SILVERTON LIBRARY

There are yet people in Silverton who do not know that there is a library, containing some three hundred books in the southeast corner of the second floor of the Courthouse; nor that it is open from two until five o'clock each Saturday afternoon.

This list of books, numbering three hundred volumes, includes a variety of type of books. There are books for children, adventure books for young boys, some of the best sellers in novels, and other books of poetry and fiction.

One has only to sit in the library some afternoon to learn that it has already proven itself a valuable community asset. The eager looks on the faces of the children who have come in several miles, as they listen while the books are suggested, and they carefully make their choice, gives any onlooker the desire to see them have a larger selection of books from which to choose.

Good books should be at hand for the youngsters of the community as well as for the oldsters, in order that the habit of good taste in reading, may become a part of the habit regime of each one.

Several things should be taken into consideration when determining the value of a book.

In what way did the book interest you—did it appeal to the intellect or to the emotions? Would you care to read it twice? Is the theme original? Is it true to nature? Does it distinguish between good and bad? Does it leave a wholesome feeling?

The library should eventually teach the user the value of a good book and in so doing perform its mission of helping people to live in the right way.

One writer has said, "No other institution, which society has brought is so wide in its scope; so universal in its appeal, so inviting to both young and old, as a library in which good books are to be found".

Let us each one do our part in the enlargement of Silverton's Library.

BALLOTS PRINTED; AND ABSENTEES ARE VOTING

The First Primary Election ballots have been printed and delivered to the Democratic Executive Committee, of which Ernest Tibbitts is chairman; and absentee voting began on July 6. It is expected that the voting will be heavier this year than for several years, judging from the number of paid poll taxes.

Absentee voters this year must do their voting before a county clerk or notary public. The voter must furnish postage for the mailing of his ballot. The absentee voting will end three days before the date of the first Primary, which is the 25th of this month. Something around 100 absentee votes will be cast for this county.

There are sixty-three names of state and county candidates on the ballots this year. In the county, there are three offices without opposition, county clerk, treasurer and surveyor. For county chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee, the name must be written in, in the space provided.

MRS. JNO. BURSON HOST TO DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The "Home Food Supply" and how it may be adequately maintained through out the non-productive months in Briscoe County, will be the subject for discussion at the meeting of the Silverton Home Demonstration Club, led by Miss Geneva Meadows, County Home Demonstration Agent, to be held at the home of Mrs. Jno. Burson, Wednesday.

"Filling the pantry with an abundance of nourishing foods during the growing seasons will supply the family with an adequate diet the year around," Miss Meadows says.

Planning a preservation budget, and the food production budget, growing the food to fill the preservation budget, and then filling the preservation budget and organizing the pantry according to the nutritional needs daily, of the family, are some of the goals each club in the county will be expected to reach this year.

Another question for discussion which the club expects to settle at the meeting is a representative that the club expects to send to the annual short course at A. and M. College, to be held July 20-25. The short course is an educational program held annually at A. and M. College, for the farm boys and girls and the men and women of the State of Texas, and is sponsored by the United States Department of Agriculture, co-operating with the Extension Service of Texas.

ON TEXAS FARMS AND RANCHES

Minnie Fisher Cunningham
Extension Editor

A progress report on five poultry demonstrations in Blanco county, shows an average of 1,081 hens, 12 per cent culled, five per cent mortality, 584 eggs laid, approximately 15 eggs per hen per month, and a profit to date of 85c per hen.

A Hereford calf is reported to have gained 125 pounds during its first month on feed under the watchful care of James McElrath, a 4-H Club boy living near Coleman.

Fifteen registered Jersey heifers are in the hands of Eastland county 4-H Club boys. Banks of Eastland county are assisting in financing the purchase of the calves which the 4-H boys will show at the Centennial.

Ray Earp, a pasture demonstrator living at Morgan Hill in Erath county, says that his acres diverted from soil depleting crops to Sudan, will be worth the cost of planting for the relief they will give his permanent pasture. In addition, he will receive a three-fold benefit: added fertility to his land, increased milk from his cows, and a cash grant.

Positive results from demonstrations using zinc sulphate to control pecan rosette are reported in Gillespie county. It was placed in five-eighths inch augur holes bored two inches deep and four to six inches apart around the trunk of the tree. The holes were plugged with a cork. New growth on the treated tree measures two feet long and appears free from rosette.

Terraces 24 feet wide and 18 inches high with nine inch fall between terraces built by county road equipment at a cost of 65 cents per acre are reported from Jones county.

THE HI-Y ON THE HIGHWAY

The problem of the young driver has been taken up by one of the national organizations best fitted to deal with it—the National Hi-Y Council of the Y. M. C. A. The Council has just published, with the cooperation of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, a manual entitled "The Hi-Y on the Highway", a guide book for bringing Hi-Y Clubs everywhere into active participation in the traffic control movement.

This manual was used for the basis of a discussion of the young driver and his obligations at the National Hi-Y congress recently at Berea, Kentucky. Dr. Herbert Stack, Director of Youth Education for the National Bureau, started the discussion by emphasizing that motor vehicle commissioners and police chiefs the country over complain that the accident record of young drivers is definitely worse than that of adult motorists.

The young driver, Dr. Stack said, is frequently charged with bad driving attitudes. These, rather than inferior knowledge or skill, seem to account for his poor accident record. He likes to show off. He takes unnecessary chances. He is discourteous. Two remedies for this situation suggest themselves. The first, a repressive measure, would keep the young driver off the road by raising legal driving age to 18 or 19. The second, put forward by those who object to the first as being prohibitive, rather than progressive, would provide facilities for giving young drivers a proper understanding of the automobile and his relationship to it. This would mean an extension of the present educational trend toward teaching good driving in the schools.

The Hi-Y can fit splendidly into this scheme. It is precisely the organization to extend the principles of traffic control learned in the classroom into extra curricular activity. Setting up a traffic control council, formulating a school traffic control program, developing good driving attitudes are projects for which the Hi-Y is well equipped. We may hope that the Hi-Y on the highway will prove to be a strong constructive influence in making the country's young drivers, good drivers.

TO THE VOTERS OF BRISCOE COUNTY

I am a candidate for the office of County Attorney of this county and will greatly appreciate your vote and influence.

I cannot see many of you in person, as I do not have time, but nearly all of you know me and my qualifications.

If elected I will try to make you a good Prosecuting Attorney, but will not use the office to persecute anyone.

I thank you for your help.
Yours very truly,

Douglass Over KGNC

Curtis Douglass will speak over Radio Station KGNC in Amarillo on Thursday, July 9, at 6:00 P. M. in behalf of his candidacy for the office of State Senator.

BAIRD -- FOUST

Miss Eugenia Baird, of Childress, and Mr. Maurice Foust, of Silverton, were united in marriage Sunday, July 5, at Canyon, Texas. The ceremony was held at the Baptist parsonage in Canyon, with the Rev. J. R. Hicks, officiating.

Mrs. Foust is the daughter of Mrs. Sarah Baird of Childress. She graduated from the Childress High School in the Class of 1929, and is a very attractive young lady, and popular in Childress society. She has been attending college in Wichita Falls until recently.

Mr. Foust is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Foust and is well known in Silverton and Briscoe County. He graduated from the Silverton High School in 1930 and was one of Silverton's most outstanding athletes. He is now associated with the Magnolia Service Station here.

The young couple have announced no definite plans for the future, but everyone hopes that they will make Silverton their home. The Briscoe County News joins with the rest of the community in wishing them a long, happy, and prosperous married life.

GOVERNORS VISIT TEXAS CENTENNIAL IN DALLAS

Governors of 25 states have accepted invitations to visit the Texas Centennial Exposition before the close of the $25,000,000 Worlds Fair on November 29. William A. Webb, general manager, announced today.

It is probable, Webb added, the Republican presidential nominee, Governor Alfred Mossman Landon of Kansas, will be a guest at the Exposition on November 13, which has been designated Kansas Day. Governor James V. Allred has extended Landon and his running-mate, Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, invitation to visit Dallas on that date. They have replied that they will be there if campaign plans permit.

FARMERS ARE THE BEST BUYERS OF GAS AND OIL

"We are increasingly impressed with the importance of the buying power of the Texas farmers in our marketing territory, which includes Texas and some twenty other states, their total purchases absorbing over half of the bulk output of our ten refineries," says Dan Moran, President of the Continental Oil Company, who has just finished a four-weeks' inspection trip to the Companies various properties.

"We know also that farmers on the whole are more discerning buyers of petroleum products than their city cousins.

"Whether this is due to the farmer's long familiarity with internal combustion motors in tractors, ensilage cutters, individual lighting plants and other farm equipment, or whether it is due to the fact that he is used to making most of his own adjustments and repairs, is uncertain. The interviews during the inspection trip, however, leave no room for doubt that the farmer knows what to expect in his fuel. And he shows far better than average intelligence in choosing top quality lubricants on the grounds that it is not cost of lubricant but cost of lubrication that concerns him."

Havron To New Location

Frank Havron, manager of the City Tailor Shop, moved this week, to the Nunn Building on the corner of 86 highway.

Mr. Havron plans to completely remodel the building and will occupy one section of the building with his Tailor Shop. Kirk's Cafe will be located on the corner facing east and the other downstairs rooms will be made into up-to-date business places.

The upper floor of the Building is being remodeled into living rooms, for Mr. Havron and family, and will also have some apartments.

KIRK'S CAFE MOVES

Kirk's City Cafe, operated by Mr. and Mrs. George Kirk, has moved to the corner facing east on Highway 86.

The Kirks invite their old customers, as well as new, to come in and see them, and feel that they will be better able to serve the public in the new place.

The cafe will be a strictly an up-to-date restaurant, with plenty of room, according to George.

Sisters Meet After 45 Years

Rev. H. L. Griffin of the Holley Memorial Baptist Church of Maud, Oklahoma, will do the preaching at the coming Revival. Interesting and timely sermons will be given each night by this excellent evangelist, assisted by Rev. L. E. Kent, the local minister.

Special songs and fine music will be a featured part of the Revival, and every effort is being made to make the meeting an interesting entertaining one, as well as religiously instructive.

Rev. Kent has been gone for several days, but will return to Silverton this coming Saturday. He reports a fine trip.

The opening sermon of the Revival will be given at eleven o'clock Sunday morning, July 12. Everyone is invited and urged to attend the meeting.

A REAL BOOK OF CATTLE BRANDS AT LAST

A real book of cattle brands, the first ever to be seen in this country, has just been published and a copy received by this paper. The book contains actual drawings of some 2,000 interesting, amusing, or historical brands, together with the name of the brands, its owner and the location of the ranch. The brand information is listed by counties and practically every cattle section of the State is included.

The book has a foreword by Amos G. Carter, a short history of Texas, written by Peter Molyneux, author of "Romantic Story of Texas", and a short review of the Texas Cattle Industry and Texas Cattle brands, by Frank Reeves, livestock editor of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. It is illustrated with pen and ink drawings of actual ranch scenes, done in West Texas.

Of special interest to ranchers and cattlemen of this section of the country are the brands of Briscoe County, among which the editors have listed the "Tumbling T", the "Anchor Cross", the "Shoe Bar" and a number of others. This publication will undoubtedly attain a wide circulation over the United States and Briscoe County feels proud to have these brands included in the volume.

The publication of the book came about as a result of public interest in Brands, fostered by the great revival of Texas History engendered by the Texas Centennial. When a Fort Worth department store, early in the spring of the year, put about 500 brands on its wrapping paper, a flood of requests poured in for information about brands, some of them from residents of the New England states. To satisfy this demand, as well as to fill a long felt want among Texas ranchers and cattlemen, the Fair Publishing Company, of Fort Worth, has assembled in this book an authentic list of the number of representative Texas brands.

No other industry in Texas or else where can boast of such a colorful and romantic history and background as can the cattle industry. No phase of cattle work is more glamorous than branding. Brands are the coat of arms for a cattle empire. Men have made fortunes by the proper use of branding irons, and others have paid with their lives for their improper use.

Every person interested in Texas, or in romantic history, will appreciate this book. The younger generation will find it interesting and amusing; the ranchers of today will take pride in their listing in the book and old timers and early day cowboys will find excellent "grazing" and many a fond picture in memory's pasture as they wrangle through the list of brands shown in "A Century of Texas CATTLE BRANDS."

Finley White's Agricultural Briefs

Uncle Sam finally sent the most of our long looked-for hog checks. There are still a few of them out yet, but they should come in within the next few weeks. These checks close the Hog program. So far as we know there will not be another hog program under the new farm program that has taken the place of the old.

Rain! Rain! Rain!!!

At this writing we are having as nice a rain as anyone could ask for. At Quitaque the report comes of 2 1/4 inches of rain, and still raining. Silverton has had about 1 1/2 inches and it is still raining. Of course this will stop the harvesting of wheat for a few days but unless the wind goes to blowing, a rain like we are having now will not hurt the wheat unless it lasts too long, and that is not very probable. To the little cotton and feed crops that have just come up it will be a life saver. Looks like we are headed for a bumper crop this fall. At least prospects are as bright as they have been in years according to old timers in this part of the country.

Short Course

Only one more week after this one until it will be Short Course time at College Station. We will want to leave the last of next week in order to be on hand for the opening day, Monday, July 20. Quite a few 4-H Club boys and grown-ups, too, are planning to attend.

Cotton Tag Pool

Many are asking about the cotton tags that are in the National Pool and as to when we will get the money for them. To those that are interested, we do not know when they will come in but twenty per cent of the tags are sold and we see no reason why the money for that twenty per cent should not come in soon.

TEXANS BUY REGISTERED SIRE

In Texas the ponies go round and round a track, all bets go through a pari-mutual, and a sizeable tax is deposited in the state treasury. One quarter of all such tax money received goes to the Department of Agriculture, to be used in the purchase, distribution and maintaining of pure bred jacks and stallions, for the use of any breeder in the state.

When the first funds for this purpose became available in January, 1934, there were thousands of farms in Texas devoid of both mules and horses. There was a severe shortage of high grade stallions and jacks in the state and so few were the colts being raised that the average age for the state was over ten years.

January of 1936 found Commissioner of Agriculture J. E. McDonald the largest purchaser of jacks and stallions in the United States. A total of 262 head, at an average cost of $380 each has been distributed over 185 counties of the state. Caretakers of these sires had reported approximately 12,000 breedings during the period ending December 31, 1935. A fee is charged, payable at the time of service, with the usual guarantee of a live colt.

It is the aim of the department to supply every county with high grade sires to replenish the ranks of work stock in Texas, which is 20 per cent lower than in 1920.—Reprinted by special permission of the Country Gentleman. Copyright 1936 by the Curtis Publishing Co.

Herbert Brown, three miles west and two north of Silverton, has a registered Texas Jack, state owned, at his farm. Around 25 colts have been sired by this Jack in the past year. It is a worth while method, on the part of Commissioner McDonald, for improving Texas livestock.

Mail Across Atlantic From Dallas

Approximately two tons of mail will move out of Dallas July 19 on the most unusual mail transport trip in history.

The mail, originating here, there, everywhere, will be dumped into compartments in the wings of the most unusual airplane to hit the airwaves, then to be hauled at very high altitudes over the Atlantic Ocean and to Paris, where it will go into a postoffice for stamp cancellation.

On July 4, just 14 days before its departure on the Dallas to Paris, flight, the Flying Wing—that is what Monty G. Mason and Clyde E. Pangborn called their red, long winged plane—was christened the Texas Sky Ranger. On this same day booths from which envelopes and stamps are sold were opened within the Texas Centennial Exposition ground.

Thousands of specially designed envelopes, bearing the insignia of the Centennial Exposition, the sponsor of the Mason and Pangborn flight, plus stamps necessary for the mailing, are on sale at the booths. Rates on such mail, which include regular postage and special delivery stamps in addition to the amount charged for transportation across the Atlantic, are reasonably low.

A King's Farewell
Good Soldier Obeyes
An If or Two
40,000,000 Degrees

Paris.—To "last words of dying men" will be added those of the late King George of England—"I am sorry to keep you waiting like this." Typical of a good, modest king, always obedient to duty.

At the request of his ministers, including Sir John Simon, who waited upon him at the last moment, the king struggled pathetically to sign his name to a state paper, succeeded, then, turning to his advisers, spoke those last words, followed by a smile and nod with which he was accustomed to end an audience.

This was published in the Star of Johannesburg, South Africa, in a Reuter dispatch. Mr. Gunia sends the clipping from Gibsonia, Pa. Much obliged.

The Italian soldier Badoglio, in the striking uniform of an Italian marshal, returned to Rome and embraced Mussolini, who wore the uniform of a corporal of fascist militia. Napoleon also liked to be called the "little corporal."

Marshal Badoglio is an Italian soldier who obeys orders. When Mussolini's forces were marching on Rome, Badoglio, according to the story, said to the king: "What shall I do—wipe them out?" The king ordered: "No; no violence." Now, Mussolini rules, and on his orders Badoglio wipes out Haile Selassie and the government of Ethiopia.

Anything could happen in Europe, and one of the things considered quite possible, extremely disturbing to respectable old England and others, is an agreement between Mussolini and Hitler to make "a deal on Austria" profitable for both; not for Austria.

There is always, however, the memory of 1914, when Austria, Italy and the Kaiser had the triple alliance that did not "stand up." Such alliances usually go along racial lines, if they are to last.

France and Italy are natural allies, both Latin; England and the United States would probably be found not far apart if a really big World war should ever come, with one or two other IFS.

Science proudly demonstrates for the Westinghouse company a new lamp that "rivals the beams of the sun." The demonstrator explained that the temperature at the sun's surface is about 11,732 degrees Fahrenheit, while the new lamp reaches 25,232 degrees Fahrenheit. That, however, as scientists know, is a long way from the sun's best temperature.

According to Sir James Jeans, there prevails in the depths of the sun temperature of "forty million degrees centigrade," which is considerably higher than any man-made temperature.

If you came within 1,000 miles of a 5 cent piece with a temperature of 40,000,000 degrees centigrade, you would be burned to a cinder; hard to believe, but true.

England protested against raising the elevation of guns on American warships because that would make our guns shoot too far. In case of war we might hit a British ship lined up against us.

Are animals capable of any thought?

A dog on Prince Edward island, whining and howling with its muzzle against a pile of clothing on the edge of a pool, attracted men who took from the water the bodies of two brothers, fifteen and seventeen years old. Could the dog have "thought out" a connection between the clothing and the disappearance of its young owners?

At Ur, ancient city of the Chaldeans, they show a gigantic brick temple, recently uncovered, where it has lain in the ground covered through the ages. It was constructed originally, like the tower of Babel, to enable the builders to get up into heaven and reach the gods. First they invented those pagan gods, and then they actually believed in them.

The United States navy has ordered 1914 bombers' airplanes cheerful small news.

It is to be hoped that the government is trying to build bomber planes able to fly any ocean anywhere. If war came, our bombing operations could be carried on in countries across the Atlantic or the Pacific. We should not want to do any bombing in America. After the first experiment, no country would send any ships within easy bombing or submarine range of these shores.

IN REVIEW

by Edward W. Pickard

Western Newspaper Union

President Roosevelt Is Renominated by Acclaim

PRESIDENT FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT was renominated by unanimous acclaim by the Democratic National convention in Philadelphia, receiving the convention's entire 1,100 votes on the first ballot. Vice President John N. Garner was likewise renominated for that position by acclaim.

At a great public massmeeting in Franklin field, Philadelphia, attended by 110,000 people on the evening of the convention's adjournment, President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner were, officially notified of their selection and responded with acceptance speeches.

The President sounded the battlecry of his campaign for re-election by denouncing "economic royalists who hide behind the American flag and Constitution."

The convention unanimously adopted a strong New Deal platform and voted the abolition of the historic two-thirds rule.

The sessions were marked with extreme enthusiasm. Party harmony and a determination to stand militantly on the administration's record in the past three years and present a united front in the coming campaign characterized the convention.

The abolition of the two-thirds rule for the nomination of candidates was one of the significant achievements. This rule, which has been in use for more than 100 years, was superseded by the adoption of the rules committee's report recommending that at future conventions only a bare majority be required for nomination. While some southern and the eastern and western states opposed abrogation, they were reconciled to it by the committee's recommendation that changes be made in the apportionment of delegates.

The platform pledged continuation of soil conservation, benefit payments to farmers, a sound currency, a balanced budget and a constitutional amendment if necessary, to achieve the party's broad social program. It praised the accomplishments of the New Deal in a preamble, declaring that it planned to continue them in the interest of the nation. The platform's keynote was that the Roosevelt administration has put and will keep the nation "on the road to recovery and prosperity."

Regarding the Constitution, the platform declared that while the Republican platform proposes to meet national problems by action of the separate states, the Democratic party recognizes that minimum wages, maximum hours, child labor, monopolistic and unfair business practices, dust storms, drought and floods could not be handled by states. It stated:

"If these problems cannot be effectively solved by legislation within the Constitution, we shall seek such clarifying amendments as will assume to the legislatures of the several states and to the congress of the United States each within its proper jurisdiction, the power to enact those laws which the state and federal legislatures within their respective spheres shall find necessary, in order adequately to regulate commerce, protect public health and safety and safeguard economic security. Thus we propose to maintain the letter and spirit of the Constitution."

In addition to soil conservation and benefit payments, the farm plank pledged the Democrats to financing share-croppers and tenants in buying lands; favored commodity loans on farm surpluses and retirement of ten million acres of submarginal land from production and rural rehabilitation.

Railway Pension Acts Declared Unconstitutional

PENSIONS for railway workers received a setback when the District of Columbia Supreme court ruled unconstitutional two acts passed by congress last year.

The court held that the government had no right to levy or collect taxes to finance the rail pensions and invalidated as "inseparable" a companion tax measure providing for payment of the pensions.

Both acts were passed last year under the sponsorship of the administration and with the support of railway labor leaders after the United States Supreme court had held unconstitutional the 1934 railway retirement act. They were designed to meet the high court's objections.

One of the measures involved levies upon railroads and an excise tax of three and one-half per cent of the compensation not in excess of $300 per month paid to its employees. Workers would have paid a three and one-half per cent income tax upon their wages not in excess of $300 per month. The money thus collected would go into a pension fund. The other act established the retirement system for employees at the age of sixty-five, with pensions ranging up to $120 per month.

Farm Income Up 90 Per Cent, A. A. A. Report Sets Forth

AN INCREASE of 90 per cent in the cash farm income on cotton, wheat, tobacco, corn and hogs from 1932 to 1935 was recorded under the Agricultural Adjustment act, invalidated by the Supreme court last January, according to the annual report of Chester C. Davis, former administrator, made public in Washington.

Cash farm income from these five major farm products which came under production control, rental and benefit payments was $1,365,000,000 in 1932, the year before the AAA became operative. For 1935 it was $2,593,000,000.

The report pointed out that cash farm income from all other products increased in the same period from $3,012,000,000 to $4,307,000,000.

Mr. Davis, who was recently appointed by President Roosevelt to the Federal Reserve board, declared that cash available for living expenses, taxes and interest from farm cash income was the highest in 1935 since 1929, and two and one-half times greater than it was in 1932.

Under the AAA, the report sets forth, rental and benefit payments accounted for one-fourth of the increase in all cash farm income from $4,377,000,000 in 1932 to $6,900,000,000 in 1935.

Gov. Landon Makes Plans for Notification Speech

IN ESTES PARK, Colo., Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, continued his vacation begun with his family the week before and made plans for re-convening of the Kansas legislature and for the acceptance speech he will deliver in Topeka on July 23.

Although Governor Landon was resting preparatory to the rigors of the campaign, affairs of his state and conferences with political advisers occupied considerable of his attention.

When the Kansas legislature reconvenes a proposed amendment to the state constitution will be introduced, giving the state broad power to provide far-reaching legislation for social welfare and to co-operate with the federal government. Governor Landon was quoted as describing the proposed amendment as "satisfactory."

The amendment, which may be the basis for similar action in other states, reads:

"Nothing contained in this constitution shall be construed to limit the power of the legislature to enact laws providing for financial assistance to aid infirm or dependent persons; for the public health; unemployment compensation and general social security and providing for the payment thereof by tax or otherwise and to receive aid from the federal government therefor."

Charles P. Taft and Ralph W. Robey, two members of his research and advisory staff, were scheduled to join the Republican Presidential nominee and to provide him with further data for the notification ceremony speech—the first major political statement since his Cleveland nomination.

In the meantime, John Hamilton, newly elected chairman of the Republican National committee, was on a tour of the East conferring with political leaders.

Strikes in Provinces Continue French Unrest

PERSISTENCE of strikes in the provinces kept France in a state of unrest. A gain of 225,000 new members was reported by the general confederation of labor, organized labor's official body.

Altogether it was estimated that 100,000 workers were still absent from their jobs, in spite of reports of strike settlements in scattered sections throughout the country.

The French Riviera witnessed a general exodus of foreign tourists from 450 hotels and resorts following a lockout by the proprietors. The hotels were closed indefinitely after the employers declared they could not meet workers' demands for more pay and shorter hours. This retaliation by the owners against the threat of a workers' strike upset the summer tourist season, one of the most profitable to the French.

Severe Drouth Damage Brings Federal Action

WITH thousands of acres of spring wheat destroyed through drouth and with vast corn-growing regions threatened, the federal government undertook a comprehensive campaign to alleviate human distress and property loss, and stricken areas were placed in the hands of a special drouth committee by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, with instructions to proceed immediately with a plan of co-ordination.

Secretary Wallace named Jess W. Tapp, assistant agricultural adjustment administrator, as chairman of the committee. Four others appointed were: C. W. Warburton, director of the Agricultural Extension Service; Hugh H. Bennett, chief of the Soil Conservation Service; A. G. Black, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics; and W. F. Callender, assistant agricultural adjustment administrator. Joseph L. Bailey, assistant resettlement administrator, will also serve with the committee.

The committee's attention was turned immediately to drouth conditions and relief need in North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Montana and Wyoming, but officials were watching anxiously the increasing drouth damage in South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee and parts of Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas.

The work of six government agencies will be supervised and co-ordinated by the committee in its work on drouth relief. These are: the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the Public Works Administration, the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation, the Rural Resettlement Administration, the Relief Administration, and Rural Rehabilitation and Soil Conservation Service.

League of Nations Meets to Lift Sanctions

WHILE representatives of leading powers gathered in Geneva to lift League of Nations economic sanctions against Italy and the refugee emperor, Haile Selassie, of Ethiopia prepared to plead the cause of his nation's freedom, European statesmen considered the possibility of a reorganization and reformation of the League.

Observers agreed that while informal discussions on the League reformation would be held, it was probable that the question of reorganizing the international pact body would be postponed until September.

Steel Industry Resists Drive for Unionization

DEFYING a drive to force unionization of its 500,000 workers, the steel industry in a strongly worded statement issued by the American Iron and Steel Institute declared "it will oppose any attempt to compel its employees to join a union or pay tribute for the right to work."

Although the statement did not mention him by name, it was regarded by observers as the first official response to the recent announcement by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, of a campaign to unionize steel employees.

In order to prevent the "closed shop," the industry said it "will use its resources to the best of its ability to protect its employees and their families from intimidation, coercion and violence and to aid them in maintaining collective bargaining free from interference from any source."

Reasserting its belief in the principles of collective bargaining, the industry's statement pointed out that employees now pick their own representatives for collective bargaining by secret ballot. The statement declares:

"The steel industry is recovering from six years of depression and huge losses and the employees are beginning to receive the benefit of increased operations. Any interruption of the forward movement seriously injure the employees and their families and all business dependent upon the industry and will endanger the welfare of the country."

International Conference Seeks Mediterranean Peace

MEETING in Montreaux, Switzerland, an international conference sought settlement of military and naval problems in the Mediterranean. The conference had been called by the powers as a result of Turkey's request to fortify the Dardanelles, which were demilitarized under the Lausanne treaty of 1923.

The possible threat of Russia's growing naval strength caused an alignment of the British and Japanese. Japan announced it was willing to accept any limitation on Japanese warships authorized to enter the Black sea, providing similar restrictions were placed on Russian warships leaving it. Britain was believed to be supporting Japan's position.

See Roosevelt Real Prophet

One Reason for So Devoted Following and Such Bitter Opposition; Bonus Job Well Done

By EARL GODWIN

WASHINGTON.—There are certain high points in Roosevelt's public addresses since he became President which mark him as a seer and a prophet; and that is one reason why he has so devoted a following and so bitter an opposition. The truly great man with the deep spiritual force and the vision of the soul on the mountain top is set apart for great things, including great punishment. These thoughts come to me as I sit down to write to you in the shadow of the White House, in which so many of our leaders have experienced those long grueling hours from which they have welded their fate and had so much to do with America's destiny.

When Roosevelt told America that this generation has a rendezvous with destiny it seemed to me as if the spirits of former Presidents must have held close conference with the man as he worked out his acceptance speech in the library of that great house where our Presidents have worked now for more than a hundred years, including the great-souled Lincoln and the tremendous Wilson.

In that speech and in that phrase Franklin Roosevelt leaped upward to the stars in his vision; and he immediately stood in harmony with the greatest minds and the greatest souls of all time. A man who knows destiny and who recognizes cycles of events is more than a politician. He is, I repeat, a prophet.

The destiny we must face may have one form or another, but if we face it with the preparation the New Deal would give us, we will be facing it without fear and with a magnificent proportion of the Golden Rule in government. If we dispense with the New Deal for the old type of materialistic government we will be so overloaded with personal and corporate selfishness that the eventual reaction may be a truly dangerous class war. The American people, expanding tremendously in the 160 years since July 4, 1776, have unfortunately developed those economic royalists of which Roosevelt speaks. Actually an economic tyrant is worse than a political tyrant; and it is against these modern conditions of economic tyranny that Roosevelt has "enlisted for the duration of the war."

WARNS AGAINST FEAR

Roosevelt knows the destructive quality of fear. He knows what fear has done to hold back the world's progress; he knows the inner delight of having conquered fear within his own soul. Think of what it means to fear nothing not only to be fearless physically but mentally and spiritually. That state of being permits one to make limitless plans and to create endlessly. Roosevelt, who warns against fear and did so much to wipe out fear from the American people in their dark hours of depression, acquired the mystic knowledge of fearlessness by long struggles with himself. He has experienced bitter trials. You know fate sometimes tests a fellow to see how he reacts under difficulty. Had Roosevelt failed in the tests which were laid upon him he would not today be running for re-election. American destiny wants no second raters.

The destiny for America is leadership of the race; and of the world. While the Old world has gone back to the law of tooth and fang and is preparing to kill one another off in a war of horrible possibilities, this blessed nation is adopting the good neighbor policy at home and abroad; we are getting a glimpse of what love and charity mean in terms of everyday dealing with each other and the world. When Roosevelt used that good old word "charity" in his acceptance speech he was making use of an inner knowledge which shows him that genuine practical everyday love to your neighbor is as practical, useful and profitable a substance in human affairs as is electricity properly used.

PRACTICAL WEAPON

The great practical weapon in the hands of America against selfishness is the use of the federal power. . . . that seems to be the great thing which stirs up the animals on the other side. The tremendous corporations and their lawyers have made monkeys of these sacred states' rights whenever it was to the advantage of the corporations to do so; and as I have said on previous occasions the time is come for these United States to face a real test of bigness. Either as a nation we are big enough to handle these vast social and economic problems with all our big power, as vested in the federal government—or we are going to allow ourselves to be beaten down in 48 small sections.

The Democratic platform as adopted at Philadelphia plus Roosevelt's acceptance speech comprise a social doctrine for the years to come. They are in my judgment more important than any utterances in years. They are more important than anything Wilson ever said, because they are closer to the hearts of people. They are equal in importance with the prophetic words of Lincoln at his best.

In the short months of this first Roosevelt administration the farmer has been taken off the road to ruin; more than ever does he get quick response from Washington, as in these awful drought experiences. The federal government has driven the gangster and the kidnaper to cover in a way which makes it plain that state law and state police organizations are far too small to cope with the evils of a nation-wide crime wave. Roosevelt's national and federal use of resources for the nation-wide horror of unemployment is a tremendous achievement; labor has been given a recognition and has experienced a betterment of conditions which is merely one more aspect of the Golden Rule in government, and labor will not forget Roosevelt on election day. . . . all in all the Democratic platform is a New Deal platform and a Roosevelt platform; it points toward a country with equal opportunities and a democratic economy which would do away with these frightful inequalities of living which we see today and which America is eventually going to eliminate.

JOB WELL DONE

The government handled the bonus wonderfully well. Those critics who sneer at government and declare that old Uncle Sam cannot do anything properly haven't had a word to say about the way he delivered 90 per cent of the $35,000,000 in bonus bonds on time.

This was a delivery of $1,700,000,000 in bonds and $70,000,000 in checks. Thousands of persons teamed up to make this a perfect job. The first and almost impossible task was shouldered within a few moments after the bonus bill passed; and Gen. Frank T. Hines, head of the veterans administration, began the unparalleled job of lining up the veterans for their applications. It was the greatest clerical job since the dawn of creation; and it was done well within the time limit. The reason is found in the long advance thinking done by Hines and others in the government.

Each one of three and a half million applications had to be checked against the existing records; that was merely one angle of the work which continued without ceasing day and night with three shifts of workers each 24 hours, and of course the veterans' administration was not the only branch of government. The government presses at the bureau of engraving and printing were rolling day and night and the post office, headed by Postmaster General James A. Farley, made its plans for that perfect delivery which was such a splendid success. Government teamwork was never better. . . . the job was fool proof.

COWARDLY ATTACK

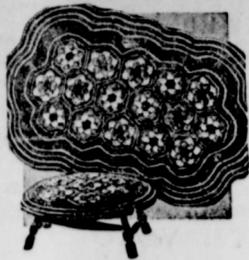

Five plush-lined Democrats of the big fee and salary variety lined up in a cowardly attack on Roosevelt, giving out a copy of the letter they never sent asking the Democratic National convention to nominate anyone but Roosevelt. Not one of the five is remembered nationally these days except Al Smith, although there may be a few who recall that former Senator Jim Reed of Missouri has always opposed his own party, especially when it had a great leader. Smith's position is pitiful; he has given up the idealism of real democracy for a big salary from Wall Street interests. (In addition to the large pension he draws from New York) . . . Smith started to edge away from Roosevelt when Roosevelt was elected governor to succeed Smith. The man in the brown derby engaged a suite of rooms at a big Albany hotel and assumed that Roosevelt was a weakling and that he, Al Smith, could stay and be the real power in the state.

Roosevelt wiped that out in a hurry. Then Smith pouted and acted childishly over the fact that Roosevelt polled larger majorities in New York state than Smith had ever done. Actually, those who are on the inside, know that Smith's political moves are now dictated by disappointment, childish jealousy and a Wall Street boss. Former Governor Ely was another of the five. He never was a Roosevelt Democrat, but led the stop Roosevelt movement at the Chicago convention in 1932. Bainbridge Colby—for a short while secretary of state under Wilson—is just one more Wall Street corporation lawyer. He never should have been a Democrat and I don't think he ever was one at heart. Not the kind of Democrats I know.

Judge Cohan, of the Supreme court of New York state, was once a Tammany leader and possibly is today for all I know. But he was so much enmeshed in Tammany in the days of Boss Murphy that you could almost see the stripes of the tiger upon him. You couldn't call him much of a Democrat outside of his Tammany Hall connections.

DRAGONS DRIVE YOU

SYNOPSIS

Jeb Braddon, young and fantastically successful broker of Chicago, is infatuated with Agnes Gleneith, beautiful daughter of a retired manufacturer. Rodney, a doctor, in love with Agnes, visits his brother, Jeb. Rod plans work at Rochester. Jeb suggests that he make a try for Agnes before leaving. In Rod there is a deeper, obstinate decency than in Jeb. Agnes believes to be happy, a girl must bind herself entirely to a man and have adorable babies. Rod visits Agnes and tells her of his great desire, but realizes it can never be fulfilled. Agnes's mother is at- tempting to regain her husband's love. Agnes has disturbing doubts as to what attracts her father in New York. Jeb tells Agnes he is going to marry her, and together they view an apartment in Chicago. Jeb asks Agnes to set an early date, but she tells him she cannot marry him. When the agent, Mr. Colver, offers to show them a furnished apartment, Jeb asks Agnes to see it alone, saying he must return to his office. Agnes consents and Jeb leaves. A radio is blaring terrifically from one of the apartments. Colver raps upon the door, which is opened by a scantily clad girl, who draws Agnes into the room. Colver finds her husband, Charles Lorrie, fatally shot. He calls the police. Myrtle Lorrie asks Agnes to phone Cathal O'Mara, a lawyer, to come at once. Agnes does. The police take charge. O'Mara arrives. The officers are antagonistic to him. Agnes sides with O'Mara.

CHAPTER III

Agnes was out; she had passed that door; but the room and the apartment inside it refused to be obliterated. It went with her; they all seemed to travel with her, though she only had been released, she alone had been helped away.

She sat for a few minutes in the women's waiting-room of the North-western railroad station, where no one could know that she, this afternoon, had walked in on a murder. After a while, she went to a phone-booth and called her father's office. He was not there, but his secretary grew almost hysterical when she recognized Agnes' voice.

"Where are you, Miss Agnes?" "At the station; I'm taking a train home in seven minutes." The police had communicated with her father, and he had gone to find her.

Finally she called Jeb; but he also was out seeking her. For news of the murder of Charles Lorrie was on the air; the announcer had said that Miss Agnes Gleneith had discovered the murder.

The wife of a man in Jeb's office had picked this up at home not ten minutes ago, and had phoned her husband in the office; and Jeb had set out.

Agnes sat in the train where nobody knew. Nobody—yet. But by night they would know; by morning all her world would learn that she had "walked in" on a murder while she had been looking for an apartment with Jeb Braddon.

That meant, of course, that she was to marry Jeb. Marry, marry, marry, the rails ran again under the car wheels.

She had selected a seat amid strangers; she leaned her head against the window and shut her eyes.

See. You opened your eyes, but that room was there; Myrtle was there, reaching for her, clinging to her, forever clinging. "It" was down the hall, half in the bedroom; the husband whom Myrtle had shot, four times, after being his wife for two years.

Agnes closed her eyes again. Who was Bert, and where was he? Myrtle's Bert.

"Shut up about Bert!" Myrtle had begged. And Agnes had omitted mention of him. Why?

For the sake of Myrtle? Or of Martin O'Mara?

What did Martin O'Mara mean by saying "you" never do a thing like that, but your dragons drove you to it? What were the dragons, which Myrtle's soft sensuousness might have known, but which Agnes knew naught of, because God had been good to her?

The train was stopped again, and it was at her station. Where were her mother and Bee, and Simmons behind them. Her father, it proved, had phoned to them from the city to meet this train. They hurried her home, where her mother, after learning all that Agnes could tell, offered to start her off the next morning for the East and for Europe.

"Your Aunt Esther will take you. I'll telephone her this evening." Aunt Esther was her mother's older sister, a widow living in Hartford. "I'd go with you myself, Agnes; but it is no time to leave your father."

"No," said Agnes. "But I can't possibly leave, Mother."

"Why not?" "I'm a witness. I must appear before the coroner's jury tomorrow, probably; then before the Grand Jury; and then at the trial."

"I can't imagine it!" her mother said.

"But I have to." Jeb arrived before her father; he had driven again from the city. Agnes had him come to her room, where she remained.

Jeb crossed the room in long, strong strides and seized her in his arms. She said no word but she pushed away from him.

"What's the matter, Glen?" he overpowered her again. "I love you so; and I left you to walk into that—when I love you so!"

"Love?" Agnes repeated as much to herself as to him, looking up at him. "Do we love, Jeb? . . . Or what is it we feel for each other?"

He held her only tighter. "I know," he said. "You're mixing us up with them. Don't! . . . Oh, I wish to God I'd stayed there with you."

"You didn't, Jeb. . . I'm glad." It was nearly midnight, and after Jeb was gone, when she had a talk with her mother and father.

"You're not to blame, Agnes, little Light One," he repeated, petting her hair. "It was bad luck; that's all. But why in the world did you phone for that lawyer?"

"O'Mara?" said Agnes. "I wish you hadn't done it."

"Why?" "It aligns you with her—and him."

"Does it?" "She won't go away," her mother returned to her own remedy in the emergency. "She insists that she can't leave at all."

"That's true," said her father. "At least," said her mother, "you'll not go back to New York tomorrow, Bob?"

"Were you going tomorrow, Father?"

He looked at his daughter, who had walked in on a murder that afternoon. "Yes," he said.

"Why?" she asked him, as never she would have before.

"Business, of course, Light One."

What was Father doing in New York? How could he do it? He, who had been so happy with Mother—so completely happy—during all those eleven years in the house on Easter Lane. But they were passed—as two years had passed in that apartment which she had visited, where Myrtle had shot her husband. How could she have done it?

She didn't do it; not the bride who had married him two years ago and once had been happy with him. Father—Father, who had brought Mother as a bride to the house on Easter Lane—that father was not doing what Father was doing against Mother today.

"When such a thing is done, you don't do it," Martin O'Mara had told her. "It's your dragons you have in you that drive you."

Were the dragons of desire that fed on Myrtle's soft sensuousness, also afflicting Father?

Agnes lay long awake. If she could, by willing it, obliterate her hours in the apartment so that never they could touch her again, would she do it?

No, she knew. No. Who, having passed from innocence, would return to it again? Who, having encountered him, would obliterate from all her life ahead, Martin O'Mara?

Who was he? Who—what wife or what other woman—might now be awaiting him?

Twenty miles away in the city a woman was awaiting him at that hour, though it was long after midnight. She was at a window beside the door of a little frame house, and she watched out with the shade up from the window.

She watched for him and listened hour after hour, eagerly but not impatiently or critically. She lived for his coming, whenever it might be.

She was slight but straight and strong. Five foot two, she stood, a little mother of big men; for both her sons had been a full foot taller. "And here is the likes of me," she'd say, "outliving the both liv them. And their father. But please, God, let me never bury him."

Him—none like him, to her; not even her own sons, or her own man, whose memory never failed her. Him was her grandson, Cathal Martin O'Mara. And little as she was, and old as she was,—nearing two and seventy,—you could see resemblances between them. He had his good hands from her, and much of the strong, sensitive modeling of his head. His hair was like hers, fine and straight and abundant.

He had his blue eyes from her, even to the sparkle in them; and much, much more than can ever be told. And it was through her that he had the event which, of all elements that entered into his making, most affected him. She had seen it with her own eyes; and as soon as he had become old enough to understand, she had herself related it to him:

The tenth of July, it was, in eight-ninety-three; and the lake shore along Jackson park was white with the great fine World's Fair buildings. And this day was fine, and the Fair was full crowded to the turnstiles.

She was seeing the Fair on that fine day, was Winnie O'Connor O'Mara, wife—and proud of him—of Cathal Martin O'Mara, of Engine Company Number Two.

Few had been the fires at the Fair, and none that did either hurt or damage. But this day was to pay up for it. There were the white, tall towers reaching up to the blue skies, and none of them nearer to heaven than the tower of the Cold Storage building. And it was the bulk below that caught fire on this fine afternoon; it wasn't the tower at all, at the beginning. The alarms went out; and the fire companies came by, their fine strong horses running, and their big gangs beating.

"Play away, Two! Play away, One! Play away, Company Eight! Up with ye, Chemical Fourteen!" And up the men went to the roof, from roof and from ground playing their streams on the building. But the fire was full blazing and leaping; and it licked up the water that reached it; and more of the water fell short.

"To the tower!" shouts Fitzpatrick—him that was captain of Engine Company Two, and assistant chief of battalion. "To the tower with the water, and play on from above! Who's up to the tower with me?" And he set foot for the climb.

And twenty good men—the good of the best—the fair score of them went up through the roof to the tower after him, dragging their hoses with them. And they got up and signed for water; and the engines give it to them, and there they played it down from the tower on the side of the roof that was blazing.

Sure it was a sight. From the Court of Honor, from the Manufactures exhibits, from the Art Galleries, from the Midway and all the shows between, the people came crowding to see. Thousands and tens of thousands of them. Faith, pushing at the fire-lines that day was a city of people.

For the fire kept on gaining. The water from the tower, like the water from the ground, was nothing to it. The blaze, it ran on top of the roof; and that was not so bad, for that the men on the tower could see. But the flame, it ran along under the roof; and that they couldn't see till it broke up from below sudden on all sides at once, and cut off the tower entirely.

One man,—John Davis, of the Midway company,—he saw it the second before it burst up; and he hugged the hose-line and came down; and he reached the roof and ran over it before it all was blazing. But scarce was he down before the hose he rode was turned away; all other hose to the tower was burned away; and the life-line like them. Twenty men—the even score of them—stood at the top of the tower, the blaze all about below them.

One hundred and ninety-one feet from the ground, they stood; seventy above the roof blazing all about below them. And God alone could help them.

Winnie O'Connor O'Mara—she was thirty-five years old that month, and her sons were twelve and fifteen, but neither were there to witness the deed of this day—Winnie O'Mara, wife of a fireman, got through the throng to the fire-lines.

"Who's them on the tower, can ye tell me?" "Fitzpatrick, assistant chief of battalion."

"That I know; can ye name some that stand up there with him?" "Cabill of Company Eight, I hear; Bill Denning of One; Lieutenant Freeman, One; Garvey; and Breen of Chemical Fourteen; O'Mara of Two; Nat Howard—"

"O'Mara, did ye say, of Engine Company Two?"

"O'Mara. Yis; I hear he went up—"

"He would!" "Lord save ye, is he yours? Do ye know him?"

"Yes; I know him." Then she saw him on the tower; she knew which, of the score of men beyond all human help, was he that was hers.

They crouched, for shelter from the heat of the flames below, on a bit of a balcony near the top. There, if the tower burned fast, they had ten minutes left them; at best, maybe twenty—bare minutes of life to those fine strong men that stood in the sight of all and must die. And they, best of all, knew it, as they looked down, the twenty of them.

And it struck all to silence.

Higher the blaze burnt, and hotter. Faith, you could feel it hot on the ground where you was thrust back by the fire-lines. What was it to them on the tower!

But no shame showed there; there was not a coward among them. All could see on the tower a man shaking hands with his fellow beside him. Farewell between men, it was; and another gave his hand to him.

Then the form of him hung in the air over the flames. For a flash of second, he seemed to stand in the air; for your heart had stopped for him. Then he came down. He'd taken his choice and jumped; and into the blaze he went, to the end of him.

Now a second shook his fellow's hands; and he jumped. Then they stopped that.

Some one on the tower had found a length of life-line. Like enough, they'd spliced some poor pieces together. They let it down but only to see it burn off. Yet twenty feet of line hung down from the shelf; it may have been twenty-five, but the end of it burning. One came down the rope to the end—the hands of him snuffing the fire where the hemp was burning.

He swung a bit on the rope, and those above tried to swing him out; so now you could see the dream of them. There was a spot on the roof below, which was not yet in flame, and the plan was to swing him at it.

He let go and dropped. And the rope, where his hands had been, caught fire again.

A fourth came down; and his fellows above swung to help him. He dropped, and there was the rope afire again, and each time shorter.

Who'd be next? On that tower there was no man that shamed himself, not one! "Ye go! I'll wait! . . . Ye go!" ye could see them saying.

Fitzpatrick, he had to order them; and all could see him do it, as they came down, one by one, each snuffing the flame from the rope as he hung and swung; and dropped—and then the line caught fire again.

STAR DUST Movie • Radio By VIRGINIA VALE

JUST one more bit of information about that New York vacation of Robert Taylor's. His popularity with the fans was so great and took the home office so by surprise (they'd known he was popular, but hadn't expected that the fans would storm his hotel in such numbers) that bodyguards were engaged for him.

Anyone getting off the elevators at his floor was questioned. No one was allowed to go to his suite without a lot of to-do. The sad result of that was that friends whom he'd urged to come to see him, naming the time, found it practically impossible to get in to see him; in fact, one old friend was about to be turned away, but when she asked only that he be told that she'd been there, and he was, young Robert came rushing out and dragged her in.

He was practically exhausted by all the furor. But he kept his head through it all.

Herbert Marshall has turned farmer; he's bought a forty-acre place in southern California, and optimistically thinks he's going to rest there till he has to go to work in "Portrait of a Rebel" with Katherine Hepburn.

But—his supervising the building of a house. And all of us who've ever owned a farm know what a menace it can be. You begin planting, and cultivating, and first thing you know, that farm is the only important interest in your life except for your family. There's no rest on a farm!

Gloria Swanson seems to have hit bottom so far as her career is concerned. But you never can tell about her; she has a way of bouncing back when people say she's through. Off the screen (and she's been off it a long time, since that last picture of hers turned out so badly) she looks young and pretty, and no doubt she'll be landing a good role first thing anybody knows. At least she's not reached the place where she's appearing in "Hollywood Boulevard," the picture that's to show us the old-timers way back to the time of Maurice Costello.

Of course it was a foregone conclusion that somebody would leap to the front with a picture based on the veterans' receiving their bonus money. Metro grabbed the idea for Wallace Beery, and had camera men planted all over the place shooting bits that could be woven in as local color.

You'll want to see W. C. Fields in "Poppy"; he makes it a grand picture. Rochelle Hudson and Robert Cromwell take care of the love story, but Fields is so delightful that most of us wouldn't care if the authors had omitted everything but his scenes.

If you girls have ever thought that you'd like to dance in a Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers picture, glance at this list of qualifications: RKO's dance director, Hermes Pan, will test all applicants by them before he selects the twenty-five girls who will work in "I Won't Dance."

A girl must be a whirlwind tap dancer who can do every step in a tap routine; she must be not more than five feet, five inches tall, not less than five feet, two. She must have a perfect figure and a face which photographs well. She must have personality that gets over to audiences, and must be able to average 99 per cent in a physical examination, so that she can stand ten-hour days of rehearsals without cracking. Oh yes—applicants who are brunettes will be given the preference, other things being equal, and if they aren't they'll have to wear wigs.

MY MOTHER WAS down from Kansas over the week end to see me. My brother and his family brought her down. He was feeling pretty good having just received $1,575 in bonus money. And by the way, I knitted a sweater and a pair of wristlets in that war, and haven't ever got a darn cent. Where's the adjusted compensation bureau? They think this looks like a pretty good town, and Mom especially is of the notion that we have a good newspaper.

MR. WEAVER, OF Childress, is here making plans for the next school year. He's the new Vocational Ag teacher. He's a tall good looking fellow girls, single, 25-years-old, and with no strings attached. Personally, I doubt if he lasts the Leap Year out.

JOE BLOCKER, THE main spring of the Texas Utilities Company here, is a gardener de luxe. Or at least he says that that is his garden in the Texas Utilities yard. When the garden gets worked, I don't know. Maybe Mrs. Blocker could shed light on it.

I SAW IN SOME PAPER where some editor is having fried chicken, "right out of his own garden". And if banty chickens ever get big enough to eat, I'll have fried chicken too. There's an old banty hen and six young ones with their den under the corner of the News office. She's about the size of a meadow lark and has a cluck that would do justice to an ostrich.

MISS MEADOWS STILL maintains that this West Texas weather is the coolest she has seen. — And she wants to know if there are still Indians in the canyons northeast of here. I referred her to Bob Stevenson; he'll have her sleeping with a body guard.

ONE OF THE CANDIDATES was doing a little electioneering down in Quitaque territory the other day. He handed a lady a card and told her he was running for such-and-such. "Well, I'm glad to know somebody is running for it", she said. "That one in office is sure a fizzle". — The joke of it is, the gent is running for re-election.

MAURICE FOUST is the official cigar dispenser of the week. Up to Monday noon, he had given away $5.00 worth of cigars. He says he never knew of so many fellows that smoked. And he says about half of them took them home to their wife and kids too.

WHY OPPOSE GOV. ALLRED?

It is a peculiar thing that a public official who makes good on promise and performance cannot be let alone and be allowed to devote his time to the people's business. But not so. Always there is some office-hungry person who comes out as a candidate on a trumped up, vote-getting, non-constructive platform. He has nothing to offer but himself, and usually winds up by getting nothing, but he does succeed in nagging and worrying the man in office, for the latter must answer various charges no matter how spurious and unfair they may be. How any candidate can expect to defeat Gov. Allred for a second term, and why the Governor should be defeated, are equally hard questions to answer.—Commerce Daily Journal.

WITNESSING UNDER PERSECUTION

LESSON TEXT—Acts 3:1-4:31. GOLDEN TEXT—We ought to obey God rather than men.—Acts 5:29. PRIMARY TOPIC—Brave Peter and John. JUNIOR TOPIC—Two Brave Preachers. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Brave Witnesses. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courageous Witnessing for Christ.

In I Corinthians 1:21-25, Paul sets forth the attitude of the world toward Christ and his gospel. The one who preaches Christ crucified must expect opposition, and even violent persecution. This attitude of the world, instead of being a deterrent, should be a spur to activity.

1. Peter Healing the Lame Man (Acts 3:1-11).

The place (vv. 1, 2). It was at the beautiful gate which leads from the outer to the inner court of the temple. This helpless man had been placed at the entrance of the place of worship where he might receive the sympathetic attention of worshippers.

2. The man (v. 2). This beggar was infirm from his birth. He was not more than forty years old (Acts 4:22). When he saw Peter and John, he asked alms.

3. The method (vv. 3-8). a. Gaining the man's attention (v. 4). Peter and John commanded him to look on them. He asked for money and got healing.

b. Peter commanded him in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth to rise and walk (v. 6). This was the very thing he had been unable to do all his life, but with the command went the ability to do.

c. Peter took him by the right hand (v. 7), gave impetus to his faith, not strength to his ankles.

4. The man's response (v. 8). Strength at once came to him. He stood, walked, leaped, and shouted praises to God.

5. The effect (vv. 9-11). The people were so filled with wonder that they ran together to behold this thing. There could be no question as to the genuineness of the miracle for the man had been a familiar figure for many years.

a. This helpless man had to be carried to the temple. Men and women out of Christ are so helpless that they need to be brought where the life of God can be applied to them.

b. Peter, taking the man by the hand, shows the manner of helping the lost. Christian witnesses should bring them to Jesus.

II. Peter Witnessing Before the Multitude (Acts 3:12-26). Though this miracle directed the attention of the people to Peter and John, Peter seized the opportunity to present Christ to the people.

III. Peter in Prison for Christ's Sake (Acts 4:1-4). 1. The leaders. Both priests and Sadducees joined in this persecution (v. 1, 2).

The priests were intolerant because these new teachers were encroaching upon their functions. The Sadducees did not believe in the resurrection, which was a vital part of the apostolic preaching.

2. The result (vv. 3, 4). Though they were held in bondage by chains, Christ continued to work. The number of believers greatly increased.

IV. Peter Witnessing Before the Sanhedrin (Acts 4:5-21). 1. The inquiry (vv. 5-7). The inquirers admitted the reality of the miracle but they wanted to know what it signified.

2. Peter's answer (vv. 8-12). With stinging sarcasm he showed them that they were not on trial as exiles, but for doing good in the name of Christ to the helpless and needy man.

3. The impression upon the Sanhedrin (vv. 13-21). a. They marveled (v. 13). They were made conscious that they were on trial instead of sitting as judges.

b. They took knowledge that Peter and John had been with Jesus (v. 13). c. They forbade them to speak in Christ's name (v. 18). They could not deny the miracle or gainsay the accusation brought against them, so they attempted intimidation.

c. Peter and John's reply (vv. 19, 20). They expressed their determination to obey God rather than men.

d. Their release (v. 21). Seeing that the people were on the side of the apostles, the rulers were helpless.

V. The Church at Prayer (vv. 23-31). As soon as Peter and John were set free, they hastened to their fellow disciples and told their experiences. They praised God for deliverance and prayed for boldness to speak the Word of God.

Pulling Together If the money getters would line up behind the knowledge getters, and all pull together in a definite well-organized plan, we'd raise the standards of human life higher than the most fantastic imagination ever dreamed they could be raised.

Loving Others One whom I knew intimately and whose memory I revere, once in my hearing remarked that, "unless we love people we cannot understand them." This was a new light to me.—Rossett.

Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club Hello Everybody!

"Ten Tons of Chain"

By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

HERE'S a detective yarn for you—a smuggling story, with all the good points of an old-time thriller, plus the additional good point that every word of it is true. Maybe some of you boys and girls have wondered what really goes on behind the scenes with the customs men.

Well, here's one of them to give us the low-down and spin us the yarn of an actual happening. He is John Lynch of New York city, a Distinguished Adventurer, and a heck of a swell yarn spinner.

John barges right into his yarn without any preliminaries. "Well," he says, "it was back in 1914. I was discharged from the Fifteenth United States Infantry at Tientsin, China, and got a job with the Chinese Maritime Customs in that port."

"My duties were to search all ships, coming and going, for smuggled goods and it's not as pleasant a job as you might think, because it entails crawling into all sorts of odd corners and out of the way places during the course of your search."

Customs Officers Ordered to Search the King Sing.

There you've got the whole picture in a nutshell. The picture, that is of the average working day. But there's always liable to be a day that's a little different from the average and it's just such a one that John Lynch is going to tell us about now.

It was in 1916, two years after he had entered the customs service. John came to work one morning and took his instructions from the bulletin board. "Officers Mitchell, Galvin and Lynch," read a notice on that board, "will search S. S. King Sing before departure."

It was all in the day's work, and there was nothing in that order that promised any excitement. Mitchell and Galvin arrived a few moments later, and the three of them began getting together their overalls and lamps. The King Sing was due to leave in half an hour, so they had to work fast. They went out to the ship and John began searching the fo'c'sle and crew's quarters while Mitchell and Galvin worked amidships and aft.

John Goes Sleuthing Into Anchor Chain Locker.

John prowled and poked around the crew's quarters, but he didn't find anything. Then he began looking for other hiding places in the fore part of the ship. He spotted a manhole that led down to the anchor chain locker, and that struck him as a likely place to hide contraband, so he lifted the cover and crawled down inside.

The anchor was down, and with it the fathoms of heavy anchor chain, so the locker was empty. But John noticed something that looked suspicious. Footprints—quite a bunch of them—on the floor of the locker.

Now the anchor chain locker isn't such a popular place aboard a ship. It's dark, and stuffy, and little frequented except by the anchor chain. "There's something going down here," John said to himself, and he began poking around in the darkness to see what he could find.

Shanghaied in the Bottom of the Ship!

Then—he found it. In the floor was another manhole leading to the bottom of the ship. He opened that and went down. In the compartment below, were several small wooden boxes. John picked one up and started to break it open, when suddenly he heard the rattle of chain above him. The crew were pulling in the anchor and the chain was pouring into the locker overhead.

John picked up his lamp and started up the ladder. It was no use. Already, a ton or more of heavy chain was lying on top of the opening. He yelled for help until his throat was hoarse, but the noisy rattle of chain deadened all other sound. The ship got under way, and there was John, in that stuffy hole, facing a journey of five days and nights to Shanghai, with no food—no water—and dog-gone little air.

At first, he nearly went crazy. Then, as the hours and days dragged on, he got so he didn't care. The foul air drugged him into a sort of a stupor. Hunger pains gnawed him inside, but he knew that wasn't the greatest of his worries. The big problem was water. John would have given all his savings for just one big long drink of it in those dark hours.

Five Days in an Opium Smuggling Cache!

After a while, hunger and thirst roused him from his stupor and he began to look around the compartment he was in. He hoped he might find some way of getting out, but he was disappointed. Then, idly, he turned his attention to the boxes on the floor. He broke one open and—it was full of opium. His hunch about those footprints had been right. There WAS smuggling going on. The opium in those boxes was worth a fortune.

Five days and five nights. Then they reached Shanghai. Overhead he could hear the anchor chain snaking out of the locker. Barely able to navigate, John climbed the ladder.

When he came to the second ladder, he almost fainted from weakness and thirst. He was all in when he tumbled out on deck. The first mate found him lying there and took him to his room. When the customs launch came, John told his story of the opium cache, and then he was sent ashore to a hospital for a much-needed going over.

"And I haven't been in a chain locker alone since then," he says. "It's not so bad when you have company."

Telling Hours by Bells Common Practice on Ships

On shipboard, for purpose of discipline, and to divide the watch fairly, the crew is mustered in two divisions, the starboard (right side, looking toward the head) and the port (left).

The day commences at noon and is thus divided: Afternoon watch, noon to 4 p. m.; first dog watch, 4 p. m. to 6 p. m.; second dog watch, 6 p. m. to 8 p. m.; first watch, 8 p. m. to midnight; middle watch, 12 p. m. to 4 a. m.; morning watch, 4 a. m. to 8 a. m.; forenoon watch, 8 a. m. to noon.

This makes seven watches, which enables the crew to keep them alternately, as the watch which comes on duty at noon one day has the afternoon the next day, and the men who have only four hours' rest one night have eight the next. This is the reason for having the dog watches, which are made by dividing the hours between 4 p. m. and 8 p. m. into two watches, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Time is kept by "bells," rung every half hour and beginning with each watch (except the one series of "bells" runs through the two dog watches).

The time recorded by the bells is therefore as follows:

Table with 3 columns: A. M. or Bells, P. M. Bells, P. M. Bells. Rows show time intervals from 12:30 to 8:00.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

Make up your mind that it is senseless to quarrel. You will meet many people that you dislike.

At Least Tolerate them will be Your Neighbor Many of them will be quarrelsome, conceited, ill tempered. Avoid such people, but tolerate them. They may turn out to be better than you think they are.

There is plenty of room on this earth for human beings of all sorts and kind.

Some of them will differ with you in politics, others in religion. Some may be downright ugly. But they are as they are made. Quarreling with them will make you unhappy, and you're going to need all the happiness you can find as you travel through life.

Some of them may be snobbish and "high hat". You can easily keep away from that sort.

But you will be thrown in with certain people whom you cannot avoid.

They may live next door to you, they may belong to the same church or club, they may intrude themselves upon you in many unpleasant ways.

It will do you no good to "get your back up" when they are around.

You will get only misery out of quarreling with them.

Just convince yourself that there must be that kind of people in the world with you, and that the easiest way is to be as cheerful as possible in their presence, eschew arguments with them, and let them go their own way.

You can kill mosquitoes and spiders and rattlesnakes and other creatures with which you may be thrown as you go on.

You can't kill human beings without getting into serious trouble. I do not contend that you ought to nurse odious people in your bosom, or try to reform them.

All I suggest is that if you must be with them you will not be unhappy about it, but get along as well you can.

And now and then you are pretty sure to find that somebody you thought was a pest was a really good sort when you came to know him well, and that you lost a good deal by not getting better acquainted with him.

Dislike reacts on the person who harbors it. Better figure that wherever you go you will find men and women who are constant irritations to you. Leave them alone if you can. If you can't, just be civil and pleasant and if they resent that keep out of their neighborhood.

The chief end of man I honestly believe is happiness.

You can't be happy when you are hating other people.

But toleration will put it out of their power to annoy you.

Try this plan for a couple of weeks. I think you will profit by it.

Mayonnaise may be kept for several weeks in refrigerator if a tablespoonful of boiling water is added to it before bottling.

Do not remove husks from green corn until just before putting on to boil. Corn spoils quickly, so it should be used as soon as possible after purchasing.

When cake or bread is too brown or is burned, grate gently with a fine grater (nutmeg grater preferred) until the cake or bread is a golden brown.

Sandwiches may be kept moist for 24 hours if they are wrapped tight as soon as made, in waxed paper, then placed in a box lined with a damp cloth and covered with a cloth. Keep in a cool place.

Mix salads with a fork instead of a spoon or ladle.

GIVE CHILD CHANCE TO ENJOY SUMMER

Schools are closed for the summer all over the State, and citizens interested in the welfare of energy and ability may go to waste if skill and patience are not employed in directing growing children in this play time season, according to Dr. John W. Brown, State Health officer.

"The civil, moral, and educational value of developing the natural talents of each child," Dr. Brown said, "has a far-reaching influence on the health, knowledge, and character of the future men and women of this State. The child needs not be directed in each little act that he performs. Let the summer vacation season be the time when the child has a chance to develop his own individuality. Many an artist, statesman, or competent executive has come from humble surroundings. But looking back of this, we probably will find that this outstanding individual had a chance to develop his natural talent.

"It has been observed that children grow faster during the summer months than at any other time. This is explainable, perhaps, because it is then that they are out in the sunshine and fresh air. Good health is essential to physical and mental growth. The prime factors of good health are care of the body, nourishing food of the right kind, regular habits, sufficient sleep, rest and play, and a happy state of mind.

"Of course, where the child lives; under what conditions, means a great deal as to the type of recreation he will find during the summer. The city child will look forward to trips to the country or hours spent in the play grounds and swimming pools. The child living in the country will have many things to do that will keep him in the sunshine most of the time.

"Let us all work toward the end that each child may feel at the end of summer that he has worked out some of his own ideas and dreams, and still developed his physical and mental capacities during these few months of play."
