He was more puzzled than ever, but he was no longer afraid. His curiosity had become so intense that no room for fear was left. And then he sprang upon the park bench.

Dan moved then. The movement consisted of a sudden heightening of the light in his eyes. But the squirrel didn't see it. It takes a muscular response to be visible to the eyes of the wild things.

The squirrel crept slowly along the bench, stopping to sniff, stopping to stare with one eye and another, just devoured from head to tail with curiosity. And then he leaped on Dan's knee.

He was quite convinced, by now, that this warm perch on which he stood was the most singular and interesting object of his young life. It was true that he was faintly worried by the smell that reached his nostrils. But all it really did was further to incite his curiosity. He followed the leg up to the hip and then perched on the elbow. And an instant more he was poking a cold nose into Dan's neck.

But if the squirrel was excited by all these developments, its amazement was nothing compared to Dan's. It had been the most astounding incident in the man's life. He sat still, tingling with delight. And in a single flash of inspiration he knew he had come among his own people at last. He knew where he would spend his last six months of life.

His own grandfather had been a hunter and trapper and frontiersman in a certain vast but little known Oregon forest. His son had moved to the eastern cities, but in Dan's garret there used to be old mementoes and curios from these savage days—a few claws and teeth, and a fragment of an old diary. The call had come to him at last. Tenderfoot though he was, Dan would go back to those forests, to spend his last six months of life among the wild creatures that made them their home.

CHAPTER II.

The dinner hour found Dan Falling in the public library of Gitcheepolis, asking the girl who sat behind the desk if he might look at maps of Oregon. He remembered that his grandfather had lived in southern Oregon. He looked along the bottom of his map and discovered a whole empire, ranging from gigantic sage plains to the east to dense forests along the Pacific ocean. He began to search for Linkville.

Time was when Linkville was one of the principal towns of Oregon. Dan remembered the place because some of the time-yellowed letters his grandfather had sent him had been mailed at a town that bore this name. But he couldn't find Linkville on the map. Later he was to know the reason—that the town, half-way between the sage plains and the mountains, had prospered and changed its name. He remembered that it was located on one of those great fresh-water lakes of southern Oregon; so, giving up that search, he began to look for lakes. He found them in plenty—vast, unmeasured lakes that seemed to be distributed without reason or sense over the whole southern end of the state. Near the Klamath lakes, seemingly the most imposing of all the fresh-water lakes that the map revealed, he found a city named Klamath Falls. He put the name down in his notebook.

The map showed a particularly high, far-spreading range of mountains due west of the city. Of course they were the Cascades; the map said so very plainly. Then Dan knew he was getting home. His grandfather had lived and trapped and died in these same wooded hills. Finally he located and recorded the name of the largest city on the main railroad line that was adjacent to the Cascades.

The preparation for his departure took many days. He read many books on flora and fauna. He bought sporting equipment. Knowing the usual ratio between the respective pleasures of anticipation and realization, he did not hurry himself at all. And one midnight he boarded a west-bound train.

He sat for a long time in the vestibule of the sleeping car, thinking in anticipation of this final adventure of his life. He was rather tremulous and exultant as he sank down into his berth.

He saw to it that at least a measure of preparation was made for his coming. That night a long wire went out to the Chamber of Commerce of one of the larger southern Oregon cities. In it, he told the date of his arrival and asked certain directions. He wanted to know the name of some mountain rancher where possibly he might find board and room for the remainder of the summer and the fall.

The further back from the paths of men, he wrote, the greater would be his pleasure. And he signed the wire with his full name: Dan Falling, with a Henry in the middle, and a "III" at the end.

He usually didn't sign his name in quite this manner. The people of Gitcheepolis did not have particularly vivid memories of Dan's grandfather. But it might be that a legend of the gray, straight frontiersman who was his ancestor had still survived in these remote Oregon wilds. The use of the full name would do no harm.

Instead of hurting, it was a positive inspiration. The Chamber of Commerce of the busy little Oregon city was not usually exceptionally interested in stray hunters that wanted a boarding place for the summer. Its business was finding country homes for orchardists in the pleasant river valleys. But it happened that the recipient of the wire was one of the oldest residents, a frontiersman himself, and it was one of the traditions of the Old West that friendships were not soon forgotten. Dan Falling I had been a legend in the old trapping and shooting days when this man was young. So it came about that when Dan's train stopped at Cheyenne, he found a telegram waiting him:

"Any relation to Dan Falling of the Umpqua divide?"

Dan had never heard of the Umpqua divide, but he couldn't doubt but that the sender of the wire referred to his grandfather. He wired in the affirmative. The head of the Chamber of Commerce received the wire, read it, thrust it into his desk, and in the face of a really important piece of business proceeded to forget all about it. Thus it came about that, except for one thing, Dan Falling would have probably stepped off the train at his destination wholly unheralded and unmet. The one thing that changed his destiny was that at a meeting of a certain widely known fraternal order the next night, the Chamber of Commerce crossed trails with the Frontier in the person of another old resident who had his home in the farthest reaches of the Umpqua divide. The latter asked the former to come up for a few days' shooting—the deer being fatter and more numerous than any previous season since the days of the grizzlies.

"Too busy, I'm afraid," the Chamber of Commerce had replied. "But Lennox—that reminds me. Do you remember old Dan Falling?"

Lennox probed back into the years for a single instant, straightened out all the kinks of his memory in less time than the wind straightens out the folds of a flag, and turned a most interested face. "Remember him?" he exclaimed. "I should say I do." The middle-aged man half-closed his piercing, gray eyes.

"Listen, Steele," he said, "I saw Dan Falling make a bet once. I was just a kid, but I wake up in my sleep to marvel at it. We had a full long glimpse of a black-tail bounding up a long slope. It was just a spike-buck, and Dan Falling said he could take the left-hand spike off with one shot from his old Sharpe's. Three of us bet him—the whole thing in less than two seconds. With the next shot, he'd get the deer. He won the bet, and now if I ever forget Dan Falling, I want to die."

"You're just the man I'm looking for, then. You're not going out till the day after tomorrow?"

"No."

"On the limited, hitting here tomorrow morning, there's a grandson of Dan Falling. His name is Dan Falling, too, and he wants to go up to your place to hunt. Stay all summer and pay board."

Lennox's eyes said that he couldn't believe it was true. After a while his tongue spoke, too. "Good Lord," he said, "I used to follow Dan around—like old Shag, before he died, followed Snowbird. Of course he can come. But he can't pay board."

It was rather characteristic of the mountain men—that the grandson of Dan Falling couldn't possibly pay board. But Steele knew the ways of cities and of men, and he only smiled. "He won't come, then," he explained. "Anyway, have that out with him at the end of his stay. He wants fishing, and you've got that in the North fork. Moreover, you're a thousand miles back—"

"Only one hundred, if you must know. But Steele—do you suppose he's the man his grandfather was before him—that all the Fallings have been since the first days of the Oregon trail? If he is—well, my hat's off to him before he steps off the train."

The mountaineer's bronzed face was earnest and intent in the bright lights of the club. Steele thought he had known his breed. Now he began to have doubts of his own knowledge. "He won't be; don't count on it," he said humbly. "The Fallings have done much for this region, and I'm glad enough to do a little to pay it back, but don't count much on this eastern boy. He's lived in cities; besides, he's a sick man. He said so in his wire. You ought to know it before you take him in."

The bronzed face changed; possibly a shadow of disappointment came into his eyes. "A lugger, eh?" Lennox repeated. "Yes—it's true that if he'd been like the other Fallings, he'd never have been that. Why, Steele, you couldn't have given that old man a cold if you'd tied him in the Rogue river overnight. Of course you couldn't count on the line keeping up forever. But I'll take him, for the memory of his grandfather."

"You're not afraid to?"

"Afraid, h—! He can't infect those two strapping children of mine. Snowbird weighs one hundred and twenty pounds and is hard as steel. Never knew a sick day in her life. And you know Bill, of course."

Disappointment turned into rapture at sight of the wild country and through warm welcome accorded by Silas Lennox, Dan Falling's host, characterize the next installment of this story.

An Extinct Monster.

The curators of the Launceston and Tasmanian museums have presented to the Royal society of Tasmania the preliminary account of a nearly complete skeleton of a gigantic extinct monster, recently discovered in the pleistocene beds of Tasmania. The animal was as large as the largest existing rhinoceros. The new discovery shows clearly that it was a rhinoceros-like animal, with a skull built for aggressive warfare, and at least one powerful horn on the snout. Evidence of the gigantic battles in which this animal engaged is to be found in the complete smashing and partial crushing of the collarbone, and in the crushing and subsequent repair of the bones of the nose and snout.—Montreal Herald.

Wise Words.

We may be assured that liberty will not descend to a people; a people must raise themselves to liberty; it is a blessing that must be earned before it can be enjoyed; and what is worth having is worth earnestly striving for.—From the Italian.

HOW DOLLAR WORKS FOR YOU

Benjamin Franklin's Fund of $5,000 Grew to $431,383 in One Hundred Years.

How the dollar invested works for the individual himself has been best illustrated by that first great American teacher of thrift, Benjamin Franklin. In 1791, he bequeathed $1,000 ($5,000 to the commonwealth of Massachusetts and to the city of Boston as a mark of his appreciation for having appointed him as agent in England at the "handsome" salary of £2,000 ($10,000) and to make his bequest really valuable with his great foresight, Franklin provided in his will that this $1,000 should be put out at 5 per cent interest for one hundred years; that at the end of that time $1-131 of the fund accumulated should again be put out at interest for another hundred years and then the fund be divided one-fourth to Boston and three-fourths to the state.

Let us show how well that $1,000 of Franklin's has worked. At the end of the first hundred years it had grown to $431,383.62. It was then divided in accordance with the will; $329,300.48 was set aside for "public work" and $102,083.14 was started on its course of earning interest for another hundred years. That was in 1891. January 1, 1918, this sum had grown to $267,805.15 and at this rate of increase the fund should amount to at least six million dollars when the second period is completed, and may be considerable more.—World's Work.

One's Work Shows for Itself.

Exceptional mental fitness is bound to express itself in the work one does. Superior minds are not satisfied with what will pass. They are conscious of meriting more than passing rating and try to make everything they do show it. They are never of the whining variety who are forever complaining of their chances in life. Life to them is a constant opportunity and if they fail it is because they have either been unfortunate or foolish. In either case there is the fine challenge to redeem the time and more than surpass the past. With them it's a matter of pass and surpass. It's a matter of the head and it shows in the deeds of the hands.

Porpoise a Fast Swimmer.

There is another mammal that is so fast no one has ever been able to find out how fast he is. This is the porpoise. The porpoise can do stunts in front of the fastest boat that travels the bounding wave and when he is through after several hours of clowning he flirts his tail and nonchalantly speeds beyond the horizon. The porpoise will do his tricks under the bow of a nine-knot cargo tramp or a 22-knot ocean greyhound. He is like the antelope in that he sets his pace according to the speed of the pursuer.

THIS YOUNG MOTHER

Tells Childless Women What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are very fond of children and for a considerable time after we married I feared I would not have any owing to my weak condition. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I have a nice strong healthy baby girl. I can honestly say that I did not suffer much more when my baby was born than I used to suffer with my periods before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound years ago. I give all the credit to your medicine and shall always recommend it very highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wisconsin.

How can women who are weak and sickly expect or hope to become mothers of healthy children? Their first duty is to themselves. They should overcome the derangement or debility that is dragging them down, and strengthen the entire system, as did Mrs. Jansen, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and then they will be in a position to give their children the blessing of a good constitution.

If the unexpected always happens, why not expect it?
