AGGIE BRIEFS

By Finley R. White

News of vital importance to all farmers growing cane on "leave" acres this year has just been received. This news is in the form of an amendment to the regulation governing disposition of cane grown on leave out a Sudan. The amendment is rather lengthy and gets in a winding way to finally say "you can't barter or trade the feed grown on leave out acres." This ruling is and should be used as a guide to all you fellows who want to sell your government cane.

Lubbock Fair

At the last minute it was decided Briscoe should put on a county booth at the Lubbock Fair. The booth was put up Sunday and Monday A. M. before the fair opened at 9 o'clock. Every one in Briscoe County is invited to this booth while in Lubbock. Aside from the Briscoe County booth, there are lots of other interesting attractions at the fair this year. The hogs, dairy cattle, beef, and midway and a number of other things that are really worth seeing. If you haven't been down to Lubbock, Fair is open till Saturday night.

Subsidy Payment and Compliance

In the past few weeks have seen some things happening in big way here. The Agents office.

Receiving $75,000 in checks has been one of the pleasant duties we have had. Along with the checks have handed out cotton marketing cards.

While part of the office forces have been pretty well occupied with the check and marketing business, the big end of the work has had to keep their noses in the compliance papers. We are trying to be ready for payment on compliance just like we are ready on the subsidy payments. When the State Office says we're going to try to be ready.

Some compliance papers are not due for payment yet. If the amount measured out long on feed cotton we sent you a card telling how much of each to destroy. If you haven't done your part expect a check when the boys are getting theirs.

Trench Silos

Several farmers are making every effort to fill their trench silos now. If you don't have yours yet you'd better get busy. It won't spoil in a trench silo if you don't use it the next year or even the next.

Feed stored in a trench silo will be the most economical in the long run. Try it once and you'll be convinced.

MONTAGUE HOME SCENE OF LARGE GATHERING SUNDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Montague entertained many guests last Saturday and Sunday. Those present were Misses Annie and Nellie and Willie Bryant, Trinidad, Colo.; Nathan Montague, St. Pedro, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Artie Maxwell and children, Amarillo; Mr. Bert Bryant, Amarillo; Mr. Jess Bryant, Perryton; Misses Labe Montague and Wandell daughter, Canyon; Mr. and Mrs. Arvin Morton and Mrs. Morton, Pecos; Mrs. Elmer Ayres and DeLoe, Lockney; Miss Emma Stalder, Lockney; Mrs. George West, Lucille, South Plains; Mr. and Mrs. Willie West, Silverton; Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Davis and James, and Mrs. Clinton Brown, Mrs. E. Brown and Althea, Mr. Ed Davis, Mr. and Mrs. John Montague and Geraldine, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cantwell, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Fitzgerald, and Merle J. and Nelda Fay Montague, all Silverton.

SCHOTT OUTFIT TO JOB IN KNOX COUNTY

W. E. Schott, Jr. left Wednesday with his big tanking outfit for a contract job in Knox County on the "Big-4" Ranch. Schott has the contract for tanking on the entire ranch, which is known as one of the larger ranches of West Texas. This "Big-4" ranch is owned by Mr. Mart Ebling, who according to Schott, is the originator of the famous line of "Carnation" can milk, known the world over. Ebling still owns a large number of shares in the Carnation Enterprises.

Schott plans to return to Briscoe County after the Knox County work to finish up several jobs in that county which he has tentatively lined up. Since the purchase of the tanking outfit several months ago, he has built fifty-one tanks in Floyd, Matley, and Briscoe Counties.

The government Soil Conservation Program is slated to end December 31st, and all farmer-members, interested in having a tank constructed should get in touch with Schott before that time.

Application Made For New PWA Jail

CONSECRATION BY SACRIFICE

Dr. Arthur John Gossip of Scotland, in his book, "From the Edge of the Crowd", recalls an experience of his on the shell-torn battlefields of France. "One Day", he says, "I came on a dead laddie, lying all alone. Why, out of all the multitudes one saw, he so affected me. I do not know. But he was Scottish, and he was young and very handsome, and somebody's dearest. And, somehow, the dead eyes seemed to look up into mine with a solemn challenge; and the dead lips seemed to cry aloud till my heart heaved, 'This is my body, broken for you'. And there we had a communion service of a kind, just we three, the Lord Christ, the dead soldier, and my soul; and I swore that because he had died for me, please God, I would be worthier for that sacrifice. All over the world, this coming Sunday, Presbyterians will gather around the Lord's Table, in solemn remembrance that 'He died for us'. Every minute of the day, somewhere, this Holy service will be going on. We, in the Presbyterian Church of Silverton, will join this, great, unseen throng. You are cordially invited to join with us. We have no Presbyterian Table, it is the Lord's Table, and the family will not be complete without you. Come home this week end.

LIBRARY NOTES

Robin Hood

There was a time when the great mass of English people were unfree. They could not live where they chose, nor work for whom they pleased. Society in those feudal days was mainly divided into lords and peasants. The lords held the land from the king, and the peasants were looked upon as part of the soil, and had to cultivate it to support themselves and their masters. If a peasant did not like the way in which the lord or his steward treated him, he could not go to some other part of the country and get work under a kinder owner. If he tried to do this he was looked upon as a criminal, he was brought back and punished with the whip or the branding iron, or cast into prison.

It was in such conditions that Robin Hood lived and did deeds of daring such as we read of in the ballads and traditions which have come down to us. Because his name is not found in the records of lawyers, some people have doubted whether Robin Hood ever really existed. It may be that the unknown poets who made the ballads idealized him a little, that is, they described him as being more daring, more successful, more of a hero, perhaps than he really was; but that is what poets and writers are always expected to do.

While the author, Henry Gilbert, has used a few of the best episodes related in the ballads, he has also thought out other tales about Robin and he has added incidents and events which have been invented to give a truthful picture of the times in which he lived.

Just as King Arthur was the hero of the knightly classes of England in the feudal times, so Robin Hood was the hero of men of the poorer sort. The serf and the yeomen were tied to their fields and their unwary round of labor by the shackles of custom; any offence against the laws was visited with swift and harsh punishment. It was sweet therefore, in hours of leisure to hear songs about the bold outlaw, Robin Hood, who once had been as bound to set laws as they, but who fled to the freedom of the forest where, with cool daring and thrilling effrontery, he laughed to scorn the harsh forest laws of the king, and waged war upon all those rich lords and proud prelates who were the enemies of humble folk.

The book is of large type, illustrated in color and will give pleasure to old and young alike.

Two other books that have been requested "Scouting with Kit Carson" by Everett T. Tomlinson and "Sons" by Pearl Buck are expected next week.

Two books were donated to the Library this week.

One was "The Scotch Twins" by Lucy Filch Perkins, donated by Joyce Norrid and the other "Our Matyred President, the Life and Public Services of General James A. Garfield together with the History of his Assassination", donated by Mrs. E. C. Hallur of Blue Springs, Missouri.

The Floral Club will meet October 7 at the home of Mrs. W. H. Jackson with Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. B. P. Harrison joint hostesses.

WHITFORD - ROBERSON

Miss Imogene Roberson and Mr. Weldon Whitford of Plainview were united in marriage Saturday night, September 24 at 10:00 o'clock in a beautiful ring ceremony in the home of Bro. Ernest McCoy at Lockney with Bro. Claude McClung officiating. The bride was dressed in Teal Blue and carried black accessories.

Those present were: Miss Rubye Davis, Miss Annie May Bloxom, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Fore, and the Bride and Groom's parents.

Mrs. Whitford is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Roberson of Silverton and a graduate of Lockney High School and the Plainview Business College, at present she is employed with the Harvest Queen Mill and Elevator Company at Plainview.

Mr. Whitford is the son of Mrs. O. D. Whitford and attended Plainview High School. He is employed at the Hilton Hotel. The young couple will be at home at 808 West Fifteenth Street.

OLD-TIME WEST CAN STILL BE FOUND ON JA RANCH

The old West is passing. Very little of the romance and beauty, little of the hardships and privations that met the first settlers to the Panhandle country, are left. Modernism has crept in and has pushed out those things that the old time Westerner knew as his life in the early days. But in all of West Texas there is still a place where the old time practices, old time scenes and old time lore still exists. It is the gigantic JA Ranch that lies northwest of Memphis and is large enough to cover parts of four Panhandle counties.

The JA Ranch is one of the largest ranches in Texas and is the largest ranch all in one block. It extends from Claude on the north to Silverton on the south, a distance of some 80 miles and it is reputed to be approximately sixty miles across. Its area makes up around 425,000 acres of land.

The JA Ranch was at one time owned jointly by Col. Chas. Goodnight, pioneer rancher and cattleman of the Panhandle country, and John Adair of England. It was from John Adair's initials that its famous name and brand was derived. At the present, M. W. H. Richey of London, England, one of the eight heirs to this vast property, is the administrator. J. W. Kent is the superintendent and W. C. Beverly is the wagon boss or foreman.

West Texas ranch life in the early days was very picturesque, but in story and song and on the motion picture screen this life has been exaggerated far beyond its reality. But aside from these exaggerations there is still true romance on the ranches in the West—something of a permanent nature connected with the histories of ranches founded in the days of the early settlements of the Panhandle country. These ranches, such as the JA, were forerunners of the civilization we now enjoy in this great Plains country. Truly the history of the JA and other great ranches are the history of development of the West.

The first real measures of permanent civilization and development in the Panhandle began with the establishment of the JA Ranch which had its beginning in the late fall of 1887 when Col. Charles Goodnight, the "Father of the Panhandle" drove his first herd of cattle in to the Palo Duro Canyon. At this time he had in mind the establishment of a great cattle ranch, but needed more funds in order to continue in his venture. Backed by the financial aid of John Adair, Colonel Goodnight brought into existence the great JA Ranch, which at the height of its cattle activities was composed of 1,335,202 acres of grazing land, partly owned by the JA property and partly under lease. Old records indicate that 101,023 cattle roamed these more than a million acres.

Col. Goodnight came to know the Panhandle country in 1861-65 as a member of the Norris Regiment of Texas Rangers and while in this company he was on duty in this western portion of Texas. With this knowledge of the west he became a guide for Capt. Jack Cureton's company of 80 or 90 men who were supposed to have covered the Panhandle country. It is said that by the end of the Civil War, Col. Goodnight knew every watering place in the Panhandle-Plains country.

Col. Goodnight, at the close of the war, entered into several unsuccessful cattle buying and selling transactions in Wyoming and Colorado, so in 1876 with a small company of men and 1,600 head of cattle he moved into the Palo Duro Canyon. Arriving in Texas in the fall of the year, he had little time to get his men and cattle sheltered in the shelter of the brakes of the Palo Duro before winter set in. In entering the canyon it was necessary for him to drive the buffalo out ahead of the herd so as to afford enough grass and water.

Goodnight enjoyed two contracts with the Adairs, both of them proving to be financially successful. Before the expiration of the second contract, John Adair died. Col. Goodnight and Mrs. Adair entered into another contract which had much the same terms as the two previous ones. In 1877 at the expiration of the contract with Mrs. Adair, the partnership was dissolved and Mrs. Adair took the southern two-thirds of the ranch and Col. Goodnight took the northern third and established his own ranch. Later the town of Goodnight was built near his ranch property and named in his honor.

KING BEAUTY SALON TO OFFER SPECIAL PRICES

The King Beauty Salon is offering their annual Fall Specials on permanents. In another part of this paper you will find their ad and it's worth $2.50 cash if taken to the King Beauty Salon. Drop in and ask them the details of their specials.

PETIT JURY GOES TO WORK FRIDAY MORNING

The petit jury named in last week's paper is called for service for ten o'clock Friday morning, and will probably be rather busy for several days.

Civil cases to be heard Friday are Tony Burson vs. W. C. Harris; Tony Burson vs. S. C. Kitchens; and C. D. Reed vs. F. M. Hill will be heard October 3rd. Several other cases are to be heard some time next week.

Several criminal cases turned over by the Grand Jury last week are to be heard, and some divorce cases are to be settled.

RARE BIRDS

An extensive aviary enclosing a great variety of tropical birds, vivid of plumage and many of them rare to northern eyes, is to be a distinctive feature of the Brazilian exhibit at the New York World's Fair 1939.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Orville Lee Turner was pleasantly surprised on his tenth birthday, Wednesday afternoon, with a party given by Mrs. Agnes Turner and Mrs. Judd Donnell.

Games furnished entertainment for the guests after which each remembered Orville with a gift.

Christmas Is Coming—Also Thanksgiving

By T. C. Richardson, Secretary Breeder-Feeder Association

Turkey-time approaches, and turkey raisers who think ahead will come out best in the annual competition in supplying festive tables. It takes at least four to five weeks of good full feeding to put a good market finish on turkeys, and longer if they are not already in good condition and health. At this time, therefore, it is time to make plans for the home-stretch with turkeys which are to be sold for Thanksgiving. Three or four week later will do for the Christmas crop.

It is the finish, the last few pounds put on the breast and other thick parts of the turkey carcass, that determines the grade and the price per pound. It is in our favor for turning out a turkey crop in prime condition this season, and at a low cost. It takes 1 to 1 1/2 pounds less grain to make a pound of gain on good green range than without it, but if green range is lacking and all the feed were bought and the turkeys given all they could eat for four to six weeks before going to market it would still be profitable.

Nobody can forecast the ruling price, but everybody knows there will be a differential in favor of the prime and No. 1 grades. The grower has spent several months and some money producing a skeleton which has little market value as such. Properly "upholstered" with the few extra pounds of juicy meat which full-feeding produces in a few weeks, the framework has an added value of its own. Failure to pad it with juicy flesh is the reason some people fail to make a profit from turkeys.

Many of the best turkeys producers grade their flocks and full-feed only the best developed ones for Thanksgiving, and grade again before selling, holding back the lower grades for a later market. No turkey should go to market until it is free of pin feathers, which is a sign of maturity. Don't worry about over-weight—make them fat and let the weight be what it will.

"Turkeys are becoming so plentiful that consuming centers are getting more critical on the quality, and I believe that in the future we will find a greater spread between Southwestern Turkeys and Northern Turkeys unless our quality is improved," says A. W. Jacob, Extension Economist of the Oklahoma A. and M. College. The Northwest and the Pacific Coast have no better turkeys than the Southwest, but they have been crowding us out because they do a better job of finishing.

The feed crop in the Southwest is excellent and well distributed, and all grains and elements of mash feeds are cheaper than for several years past. Most of this section has also had good rains to keep the ranges green. Everything is in our favor for turning out a turkey crop in prime condition this season, and at a low cost. It takes 1 to 1 1/2 pounds less grain to make a pound of gain on good green range than without it, but if green range is lacking and all the feed were bought and the turkeys given all they could eat for four to six weeks before going to market it would still be profitable.

NEWS BITS

From Neighboring Towns

Cotton Gin Burns

The Cotton Center Co-op Gin 14 miles south of Hale Center was totally destroyed by fire last Tuesday night. A loss of some $25,000 was sustained by the owner, most of which was covered by insurance. The gin will be rebuilt as an all steel plant, according to the Hale Center American.

More Students

The Canyon News lists the attendance of West Texas State Teachers College at 906, which is a gain of 91 over last year's enrollment at the beginning of the year. The first day's enrollment showed that there were eleven more men than women enrolled.

Force At Matador

The Matador Tribune last week carried the announcement of P. B. Force (formerly of this place, who has opened a grocery store here. He offers a full line of groceries, fruits and vegetables in his new store.

WPA Stopped

According to the Turkey Enterprise, all WPA work in Hall County, including work at the sewing room, has been stopped for cotton harvest. No time has been set for the resumption of WPA work in that county.

Paving In Swisher

Actual work began on the caliche base on Highway 86 east of Tullia, last Friday according to the Tullia Herald. Included in the five miles of work is the building of the largest bridge in Swisher County. As soon as the first five miles is completed, it is expected to be continued to the Briscoe County line.

RADIO PROGRAMS SPONSORED BY HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT

In further effort to reduce the number of motor vehicle accidents in Texas, the State Highway Department is cooperating with the Department of Public Safety in sponsoring thirteen dramatic episodes portraying the very things that are happening on our public highways.

The programs will be broadcast each Sunday morning from the following stations:

WFFA-WBAP, Dallas-Ft. Worth 9:20 to 9:35.

WOAI, San Antonio, 9:15 to 9:30

KPRC, Houston, 9:15 to 9:30

Each of the programs presents a different approach in traffic control and contributory causes of accidents on our highways. The programs started September 4, and will run for thirteen weeks—every Sunday morning. You are invited to tune in and lend your support in every way possible toward reducing highway accidents.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK IS OCTOBER 9-15

Stressing the importance of continued vigilance on the fire prevention front, Marvin Hall, fire insurance commissioner, today urged State-wide observance of the annual Fire Prevention Week scheduled for October 9-15.

"Fire uncontrolled is one of the most serious problems that confronts us today," Hall said. "Each year its heavy toll in life and property is a black mark on the proud name of Texas. Only by constant and relentless vigilance on the part of every Texas citizen can we hope to reduce, and finally to eliminate the costly destruction of this economic enemy number one.

"Active participation in Fire Prevention Week by every Texas citizen will go far toward curbing losses and saving lives, and, since fire losses have a direct bearing upon the fire insurance rates, there are other practical benefits accruing from effective fire prevention.

"Fire Prevention Week is designed for every Texan interested in performing a distinct service to his State, to his community, and to himself." Hall said. "If we remember that the fire that NEVER starts will NEVER get out of control, and keep that thought before us each day of every year, then we will rightfully say that the practice of fire prevention pays big dividends in human lives and happiness."

'Sell-Out' of Czechoslovakia Fails to Erase War Dangers

By Joseph W. La Bine

Foreign

A month ago, long before Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler challenged the world at his Nuremberg Nazi congress, before Geoffrey Dawson's London Times editorialized on the advisability of editing Germany her way, Great Britain showed signs of weakening in the struggle to keep Czechoslovakia intact.

Fortnight ago, as Berlin and Prague veered on the edge of war, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain took his first airplane ride, speeding to Fuehrer Hitler's chalet at Berchtesgaden in a desperate effort to stave off a conflict that would certainly involve all Europe.

By this time it was apparent Europe's two greatest democracies individuals and corporations paying a higher tax rate.

For years, men have run for office on a promise of outlawing tax exempt securities, and next winter's congress will have a chance to fulfill the promise.

Labor

Mushroomed in little more than a year from 20,000 to 400,000 members, C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers of America is headed by Homer Martin, one-time preacher.

Fe-rful lest his pet union be torn asunder, disliking U. A. W.'s publicity, John L. Lewis finally secured Homer Martin's permission to intervene after the latter insisted U. A. W.'s autonomy be preserved.

Politics

Among candidates in Pennsylvania's primary election were Philadelphia Mayor S. Davis Wilson and Gov. George H. Earle, both running for Democratic senatorial nomination.

Appointed to investigate was a Dauphin county grand jury. Almost immediately Governor Earle sprang into action, summoned the legislature and rushed through special bills which would defeat the grand jury's investigation.

Fortnight ago this committee met, yawning politely over six days of perfunctory testimony. Not until Accuser Margiotti himself took the stand was there much interest.

Through immediate responsibility for the sell-out was directed first at Neville Chamberlain, observers soon placed it on France's doorstep. Actually, Premier Daladier had inspired the English conversation with Hitler, had urged Britain to back down on Franco-British agreement of April 29 to defend Czechoslovakia.

Still left to straddle was Czechoslovakia's unequivocal opposition to the scheme. Shouted Premier Milan Hodza: "In the name of the lawful authorities of this state I declare that . . . the government will defend completely the integrity of the state."

Still to be heard from were scores of witnesses including State Rep. Charles Melchiorre, Philadelphia Democrat, and Governor Earle himself, whose senatorial campaign will be decided a bare two months hence.

Still to be heard from was the state Supreme court which is deciding legality of the legislature's "rubber stamp" bills, one of which would remove District Atty. Carl B. Shelley from supervision over the grand jury quiz.

Three Times in Row President's 'Purge' Attempts Prove Futile

Roosevelt Unable to Transmit Personal Popularity to His Followers; Political Prestige Suffers Irreparable Damage; Forced Realignment Seen Complete Flop.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—There was quite a sermon, for me, in the telegram of congratulations that Virginia's great leader, Sen. Carter Glass, sent to Senator George upon the occasion of Senator George's victory in the attempted New Deal "purge" in Georgia.

"Senator Walter F. George, Atlanta, Ga. 'God bless you, Walter. Likewise, the sovereign State of Georgia.'"

"Signed, Carter Glass." To get its true meaning, one has to recall that Senator George was the third democratic senator, in a row, who was openly opposed by President Roosevelt; the third marked to be "purged" from the Democratic party and the third in a row to be victorious over the President's ill-advised attempt to dominate voters of a state, and, in due course, the congress of the United States, by personally picking the Democratic party nominees.

Next, Mr. George had been subjected to perhaps the strongest New Deal slap by the President, of any of the nine senators whom the President originally described as men behind the times. It will be recalled how Mr. Roosevelt, with Senator George on the platform, spoke his blessing of United States Attorney Camp at Barnesville, Ga., and announced his conclusion that Mr. George represented the past, not the future.

The third feature to be remembered is that Mr. George won, that former Governor Talmadge was second and that the New Deal candidate was third in the race, and that Mr. George's victory was so overwhelming that there was no need for a run-off primary—the method in the solid Democratic states of choosing between the two highest candidates from the primary vote. This means that a majority of the voters—more than 50 per cent—voted for Mr. George.

President's Prestige Has Suffered Heavy Damage Couple these facts with Senator Tydings' victory over Rep. David J. Lewis for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Maryland, and Sen. "Cotton Ed" Smith's substantial margin over Governor Johnston in South Carolina, and it appears to me that several conclusions are proper and justifiable.

All of these things, I predict, will happen, barring one thing. That one thing is war. If there is a general European war on the horizon, then we may expect a different course of political events in the United States.

What I am about to say, now, is not said in discredit of the President. It is merely voicing a fact in politics. If there be a general war abroad, and, more particularly, if American relations become involved in it, then Mr. Roosevelt unquestionably will appeal for solidarity of public opinion, for unanimous support for the government of the nation.

Political Destruction Of Roosevelt Threatened I know that Mr. Roosevelt is no more anxious to have the United States become involved in war than you or I. He realizes its cost in blood, as well as the disarrangement of world economies that follows.

Purge' but Step In Plan Of Political Realignment But there is yet another thought in this connection. I refer to the President's program for a realignment of political groups in this country. He has called for it; of that there is no obvious doubt.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Sugar, Sirup and Molasses; Describes Correct Use of Sweets, Peerless Body Fuel

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THERE is an old saying that good things come in small packages. That is particularly apt when we pause to consider the nutritive value of sugar in its various forms. For two scant tablespoons of sugar supply as much caloric value as does three-fourths cup of cooked farina, or one and one-third eggs, or the lean meat of one lamb chop.

Sugar is a highly concentrated fuel food which burns quickly and completely in the body furnace.

The Sugar Bowl is a Dynamo It has been said that our present day civilization could not have reached its present heights without the driving force that sugar gives to men and women.

Most fruits contain easily digestible sugars, the percentage in dried fruits ranging from 50 to 75 per cent. Milk sugar is also easily digested. Honey, molasses, corn sirup and the popular blended sirups are usually eaten in combination with other foods and are therefore unlikely to be consumed in too large amounts.

Corn sirup is often added to milk, fruits, vegetables, cereals, breads and desserts. It helps to make these foods more palatable and adds 60 calories with every tablespoon. It is so easily digested that it is often used in infant feeding.

Molasses provides significant amounts of both calcium and iron and is a good sweet for growing children. One and one-half tablespoons of molasses supplies as much calcium as one and one-half cups of diced carrots. It is a wise mother, therefore, who uses it in making the cookies that children like so well.

The mixed or blended sirups that are so popular with griddle cakes and french toast on cool fall days, also add palate appeal and energy values to the diet.

For in whatever form sugar is consumed, it remains nature's shortcut to press-the-button heat and quick, healthful stimulation.

A Real Stimulant While starchy foods require an average of from three to four hours for digestion, the body begins to burn a ration of sugar from 10 to 30 minutes after it is eaten.

It reaches the blood and muscles in a few minutes—as rapidly in fact as alcohol! That is why concentrated sweets, which are largely sugar, are so effective in combating fatigue.

Athletic coaches are well aware of the unique power of sugar as a stimulant and restorative of energy. That is why school and college youths are so frequently given highly sweetened beverages and other concentrated sweets before engaging in athletic competition.

Military leaders also appreciate how it increases endurance, and sweets are an important part of the soldier's ration. During the World War civilians were urged to reduce their consumption of sugar in order to make larger amounts available for the army, and most people found it difficult indeed to forego this agreeable food.

Indispensable for Most People Sugar is such an indispensable ingredient in cakes, cookies, pies, puddings and ice creams, it is so necessary in beverages, on breakfast cereals and with fruits that it seems a great hardship to do without it even for one meal.

We are extremely fortunate, most people will agree, to live in an age when sugar is so high in quality and so reasonable in price. In the Thirteenth century when sugar was introduced to England through India, it cost the equivalent of ten dollars a pound in the monetary terms of today.

Refined sugar is now priced at a few cents a pound and one pound supplies over 1,800 calories! Moreover, when you buy a branded product, backed by a well-known name, you have the assurance that quality and purity are of the highest.

Moderate Use Desirable Like all sources of great power, however, sugar must be handled with care. Too much sugar may prove as disastrous as too little. Possibly because of this, several false notions have grown up regarding this splendid food.

It is often charged that sweets cause indigestion, and it is true that when consumed in excess, they may ferment and result in irritation. Therefore, moderation should be the watchword.

But that is an excellent rule to follow in regard to all kinds of foods. For when consumed to excess, any food ceases to be beneficial.

It has also been charged that sweets are harmful to the teeth. But recent investigations suggest that the teeth are far more likely to deteriorate because the proper minerals and vitamins have not been included in the diet.

It is, however, desirable to restrict the amount of sugar given to children. That is because it quickly satisfies the appetite and may therefore decrease the consumption of other good and necessary foods, particularly those containing an abundance of minerals and vitamins. Children therefore can best take sweets in the form of sweetened puddings, gelatin, cooked and fresh fruits, and fruit juice and milk beverages.

The quick pick-up of sugar can

SYNOPSIS

When Rex Hale calls on Casper Kneeland, friend of his father, in New York, he finds him proudly successful but a little bit of a snob. He tells Hale of his death while insane, invites him to the summer at Halcyon Camp, and promises to be "useful" as his secretary. Hale is joined at lunch by Fred Ainsworth, an unpopular college mate, who suggests that Ainsworth has a plan for holding on to his money. He met at the train by Mrs. Wilbur Nash, whom he questions about the nature of the comfortable hospitality of Halcyon Camp. Ainsworth and Mrs. Wilbur Nash, middle-aged socialists, are in his room. Hale finds a note pinned to the rest of the group—Dr. Craig, psychiatrist of Halcyon Camp, is coming to Halcyon Camp, and beautiful but moody Rex drops in at his room, questions his reaction to love for his heiress and that Mrs. Forbes is down on Rex. The whole group seem to get into a rowdy party. Rex, who is down on Rex, suggests that Ainsworth has a plan for holding on to his money. ## CHAPTER III—Continued

"Doctor Craig goes in for research," Mrs. Spencer Forbes commented acidly. "He makes experiments. He has germs up there, probably he'll end by killing us all."

"Ruth!" Miss Hosanna's manner was preoccupied, her gaze detached. She had uttered the little protest in force of habit. Rex suspected she had not really taken in what her friend had said.

"I wouldn't put it past him," Ruth Spencer Forbes went on in her characteristic drawl. "No animal, human or otherwise, is safe here. I always believe he killed that dog and cat!"

"Ruth! It's dreadful of you to run like this. What will Mr. Hale think of us?"

Miss Hosanna was really aroused now, and almost annoyed, almost at quiet. She could never be really annoyed by anything her Ruth did for sizes.

"He'll think as I do, after he has served our dear doctor a little. Rex is a vivisectionist. Every time he looks at me I know he's considering my possibilities on the dissecting table. I told him one day they were far beyond him, and he agreed politely. He'd love to have a scalpel in your brain, Hosanna. He thinks you're a little touched on the question of food, and he's right."

"I don't know why you have to be like that," Miss Hosanna said.

"It's no reflection on you. He thinks we're all more or less crazy, but of course we are. What's your particular mania, Rex?"

"You."

Hale didn't know how she had named his first name, and he didn't care. He was enjoying his lunch. The race and his subsequent up had given him a fine appetite. A side interest he was watching Kneeland. Odd what a tragic look her charming face wore at times. He tried to catch her eyes and failed. She was staring straight before her with a rather fixed look.

"Will you take me for a walk this afternoon, Miss Kneeland?" he asked her. "I begin to feel the urge to know all about this region and traditions. I want to see the Water's Leap and the Water Fall and the Washing Spring."

"There isn't any Water's Leap or Washing Spring," Joan said practically.

"Then we'll make some. We've simply got to have them. Whoever heard of a camp in the woods that doesn't have a little thing like that? Rex had his tongue in his way. He had made him feel on the float this morning that she rather liked an irresponsible chatter.

"We'll make it two to three," she said.

"What this young man really means," Mrs. Spencer Forbes murmured, "is a quiet afternoon by the fire with a congenial mind. An older woman, say, who understands him and will let him talk out himself all the time."

"I can't resist that program," Rex admitted. "Shall we say the living-room, from four to five?"

Mrs. Spencer Forbes nodded.

"See that you don't wear him out in the meantime," she warned Joan. "He'll be strolling out of the dining-room with the air of having no further to offer either of them."

The walk was a slight disappointment to the young man. The wood was so narrow that two could not abreast in them—a flaw Hale once discovered and referred to tactfully. The road was too rough for good walking. They went forward in single file, perforce, and she showed her companion, rather plantarily, the spots where she was planting wild flowers. He expressed admiration, also perfunctorily. She was making him feel that his voice could not reach her across the vast gulch between them.

"They don't thrive," she admitted. "The soil is too sandy. Nothing does well in it but these evergreens."

"We'll have to get some richer earth for them and bring it here. I'll help you," Hale promised. "I'm quite a gardener. I wrote an essay once on how to tell the trees from the flowers. I can always distinguish them, unless I'm confused by seeing flowers on the trees. Pomegranates mixed me up badly. It was so hard to tell where the tree ended and the flowers began."

"Are you ever serious?" Joan asked suddenly.

"Not if I can help it. I'll try to be if you'd rather I was."

She shook her head.

"No. It's a pleasant change to have someone around who isn't worried and unhappy."

Rex, who was leading, stopped short, turned, and faced her.

"Miss Kneeland," he asked very seriously, "Why are you worried and unhappy?"

For an instant he thought she was about to tell him. She hesitated, then hedged.

"Why is anyone anything else?" she asked. "How can anyone be?"

"It's very odd to hear you say wretches like me slave in the hot city. It was almost a hundred in New York today. I don't believe it's more than sixty here this minute, even with the fire. I've worked in my shirt sleeves all day, and with my collar off."

"But think of the reward, sir," Ainsworth purred. "Rolling up more millions in your great factory while poor devils like Hale and Craig and me wonder how we're going to pay our laundry bills."

The effect of the comment was immediate and striking. It stopped Kneeland's outpourings as thoroughly as if it had been a hand on his mouth. He frowned, and turned to the fire.

Banks came in with cocktails. Kneeland aroused himself and drank two. Hale spoke of his woodland walk. No one was interested or pretended to be. In despair he threw a conversation ball to Mrs. Spencer Forbes. She could be depended on to catch and return it while there was life in her. They all went in to dinner while she was giving her impressions of Mrs. Wilbur Nash. The impressions were witty and entirely merciless. Miss Hosanna said "Ruth!" and smiled forgivingly. Mr. Kneeland checked his sister's warning discourse on raw oysters with a lifted forefinger, he left the table. It had been a hard job to keep those people going. He had experienced a ceaseless undersense that something was wrong.

In the living-room Joan was already seated between Miss Hosanna and her uncle. In desperation Hale drifted toward the piano.

"Must you sing, old man?" Ainsworth asked anxiously. "I know you always had the urge at Ithaca, but I thought you might have lived it down."

"I'm worse than ever."

Hale, who had had no notion of singing till then, resolutely sat down before the instrument. He had a pleasant baritone voice, fairly well trained, and he could play well enough to accompany himself without annoying his hearers. He sang a Spanish love song. Joan rose and came to the piano, anticipating the action of Mrs. Spencer Forbes, who obviously had the same impulse.

"I like that," Joan said. "Sing another, please."

He made room for her on the long piano stool, and she sat down beside him. He sang two more songs and then played a few Spanish melodies as an undercurrent to their talk. They said nothing of interest, but it was a pleasant half hour. At the end of it Casper Kneeland got up, came over to them, and dropped a hand on Hale's shoulder.

"Glad you have some parlor tricks, my boy," he commented. "They'll brighten us up. Just now I want you to come to my study for a chat."

In the study Kneeland waved Hale to an armchair, uttered a few platitudes, offered the young man a cigar, and took one himself. When the cigars were lighted and drawing well, he looked at Hale in frowning silence. Rex waited. He had long ago learned that when something important was to be said it was well to let the other fellow do the preliminary talking. He actually dreaded the first sentence, for he had a premonition of what it would be. It was what he had expected. Kneeland brought out, "Well, what do you think of us?"

Hale laughed.

"This is the fourth time I've been asked that question—and I've only been here forty-eight hours."

"Who were the other three?"

"Ainsworth was the first, I think."

"He would be," Kneeland commented grimly. "Who were the others?"

"Mrs. Spencer Forbes and Mrs. Nash. There was nothing personal in the question, I think. They were simply making talk."

"Perhaps. But I'm doing more than that. I want to know what you really think of the people here."

"Well, sir, since you put it that way, I can only say they don't hit me as quite normal. They've all got something serious on their minds. Most of us have, but we usually have the power to throw it off at times. These people haven't. They seem—I suppose obsessed is the word I want. Perhaps that's too strong. Perhaps it holds more than I mean. But they're all under high tension."

"You mean they're all worrying about something?"

"Not necessarily. In fact, hardly at all. Ainsworth certainly isn't worrying. He's having a grand time worrying everybody else. Craig is entirely selfish and self-centered. I suppose he's out for success and can't think of anything but that. Certainly he doesn't seem able to talk about anything but the human brain and its vagaries. Still, I don't get the feeling that he's worried."

"I was just saying that this is the life!"

that," he told her. "You have so much to live for."

"Have I? That shows how much you know about it."

She had closed a door in his face and had closed it definitely. Gone was the understanding of those moments in the sea and on the float only a few hours ago. He took his cue.

"I'm rather cheerful myself," he said easily. "It's natural. I came back to America feeling forlorn and expecting to be at loose ends all summer. Then everything changed with a rush. I called on your uncle, he invited me here, and here I am. It's incredible luck."

She gave him a strange look.

"Do you think so? Do you really expect to be happy at Halcyon Camp?"

"Of course I do."

"Then be happy—if you can."

He turned in silence, and continued the journey along the narrow path. A repentant voice came from behind him.

"I was a beast," it said. "I'm sorry. Do be happy. I really want you to be."

"Thank you."

"You know," she went on slowly, "you're so cheerful, when all the rest of us are so down, that it's a sharp contrast. Sometimes it's a pleasant one. Sometimes it's a strain."

"I see."

Neither spoke again for some time. Then Joan returned to the subject of the wild flowers. They both held to it, as to a blazing trail, till they got back to the house.

and Joan asked her uncle if he would take her out in Bert's motorboat the next day, if Bert would lend it. He said he would but that it would be a crime, with three young fellows around the house eager to do it. Ainsworth remarked pleasantly that he was very fond of motor-boats but that he had never been able to afford one. No one paid any attention to him. Hale was talking with an almost desperate sense of the need of doing so, and Joan and Herbert backed him up. Mrs. Spencer Forbes tossed in an occasional remark that was like a fire-cracker thrown into a small grate. The talk was almost animated. Even Craig was suddenly moved to take part in it. Something that was said by Herbert reminded him of a peculiar psychiatric case on which he discoursed at great length. It fascinated Ainsworth but did not appeal to Herbert or Joan. Both listened to it in blank silence. Hale checked further medical reminiscences by resolutely engaging Mrs. Spencer Forbes and Joan in an argument about a book all three of them had read. It worked, but he palmed his brow as

Bermuda Mailmen Add Courtesy to Speed Record in Delivery of Mail on Island

The old adage that "The Postman Always Rings Twice," is topped in Bermuda by the fact that this colony's postmen frequently deliver mail within 20 minutes after letters are posted. Furthermore His Majesty's carrier thanks the receiver for accepting the mail—not only once but probably twice.

Mailmen in the coral islands in the mid-Atlantic are an extremely courteous lot. The cool, white houses that border the winding coral stone highways are visited by island mailmen who embody typical Bermudian courtesy in both manner and speech.

There are 31 postmen on the islands who know by heart all the family names in Bermuda that would confuse the average postman to the point of distraction. Rarely do the Outerbridges, the Tuckers, the Darrells, the Smiths, the Coopers and the Trimmings get the wrong mail. The islands postmen know all the initials that go with the old islands' names, and letters never go astray.

In Bermuda, where traffic is confined to bicycles and horse and carriage, although the swiftest transportation of the century, airplane service, is utilized in reaching the islands, the postoffices have set up quite a few records for speed in mail delivery that American postmen would find difficult to beat.

Delivery is made in less than six hours over the greatest distance on the islands, which extends from St. George's to Somerset, 24 miles in all.

Secret Order of the Apple

Several hundred Norman apple-growers recently organized into the Secret Order of the Apple, says a Rouen, France, correspondent. It has high signs, passwords and an official song; it stages colorful ceremonies when new knights are initiated into its mysteries; it also has an elaborate and impressive ritual, wherein the apple episode in the Garden of Eden is evoked, but Eve, instead of being blamed, is praised for eating the fruit which Adam offered her. Every Knight of the Apple must promise, on his honor, to be true to Normandy and to Norman products, particularly apples and cider.

Aunt Tibby's Trunk

By D. J. WALSH

"BUT, Mazie," remarked Bert Howard to his pretty little wife, "it isn't quite fair that Aunt Tibby should want to come back so soon; it's less than three weeks since she left, and she had been here six months. I have no objections to your aunt; she's a nice old lady, if a bit eccentric, but you always work so hard entertaining her that you wear yourself out. Between worrying over her comfort and fussing about the safety of that old cowhide trunk, home becomes a place of torment for me instead of a haven of rest."

And then Mazie, whose bobbed crown of glory was decidedly of the shade beloved by Titian, and with a temper to correspond, replied thus: "If you were properly interested in the welfare of your family you'd want to keep Aunt Tibby here all the time! Do you fancy that she herself would be so particular about that old cowhide trunk, as you are pleased to call it, if it didn't contain valuables? She told me—no, I won't say she exactly told me, but she gave me to understand, and I know all the family have the same impression—that in it she carries her stocks and bonds. She has bequeathed the trunk to the one in whose home she happens to die."

"Mazie!" exclaimed Bert, putting his arms around his wife, "waiting for 'dead men's shoes' is sorry business! Do what you can for your aunt without making your family unhappy, but put all such ideas as you've just mentioned out of mind; they are unworthy of you!" and Bert stopped to kiss his wife good-by.

The first evening of Aunt Tibby's arrival Mazie began, "Barbaral do sit still! You'll make Aunt Tibby nervous!" or "John! don't walk so heavy!"

Aunt Tibby had been with them several weeks when she came down with a cold. The doctor called pronounced the trouble pneumonia. "Which at her age," said he (Aunt Tibby was 86), "is a serious matter. You had better get a nurse." Aunt Tibby had been so humored by her niece, however, that the nurse could do little to suit her, and Mazie was obliged to fetch and carry, to run up and down stairs until, ten days later, Aunt Tibby sank into her last sleep.

After the funeral the relatives who had gathered from far and near demanded that the will be read at once. So the old cowhide trunk was brought down to the living room and opened in the presence of all. It contained Uncle David's army uniform, a few books, half a dozen packages of old newspapers—and a long letter written by Aunt Tibby herself. This was addressed to her relatives in general and was a sort of confession. In it she stated that her income since Uncle David's death had been limited to a pension of $6 a month. That in some way the story had been circulated that this old trunk contained valuables and she had never contra-

On the Highway

It is a curious trait in human nature that we will take off our hats when a woman enters an elevator, and be most apologetic if we bump into somebody inadvertently; but the instant we get our hands on a steering wheel we damn all mankind—woman and man alike.

Too often, we are inclined to look upon traffic guides and regulations as irritating restrictions designed primarily to keep us from having a good time, when the truth of the matter is, they have been devised solely for our convenience and comfort.

dicted it, fearing if she told the truth some one might put her in an old ladies' home, an institution she detested. She trusted her relatives would pardon her and that the old trunk would be kept for her sake; that it might prove a magic casket to the owner, as it had to her.

The trunk was left with her as she was the only person who displayed the least desire to possess it. After everyone had departed she threw her arms around her husband's neck and cried, "Oh, Bert, can you ever forgive me?" Judging by the sigh of contentment she uttered Bert's answer was satisfactory.

Aunt Tibby was right; the trunk did prove a magic casket for Mazie. It stood in the upstairs hall where she had to pass it many times a day and whenever she was seized with envy, stubbornness or a desire for finery she could not afford, one glance at the old trunk was sufficient to dispel such feelings in a twinkling.

I HEREBY RESOLVE—that this fine shall remain in the Briscoe County News until our city managers start a little constructive work toward surfacing our streets, or at least until the death of Yours True-ly. Dated this 9th day of June, 1938. (I've been wanting to know for a long time, how long a knotype slug will last.)

I GUESS YOU FOLKS thought that I had forgotten the street paving. And I almost had until I went over town Tuesday and saw the outfit for fixing them. I don't know just how it works but H. Roy Brown assembled it in the middle of the street and now has it ready to go. If I hadn't known better, I would have thought it was a grain binder. W. W. Martin will operate it and work will start immediately.

STEP RIGHT UP men and ladies and get the most wonderful preparation ever known to man or beast. Will cure anything from ingrowing toenails to callouses on the head. Only one dollar per bottle, with one free. The cost of this wonderful preparation is almost unbelievable. Fifty gallons of water it takes to mix fifty gallons of this wonderful tonic. As we said before it will cure anything, so don't consult your doctor, or drug store—buy a year's supply, etc. etc. . . . there's one born every minute—but the medicine man isn't one of them.

ARE WE GOING TO fight? Of course we are . . . if Uncle Sam needs us. A person can kid himself all he pleases about the U. S. not ever going to war again but with newspapers and radios 48 hours is all that would be needed to put the U. S. in fighting frenzy.

WALTER WINCHELL ended his last Sunday's broadcast with this statement, "If the citizens of the U. S. will stop thinking of the wars we have WON in the past, and start thinking about the LOSS we may sustain in the future—we won't have war nearly as quick."

AMERICANS ARE a cocky lot. Take any six of us and we start off saying, "No, we won't go to war again!"—and in the same breath we brag about how quick we could get the job done if we wanted to.

PERSONALLY, I hope that they get in there right away and knock Mr. Hitler's ears down. If they give him another year or so, it will be a repetition of the World War and we'll be drug in to it in spite of all we can do.

FROM "GRAHAM Crackers" in the State Line Tribune, we clip the following:

"Another good thing about having your kinfolks pay you a visit is that the wife does not insist on serving you with left-overs while they are present."

Now, I hate very much to differ with the President of our Pan-handle Press Association, but I have had one experience in my life which proves that the 'cracker' doesn't apply in the Hahn family.

MY MOTHER-IN-LAW spent Thanksgiving vacation with us a year or so ago, and we had turkey. This bird proved to be one of the most versatile and longest lasting birds ever purchased. Ma Whitney was (I think) giving the wife lessons in economy. That bird reappeared in at least twelve different forms during the next four days. I can't remember what they all were but I well remember the fourth day when we had "turkey neck on toast"—and for breakfast.

T. L. ANDERSON wants me to run a card of thanks this week, thanking folks for the nice assortment of cats and kittens that have been dropped off in front of his house during the past few weeks. He is in the wholesale cat business, so as to speak.

WELL THEY DID IT . . . this bunch of youngsters from Silverton, last Friday showed Plainview who ate the cabbage. They won the opening game of the season 6-0 solely because they were in the best shape of the two teams, and because they outcharged and outplayed the heavy Plainview team.

THESE BOYS WE have been seeing around town, and thinking of as "kids" have grown up. From now on they are men. And if you say "kids" you better smile. They are really plenty mean when they get that suit on. Silverton never had a time-out for injuries or for their "wind". Plainview had at least a half a dozen men who were retired to the sidelines because they were not in shape physically.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that they won, the Silverton boys have room for plenty of improvement. Signals were mixed up several times, many fumbles—and while I think of it I'd like to know what that play is where the boys all take out, and nobody receives the ball.

PLENTY MORE YARDS would have been added had the backfield boys done a little more side-stepping and stiff-arming. We've got the speed in the backfield—now add a little shifty ball carrying and we've got something.

EVERY BOY DESERVES mention. But according to game statistics, Rampley made the most yards from scrimmage, Perry played the best game in the line and Hank Brown was the outstanding player of the game. A. J. Rowell and Grady Martin deserve special mention in the line, and Walker made some nice runs in the backfield.

WHITESIDE OWES Hank a dollars worth of something. Ware Fogerson a cleaning-pressing job to Perry, and Yours True(?)ly a ream of paper to Rampley. Besides these prizes, Jake Honea and I. S. Bogy promised the team $5.00 if they won—both have paid off.

SEVERAL HAVE joined in this week with some little prize for outstanding play of one sort or another—here they are:

Whiteside, $1 trade for most valuable man of the game.

Hahn, 50c cash for every man making touchdown.

L. T. Wood, Dixie cups to every boy who plays (in case we win.)

Scott Smith, haircut for first intercepted pass.

G. A. Richardson, $1.00 cash for intercepted pass for touchdown.

Kelsay, 50c cash for best blocker.

Cranberry, 50c cash for punts blocked.

Ware Fogerson, cleaning and pressing job for man making most tackles from kick-off.

BILL NEWMAN REALLY takes good care of his relatives. And keeps in close touch with them too. For instance W. H. Newman of Cheyenne, Wyoming, whom he had not seen for several years, drove in last week and rented a cabin from "Uncle Bill" . . . And had it rented and occupied before Mrs. Newman recognized him. . . Yankee blood or no Yankee blood I think that is carrying it a bit too far when a man will charge his own nephew for a night's lodging.

Firestone CUTS THE COST OF TIRE SAFETY

NOW YOU CAN BUY A FIRESTONE GUM-DIPPED TIRE AS LOW AS $7.60
4.50-20

RIGHT now when you use your car more than at any other season of the year—when you want and need greater protection against blowouts, punctures and skidding—Firestone provides this three-way safety at NEW LOW PRICES. Now that it costs so little to make your car TIRE-SAFE car owners everywhere should replace dangerously worn tires with NEW, SAFE Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires, built with these patented and exclusive construction features:

Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process by which every fiber of every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber, counteracts tire-destroying internal friction and heat which ordinarily cause blowouts. Nine extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord.

Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords under the tread, another patented Firestone construction feature, protect against punctures.

Scientifically Designed Non-Skid Tread made of tough slow-wearing rubber, assures safer stops and longer non-skid mileage.

With the low first cost, the extra safety and the long mileage of Firestone Convoy tires, you can no longer afford to take chances on unsafe tires. Join the Firestone Save-A-Life Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Convoy Tires—the safest tires that money can buy at these low prices.

Only recently leading citizens of the Panhandle including Memphis and Hall county people, have been busy raising funds to erect a monument and other memorials at the grave of Col. Goodnight at the town of Goodnight.

At the time of the division of the famous JA Ranch, the Adair and Goodnight holdings, lands under lease and those that were grazed without lease covered more than a million acres in Floyd, Hall, Briscoe, Donley, Armstrong, Randall and Swisher counties.

When Goodnight and his first herd and men came to the Panhandle from Colorado they were constantly in danger of Indian raids and on several occasions before they could properly fortify themselves in the semi-protection of the Palo Duro, cattle were killed in savage raids.

Today, the ranch, less than half its original size, still clings to the custom and practices of the old west. A casual visitor within its borders finds the old chuck wagon not far from the branding pens with the camp cook barbecuing beef on a spit over a bed of live coals. The remuda with its mounted wrangler slouching in his saddle keeping the cowboys' extra horses under control is still an important part of the JA equipment. Each cowboy has his 12 horses which they take with them when they go out in May and stay on the range until November. Their departure is occasioned by a dance and their return is celebrated with another, after the boys have shaved off their seven-months growth of beard.

Picturesque scenes can be found anywhere along the 15 mile road that leads through the brakes from the ranch's front gate to the headquarters. A heard of three hundred whiteface cattle, rounded up from the branding pen, may be seen being driven through the shallow waters of the Salt Fork of the Red River by a happy-go-lucky bunch of singing cowhands twirling their ropes.

However in the midst of scenes such as these, true pictures of the old West and old Western customs, there is the blunt and absolute contrast of modernism. The administrator owns and flies his own airplane and transacts business all over the southwest flying from point to point. Modern automobiles, modern conveniences at the ranch house, modernism stands out everywhere in this half-million acre empire of the old West.

SLEEP PRODUCERS MAY BE HARMFUL

"Thirty-five years ago, a German scientist produced a derivative of barbituric acid possessing hypnotic qualities. For it was considered as non-habit forming and harmless, and the type of drug was sold freely over the counter without a doctor's prescription. But more recently the medical profession has realized that barbiturates such as allonal, amytol, luminal, vironal, neonal et cetra are far from harmless and definitely habit forming when used indiscriminately," warns Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health officer.

"It is true that these slumber-producing drugs play an important part in certain insomnia conditions, as well as in the promotion of sleep when pain makes it impossible to obtain it otherwise. However, it is one thing to have this type of drug prescribed by a physician and administered under his supervision and quite another to employ it regularly without professional sanction.

"It cannot be too strongly stated that the prolonged use of those sleep-inducers can produce serious reactions including skin infections, impairment of speech and gait, paralysis of the eye muscles, and extreme cases have been known to cause death. Plainly, any drug that such possibilities should not be self-administered by the general public.

Moreover, it should be understood that insomnia is a symptom of an underlying condition which may be due to any one of a variety of psychological or mental causes. The absurdity of habitual self-administration of any hypnotic or remove insomnia becomes apparent.

"Consequently, if the temptation arise to use a sleep-producer drug on the say-so of a friend, it should be avoided. And if already relying on sleep-producing medication, the brakes should be applied at once with the assistance of your family physician," Dr. Cox further advised.

"To quote a recent author on this subject: 'The only safe rule regarding sleeping pills or potions is to realize that if anything of that kind is needed, one definitely needs a physician's advice first.'

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. © Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for October 2 THE ONE TRUE GOD

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:2, 3; Isaiah 45:22; Mark 12:28-34; 1 Corinthians 8:4.

Today we begin a series of studies which should be of unusual value, a consideration of the Ten Commandments in the light of the teachings of Jesus and related New Testament passages.

The lessons begin at the right point, for the first commandment properly deals with our conception of God. What a man thinks about God determines his entire outlook on life.

I. The Truth Stated—There Is One True God (Exod. 20:2, 3). Jehovah means "I will be what I will be," or "I am that I am."

There are many things concerning which we do not speak dogmatically. There are even Christian doctrines about which spiritual and earnest men may honestly differ, but regarding God we say with absolute assurance and complete exclusiveness—there is but one true God.

II. The Truth Explained. 1. God is our Deliverer (Exod. 20:2). He who brought Israel out of the bondage of Egypt is the one, and the only one who can deliver men from the bondage of sin.

2. God is our Saviour (Isa. 45:22). Again note that "there is none else" who can save.

It was for this reason that Jesus replied to the question of the scribe as He did, directing the whole life of man into love toward God and his fellow man.

It is worthy of careful note and emphasis in our teaching that the recognition and appreciation of this truth on the part of the scribe brought him near to the Kingdom of God, but not into it.

4. God is our Father (1 Cor. 8:4-6). Paul is speaking of the eating of eat offered to idols, and points out that such false gods are really nothing.

The true God is a Father, yes "the Father," of whom are all things and in Him (v. 6). As there is but one God, there is also but one Lord, Jesus Christ through whom the one God has wrought all things, and through whom we also come to God.

"Death's Sleigh Ride"

HELLO EVERYBODY: Kathleen Donovan of Chicago is bringing us a regular-raiser of a yarn—the tale of an adventure that happened to her in 1888, when she was a little girl.

Those days, Kathleen lived on a farm in Alcona county, Michigan. Her mother and dad, and her five brothers and sisters. It was a wild country up there then.

Hunters Shunned Desolate Forest. There were thousands and thousands of acres of forest, Kathleen where even the most daring hunters never camped. Settlers few and far between. On the borders of this wild tract were just settlers, living along a road that was fairly passable.

Kathleen says that winter hung on until an unusually late date in the year 1888. The cattle in the neighborhood were on short rations, and the wild life in the woods was beginning to feel the lack of hunger. It was not an uncommon occurrence, on those cold nights, to hear timber wolves howling, calling comrades to join in a raid on some farmer's barnyard.

The nearest neighbors lived five miles away, and there wasn't much going between families. But one Sunday morning, in March, a family over to Kathleen's home to spend the day, bringing their own sleds with them.

They had walked the whole distance in the morning, before the sun came to melt the snow, and intended to remain until evening when the road would freeze again, and walk home by moonlight. Horses were scarce in Michigan in those days, but Kathleen's dad had just bought a fine, young team.

Kathleen's Dad Suggested a Sleigh Ride. They were splendid for driving as well as on the plow," Kathleen said and my father suggested that if our guests would remain until 9 o'clock, when the mud and slush on the road would be well packed, he would drive them home and we children could have a sleigh ride.

Well, sir, that plan was agreed upon. When night came, they started out, dad and the neighbors on the seat and the kids burrowing into the straw pile in the back of the sleigh. After an hour's ride they reached the friend's house, stopped for a cup of hot milk, and then started for home again.

The kids were enjoying the ride. The moon was bright and the sleigh slid easily over the frozen road. They had covered about a mile distance when, away to the south, they heard the long, piercing of a wolf. Immediately, other wolves took up the cry. Inside of a minute it seemed to Kathleen as though the whole forest were filled with their terrible howls. "I heard my father exclaim, 'My God!' and from that moment on children knew it was a race for our lives. There were three of us had taken the little excursion—my brother, who was about 10, my sister, who was 12, and I myself, then about 8.

A Race for Life With Hungry Wolves. My sister covered my brother and me with straw and told us to get under the seats. The horses seemed to understand our terrible fear and fairly flew over the road.

"From the first alarm, there was no need to urge them. I had seen the flash of fire from their feet when they bounded forward. When we were about two miles from home we could see dark shapes on the long straight road a scant half mile behind us."

The kids huddled on the straw in the back of the wagon. None of us spoke until Mary, Kathleen's older sister, put her head down and whispered: "When I jump, don't tell father. Let him keep right on."

Kathleen stared at her sister. She was going to sacrifice herself to save the wolves for a few moments. Kathleen caught Mary and clung to her. Her brother told Mary he would certainly scream if she jumped. Meanwhile the wolves were gaining! The horses were doing their best, but they had a heavy sleigh to pull and the wolves were running free. They were less than a quarter mile behind now, and the sleigh was a mile from home.

Mother Was Handy With Shooting Iron. The sleigh creaked as it lurched along the road. They were almost at home when they heard the report of a rifle. Then, they heard a second shot. Thus, they knew that their mother, at home, had heard their terrible howls and was ready to help them.

As they rounded a turn in the road, they saw a great bonfire built near the spot where the sleigh would turn into the yard. A wolf is afraid of fire, and they knew if they reached that blaze alive, they'd have a chance. As they came closer to home, they could see Mother standing near the fire. Dad owned two fine repeating rifles—the first that had ever come into the locality—and Mother had brought out both of them.

Closer and closer they came to the blaze. And still the wolves howled on them. As the sleigh turned into the yard and pulled up beside the fire, Mother threw one of the rifles to Dad. And together, firing shot after shot, they held the pack at bay. Kathleen says there must have been at least 30 wolves in the pack. They circled around the big fire, snarling and snapping, while Mother and Dad blazed away with the guns. When nine had been shot down, the pack broke and scattered. And the next morning two more were found dead a short distance away.

When the wolves were gone, the horses were cared for. Says Kathleen: "There was a look of wonderful thankfulness on my mother's face as we gathered around the kitchen fire, but all she said was, 'Children—your prayers. And then to bed.'"

But I wonder if any one of those kids did any sleeping? How about Kathleen?

HERE'S REAL FISH SCHOOL

No textbook information for the marine zoology class at the University of Miami, Fla. Students under Prof. J. F. Pearson, who created the unique department, actually "go to school" in an undersea classroom where marine growth is studied at first hand. Equipped with diving helmets, operated from a special yacht, students get a different location for study each trip. Naturally, they're the envy of the entire school. Here a pretty coed poses on the ladder while a fellow student places the heavy helmet over her head. Advanced students work as deep as 50 feet below surface.

Picture Parade

No, ocean water isn't quite this clear. This threesome of advanced pupils are testing their underwater skill at Ocala, Fla., on the floor of Crystal Springs lake. One tried an undersea camera while himself acting as a camera subject.

There's no trouble catching fish here. This young lady reaches out and plucks one from the air (excuse us, water).

Undersea study isn't always peaceful. This turtle is one of the many formidable foes encountered down there. Right now, however, he looms as a fit subject for a soup bowl. The student isn't scared.

Brought up from the ocean floor, this has all the earmarks of a porcupine. However, it's only one of the hundreds of forms of marine growth which students pluck right from the sands of their "classroom."

Color and Economy In This Jiffy Afghan

A jiffy crochet with large hook and Germantown wool—it takes about half the wool needed for a regular afghan! And a lovely fluffy afghan you'll have. Pattern

Pattern 6040.

6040 contains directions for making afghan; illustration of it and of stitches; materials required; color schemes.

To obtain this pattern, send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th Street, New York, N. Y.

Please write your name, address and pattern number plainly.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

M. S. writes: "I followed the directions in Book 2 for a fabric hat and it was so satisfactory that I wonder if you could tell me how to use a piece of woolen material that I have to make a hat for my little girl who is just starting to school?"

Here is a cunning schoolgirl hat that's easy to make. You need two pieces of goods—one for the hat and one for the lining. They may either match or contrast. Each piece should be 1-inch longer than the measurement around the largest part of the child's head.

The depth of the pieces should be half their length. The diagram at the upper right of this sketch shows how to make a paper pattern for the hat. Cut a square piece of paper 1/2-inch wider and deeper than half the head measurement. Mark point A on the right edge half way between the top and bottom as shown. Points B and C are marked at the center top and bottom of the paper. The dotted lines are guide lines to help shape the curved lines between A and B and C and D. Point D is the center front of the top of the hat pattern and is placed on a fold of the goods in cutting each of the two layers. The diagonal line from A to C is the center back seam line.

Stitch the back seam of both hat and lining and press it open as at E. Now, place the two pieces right sides together and stitch as at F. Turn right side out, baste along turned edge and stitch as at G. Gather the top as at H and finish with a ribbon or a stitched fabric bow and a feather.

NOTE: Use what you have on hand to make things of real value. You can save by doing—instead of doing without. Mrs. Spears planned Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery—to help you. Every page contains complete, clearly illustrated directions for things you can make at almost no cost. Enclose 25 cents and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.
