Burriss Named Support Staff Member Of Month

"We congratulate Staci Burriss on being chosen as the April Support Staff Member of the Month," said Bill Moore, superintendent of MISD, during the school board meeting Monday night.

"This cheerful, enthusiastic young lady is Chapter 1 Teacher's Aide at Mary DeShazo Elementary School. She has been an employee of MISD in the same position for the past eight years."

"Staci grew up on a farm in the Three Way area. She is the daughter of Reul and Betty Kirby and was a 1983, graduate of Three Way High School. Staci has been married to Jackie Wayne Burriss for 10 years. They have two children, Brandon, 8 and Amy, 6, years of age.

"Staci is cited by her co-workers for being fast, efficient, and a very pleasant person who loves kids and her work. Staci's nomination stated that she is respected by her co-workers, and they maintain that she is a BIG PLUS for the DeShazo campus.

"Staci commented that the best part of her job includes the teachers and students that she works with -- and a GREAT principal! She expressed a wish for two things that could make our schools better: 1) that no students would have trouble in learning and 2) that everyone in the community could be aware of how hard school employees work to help students achieve success.

Muleshoe ISD is proud to recognize Staci Burriss for her sustained efforts to make our schools better," Moore continued.

Janet Barton Caravan Campaigns In Muleshoe

Janet Barton, wife of U.S. Senatorial candidate Joe Barton, visited in Muleshoe Monday morning on a final campaign swing before the May 1 election. Traveling along with Ms. Barton were Jane Cansono, Barton's West Texas Campaign Chairman; Phil Schoewe, Ron Kneer, Richard Stewart, Noell, Steven, and Stephanie Lambert, Skeet Workman, of Lubbock's Women for Joe Barton, Tim Lambert, and Harold Patterson.

The visit to Muleshoe was part of a Barton Caravan across the South Plains. The Caravan began in Lubbock and hit six cities including: Levelland, Littlefield, Plainview, Muleshoe, Dimmitt, and Amarillo.

"Joe Barton is the conservative in this election," said Ms. Barton. "He probably gets his conservatism because he comes from a small town and because he continues to live in a small town while he serves in Congress."

"The polls show Joe Barton is doing very well in this part of the state," said Tim Lambert of Lubbock, Barton's Regional Campaign Chairman for West Texas. "This is because he is like us and shares our values."

Mrs. Barton and the Congress-

Cindy Purdy, president, called the regular meeting to order. Minutes of the previous meeting were approved as read.

The board reviewed the proposed Career Ladder placements for 1992-93 and approved the committee appointed last fall. Moore reported that they had met five times in the recent weeks. The Career Ladder funding is based on the average daily attendance.

Three Amendments Also On Ballot

Saturday, May 1 (Election Day) will be a very important day for the residents of Muleshoe and the entire area.

Voters in the City of Muleshoe City Council Districts 3 and 4, will have a chance to cast their vote for councilpersons to represent them for the next three years. Only persons residing in these two districts are eligible to vote.

Three Districts, 2, 3, and 5, of the Muleshoe independent School District, will be up for grabs. In this election also only registered voters in District 2,3 and 4 are eligible to vote.

In the Hospital District Election, Districts 2 and 4 will also be on the ballot.

In addition to the local elections, three Constitutional Amendments and a Senatorial Election will be on the ballot.

Announced candidates for District 3 of the City Council are Arturo Garcia, Jr., and James Roy Jones. A write-in candidate Tom Bonds will also be on the ballot. Jones has moved from Muleshoe, the decision to move being made after he had filed for re-election.

Registered voters in District 4 will have the opportunity to cast their vote for either Rex Harris or Alberto Daniel.

In the Muleshoe Independent School District election Cindy Purdy, incumbent, has filed for the District 2 Trustee position. Frank Saldana, incumbent, filed for the District 3 Trustee position.

The only contested race for School Trustee is in District 5 where Sam Harlan, incumbent, and Lupe Olivarez will both be seeking the position.

In the Three Way Independent School District, two positions will be up for election. The only persons seeking these positions are incumbents Jack Reeves and Jarrol Layton.

The Lazbuddie Independent School District has three Districts open for bids. Tommy St.Clair is seeking the unexpired term of Scott Brown, who resigned from the board. Incumbents Lloyd Bradshaw and Robert Gallman are both seeking re-election. Contenders for these two positions on the board are Larry Jesko and Steve Foster.

Two districts in the Muleshoe Area Hospital District (Districts 2 and 4) are also uncontested. Bob Finey and Tim Campbell are both seeking re-election.

Another important issue will be the three School Finance Amendments. Voters will have the opportunity to decide on these amendments which will all have an impact on school finance.

Proposition 1 is the one that will have the greatest impact on all districts in Texas because it is the one that effects the basic funding system for schools in Texas. Super-intendent of Muleshoe Independent School District Bill Moore stated that if Proposition 1 is approved, the Legislature would have the authority to redistribute taxes from rich school districts to poor school districts using the mechanism they feel would best meet, and accomplish the objective funding equity.

One possibility for doing this would be the County Education Districts, under which the schools have operated for the last two years.

This proposition also limits the amount that can be recaptured state-wide and exempts the Available School Fund from recapture. The

Criminal Justice Reform Is On The Fast Track

Lt. Governor Bob Bullock on Friday said sweeping reform of the state's criminal justice system is on the fast-track and will do more than any government action in the last 20 years to make Texas a safer place to live.

"For the first time, we have made a distinction between violent and non violent offenders and tailored the punishment and facility to fit the crime," Bullock said. "This cost-effective, sensible approach is long overdue, badly needed and has the support of everyone from state prosecutors and crime victims to county officials and Mothers

BOB BULLOCK SAYS HATE CRIMES WILL NOT BE TOLERATED

Lt. Governor Bob Bullock hailed Senate passage of a bill strengthening the punishment for crimes involving bigotry and racism, saying "hate crimes will not be tolerated in Texas."

Senate Bill 456 by Sen. Rodney Ellis increases the punishment for the crimes of murder, false imprisonment, kidnapping, sexual assault or harassment if the offense was motivated by prejudice or hate.

"This bill should be a powerful, clear message to the entire world that Texas will not tolerate violent acts motivated by racism or bigotry," Bullock said.

Between January 1992 and June, there were 267 hate crimes involving 415 offenders in Texas, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Bullock noted that the bill has gained additional, widespread Senate support following the recent trials of three self-proclaimed white supremacists, who murdered 32-

Against Drunk Driving."

"I applaud the work of Sen. John Whitmore, Rep. Allen Hightower and all those responsible for this reform."

The package of bills by Whitmore will be heard and voted on Tuesday by the full Senate. Representatives Hightower and Allen Place are sponsoring the bills in the House of Representatives.

The $700 million criminal justice plan follows two years of work by the Punishment Standards Commission, which led to revision in the state penal code. The package of reform measures were worked out by Senators, Representatives and staff members from the offices of the Lieutenant Governor, Governor, and Speaker of the House.

The proposal establishes a new system of state jails to which judges could sentence non-violent offenders for up to two years. The plan is designed to relieve severe overcrowding in county jails and free more of the state's prison space for murderers, rapists, kidnappers, and other violent criminals.

A critical element of the plan doubles the amount of time violent offenders are required to spend locked up. In the future, the most violent offenders will serve at least half of their sentences--rather than the one-fourth or less allowed under present law--before becoming eligible for parole.

"This will do more to assure the long-term safety of all Texans than any piece of legislation proposed over the past two decades," Bullock said.

The measures also provides for more treatment programs tailored to the offenders in an effort to keep them from returning to jail after release.

SJR 45 is a constitutional amendment authorizing General Obligation bonds for construction of corrections and youth corrections facilities. S.B. 1068 is the enabling legislation for the bonds.

year-old Donald Thomas in 1991. His widow, Carolyn Thomas, testified in favor of the bill before the Senate Criminal Justice Committee.

"I hope that by passing this bill, we have moved one step closer to making sure there are never again widows like Carolyn Thomas," Bullock said. "This bill serves as a tribute to the memory of Donald Thomas and the courage of his wife."

News From Congressman Larry Combest

Grain sorghum producers should now have a fighting chance in the battle against weeds choking their crops, thanks to efforts by U.S. Representative Larry Combest (R-Texas). Combest and the Abernathy-based National Grain Sorghum Producers have succeeded in finding a practical and economical way to allow the re-introduction of the herbicide propazine (originally marketed as "Milogard") under an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)-approved exemption. Costly EPA registration requirements caused its previous manufacturer to abandon production of propazine in 1990, leaving West Texas grain farmers with no effective alternative to control pigweed, the major weed pest hurting sorghum yields. Propazine had been used successfully on the semi-arid West Texas land for 20 years.

"I am pleased to have played a part in addressing the concerns of sorghum producers looking for an established and effective means of protecting their crops and land," said Combest. "All we have always asked for from EPA is that regulations be reasonable."

Combest predicted EPA's action will be welcome news to sorghum producers, who have been unable to use other alternative means to control pigweed. Only propazine has been found to work well in local soil conditions with other commodities grown in rotation with grain sorghum. The EPA will now allow the new manufacturer, Griffin Corporation, to begin marketing propazine as "MiloPro 4L" based on previous EPA testing data. Sales of the product should generate satisfactory income to the manufacturer for fulfilling additional expensive testing required before receiving formal registration approval for the EPA. The temporary EPA exemption was critical to allowing sale of the herbicide in time for spring planting, but the additional testing requirements of the 1988 Federal Insecticide & Fungicide Rodenticide Act (FIFRA) were not cost-effective for the size of the grain sorghum market.

"We urged action last winter from EPA," said Combest. "However, the timetables of manufacturing the herbicide and of planting sorghum are critical. EPA may have just squeaked by with this decision in time."

Marathon Morsels

- | | |
|--|-----------------------------|
| 1 cup whole wheat pastry flour | 1/2 cup oat bran |
| 1 teaspoon cinnamon | 1/2 cup golden raisins |
| 1 cup dark raisins | 1/2 cup packed brown sugar |
| 1/2 cup Puritan Oil | 2 tablespoons flax seeds |
| 2 egg whites, slightly beaten | 2 teaspoons vanilla extract |
| 1 teaspoon baking soda dissolved in 1 teaspoon hot water | |
| 1 1/2 cups oatmeal | |

In a large mixing bowl, combine the first 3 ingredients plus half of the total raisins, set aside. In the food processor or blender, combine the brown sugar and oil, puree. Add the flax seeds and puree, then add remaining raisins and puree again. Add egg whites, vanilla, and baking soda and puree just to combine. By hand, combine the liquid and oatmeal with the dry ingredients, adding them alternately and mixing well. Fold in the pecans. (This makes a fairly dry dough) Spoon onto a lightly greased baking sheet and bake in a preheated 375 degree F. oven for 10 to 12 minutes or until lightly golden. Makes 3 dozen cookies.

NOTE: You'll love the sweetness and interesting flavor of these cookies. For a more elegant presentation, press half a pecan into each cookie before putting them in the oven. If you are watching calories, omit the pecans in the recipe should you choose to put them on top. You can substitute almonds or walnuts instead of pecans, and use chopped dried apricots instead of raisins. Reserve 1/2 of the pecans to decorate the top of each cookie.

Know The Weather

Why does a weather change so often affect the sinuses or the ears? When the weather changes, the pressure also changes as a usual thing. When a clear spell comes to an end and rainy, low-pressure weather begins, those who experience ear or sinus trouble often experience discomfort. This is because there are pockets of air in our head, or sinuses, which become blocked off. The pressure inside becomes greater than outside when the barometer falls (and a low-pressure system arrives overhead) and expands the pockets. A doctor will open them up, or equalize the pressure. The eustachian tube in the ear is a natural safety valve to allow air in and out of the ear. If it's closed by a swelling or a bad cold, then you risk puncturing your ear drum if you fly at a high altitude.

The Bible for Today

Question: The cult in Waco arose partly because of an improper interpretation of the book of Revelation. Because most cults are based on prophecy, shouldn't Christians avoid these controversial end-time studies?

Answer: It is true that most cults are based on the study of prophecy, however, now is the best time to study prophecy. I say this for several reasons:

- 1) God tells us in the Book of Revelation that its readers and hearers will be blessed. This is the only such promise of all the books in the Bible.
- 2) Prophecy is important to God. One-fourth of all the books of Scripture are classified as prophetic. One verse of five in the Bible deals with some subject that was prophetic when it was written.
- 3) Prophecy shows us that God is who He says He is, and that we can trust Him to take care of us now, when we die, and in eternity.

Prophecy can indeed be dangerous, but it can also give us assurance, hope, and peace concerning the future. There are rules that must be obeyed when interpreting apocalyptic writing and David Koresh did not obey them.

This month at Richland Hills Baptist Church we will be studying "God's Plan for the Future." Please come see for yourself what God says will happen in the future so that you or your children won't be caught off-guard by a cult.

If you have a question about the Bible that you would like to have answered in this column please send it to:

Some Eating Disorders May Be Linked To Sexual Abuse

Research findings indicate a correlation between eating disorders and victims of sexual abuse, a psychologist told an audience at the annual Texas Nutrition Conference held recently at Texas A&M University.

"Binge eating is related to sexual abuse," said Kathleen A. Huston, a licensed psychologist in College Station. "It is used to emotionally disassociate oneself...a state or trance in which person becomes numb from feelings."

Huston defined "binge eating disorder" as eating an excessive amount when not hungry. Binge eating makes up about 30 percent of the eating disorder population.

"The binge eater thinks, 'If I enlarge, I won't be sexually hit on,' she said. 'I won't be bothered.'"

"Some people use weight to keep them safe," Huston continued. "They detach themselves from life--isolating and removing themselves from competition--thinking that by being fat, people won't expect anything from them."

The nutrition conference, sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, provided updates on diets, lifestyles and health, but focused on eating disorders.

"There's such a shame pattern built around eating disorders," Huston said. "Binge eaters are more depressed than the non-binge obese and higher levels of dietary restraints--a tendency to hole back from eating and then go into a binge."

People tend to overeat as a way of "emotional nurturing and self-soothing," Huston said. "They are sad, scared or disappointed. Part of that is covering up feelings. They are chronically depressed and many say that they feel empty inside."

Also, binge eaters see themselves as unworthy individuals and direct anger toward themselves, she said.

Nutritionists, psychologists and professionals from other areas will have to work together to help treat compulsive eaters, Huston said. Nutrition education will help patients understand that weight loss is not a quick process, but a lifestyle change.

Binge eaters are compulsive and become obsessive. So, behavior approaches must be taken to help them reduce anxiety when they start to binge, Huston said. This begins with a nurturing, authoritarian parent who is the psychologist or the patient at times.

"We can use transversal analysis--we all have an adult, parent and child within us," she said. "When our self-critical part yells at us, we rebel. If we give patients a lot of rules, they will rebel. So, focus on using the nurturing, guiding parent, not the critical one."

This method also helps those with eating disorders to care about themselves no matter what size they are, and to choose "to put healthful food" in their bodies.

According to Huston, treatment of those with eating disorders starts with these steps:

- * Access if a person is a compulsive eater.

- * Find out the reasons a person is overeating. Ask the person to keep a journal of feelings that exit prior to eating.

- * Look at the sexual abuse issue. There is a very large connection.

- * Use nutrition education to teach healthier dietary messages.

- * Get an exercise program going. What can motivate a person to overcome being ashamed? Using a personal trainer may be a good idea.

- * Help the person recognize hunger and resist over compensation.

- * Make sure that you are not sending critical messages even in subtle ways.

- * Help the person understand that patience is necessary and that recovery will take trial and error.

- * Assist with the main focus: A person should choose to eat healthful food and exercise motivated by feelings of self-worth.

An important point to remember is that "overweight people feel very vulnerable and are ashamed," Huston said.

He also discussed the Texas Teacher Retirement System and its current financial soundness. Whittenburg also impressed upon the teachers the importance of contacting state senators and representatives concerning legislation that deals with education. He stressed the need for teachers to become politically active in order to affect positive changes in education. Refreshments were served and a short business meeting was held to discuss electing new officers and the awarding of scholarships to students entering the field of education. Sandi Chitwood won the door prize which was donated by Kathy's Kreation.

United States Achievement Academy National Award Winner

The United States Achievement Academy announced today that Rose Marie Gloria has been named a United States National Award winner in Honor Roll.

This award is a prestigious honor very few students can ever hope to attain. In fact, the Academy recognizes less than 10% of all American high school students.

Rose Marie Gloria, who attends Muleshoe High School was nominated for this National Award by Linda Marr, counselor at the school. Rose Marie will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official yearbook, published nationally.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in America's history. Certainly United States Achievement Academy award winners should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, Executive Director of the United States Achievement Academy.

The Academy selects USAA winners upon the exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors or other school sponsors and upon the Standards of Selection set forth by the Academy. The criteria for selection are a student's academic performance, interest and aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, enthusiasm, motivation to learn and improve, citizenship, attitude and cooperative spirit, dependability, and recommendation from a teacher or director.

Rose Marie is the daughter of Ruben and Roseann Gloria. Her grandparents are Annie Chavez of Muleshoe, Juan Gloria of Muleshoe and Dora Flores of Littlefield, TX.

FOSTER PLACES SECOND-Craig Foster, eleven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Foster of Greenwood, Indiana, placed second in the National Field Archery Association Competition, Free Style Limited Cub Division. The competition was held in Louisville, KY on March 27 and 28. Craig is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Demp Foster of Muleshoe. Pictured with Craig is Mr. Kenneth Rogers, President of NFAA.

How To Get Out Of The Doghouse

If you found yourself on the outs with your spouse or loved one, how would you choose to make things right again? Almost 44 percent of men polled said when their apologies needed something extra, they turned to flowers.

Apparently, they're right on target: 34 percent of women polled said flowers would help in those situations when "I'm sorry" wasn't enough. Jewelry, clothing, perfume and candy garnered less than 10 percent each.

Men apparently have much more experience apologizing than being apologized to: 49 percent of men said they had no idea what someone would have to do to get back in their good graces. There's hope, however: 13 percent of the men said flowers!

The approval of Proposition is an amendment that would exempt school districts from complying with unfunded state educational mandates. It would not be retroactive and would not go into effect until December 31, 1993.

The third proposition, if passed, would authorize the legislature to issue $750 million in bonds to assist poor, fast-growing schools that have already incurred debt in building new facilities. Currently,

"If you want a Senator who will vote the way you would, you want Joe Barton," said Ms. Cansino, Barton's Lubbock County Chairman.

"Barton has been the Senate candidate in the race who has staked out a strong stand against tax increases. Sixty-seven times in Congress Barton has been asked to vote for a tax increase, Barton has voted against every one," Mrs. Barton said.

"Barton is also the author of the Barton Tax-limitation Balanced Budget Amendment which would balance the budget by cutting spending rather than raising taxes.

Barton was able to force a vote on his amendment in Congress by going around the liberal committee chairman who was trying to block the bill. It was only the second time in America's 200 year history that the U.S. House of Representatives actually voted on a balanced budget amendment," Mrs. Barton continued.

Illustrator of Childrens Books To Speak Here

By Virginia Bowers:

Dillman Elementary students are in store for a special treat on Friday, April 30. Area artist, Scott R. Blazek, and illustrator of the "Clovis Crawfish" children's book series, (published by Pelican Publishing Company) will be the guest presenter on that day. He brings with him stories of adventure with important lessons dealing with both nature and relationships.

The stories of Clovis Crawfish (which include other such characters as an armadillo, a hummingbird, and a praying mantis) were written by Mary Alice Fontenot, a journalist from southwest Louisiana. These stories have been entertaining children throughout more than 30 years. Blazek has illustrated her latest titles and has spoken at numerous schools and libraries.

Blazek's presentation will consist of storytelling, drawing characters from the books, while also answering questions about the stories, characters, writing and illustrating books, and publication, besides a few surprises. Books will be available for autographing and for personalizing by the illustrator at Dillman Elementary Library on Friday, April 30. For more information, contact Virginia Bowers, Dillman librarian, at 272-7541.

Although the name of Clovis Crawfish was chosen many years and is pronounced in Cajun French as Clo-vees, it is interesting to note that Mr. Blazek has recently moved to Clovis, N.M., from Louisiana, his native state. Blazek was recently chosen as a winner in a contest to design the obverse side of a commemorative coin honoring President James Madison. Blazek was chosen by the United States Treasury to draw the design for the $5 gold coin.

Blazek was stricken with polio at age four and during the illness he developed an interest in drawing. He studies art in high school and at the University of Southwestern Louisiana, receiving a bachelor of arts degree. He received a master of divinity degree from Concordia Seminary in St. Louis. Blazek is serving as minister of a Lutheran church in Clovis, New Mexico.

The Dillman students are very fortunate to have this opportunity to hear and see an illustrator and to see his work. Parents may also attend the sessions on a space available basis.

Southwestern Public Service Company's annual Fed Cattle Survey indicates another record-breaking year in the area's cattle industry.

The survey shows a six percent increase in fed cattle from 1991 to 1992--the fourth consecutive year of growth. Feedlots in the SPS service area fed 5,988,196 head of cattle in 1992, compared with 5,644,133 in 1991.

Another trend that indicates steady growth is the total number of feedyards in the area--from 122 in 1991 to 124 in 1992.

"The six percent increase in fed cattle is three times higher than last year's percentage," said Dave Krupnick, SPS manager of agricultural and wholesale marketing.

"I think this reflects a positive trend for the area's entire economy," SPS annually prepares a Fed Cattle Survey including feedlots in its service area, which covers 52,000 square miles.

The region includes the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles, the Texas South Plains, eastern and southeastern New Mexico and southwestern Kansas.

Other good indicators from the survey are the increases in one-time total capacity, from 2,904,585, and the increase in the number of cattle slaughtered at the 12 beef-packing plants in the SPS service area. Krupnick pointed out that several packing plants are located just outside the service area.

"That accounts for the difference between the number of cattle slaughtered and the number fed," he said.

The Fed Cattle Survey includes a chart on the ten-year history of fed cattle, the one-time capacity of surveyed feed lots, as well as information on the number of feedlots with 5,000 head capacity or more.

It also has a county breakdown of lot capacity and numbers fed. Krupnick said information from the survey is used across the country by ag-related industries.

"It lets others know how vital agriculture and food-processing are to this area," he said.

Copies of the report and survey are available at SPS offices across the company's service area or may be obtained by contacting the SPS Agricultural Marketing Department

Georgia Pena reported that they were trying to teach as many migrants as possible and hoping to see some improvement from this program.

Summer school will not start immediately so the students will get a break. There will be some pre-testing and some post-testing so they can see what kind of impact they have had on the students.

Students that they feel really need it will be invited.

There will also be a summer school at PEP. There are some students who want to finish.

State Capital

HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams and Ed Sterling
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — A proposed constitutional amendment endorsed by Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock would prevent the Texas Legislature from getting a wild hair and passing a state income tax, without giving voters the final say-so.

Under the proposal, a simple-majority approval in a statewide election vote would be required before any income tax could take effect.

With anti-tax sentiment registering a "9" on the Richter scale, to put such a decision squarely in the hands of Texas voters would seem to absolve lawmakers of any blame, should an income tax be imposed.

The proposed amendment specifies that revenues from a state income tax would go directly into public education and enable some school property tax relief; it also would subject any income tax rate increase to voter approval in a statewide election.

Two-thirds Vote Needed

If the measure gets two-thirds approval in the Senate and House — and it appears it will — voters will find it among other proposed constitutional amendments on the Nov. 3 ballot.

Bullock scoffed at speculation by GOP members that his endorsement of a plebiscite is merely a smokescreen to take attention away from Proposition 1 on the May 1 special election ballot. Prop.

1 is the constitutional amendment known around the state as "The Robin Hood Amendment," which would allow the state to transfer ad valorem revenues from property-rich districts to property-poor ones.

Ford Endorses KHB

Still reeling from accusations that she once pummeled an employee with a loose-leaf notebook, state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison received the blessing of former President Gerald Ford last week.

Ford endorsed Hutchison for the U.S. Senate race. Hutchison, a Republican, served in the Ford administration as vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board in 1976.

As the May 1 special election nears, polls show Hutchison leads GOP candidates, U.S. Reps. Joe Barton of Ennis and Jack Fields of Humble, but trails the governor's appointee Sen. Bob Krueger, D-New Braunfels.

Meanwhile, Hutchison said last week she took (and passed) a "demeaning" lie detector test to dispute allegations that she hit a former employee.

Mauro Heads Task Force

President Clinton has appointed Land Commissioner Garry Mauro to head a national task force on converting the federal vehicle fleet to natural gas and other alternative fuels.

Mauro said the task force's goal is to demonstrate that using such fuels will save money, reduce pollution, cut dependence on foreign oil and pave the way for converting thousands of private and public vehicles nationwide.

In appointing Mauro, Clinton cited Texas' efforts to convert school buses and other public vehicles to alternative fuels.

Vaccination Bill Passed

Gov. Ann Richards is expected to sign legislation that would require preschoolers to receive immunizations against childhood diseases. The Senate gave final approval to the bill last week.

"This bill is very important because in some parts of the state, the level of immunization is lower than in Third World countries, said the bill's sponsor, Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo. She said the bill would help prevent outbreaks of measles and other preventable diseases.

Zaffirini said the vaccinations will cost $55.6 million, a fraction of the expense of treating the diseases.

Bills Salute Veterans

Under legislation passed by the House and sent to the Senate:

- Children of U.S. Military personnel killed or missing in action wouldn't have to pay tuition or fees at state universities.

- State agencies must continue to give veterans preference over equally qualified job applicants.

Other Highlights

- The state's public utility counsel, Luis Wilmot, has recommended that Texas Utilities Electric Co.'s proposed $760 million rate increase be slashed by 83 percent. He recommended a $129 million, or 2.5 percent rate hike. TU's request would increase rates 15.3 percent.

- The Senate put to rest an earlier controversy and confirmed the reappointment of Amy Johnson to head the Office of Public Insurance Counsel, which represents Texas insurance consumers. Earlier, several senators said she was too aggressive against insurance companies. The vote was 27-2.

- The House has passed legislation that allows Texas agricultural products and seafood producers to sue people who make false and disparaging remarks about their products. The 103-35 vote came over the objections of Rep. Al Granoff, D-Dallas, who called the bill a "gold mine for lawyers."

- President Clinton's choice for secretary of the Navy is San Antonio investment banker John Dalton.

A graduate of the Naval Academy, Dalton, 51, said he will be "firm, fair and sensitive" in handling reports of sexual harassment at the 1991 Tailhook convention.

GOVERNOR'S REPORT

Ann D. Richards

Vote 'Yes' May 1

On Saturday, May 1, the people of Texas finally have a chance to do what lawyers, politicians and judges have been unable to do. They have a chance to say "Enough already!" to the fight about school finance.

When all the arguing started, Lyndon Johnson was in the White House, and Elvis was still the King. Here in Austin, a fellow named Darrell Royal was perfecting the wishbone. Nolan Ryan was a pink-cheeked youngster out of Alvin who had yet to throw a major-league fastball.

The children who were in school at the time, 1967, now have children of their own in school, and still we are fighting about how to fund our public schools. Twenty-five years and counting is more than enough time to settle this issue, it seems to me.

By voting yes to the three school-finance constitutional amendments on the May 1 ballot, Texans will be saying yes to a system of school finance that is fair and equitable. They will be saying yes to a plan that meets the court's mandate. Most important, they will be saying yes to the children of Texas. They will be giving our children — all our children, regardless of where they live — a shot at a quality education.

Voters need to know what the ballot proposals do — and what they do not do. Proposition 1 allows the state to take a limited amount of revenue from the very wealthiest school districts and redistribute that revenue to property-poor districts, usually within the same county. Proposition 2 prohibits the state from imposing mandates on local school districts without coming up with a way to pay for those mandates. Proposition 3 authorizes $750 million in state bonds to help pay for desperately needed facilities to accommodate the growing number of Texas schoolchildren.

Nothing in the three proposals requires a tax increase. Nothing requires every district in Texas to spend the same amount of money on their students. Nothing requires districts to "level down."

Prop. 1, the amendment that allows revenue to be recaptured from the very wealthiest districts, will benefit the vast majority of Texas districts. Only 10 percent of the state's 1,054 districts have enough property wealth to share; those wealthy districts educate only about 6 percent of the state's students. Every other district in the state stands to gain from passage of Prop. 1.

Even those districts that will lose money under Prop. 1 tend to support it. They realize it is vastly superior to the only alternatives we have — massive consolidation of districts or a statewide income tax. They also like the stability it offers. In fact, passage of Prop. 1 would allow us to do pretty much what we have been doing for the past two years: funding our schools through county education districts (CEDs). Most educators agree that the CED system of funding has worked well.

The courts have told us on three different occasions that our system of school finance is illegal. They have said that it violates basic principles of fairness for some taxpayers to bear a relatively light burden while others bear a heavy burden and still find it difficult to fund their schools adequately. That's the disparity that Texans have a chance to fix on May 1.

Most Texans know that a district judge has threatened to shut down the schools if we can't fix the problem by June 1. I have no idea whether he will make good on his promise, but I'm not inclined to test him. I don't want the chaos and the disruption that closing the schools would bring. And I don't want the national headlines that would read: "Texas Allows Court to Close its Schools." That's not the kind of publicity this state needs.

On May 1, Texans have an opportunity not only to end a long running argument. They have an opportunity to do what's best for the children of Texas. Passage of the constitutional amendments means that they will benefit. And when they benefit, we all do.

If you can express yourself, try not to overdo it.

Anything can be funny when it happens to someone else.

Most reformers are satisfied with themselves.

Letter To The Editor

April 27, 1993.

Larry Hall, Editor
Muleshoe Journal
Muleshoe, Texas

Dear Larry:

The following 12 reasons are presented to urge voters to vote against Constitutional Amendment 1.

1. Robin Hood I raised taxes by $1,000,000 in 1991 and another $1,000,000 in 1992.
2. Governor Richards wants to raise taxes another billion in 1993 to solve a $400 million dollar problem. What will the politicians do with the other $600 million?
3. Robin Hood II is not needed to achieve funding equity. Equity is much closer than you have been told. Targeted federal aid actually gives some poor districts more money to spend than supposedly rich districts. Overall, the gap is a mere $200 per child. The poor Edgewood district spends over $5,000 per child per year. The rich Plano district spends $4,900 per child per year.
4. Robin Hood II specifically excludes language needed to end the court battle by defining "efficient" funding.
5. Robin Hood II is a badly written amendment. There is no "Enabling Legislation". We would be granting the Legislature a blank check.
6. Robin Hood II will force successful school districts to cut programs to comply with annual spending caps.
7. Robin Hood II will lead to demands for a State Income Tax in 1995 as property owners will seek tax relief.
8. There are plenty of alternative plans around. Dedicating all of the lottery profits to education would solve the problem without new taxes. So would dedicating a portion of sales tax revenue. State Treasury Secretary Kay Hutchison says the State currently has a BILLION dollar surplus.
9. Robin Hood II will raise property taxes on homes, farms and businesses. Utility rates will go up as the utility companies pass through the new taxes. Increased taxes will drive off new companies seeking to locate in Texas. 10. There is no statistical relationship between spending levels and student performance. Spending on education has doubled since 1983 and test scores have declined.

11. Consolidated education districts takes local control away. Soon the state will want only one district to be located in Austin.

12. The schools will not close if the voters reject this billion dollar tax increase. The state has plenty of money to continue funding the schools. Don't be fooled by the big lie.

Sincerely yours,
Bill Liles

Texas Soil And Water Board Election Held

The regular election of a member to the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board to represent State District One is scheduled for May 4 in Plainview, TX, in Wayland Baptist University's McClung University Center. The election will begin at 6 p.m.

The Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board, an agency of government, was created in 1939. Unlike many state agencies and commissions whose policy making bodies are gubernatorial appointees, the State Board consists of five elected members.

State Board members are elected in a convention type election by delegates from soil and water conservation districts within the state district the member is to represent. Qualified delegates voting in the election must be landowners, reside in the soil and water conservation district he or she represents at the convention, and be actively engaged in farming or ranching. Each soil and water conservation district in State District One selects one delegate to attend the election.

Each State Board member serves a two-year term and represents one of five State Districts. Each member must own agricultural land and be actively engaged in farming or ranching.

State District One, which consists of 51 counties in the Panhandle and South Plains region of the state, has 49 soil and water conservation districts within its boundary.

Teel Bivins Reports

On May 1, Texans will go to the polls to select a U.S. senator and decide on three proposed constitutional amendments. The three amendments each deal with funding Texas public education. They have been the source of considerable debate and confusion. I'll use this column to discuss each of the propositions. While discussing Propositions 1, 2, and 3, I'll try to lay out the options to us if the measures fail.

These provisions are on the ballot as a result of the Legislature's latest attempt to deal with the three Texas Supreme Court decisions that have found our system of funding public education unconstitutional. I, along with my colleagues in the Legislature, have been wrestling with the issue of school finance since I was elected in 1988. Because our past two attempts to change Texas statute to comply with the Edgewood I and II decisions have been found unconstitutional, a majority of the Legislature agreed that amending the state constitution would be the only way to put this issue to rest.

Proposition 1 is not easily understood if you just read the ballot language. At the risk of oversimplifying, it does three things: (1) allow for the creation of single county CEDs; (2) allow the state to set a CED tax rate not to exceed $1; and, (3) allow for recapture.

The chairmen of the House and Senate education committees have proposed legislation pursuant to these constitutional amendments which would create single county CEDs. This is one of the most important issues for the Panhandle and Permian Basin, because it's this area of the state that has the most multi-county CEDs. I, too, believe that multi-county CEDs destroy any notion of local control and create unnecessary regional resentments. I've been working toward a single-county CED system since the third Edgewood decision was handed down.

While I'm not crazy about the idea of allowing the state to set a CED tax rate not to exceed $1, the bottom line is there were not the votes in the Legislature to pass this constitutional amendment without that provision. Those who support it argue it's necessary to ensure that once this equalization legislation is adopted, the system will stay equalized. I would add here that the state has indirectly been setting local tax rates for education for over 40 years. Under current law, the state assigns each local school district a "local fund assignment." This essentially tells a school district at what level it must tax to be eligible for state aid. Historically, the only school districts exempt from this position are those with so much property wealth they don't receive state aid.

Recapture is the part of the constitutional amendment that has earned it the nickname "The Robin Hood Plan." A 1931 Supreme Court decision called Love vs. the City of Dallas stated that revenues raised by property taxes in one district could not be expanded in another. By creating a county education district and consolidating the tax bases of school districts within that district for the basic funding system, that is exactly what happens. This part of the constitutional amendment would overrule Love vs. the City of Dallas and allow for revenues to be shared within the county. This provision also would allow the Legislature to require about 28 of the richest counties in Texas to share revenues with other counties.

The concept of recapture is probably the most fiercely debated portion of the amendment. In what I thought was a very noble gesture, an association of property-wealthy school districts came to the Legislature and stated it realized recapture would ultimately become part of the solution of the funding dilemma that Texas schools face. It stated it would support the concept if the Legislature would agree to limit the amount of recapture. In response to that, the Legislature placed a 2.75% limit on recapture in the proposed constitutional amendment. This means that no more than 2.75% of the total funds going to public schools in any one year can come from recapture. In a single county CED system statewide, about 1.75% of recaptured funds would be those moving from one school district to another within a county. One percent of the funds would be those moving from property-wealthy counties to other school districts in Texas.

If all this sounds complicated, it is. Texas contains over 1,050 school districts. They are there for no other reason than pure historical happenstance. To devise a system that responds to the three Edgewood decisions and still preserves the basic school-district structure requires a complicated response. After having wrestled with this issue for over four years, I believe this proposed constitutional amendment is the least disruptive way to address the Edgewood mandates.

Proposition 1 has plenty of critics, however, none have offered an alternative plan that would comply with the constitutional requirements as interpreted by the Texas Supreme Court and within the political realities existing in the Legislature. There are no simple answers. A constitutional amendment to get the courts out of the education funding issue has failed twice in the Texas House of Representatives. There are not the votes to create a plan based on massive consolidation of school districts. Likewise, there are not the votes to adopt a 6% personal income tax or a 7-cent sales tax increase to raise the money to fund the cost of public education.

Texas is a very large and diverse state. The Legislature reflects that diversity. A constitutional amendment requires a two-thirds vote of both houses of the Legislature to be put on the ballot. To reach that kind of consensus in a legislative environment makes it absolutely certain that no one legislators will like everything in the constitutional amendment.

News From Lieutenant Governor Bob Bullock

Lt. Governor Bob Bullock said that he and more than 21 Senators will ask the Legislature to consider a constitutional amendment prohibiting a state income tax without a vote of the people.

"Taxpayers and all the people of Texas are in partnership with the Legislature, and together the partners should help decide an issue of this importance after full public debate and with all cards on the table," said Bullock.

Senate Joint Resolution 49 will be co-authored by Senators John Montford, Ken Armbrister and Bill Ratliff.

Should the voters ever consider such a tax in the future, it "should be dedicated to education and include a reduction in local school property taxes, and that should be in the constitution, too."

"Further, no increase in the rate of such a tax should ever be allowed without statewide voter approval," Bullock said. "Putting the income tax in the constitutional process will insure that it is only approved by the will of the people."

"All Texans should have a full say on taxes as they have had on other issues such as horse racing, the lottery, liquor-by-the-drink and now on schools--for the first time in Texas history," he said.

he noted that the Legislature was able to balance the budget this session without raising taxes, thanks in large part to recommendations from the Texas Performance Review.

"We have proven through the performance audits of state agencies and programs, that there is a better way to meet the real needs of the state than simply adding new tax burdens," he said.

The performance audits, which Bullock first proposed in his 1990 campaign for Lieutenant Governor, were the first bill passed by the Senate after Bullock took office.

Those audits are credited with providing at least $800 million in savings toward balancing the upcoming two-year state budget without new or higher taxes.

"The way of the future is to increase critical assessment of priorities and performance, and to balance the result against available resources," he said.

"If and when--after such assessment--the people want such a major tax reform as a replacement for other taxes, then let them vote on it," he said.

The best thing about spring is that it brings an end to winter.

Services Near Interstates Easier To Find

Finding gasoline, food and lodging or campgrounds along Interstate highways in Texas will become easier.

The state's first business logo signs will soon appear on Interstates in counties with populations of 20,000 or less. The signs will advertise service stations, restaurants, lodging and camping facilities.

Texas Logos Inc. was awarded the contract to sell advertising on signs they will erect along Interstates. Each of the blue signs will advertise one or two categories of service and will bear no more than four business logos. The signs will be like those found in 37 other states.

Businesses wishing to advertise on logo signs can apply to Texas Logos Inc. at Southgate Building Suite 110, 2102 South Interstate 35, Austin, Texas 78741.

To qualify to advertise on the signs, businesses must provide gas, food, lodging or camping and be no more than three miles, permits may be used for businesses no farther than 15 miles from the interchange.

Gas stations must provide vehicle services, including fuel, oil, water and, if not self-service, tire repair. They must also provide restrooms and drinking water, be in operation at least 12 hours a day, seven days a week, and have a public telephone.

Eating establishments must provide a license or other evidence of compliance with public health or sanitation laws; continuous operation at least 12 hours a day to serve three meals a day; seating for at least 16 people; public restrooms and a phone for public use.

Lodging establishments must provide a license or other evidence of compliance with laws regulating facilities providing lodging; at least 10 rooms and a public telephone.

Camping facilities must provide a license or other evidence of compliance with laws regulating camping facilities, adequate parking, modern sanitary facilities and drinking water.

The first signs are expected to be erected in June, and Texas Logos Inc. expects to have all signs erected by spring of 1994.

Images of Jesus

Showcases Imaginative Works of Art

For more than 20 centuries, many of the great religions of the world have strived, through art, music and literature, to capture the spirit of the man most commonly known in Western civilization as "Jesus." Images of Jesus, an hour-long documentary, explores the controversy, artistic achievement, and spiritual awakening surrounding the mystery of Jesus and their effects on artists throughout the world.

In Images of Jesus, more than 100 imaginative works of art — from paintings to sculptures to stone carvings created by both great masters and unknown artists — are captured in still prints by the late Lee Bolin, a world famous photographer, who traveled to Africa, the South Seas, and Asia on various anthropological expeditions to find images of Jesus in distant cultures.

Through the eye of his camera, Bolin records images from materials of every description: minerals and woods of every kind; ivory; gemstones and glass in endless combinations; paintings, sculpture, and art objects of every style, size, and color.

Images of Jesus visits the great cathedrals and churches of Europe where some of the most timeless works of art were commissioned by the great masters — Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo, and Rembrandt.

The never-ending fascination with capturing the essence of Jesus did not exclude the giants of contemporary art. The works of Edward Manet, Salvador Dali, Paul Gauguin, and Pablo Picasso reveal Jesus as both a modern and medieval figure.

In Images of Jesus, the stunning array of art reveals how important the impact of religion, culture, and history has been on the portrayal of Christ. Each image is as different as the individual who created it. And, through these images, mankind sees itself.

Images of Jesus airs Tuesday, May 4th at 10:00 p.m. The program will repeat Sunday, May 9th at 6:00 a.m.

Travelling With The Texas Angeler

By Keith R. Warren

Located just south of Bryan, Texas lies Lake Somerville. This small reservoir has been around for many years. I've heard stories that this lake was great fishing back in the seventies, but for over 10 years I've been told fishing is terrible. Some call it "The Dead Sea."

With so many good lakes in Texas, I'd decided to pass on numerous invitations to fish this central Texas lake, but in January I met Darrell Dyer from Bryan at the Houston Boat Show. Dyer told me he had a friend by the name of Ken Talasek who can catch big white bass at Somerville virtually anytime during the spring. By big, he was talking about two to three pound whites. This got my attention and I made plans to fish with Talasek.

I met Ken at daylight at the Overlook ramp located next to the dam. A cold front had blown through the day before and it was 47 degrees. Talasek and a friend hopped in the water and seined ghost minnows that we would use for bait. Meanwhile, I waited with my videographer trying to keep warm.

After the bait bucket was full, Ken loaded up and we headed towards an underwater ridge in the mouth of Big Creek. The end of the ridge where it dropped from 10 to 20 feet of water is where we started looking for the whites with the depth finder.

In a matter of minutes, we located a school that was suspended off the bottom. We fished with the transparent minnows on a crappie hook that was rigged below a 1/2 ounce slip sinker. The fish didn't bite right away. Ken said that if the sun would come out it would drive them to the bottom and that's when we would have better action. In the meantime, we'd catch these suspended fish.

Lake Somerville has a 25 white bass per person daily bag limit and they must be at least 12 inches in length. A 12 inch white bass is a good sized fish in most waters, but not in Somerville. As a matter of fact, the fish we were catching were large enough that we didn't even need to measure them to make sure they'd keep.

The sun started to come out and the action started getting faster and faster, just as Ken had predicted. White bass are structure oriented fish and will locate themselves on underwater ridges, drop offs and islands. Talasek told that fishing with ghost minnows is the secret. You can't buy them at any bait stand and you must net them yourself. It's a lot of trouble, but they work when regular minnows won't.

With our limits in the live well we were done shooting video for an upcoming episode. Then it was time to let Michael (my videographer) in on the action.

Talasek is not a guide, although he could be if he wanted.

Folks, the so called "Dead Sea" is alive and well!

For more information on Lake Somerville, contact Texas Parks and Wildlife at 1/800-792-1112.

Wildlife Resources Receive Boost Under Administration's Proposed Budget

Efforts to conserve endangered species, protect and restore wetlands, and improve wildlife-related scientific research would receive major funding boosts under President Clinton's Fiscal Year 1994 Budget for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The Administration's proposed budget of $1.123 billion represents a $41 million, or 3.4 percent, increase over the Service's 1993 funding.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is the principal Federal agency with responsibility for conserving, protecting, and enhancing fish and wildlife and their habitats. The Service manages 488 National Wildlife Refuges, covering 91 million acres, and enforces the Endangered Species Act.

Under the President's budget, funding for endangered species conservation activities would increase 48 percent to a total of $96.8 million. This includes a 186 percent jump, to $6.1 million, in spending on conservation measures designed to prevent species that are now candidates for the endangered species list from having to be formally listed. It also includes $3 million for a new cost-sharing program with local governments, businesses and private landowners to conserve candidate species and their habitat.

"This Administration is committed to getting ahead of the curve on endangered species," said Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt. "It makes a lot more biological and fiscal sense to take action to conserve a species before it becomes endangered than it does to wait for it to happen."

The Administration also proposes a $24.1 million, or 28 percent, increase in the Service's research budget. This includes $3.5 million to accelerate the "Gap Analysis" program to identify areas of high biological diversity for future conservation. Research also would be expanded on the effects of contaminants on wildlife resources, nongame species, fisheries, and endangered species. Babbitt said, "This increase reflects our strong interest in improving the quality and quantity of good science available to support this Department's conservation responsibilities. These additional funds may become the cornerstone of efforts currently designed to provide an anticipatory, proactive biological science program that will enable land and resource managers to develop comprehensive ecosystem management strategies."

The President's budget includes $172.1 million to maintain and operate the National Wildlife Refuge System. A 7.3 percent increase over 1993. This would allow expanded efforts to manage deteriorated or threatened habitats on refuges, complete high priority maintenance projects, and acquire and protect refuge water rights in western states.

The budget also would increase funding by $3.5 million to provide technical assistance to private landowners and to restore vital habitat on farms and other private lands through voluntary partnerships. To date, the Service has joined with more than 9,000 landowners to restore some 200,000 acres of wetlands, riparian areas, native prairie and other important habitat.

Funding to support fish and marine mammal management and the hatchery program would climb 9.6 percent under the President's budget, including a major federal-state partnership to conserve declining fish resources in three major interjurisdictional river systems—the lower Mississippi, the Missouri, and the Yukon.

The budget also includes $43.1 million as part of the President's "Invest in America" package for America's future. This funding would help protect and rehabilitate America's inventory of vital natural resources, improve public access to them, and restore the facilities that protect these resources.

More than $26 million of this special investment funding falls under endangered species programs, $6 million under habitat conservation, $7.1 million under refuge environmental contaminants problems.

"We have a large backlog of resource protection projects and facilities maintenance we need to tackle," Babbitt said. "By spending the money now, we are ensuring America's natural resources infrastructure is properly conserved for future generations."

President Clinton's proposed

$1.23 billion FY 1994 budget for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will enable the Service to Provide greater protection of species and habitat.

The highlights of the proposed 1994 budget include:

- * Funding for endangered species conservation activities would increase 48 percent to a total of $96.8 million under the President's budget. This includes $6.1 million for prelisting activities related to candidate and other declining species, $8.2 million for listing of species, $16.5 million for consultation with other federal agencies, state and local governments, and the private sector under the Endangered Species Act, $3.3 million for international wildlife trade permitting, and $31.3 million for recovery efforts.

- * Funding which protects and restores bay and estuaries, wetlands, and other vital habitats would increase to $54.6 million from $45.1 million in FY 1993.

- * Funding to support fish and marine mammal management and the hatchery program is proposed to be $70.2 million, up from $64.1 million in FY 1993.

- * Funding to maintain and operate the National Wildlife Refuge system would climb by 7.3 percent to $172.1 million. This includes increased efforts to manage critically deteriorated or threatened habitats on refuges, complete high priority maintenance projects, and develop a management plan to identify, acquire, and protect refuge water rights in 13 western states. The budget includes $35.6 million under the Migratory Bird Conservation Fund and $55.4 million under the Land and Water Conservation Fund to acquire new lands.

- * The Service's research and development budget would increase 28 percent to $110.6 million. This would fund expanded research efforts, including contaminants research on efforts of a new generation of chemicals and wildlife research on non-game species. In addition, a research program would be developed to determine the status and ecological requirements of species listed as endangered and candidates for listing.
