ber. This year a slight increase was noted by doctors in September, with a larger rise recorded for October and the first week of November. Fever, headache, sore throat and vomiting are early signs of invasion by the scarlet fever germ. The incubation period, or the Phase between exposure and onset of illness, is usually from two to six days. On the second day, as a rule, a rash appears which may cover the entire body The rash of scarlet fever is usually but not always present. The patient who has symptoms and signs of the disease, but without rash should be isolated as well as the patient who shows the rash.

A disease such as scarlet fever is dreaded whether in a severe or mild form, because of the frequent development of secondary complications especially those of septic nature. Among complication, the most frequent are those affecting ears, neck glands, kidneys or the heart. Convalescent human immune serum prepared in laboratories can be used in many cases to prevent and modify the disease.

Scarlet fever is a disease of the colder months and may be expected to continue until late spring. The current increase in prevalence is not cause for alarm but emphasizes the importance of early recognition, prompt reporting of cases and careful isolation of infected persons.

The cat's body might have been pushed off the landing and down the stairs during his brief but spirited combat with Craig. There was no sign of it now, either on the staircase or on the floor below.

He tapped on the laboratory door, pushed it partly open, and put his head around the side. Craig was sitting exactly as he had left him.

"The late lamented is no longer lying here in state," Hale reported. 'What do you suppose has happened

He had much to think of that afternoon and evening. No comment was made by anyone on Daisy's tragic end. Banks and Rose went about their work as usual. To Hale both seemed rather subdued. Life had soft-pedaled their music. He was not in a mood for Mrs. Spencer Forbes' chatter. He went for a walk in the woods. "I hadn't seen Uncle Cass for years till I turned up this summer.

There was nothing close about him when I was a kid." Hale was recalling his agreement with Kneeland. He was getting his board, his room, and a hundred dollars a month. James Banks was probably receiving as much. A hundred dollars a month was not a liberal salary, even in depression times, for an experienced young civil engineer who had been earning ten thousand a year. But he was not engineering now, and he was glad to have that hundred dollars a month and his comfortable quarters at the Camp. In return for them, however, he was acting as secretary, amateur sleuth, and game leader. The Melection reminded him that he had been neglecting his social duties. He got up to go.

"I'm supposed to lead the gaieties at Halcyon Camp," he confessed. "It takes some doing. There isn't much co-operation. Tonight I must brighten the dinner table and start them off later in the evening with 'Jerusalem' or 'Drop the Handkerchief." A man came around the side of the house and waved a Panama hat at Mrs. Nash. She greeted him as a brother and introduced him to Hale as Doctor Nicholas Crosby. She added that he had a camp two miles further up the shore. Hale sat down again for a few minutes and studied Crosby with interest. He had heard of him. Crosby dropped into a chair, accepted ice tea, and took Rex in with a clear, wide-eyed glance. "You're with Kneeland," he said,

As history is silent on the subject, the columnist thinks that the archives of Brixham, at Torbay, may hold the secret. The invasion may have been connected with the at tempt to aid James II against William (III) of Orange, who had occupied the English throne for over two years. The article reads:

"On the 22d instant the French fleet came to an Anchor in Torbay, being with their gallies about 115 And this morning about 5 o'clock the Gallies draw very near the Shoar, at a small place called Tingmouth; and having for the comedy in New York, and they space of an hour played their Cannon and forced the inhabitants to "I suppose you know Daisy is about 1,000 men, who set the Town saddle, with one to three of the ment was surprising. Reminder of Early Days

The following account, from 'Readings in Indiana History," gives an idea of the conditions of the early times: "In 1817 there were no railroads, no canals west of the Allegheny mountains. There was no telegraph; fire was struck by the flint and steel; there were forests instead of cultivated fields; the shovel-plow was the only cultivator; there were no bridges. Fitted and Lifted Waistline Is Smart

YOU want to have the very smart, tiny-waisted look, and to look slimmer than you are, by all means wear these two frocks, each with the high-at-the-middle that he had no money, and flattering silhouette. And if you want to wear really individual clothes, up-to-the-minute in fashion, of superior fabrics and becoming colors of your own selection, then make your own, with these very easy-to-follow designs, each of which is accompanied by a detailed sew chart.

Afternoon Dress. Here's a lovely fashion that simply melts into your figure at the waistline, because the lifted midriff section is cut in one with the skirt panel in front. The bodice fits beautifully, thanks to scarcely perceptible gathers above the waistline, and darts on the shoulders. The sleeves fit the arm snugly, and are smartly high and Victorian at the shoulders. In velvet, satin, thin wool or silk crepe, this will be one of the most slenderizing, flattering frocks you ever put on! Workaday Dress.

An unusually smart casual fashion is this one with the princess skirt cut up to a high waistline and topped by gathers that give fullness over the bosom, accentuating the slimness of the skirt. Swirls of braid on the pretty sleeves, and a row of braid edging the round collar trim it up just enough. Make this of gingham, calico or percale for home work, and in wool crepe, flannel or flat crepe for runabout.

WHEN the Colonists invaded America the red man, unable to pronounce the word "English," called the hated pale skins "Yangees." During the Revolutionary war the British put the word to use as a term of derision for the colonists and, similarly, during the Civil war, it was adopted and used in its present usage as a nickname for the northerners. DID "Josephine, the Tat-tooed Jalopy," happen to come your way on her return journey from Hollywood to Hartford, Conn.?

If she didn't, you ought to ment of this age. Thousands of hear her story. It is really grateful letters in its files from the story of two young men, satisfied customers all over the Frank and Jack Pinney of Hartford, who paid $13.95 for the ancient car (born in 1928) and set out for Hollywood. They took along some white paint, and startled the movie center by requesting movie stars and celebrities to grasp a paint brush and autograph Jose-

They were a sensation. Josephine was soon covered with names, and the owners refused an offer of $2,000 for her, it's said. And the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year representatives were delighted with them; they've become unofficial good-will ambassadors for the industry.

They ran into one difficulty; people whose autographs didn't mean much were all too obliging about scrawling their names on Josephine. The Pinneys let them do it, and, since Josephine's space was limited and they had to go in for big names only, they'd wipe off the undesirables with a bit of turpentine and then tackle somebody who meant something to them. Of course, they may thus have obliterated signatures of people, now unknown, who will be stars before the car is a year older, but that couldn't be helped.

to Prescott, Ariz., last June, Jon's mind was a bit hazy as to his birthplace, he giving it as New York city, instead of Fresno, Calif., on the license application, necessitating a remarriage later to ease their minds as to the legality of their marriage.

Evidently the next cycle in the movies will be based on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln. The success of the play, "Abe Lincoln in Illnois," in New York started it. Now three producers have announced that they will do Lincoln pictures. Goldwyn will star Gary Cooper as the Great Emancipator, Twentieth Century-Fox will cast In war, force and fraud become Henry Fonda in the role, in "Lawyer in the West."

> There's something about the radio serial, "Pepper Young's Family," that brings luck to those who have anything to do with it.

Originally it was called "Red Davis," and in its second year a young actor who wasn't getting along too well was engaged to play the role of "Red." His name was Burgess Meredith. Broadway producers and Hollywood executives heard of the program, listened to it-and first thing he knew, he was a success on the stage. Then he began to do a picture occasionally; remember "Winterset," his first big him in Later, Martha Scott was engaged to play bits in the serial. And Martha landed in a stage play, "Our Town," which was one of the year's biggest hits of last season, and is still playing.

If Toscanini is your favorite orchestra conductor you can be sure of hearing concerts with him leading the orchestra weekly through December 3; from January 7 through February 25 he will alternate with guest conductors.

When Bill Janney (who plays the title role in "Howie Wing-the Adventures of a Young Aviator,") began portraying the daring Howie he hardly knew what made a plane stay in the air. But flying got him; he has been spending his spare time taking flying lessons from Ralph Smith, a pilot on the last Byrd Antarctic expedition.

for U. S. wheat, and that the government may enter business as a direct exporter of wheat.

Meanwhile, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace received encouragement for his "domestic dumping" farm program which congress will debate next January. Calling for government subsidy of surplus farm products for home consumption, the program has received 'endorsement of objective' from Idaho's Sen. William E. Borah. Denouncing the economic puzzle that lets Americans starve in a land of plenty, Mr. Borah said: "I am informed that 25 per cent of our young men between the ages of 17 and 25 would be unfit for army service in case of war because of the want of nutrition during their youth."

Last June 10 the U. S. business index (figured on a normal of 100) stood at about 76. By November 8 it had risen to 90 and as a result retailers throughout the country anticipate as big a Christmas shopping volume as last year. Actually, it should be better, because last year's November index-while comparable to this year's-was definitely on a down-hill slide that did not stop until well after January 1. On every financial page in the country there are encouraging signs, most important of which has been reemployment in the automobile industry. New York's auto show, touching off an unprecedented volume of motor sales, has given strength to most commodities. The only pessimist in this picture has been the weather man, whose Indian summer lasted well into November and thereby blocked the normal upsurge of retail buying.

International

Japan once offered an excuse for her Chinese aggression. To complaints that she had violated the nine-power treaty guaranteeing China's integrity, Tokyo used to answer that she had taken no territory for annexation, therefore had not violated the treaty. If someone charged her with violating the Kellogg-Briand pact against war, Japan answered that the pact said nothing about defensive war; by some mysterious definition, Nippon regarded her Chinese conquest as a defensive proposition. Now that China is conquered, Japan feels safe to abandon excuses. Tokyo has stated officially that it may be necessary to repudiate the nine-power pact, which is almost tacit admission that she has both violated and abandoned the Kellogg-Briand accord. Moreover she has named the turncoat Chinese war lord, Gen. Wu Pei-Fu, as leader ment which combines the old Nanking and Peiping units. Though annexation is not mentioned, China has been absorbed economically and politically by Tokyo.

The U. S. has been most stern in its protests, since Great Britain is too busy appeasing dictators to speak up in defense of her Chinese stake. To Secretary of State Cordell Hull's demands now come surly replies that the U.S. had better keep its hands off China or Japan will "take retaliatory measures."

This state of affairs is probably behind the latest U.S. anti-dictator outburst, more outspoken than its increasingly outspoken predecessors. Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, has given the world fresh notice that the U.S. is ready to protect not only itself but all the western hemisphere from "the doctrine of hatred" now threatening civilization.

The new American policy, a la Welles: "As a nation we will assure ourselves that we are in a position to defend ourselves from all aggression from whatever source it may arise, and to be prepared to join with our fellow democracies of the new world in preserving the western hemisphere safe from any threat of attack." Heaped atop this plea for western hemisphere consolidation will be the eighth Pan-American conference, opening December 9 in Lima, Peru. Observers expect a U. S. delegation headed by Secretary Hull to fur-nish plenty of ear-burning thrusts to find European buyers at Japan, Italy and Germany.

The European domination won at Munich by Germany and Italy is but a prelude to Hitler-Mussolini plans for relegating France and Great Britain into second-rate status. Still to come is a four-power pact, but first must come the groundwork in which France and Britain are fattening themselves for the slaughter:

ENGLAND sees growing resent-ment toward Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who claims: "Our sole concern is to see that this country and her colonial communications are safe." But recalling successive British diplomatic defeats in Manchukuo, Ethiopia, Spain, China, Austria and Czechoslovakia, Chamberlain's foes wonder what he means by "safety." The real Chamberlain policy is appeasement of dictators at any cost. Thus the prime minister has forced a 345-138 approval of his Italian friendship pact in the house of commons. Thus, too, he has dropped Britain's elaborate defensive armament plan and urged the retirement of War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha. Once active in opposing Spain's civil war, Great Britain must now grant belligerent rights to both Loyalists and Rebels. Still unfulfilled are Hitler's demands for return of war-mandated colonies and a 3-1 air domination over Great Britain. Although Britishers themselves look unkindly on Nazi colonial ambitions. it is known that English South Africans are more than willing to return mandated territory if it will avert war.

FRANCE, now torn by financial distress resulting from feverish rearmament, has welcomed Reichsfuehrer Hitler's offer of a 10 or 25year truce. This is more groundwork behind the eventual four-power pact. In return for German renunciation of territorial claims (in Europe) against France, Paris would re-establish normal diplomatic relations with Italy (already accomplished) and possibly turn away from the League of Nations to live at the mercy of dictators. The only other alternative, now being politely suggested, is that Italy, Germany and Japan be lured back into the League by a "purge" of anti-dictator Geneva officials. Since France faces bankruptcy unless she can halt rearmament, any kind of peace is welcome. Still another sign of French capitulation is Premier Edouard Daladier's renunciation of Communist party support, a move which gains favor with Soviet-hating Nazi-Fascist states.

ITALY AND GERMANY are now so sure of their positions that they find it unnecessary to ask British-French advice on handling Czechoslovakia's minority problem. Although the treaty of Munich stipulated four-power action on Czech minority problems, Foreign Ministers Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano have just transferred a large part of Czechoslovakia to Hungary. For Germany, recent weeks have opened a wedge permitting a successful economic "drive to the east." For Italy they have brought Franco-British recognition of her Ethiopian conquest, placing Premier Mussolini's battlewon empire in good standing with Europe's highest diplomatic society. At best the highly touted four-power pact will be a mere formality.

Religion

U. S. diplomatic relations with the Vatican were broken off 70 years ago on the ground that the Papal state no longer had a territorial domain and therefore did not deserve diplomatic status. Two years ago when Catholic Postmaster General James A. Farley was granted an audience with the Pope, there were rumors that diplomatic relations might be resumed. Not unnoticed is the spacious new Washington headquarters being built for the U. S. apostolic delegate, nor the fact that President Roosevelt entertained Chicago's Cardinal George Mundelein when the latter stopped off en route to Rome. Since U. S. Ambassador to Italy William Phelps displayed unusual assistance to Cardinal Mundelein on his arrival in Italy, and since the visit has drawn wide attention among Catholic churchmen, it is possible that U. S .-Vatican diplomatic relations might be on the mend. Certain it is that Pope Pius XI sees eye to eye with Washington on what Secretary of State Cordell Hull calls "international lawlessness.'

Her pillows are always most professional looking. If contrasting pieces are joined, she uses covered cords in the seams and contrasting cordings and neat little frills around the edges to repeat the strongest tones in the room. In this way many different kinds of material may be brought into harmony. I have sketched for you here some of the smart tricks that help to give cushions a well-tailored look.

George May Not See Practical Way to Saw

"George, go find me a clothes prop," ordered the good wife, busy with her washing. The husband found one he thought suitable, but it had no fork at the top for holding the line, so he asked his neighbor, a Scot, to lend him a step-ladder.

"I want to get to th' top o' th' prop to cut a 'V' in't," he said.

His friend eyed him disdainfully. "Ye are th' kind o' mon that gets some folks a name for being daft," he grumbled. "What do ye want a step-ladder for to cut a 'V' i' th' prop? Haven't ye th' sense to lean it against the side o' the hoose an' cut it wi' a saw oot o' th' bedroom window?"

Don't Let Gas, Nerve Pressure Keep You Miserable

When you are constipated two things happen. FIRST: Accumulated wastes swell up the bowels and press on nerves in the digestive tract. This nerve pressure causes headschee, a dull, lazy feeling, bilious spells, loss of appetite, and dizziness. SECOND: Partly digested food starts to decay forming GAS, bringing on sour stomach, acid indigestion, and heartburn, bloating you up until you sometimes gasp for breath. Then you can't seep. Your stomach is sour. You feel tired out, grouchy, and miserable. Adlerika gives you the DOUBLE ACTION you need. This efficient earminative cathartic relieves that awful GAS almost at once. It usually clears the bowels in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight relief.
