Final enrollment figures for the 1993 spring semester have set a record at Clovis Community College, according to Victoria Quintela, director of enrollment management. Census Day, Friday, Feb. 5, was the day for colleges and universities throughout the state to report their enrollment figures.

CCC registered 3,831 students (compared to 3,674 for spring 1992) for a head count increase of 4.3 percent. The total, when calculated on a formula of 15 credit hours divided into the total number of hours in which students are enrolled, determines the full-time equivalency. FTE is important, because that is the figure on which state funding is based. The FTE also set a record. It amounted to 1565.4 which is a seven percent increase over the Spring 1992 FTE figure of 1,463.

West Texas students enrolled at CCC for the spring 1993 semester, include 107 from Muleshoe, nine from Lazbuddie, and four from Earth, according to statistics released by the admissions office.

Fate Of CEDs In Hands Of Texas Voters May 1

Should the Texas Constitution require wealthy school districts to share part of their property tax money with poorer districts? This is a questions voters will decide on May 1.

The Senate accepted the House's share-the-wealth constitutional amendment that supporters hope will end the long-running court battle over the way Texas funds its public schools by a 27 to 4 vote Monday.

The Texas Supreme Court struck down the state's current school finance law last year and ordered lawmakers to adopt a constitutional funding system by June 1.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and other leaders had indicated that a proposed amendment aimed at solving the school funding crisis had to clear both houses before Saturday to appear on the May 1 ballot.

The Senate Finance Committee, chaired by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, has recommended $650 million more in state funding for school districts in the 1994-95 budget cycle. State leaders previously agreed to provide $317 million more for schools during the two-year period.

According to Montford lawmakers are still looking for ways to add another $321 million to provide teacher pay raises. Increased pay raises should make it easier to pass the proposed amendment, according to Montford.

Four Senators opposed the amendment, predicting that the voters will reject the proposal.

"It's going to raise taxes...Nothing has changed," said Sen. Jane Nelson, a former member of the State Board of Education.

If voters give their approval, the amendment will allow redistribution of local school property taxes and authorize County Education Districts. The recapture would be limited to 2.75 percent of total state and local funding for schools, estimated at about $407 million a year.

The amendment would also allow the Legislature to set the tax rates for CEDs and school districts, or school districts could be allowed to set their own rates.

However, the CED tax rate could not exceed $1 per $100 of property valuation unless voters approved an increase. The maximum tax rate for CEDs currently is 82 cents.

The Legislature has not yet decided on the details of the funding plan. Those will be spelled out in an accompanying bill now pending

Lazbuddie ISD Sets School Board Election

During the Lazbuddie ISD board meeting held Tuesday, the board members set the date for the election of three board members. May 1 has been set for the election to fill the expired terms of Robert Gallman, and Lloyd Bradshaw, and the unexpired term of Scott Brown.

They approved the school calendar and the adoption of the text books as submitted by the text book committee.

Superintendent Phil Warren stated that the school accepted the transfer of a student out of the Springlake-Earth school.

A contract on paving of the front of the building was approved.

before House and Senate education panels.

Another proposal that will appear on the ballot would prohibit the state from mandating unfunded programs for schools after Dec. 31. Exceptions to that rule would be programs that win a two-thirds vote in both houses or are necessary to comply with the constitution or

City Council Awards Seal Coating Contract

Bids for the 1993 Seal Coat Program was opened at the Tuesday, February 16 City Council meeting. Bids were received from Appian Construction of Hereford, Ronnie Zahn Paving of Lubbock, Lewis Construction of Dumas, High Plains Pavers of Plainview and Lipham Construction of Aspermont. The bid was awarded to Applin Construction, it being the lowest bid.

A lengthy discussion was held on landfill operations, as well as the possible closure. Dave Marr, City Manager, reported that Muleshoe's landfill contained about 40 acres.

Although the landfill was only discussed and no decision was made as to the closing of its operation, it was reported that the cost of closing the landfill would be from $20,000 to $25,000. Also discussed was the Water Commission's requirements for closing of landfills.

It was also reported that Lubbock is willing to accept trash from other towns, for a price. "We would need some kind of drop off station, it would be uneconomical to run our collection trucks on the road," said Marr.

The annual Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture Awards Banquet is slightly over a month away (March 26) and the chamber office is seeking nominations from the public for Farm Family of the Year, Woman of the Year, and Man of the Year.

Nominations must be submitted to the chamber office no later than Friday, March 5. Your nominations must include name of nominee and a brief reason the nominee should be considered for the award.

He/she must demonstrate cooperation and support of the chamber management and directors.

The nominee should be a role model. He/she is recognized and respected as a "leadership" role model to other civic minded individuals.

These individuals must have participated and contributed to a variety of community services to improve the quality of life in Muleshoe.

All directors for the chamber and their immediate family are excluded for consideration for an award. This rule also applies to the manager and his immediate family.

An individual may receive an award he/she has previously received provided a lapse of five years has occurred since the individual's last recognition.

Get those nominations in to the chamber office, the banquet date will be here before you know it. If you know of a deserving individual, or family now is the time to make your nominations.

This promises to be a good banquet, with Rick Perry being the guest speaker.

Senator Teel Bivins

When you walk into the Senate chamber or the House chamber when either body is in session your first thought is: How can they get anything accomplished amidst all this chaos?

After watching for a minute, people usually find their eyes focused on the dias where the presiding officer of the body stands. The lieutenant governor in the Senate and the Speaker in the House wield the gavel and preside over what appears to be mass confusion. It's worse in the House because there are five times as many participants as in the Senate.

There's a key player in all this who almost always goes unnoticed by the unsophisticated observer. In both the House and the Senate, there is a person seated immediately to the left of the Speaker and the lieutenant governor. If one watches closely, he can see this character quietly mouthing words to the presiding officer. On occasion, you'll see the presiding officer lean over for brief private conversations with his unobtrusive participant.

Few people realize this key player, the parliamentarian, plays a vital role in the operations of their respective legislative houses.

As the title implies, the parliamentarian's formal role is to ensure that the body operates within the rules it has adopted for itself. This sounds deceptively simple. House and Senate rules can often be intricately complex and confusing. The parliamentarian, much like a judge, is guided by precedents. The effort here, of course, is to attempt to interpret the rules in a matter consistent with the past.

When I first arrived in the Senate, then-Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who had himself served as the Senate parliamentarian under Lt. Gov. Ben Ramsey, told me I would rarely need to refer to the Senate rules. But he went on to say that when I do, it'll likely be a life-or-death situation. Thus, acquiring a good working understanding of the Senate rules became one of my goals. However, you can't really accomplish that goal by simply reading the rules over and over again. It helps to have some outside counsel.

The obvious place to turn for such counsel is the parliamentarian. This is where the job of parliamentarian becomes bigger than the title implies. There is long-standing tradition in the Texas Legislature of absolute confidentiality on the part of the parliamentarian in both the House and Senate. In fact, Bob Johnson, the current parliamentarian of the Senate, is the only man in Texas to have ever served as parliamentarian in both the House and Senate.

When a member is attempting to develop a strategy for passage of a bill and contemplates potential rule problems, he or she can sit down with Bob Johnson and discuss the issues with assurance that the discussion will not go beyond the four walls of the parliamentarian's office. This is true whether the member is a Democrat or Republican.

During the 72nd regular session, in the midst of the war over congressional redistricting, Bob Johnson assisted Senators Ratliff and Sibley and myself in developing what we refer to as a "tag-team filibuster" strategy. A filibuster generally can only go so long as a single member is able to stay on his or her feet to talk. With the help of Bob Johnson, however, we developed a strategy that would have enabled us to carry the filibuster much further than anyone dreamed we could. Though we ultimately decided not to execute the strategy, there was a period of about four days when it was "in play." During that time, there was never even a shred of evidence that anyone other than we co-conspirators had any knowledge of the plan.

While Bob Johnson works for Bob Bullock, he places great importance in the tradition of confidentiality between himself and the 31 members of the Texas Senate. The same can be said for the parliamentarians during Bill Hobby's tenure as lieutenant governor.

So the next time you come into the Senate or House chamber, after looking around at all the chaotic activity, pay a little attention to the

Signs Of A Batterer

Ron Trusler, M.Ed.
Director of Clinical Services
Central Plains Center for MHMR and Substance abuse

How can anyone tell if a person is potentially abusive? Especially a woman dating a man with serious considerations for a lasting relationship—are there signs she can look out for? Listed below are a few behaviors that might help you be warned that a boy friend or husband is a potential batterer. The more behaviors you notice, the more potential there is to batter. Sometimes the symptoms may be few but they are exaggerated.

1. Jealousy—at the beginning of the relationship he may call it a sign of his love and you may even be flattered by it, at first. As time goes on you may begin to feel dominated by the jealousy, especially as the behaviors become more severe. Jealousy is not a sign of love, but of insecurity and possessiveness. He may question you about who you're talking to, seeing privately, flirting with and resent time you spend with your family. He may even drop by unexpectedly, during the day to check on you. Your car mileage may be checked and you may not be allowed to work late. His friends may be asked to spy on you.

2. Controlling behavior—It may be presented to you that he's concerned about your safety, needing to use your time well and make good decisions. You may not be allowed to make personal decisions around the house even about clothing, going to church or money. Some have to get permission to leave the house or the room.

3. Quick involvement—many battered women only knew their abuser a short time before marriage—less than 6 months. He may have come in like a storm, claiming "love at first sight"; "you're the only one for me" etc. He needs someone desperately and will pressure the woman to commit to him.

4. Unrealistic expectations—Want her to be the perfect mother, wife, lover, etc. He may say things like, "if you love me, I'm all you need—you're all I need." She is supposed to take care of everything for him, emotionally, in the home.

5. Isolations—He tries to cut her off from other resources. He accuses people who are her supports of "causing trouble." He may want to live in the country without a phone, not to let her use the car, not to allow her to work or go to school, etc.

6. Blames others for his problems—Someone is always out to do him wrong, out to get him. He may make mistakes, then blame the woman for upsetting him which kept him from concentrating. He will likely tell the woman that it's her fault for anything that goes wrong.

7. Blames others for his feelings—He may say things like, "I can't help doing what I do"—like being angry, sad, hurt. He believes he cannot control his feelings.

8. Hypersensitivity—He is easily insulted, easily "hurt", rants and raves about the injustice of things done to him, even normal, little things.

Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry Says:

Business Climate

In written testimony submitted to the Senate Economic Development Committee, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry threw his support behind both the proposed products liability and Alfaro bills which will help "encourage a competitive business climate" across Texas.

"Liability issues don't stop at the county line or the city limits," Perry said. "It touches us all - in the pocketbooks."

The proposed bills have been endorsed by all 31 Senators, and Perry said that this unanimous endorsement is a clear indicator that reform in the area of products liability and the Alfaro case is needed in Texas.

The legislative reversal of the Alfaro decision will not harm potential plaintiffs, but it will prevent abuses of the state's overworked judiciary system, Perry said.

"It will help restore judicial discretion - something that will improve Texas' image as a 'business friendly' state," Perry said.

A major Focus of Perry's administration is to increase the level of value-added processing of the state's agricultural commodities. This would promote business growth and economic development not only in Texas agriculture but in rural Texas as well.

"It's time that we bring business back to our Texas countryside—and to our citizens," Perry said.

"We have learned in fighting the fight for economic development the key to expanding opportunities for processing and manufacturing in Texas is providing a business climate that is conducive to doing business - not to being sued," Perry said.

"These proposed bills will help remove major stumbling blocks for continued growth and development on the Texas landscape," Perry said.

The following is a statement by Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry on Judge Lucius D. Bunton's ruling that was issued today on the Sierra Club vs. Lujan trial:

Oil Imports Up

Oil imports grew for the first time in three years last year, increasing by 2.9 percent, because of higher demand and a continuing decline in domestic production, the American Petroleum Institute reported.

Miracles happen only to those who believe in them.

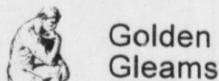

-French Proverb.

Why do microwave directions suggest carving red meats as soon as they are taken from the microwave?

That's because meat continues cooking after it is removed. This is especially important for poultry, roast pork and meat loaf.

And because of recent warnings from the Department of Agriculture, it's probably wise to cook all meats well done, if one hasn't done the butchering or seen it done.

Miracles appear to be so, according to our ignorance of nature, and not according to the essence of nature.

-Montaigne.

Zeta Rho Sweetheart Crowned

As Beta Sigma Phi meeting comes to a close, we gather in a circle to repeat the closing ritual. We ask to be granted clearness of vision. Our chapter sweetheart exhibits this important quality. She instills this in the youth of her church where she serves as an adult leader. She has safely and patiently driven many miles to take them on ski trips, choir trips, and to camp. Indeed, in her daily life she serves them well as a roll model. We ask also to be granted sweetness of spirit. She has this quality as well, we have all enjoyed her gentle nature, warm presence, and easy smile. Her mother in law gives high praise when she says she's more like a daughter to me. We have all seen her quietly cheering on her son's baseball games, and even though her daughter was injured and could not finish the basketball season, she was still there to cheer on the rest of the team. We ask to be granted earnest of purpose, our sweetheart's list the quality of being earnest when speaking of her. They also say she is loyal, trustworthy and a pleasure to work with. So even though sometimes her road becomes obscured in dust, she has truly been granted the skill and grace to pave it with stars to transmute the dust into stardust. She is wife, mother, youth leader professional, President of Zeta Rho, Our sweetheart, Vickie Black.

In Fashion

The bridal collections for 1993 are presenting feminine styles of the Victorian Era. Fabrics are satin, reembroidered laces and eyelets in antiqued shades of ivory, cream, eggshell and bone. Spring and summer gowns feature short puffed sleeves and full skirts.

Today's bride may choose to select dresses for her bridesmaids made of floral chintz. Madras plaids and smaller prints are also seen in 1993's bridal party. Individuality is the trend.

MHS VALENTINE QUEEN AND KING CROWNED-Kristen Chitwood and Eric McElroy were crowned Valentine Queen and King for the 1993 school year at the Valentine dance held Saturday, February 13, 1993.

Can you expect to be hearing thunder and seeing lightning soon? Why do we seldom have thunderheads and thunderstorms in the winter months?

You will soon be hearing the familiar thunder and lightning of spring, if you have not already heard the first rumbles of thunder which herald the approach of 1993's warmer weather.

The longer days of sunlight and greater heating resulting from it and the position of the earth in the coming months causes hot air to rise and form thunderheads. The greater heat and greater volume of rising, warmed air cause higher clouds and thunder results from the transfer of electrical overcharges as the natural balance is restored by lightning strikes.

Thunder is the roar created by these electrical discharges just as a big gun causes its own miniature thunder at the instant of firing.

Infant Death Affects Ethnic Groups

The Texas Department of Health (TDH) Bureau of Vital Statistics has reported that although Texas each year attains a new record low in infant mortality, the rates for different ethnic groups vary greatly.

With 2,443 deaths among the 317,680 Texas babies born alive in 1991, the over-all infant mortality rate was 7.7 infant deaths per 1,000 live births, just above the state's target rate of 7.0 by the year 2,000. According to TDH officials, the 1991 rate, compared to the 39.0 per 1,000 rate of 1951, reflects improvements in prenatal and infant health care over the past 40 years.

However disparities between a high rate (14.5 per 1,000 live births) among blacks, and now the much lower rates for Hispanics (6.8 per 1,000) and Whites (6.5 per 1,000) confirm that part of the population lacks the quality care needed to ensure good health for newborns.

Dr. David R. Smith, Texas Commissioner of Health, said, "Infant mortality is one of the most reliable gauges we have for health care services. Although infant mortality has been greatly reduced, chiefly by technology, we must keep the improvements in perspective. The fact remains that at least a dozen foreign countries have lower infant mortality rates than does Texas--and Texas rate is better than the U.S. average."

Published figures (1988) from the National Center for Health Statistics show the U. S. with an infant mortality rate of 10.0 per 1,000 live births, ranking 23rd among selected countries.

"If we did not have the medical skill to extend the lives of sick babies, our mortality rate would be much higher. As it is, to save infant lives, we have to spend large sums for neonatal care for babies whose problems might have been prevented by cheaper maternal care," he explained. "It is vital that we devote more maternal and infant health care dollars to preventing infant health problems before they become catastrophically expensive to treat."

In recent years, federal (Medicaid) funds have helped pay for care of many low income Texas women. Consequently, TDH has been able to offer family planning, perinatal and education services to more clients who are not qualified for Medicaid.

"Even so, a disproportionate number of younger black and Hispanic women fail to get care for themselves, or lack access to health care for their babies," Dr. Smith said. "Many of them are young teens with little understanding of health care."

Recent studies show that one of every three pregnant women in Texas lacks needed prenatal care.

In 1991 less than half (48.5%) of black women in Tarrant County and only 55.2% of Hispanic women in El Paso County received prenatal care during the first trimester of their pregnancies.

Health News

Have you ever wondered why some prescriptions should be taken with food and others on an empty stomach?

According to Patrick Pritchett, Director of Pharmacy at Methodist Hospital, food can alter the effectiveness of common prescriptions and over the counter medications.

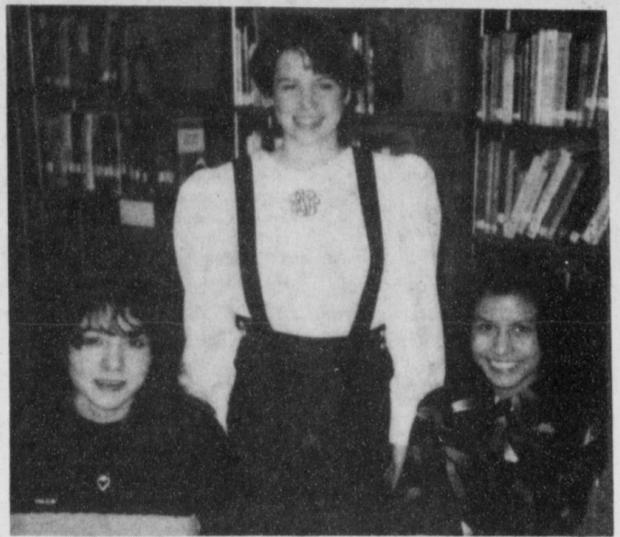

"Having food in the stomach can delay the absorption of many drugs," said Pritchett. "For the majority of drugs, it's best to take them with a full glass of water on an empty stomach."

However, some drugs are better absorbed or less irritating to the stomach when taken with food. Food and Drug interactions vary according to a person's age, sex, overall health, and the dose of the drug.

Pritchett offers the following suggestions for taking medication:

- * Always read the prescription label-Ask for written instructions on taking medications, if not provided. Ask whether medication should be taken with meals or on an empty stomach.
- * Read all warnings, directions, and interaction precautions-This information is printed on packages of over-the-counter medications. It includes precautions concerning food and drug interactions and interactions with other drugs.
- * Take medication with a full glass of water-this promotes the absorption of the medication and allows it to begin working faster.
- * Don't take medication with alcohol-Alcohol and certain drugs, such as antihistamines, are a dangerous combination causing drowsiness and slowed reaction time.
- * Don't mix medication into hot drinks or food-Both can reduce the absorption of medications and alter effectiveness.

Kings Continue Winning Streak

The Muleshoe-Lazbuddie Kings, fifth and sixth grade boys' basketball team kept their perfect record intact Saturday night when they played the Clovis Rockets.

It was reported that the Mule-Buddies were Patriot Missiles, shooting down the Clovis Rockets. The Rockets played tough, but in the end, the Mule-Buddies prevailed and were victorious, winning 38 to 26.

Both teams entered the game with identical records of 5-0. The first quarter was close, with the Mule-Buddies leading 8-6. In the second quarter, the Mule-Buddies widened the gap to 18-11. In the third quarter, the Mule-Buddies led 26-16. In the fourth quarter, the Mule-Buddies scored 12 points and won the game 38-26.

The Rockets were the most physical team the Mule-Buddies have faced this season. However, Dustin Cleavenger bombed the Rockets with a team high 13 points. He also destroyed the Rockets on the boards with a team high 16 rebounds, this was a personal best this season.

Mr. Consistent, Bret Clements conquered his season average of seven points, by scoring eight points and rebounded the basketball three times. Mason Sinclair hit the target for eight points, three rebounds, and led the team with three assists.

According to their coach, Judd Glover was smooth on the court and out maneuvered the Rockets for six points. He also rebounded the basketball twice.

The coach also reported that Josh Morris was undetectable like a Stealth Bomber to the Rockets, stealing the basketball, stopping the Rockets and began several of the Mule-Buddies' vicious offensive attacks. Josh scored two points and three rebounds.

Jeffrey Bruns took no prisoners with his aggressive defense, and scored one point. James Barrett turned in his radar on his receivers and made many spectacular passes that led to Mule-Buddie scores.

Cade Morris stormed the boards for four rebounds and started several fast breaks. Ky Kennedy caused the Rockets to change direction or surrender their offensive attacks due to his defensive ability.

The Mule-Buddies were excited about the explosive crowd that watched them play Saturday night. Muleshoe-Lazbuddie fans filled about half the gym.

Beside the great Mule-Buddies' basketball team, the other reason the Mule-Buddie fans were so explosive was the radiant and rapid firing cheerleaders: Rendi Hodge, Johnna Cleavenger and Megan Barrett. They wore red and black outfits that matched the Mule-Buddies' uniform.

It was reported that the cheerleaders energy encouraged the Mule-Buddies to force the Rockets to surrender. "Special thanks to Gwen Sinclair, Barak Harlan, Andrea Roberts, and Ashley Crawford for keeping stats. Also Tucker Crawford for being a specialist as a manager."

The Mule-Buddies will practice this week to improve game plan and their record to 7-0. They will take their arena on the road and attempt to cause a full retreat from the Clovis Suns on Saturday, Feb. 20 at 9:30 p.m. (Texas Time) in Clovis, N.M., at the Marshal Junior High, new gym.

Bailey County Land Susceptible To Erosion

Wind erosion on cropland is one of the most critical problems here in Bailey County. About 94 percent of all soils in Bailey County are susceptible to wind erosion either to a large or small degree. Large numbers of acres are either damaged or destroyed each year because of this problem. The acres susceptible to damage increases with the amount of low residue producing crops such as cotton and rainfall patterns and lack of rain. Last year there was more than adequate rainfall for summer crops but very little rain for wheat to get a stand before it went dormant for the winter.

The Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) has played a major role in protecting much of the cropland from high erosive winds since its inset as part of the Food Security Act of 1985. The program was enacted to encourage farmers to stop growing crops on highly erodible cropland and plant the land to a permanent cover through a contract with the USDA. But even with the help of CRP, wind erosion is still a concern to ag officials.

"Solutions to this problem are not easy, but most of our local farmers are real good about taking proper conservation measures to help keep soil losses to a minimum," says Flavio Garza, Soil Conservationist with the SCS office here in Muleshoe. According to Garza, farmers use several different conservation practices to control wind erosion. Some of these include planting a cover crop such as wheat to protect fields from blowing during months when wind erosion is at its peak.

The wind erosion period is usually from November 1 to June 1. Other practices include: conservation tillage, windstrips, and rotating high residue crops such as grain sorghum or corn with a low residue crop such as cotton.

For more information on controlling wind erosion, contact the Soil Conservation Service at 272-5124, or visit their office at 105 E. Ave. D here in Muleshoe.

Programs and services of the SCS are offered on a nondiscriminatory basis without regards for race color, national origin, age, sex, religion, marital status or handicap.

Start The New Year With Nutrition "Know-How"

Each January 1, millions of Americans across the country resolve to lose weight. Many, however, are still unclear about the best way to shed those excess pounds.

But, according to Kelli Cochran, R.D., dietitian at Methodist Hospital, going on a diet does not have to be as complicated as many believe.

"Beginning a diet doesn't necessarily mean you have to give up the food you love," said Cochran. "It is possible to greatly reduce the fat and calories without compromising the taste of food."

Cochran suggests the following guidelines for those beginning a weight loss program.

- * Don't skip breakfast-The body needs calories and nutrients to fuel daily activity. Missed meals slow the rate at which calories are burned and can lead to overeating at night when energy demands are low and calories are more likely to be stored as fat.

- * Eat more white meat-Red meat is a major source of fat, and reducing fat is the best way to cut calories.

- * Use low-fat substitutes when cooking-Use butter substitute or a small amount of margarine, instead of butter or cheese sauce. Use and egg substitute and skim milk in favorite recipes. Reduce sugar by one-third in almost any recipe.

- * Eat real food-Liquid diets can last only so long-dieters must eventually go back to eating normal food. Learning to eat a variety of foods while still losing weight is the best long-term method.

- * Drink plenty of water-The body requires a quart of water each day to rid itself of waste. Drinking water also curbs the appetite and slows the pace of eating.

- * Exercise-Any type of exercise burns calories. To promote weight loss from body fat, exercise at a moderate intensity for 30 to 45 minutes three to five times a week.

Researchers Test Vaccines

(NU) - Virtually anyone born in America after World War II knows first-hand what a vaccine is. Remember that annual round of shots required before starting school? Vaccines have proven successful against such diseases as polio, measles, mumps, diphtheria, whooping cough and influenza.

Because cancer is actually more than 100 different diseases, a single vaccine won't work. So cancer researchers are working on developing a whole arsenal of vaccines to prevent or treat cancer.

In some cases, the vaccines work by warding off viruses that increase a person's risk of developing certain kinds of cancers. The most successful of these so far has been the vaccine for a form of hepatitis. Persons with this type of hepatitis often develop liver cancer later. Since its creation, this vaccine has helped reduce rates of hepatitis, which in turn reduced rates of liver cancer in many parts of the world.

Other vaccines are being developed to fight human lymphocytic leukemia virus, which causes a form of blood cancer; human papilloma virus, which has been linked to cancers in the reproductive organs; and the Epstein-Barr virus, which is known to cause cancer of the nose and mouth.

Most cancers, however, are not caused by viruses. To combat these types of cancer, researchers are developing vaccines that work after a cancer is already present in the body. They hope the vaccines will stimulate the body's immune system to launch an all-out attack on the cancer.

In a technique being tested at the National Cancer Institute, doctors remove cells from a patient's cancerous tumor and genetically alter them, inserting a gene that produces a powerful anti-tumor toxin. The altered cells are then injected back into the patient.

"The idea is to use the patients' own cancer to immunize them against their own cancer," said NCI's Dr. Steven A. Rosenberg, a pioneer in the use of vaccines to treat cancer.

Building on the groundwork of this early research, scientists may someday be able to use vaccines to protect high-risk patients from developing cancer.

A foolish idea a day keeps the mind working at least.

Sand Puffer

(Patent Pending)

The SAND-PUFFER is a unique, simple and totally automatic flush valve. It mounts below the sand trap or at the end of the overhang. It automatically senses sand buildup and flushes each time a predetermined amount of sand accumulates.

The SAND-PUFFER requires no external controls or wiring.

The SAND-PUFFER utilizes sand level sensing device that actuates a shut off plug on a water piston.

Operating off of mainline pressures as low as 6 psi, the unit will work on any system capable of a low pressure spray package.
