Stroud Named Support Staff Member Of Month

"The November 1993 Support Staff of the Month Award is given to a steadfast individual who is in her 19th year of service to the Muleshoe Independent School District," said Bill Moore, superintendent of MISD. "Martha Fay Tipton Stroud is currently serving as a Teaching Assistant in Reading at Mary DeShazo Elementary School."

"Martha began working for Muleshoe ISD in the food service department at Richland Hills Elementary in November 1974. She has served our students with distinction since that time. In 1980-81 Martha served as Bilingual TA with Ethyl Allison at DeShazo; she has worked five years as a Special Education TA and four years as a fourth grade TA.

"Martha is a native of Muleshoe. She attended all 12 grades and graduated from MHS in 1953. She married Truman Stroud, and they have three children--Carla Stroud of Lubbock, and Lori Hall and Joe Stroud both of Muleshoe. Martha and Truman have five wonderful grandchildren. Martha's favorite pastimes include reading, sewing, crochet, and KEEPING GRANDCHILDREN.

"Martha's colleagues, in nominating her for this award used such expressions as "courteous, kind, reliable, willing to help, vastly experienced, gets along with everyone, and ---always has a sweet smile." In discussing her years with MISD, Martha observed, "It's been rewarding. I've seen kids blossom. They learn that they can do it. Especially those in Special Ed.---they get this image of themselves---and have to learn that they can do it." Martha is real excited about the "Success For All" reading program. She says, "just don't ever tell a child that they can't do something---because they can!"

Mules Take On Denver City Mustangs

Friday night action saw the Mules varsity girls and varsity boys take on the Denver City Mustangs in the first home games of the 1993-94 basketball season. The stands were packed with fans as the Lady Mules defeated the Lady Mustangs 35 to 25, and the Mules lost to the Mustangs by a score of 64 to 48.

The Lady Mules got off to a good start in the first quarter and led 13 to 4 as the first quarter had only seconds remaining. Kristin Holmans, Sr. point guard for the Lady Mules, hit a jumper from the elbow as the buzzer sounded, and the Lady Mules started the second quarter with a nine point lead. The second quarter was low scoring for both teams. With 3:18 left on the clock, Holmans went to the free throw line on a Mustang foul and scored two. The Lady Mules picked up two more points but the Lady Mustangs scored five in the second quarter, and the score at half time was Lady Mules 19, Lady Mustangs 9.

In the third quarter, the Lady Mules picked up another nine points compared to a gain of seven for the Lady Mustangs.

Fourth quarter action saw several three pointers pop the net as Brenna Wheeler, guard for the Lady Mules, added to the Lady Mule lead. They finished the game with a final score of 35 to 25 over the Lady Mustangs.

Coach Gruhlkey, head coach for the Lady Mules, told the Journal that he didn't feel like the girls were jelling quite like they should yet, but that that would happen with more games under their belt. "They really need a tournament now," he said. The Lady Mules are scheduled to play in the Queens Classic at Wayland Baptist University on Thanksgiving Day. They will play Levelland at 12:00 noon. Several Lady Mules were members of last years Bi District playoff team and are returning for another season with the Lady Mules. Members of the 1993-94 Lady Mules Varsity Basketball team include, (Seniors) Misty Davenport, Kristin Holmans, Brooke Sinclair, Brooke Barrett, Donna Puckett, Jenna Glover, Sonya Smith, Brenna Wheeler, and (sophomores) Mandy Cleavinger and Allyson Field. ## Nicolas, McVicker, Nicolas In Three Way Tie

From the looks of this week's football contest there must have been a lot of upsets. Nine people missed seven games, all others missed more.

To determine a first place winner, the Journal Judges had to go to the tiebreakers, and that still wasn't easy, three entries all missed seven games and were four points off in the tiebreakers. So, you guessed it we had a three way tie for first place.

Adrian Nicolas, J.E. McVicker, and Maria Nicolas all missed seven games and were four points off in the tiebreakers for a three way first place tie. They will each receive a check in the amount of $3 and three points toward the grand prize.

Mouse Nicolas came in second, after missing seven games also. He was five points off in the tiebreakers. Nicolas will receive a check in the amount of $7:50 and six points toward the grand prize.

Coming in third was Nona Blake Douglass who also missed seven games, but was eight points off in the tiebreakers. Ms. Douglass will receive a check in the amount of $5 and four points toward the grand prize.

Others missing seven games and the amount they were off in the tie breakers are as follows: Lloyd Pollard, 12 off; Billie Joan Smith, 14 off; R.G. Wilson, 16 off; and Donnie McDonald, 16 points off.

We only have one more week in the contest so be sure and get your entry in, and make sure your name is on the entry and you have circled all games. You need to be sure and check the tiebreakers. A first place win for a number of players could put them out ahead.

Richard Orozco is still out ahead with 20 points. Maria Nicolas is still in second place with 19 points.

News From Baylor College of Medicine

A study of the drug d4T in children with HIV infection has shown the drug can boost the body's immune system T-cells by up to 50 percent in some cases.

d4T, also called stavudine, was tested at various doses in a group of 22 children, ages 7 months to 12 years at Baylor College of Medicine and Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. d4T is an investigational drug still under study and is available to patients through clinical trial protocols.

The study, funded by Bristol-Meyers Squibb Co. and led by Dr. Mark Kline, an associate professor of pediatrics at Baylor, was the first time HIV-infected children had been given d4T. Collaborating investigators included Dr. William Shearer at Baylor and Dr. Lisa Dunkle at Bristol-Meyers.

"We're very encouraged," said Kline, associate program director at Baylor's General Clinical Research Center at Texas Children's Hospital. "In this Phase I study, we have observed that T-cell counts have increased in many of the children."

T-cells are one component of the body's immune system. With HIV infection and AIDS, the number of T-cells is reduced, leaving the body susceptible to opportunistic infections. Measurements of T-cell levels are a "marker" for the health of the immune system.

Twenty-two children have been enrolled in the d4T study at Baylor since January 1992. Children initially received a range of d4T doses.

After 12 weeks, increases in T-cell counts were observed in children treated with higher d4T doses. Children receiving lower d4T doses were given the higher doses at the end of the 12-week period.

"Approximately half of those children receiving higher doses of d4T saw T-cell counts increase by as much as 50 percent," said Kline. "Also, levels of p24 antigen decreased. This means there is less of the AIDS virus in their blood."

The phase I study has led to initiation of a 30-center study to investigate the drug's effectiveness in a larger group of children. The larger study, funded by the National Institutes of Health, will be headed by Kline and will recruit 230 HIV-positive children. The new study is expected to begin this month.

d4T is one of a class of compounds called dideoxynucleosides which have been shown to have anti-HIV properties.

"In this initial study, we found d4T to be relatively well-tolerated by children," he said. "In a larger study, we hope to show its clinical usefulness as a viable treatment for children with HIV infection."

Kline is optimistic that results with d4T will be confirmed in future long-term studies in children.

Many women think that if they are hypertensive and couldn't take birth control pills when they were younger, they're not candidates for ERT. That's not the case.

"Someone who takes medication for hypertension is as much a candidate for estrogen as anyone else," says Ritter. "Birth control

Mildred Pulju Services Held

Services for Mildred Pulju, 64, of Baldwin Park, CA were held at 10:00 a.m. Tuesday, November 23, 1993 at St. John's Lutheran Church, Lariat, TX with Rev. Richard Greenhaner officiating.

Burial was in Muleshoe Memorial Park Cemetery, under direction of Ellis Funeral Home, Muleshoe.

Mrs. Pulju died November 20, 1993 at her home.

She was born October 12, 1929 in Lariat, TX. She married Wallace Pulju on December 5, 1954 in Lariat, TX.

Mrs. Pulju was raised in the Lariat community west of Muleshoe.

Survivors include her husband, Wallace Pulju of Baldwin Park, CA; two sons, Anthony Pulju of Costa Mesa, CA and Keith Pulju of Baldwin Park, CA; her mother, Helen Meissner of Farwell, NM; two brothers, Ruben Meissner of Goodhue, MN and Calvin Meissner of Muleshoe; and two sisters, Agnes Atkin of Austin, TX and Janice Schroder of Mexico, MO.

The family suggests memorials to St. John's Lutheran Church Building Fund, Lariat, Texas.

pills are synthetic. The estrogen in ERT are natural hormones, and they're just replacing what your body gave you prior to menopause."

But there are some drawbacks to consider. For example, ERT does increase the risk for cancer of the endometrium, which lines the uterus. Taking another hormone, progesterone, protects against this, but it also drags down the good effects of estrogen on HDL cholesterol.

So women without a uterus can take estrogen without progesterone and don't have to worry about endometrial cancer.

And, a recent medical megastudy reported that taking high doses of estrogen for more than 15 years increases a woman's chance of breast cancer by one third. It is believed however, that today's low doses of estrogen would not increase a woman's risk.

So should all women be on ERT after menopause?

"ERT must be considered for each woman individually, because there are familial tendencies for breast cancer," Ritter warns. "I saw a patient just yesterday with five female family members who had breast cancer but no history of heart disease. She does not need to go on

Sue Chancey Services Held Tuesday

Services for Sue Chancey, 51, of Morton were held at 2:00 p.m. Tuesday, November 23, 1993 at First Baptist Church with Rev. Dale Cain officiating.

Burial was in City of Levelland Cemetery, under direction of Ellis Funeral Home, Morton.

Sue Chancey died November 20, 1993 at Cochran Memorial Hospital.

She was born September 17, 1942 in Levelland, TX.

She had been a resident of Morton, Texas for 25 years, moving here from Levelland, TX. She was an owner/operator of Sue's Beauty Nook. She was a supporter of Morton's Little League Baseball, Cub Scouts, and Booster Club. She was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors include one son, Kensey Wayne Chancey of Carlsbad, NM; her mother, Maude Robertson of Morton, TX; one sister, Kay Butler of Kenai, AK; and one granddaughter, Stevi Nichole Chancey.

However, if there is a strong family history for heart disease and no breast cancer, ERT should be considered," Ritter said.

Walls Industries Plants Hope In Future Farmers Of America

Today's high-tech farming equipment and livestock management techniques make education a priority for anyone planning a farming or ranching career. That's why Walls Industries helps sponsor Future Farmers of America (FFA).

"Incredible changes in the agricultural industry have taken place since Walls was founded 50 years ago," says Harvey Harper, vice president of sales. "Specialized training is a must for tomorrow's farmers and ranchers."

The FFA program operates in conjunction with school systems to offer instruction in all areas of agriculture. From crop maintenance and advanced irrigation systems to breeding techniques and disease control, the FFA provides training to prepare America's youth for farming and ranching careers. An integral part of that training is covered in the organization's publication, FFA Horizons. The magazine, distributed free to FFA members, is an excellent educational resource.

"Agricultural education gives our future farmers a resource they can draw on for the rest of their lives," Harper adds. "Walls is happy to assist in preparing today's youth for tomorrow."

Walls Industries, headquartered in Cleburne, Texas, is one of the nation's leading manufacturers of rugged outdoor apparel.

Army Picked To Win Over Navy This Week

When Florida State and Florida meet in Gainesville on Saturday, the Gators may wish the Seminoles were arriving undefeated. After Florida State's hopes for a national championship were dashed by Miami last year, Charlie Ward & Co. took out their frustrations on everyone else on their schedule, including the Gators, who were 45-24 victims. While Ward threw for 331 yards, the Seminole defense limited Florida to 41 yards of rushing and forced two fumbles and two interceptions. Florida State's tough loss to Notre Dame two weeks ago may be similarly motivating. The Seminoles should wrap up their second straight Atlantic Coast Conference title, and Florida is still in the hunt for the Southeastern Conference championship, but in the battle for Florida it's State by 12 points.

You probably wouldn't want to be an Oklahoma Sooner this weekend, either, facing Nebraska on the road in the annual Big Red Showdown. For a while this season Oklahoma looked like it might mow down any team that got in its way, including Nebraska, but the Sooners were knocked down a few pegs by Colorado and Kansas State. Nebraska, meanwhile, hasn't been shown much respect in the polls despite its unblemished record, because of its one-point win over Kansas. The Cornhuskers, who have won two in a row over Oklahoma, have something to prove, and we think the Sooners will suffer for it.

The best game of the week may be West Virginia's visit to Boston College in the Big East. Last year in Morgantown, the Mountaineers' Barry Hawkins blocked a 43-yard B.C. field goal attempt with 19 seconds left and the game ended in a 24-24 tie. This year, once again, our calculations show these two teams to be virtual equals despite the Eagles' losses. West Virginia by an eyelash.

Next week's Army-Navy game is also almost too close to call. Last year Army mounted the biggest comeback in the history of the rivalry and won a thriller, 25-24, evening the series at 43 games apiece (with seven ties). It would be only fitting if they tied, but we'll go out on a limb and pick the Cadets by one point. Aren't we brave.

Out forecasting average through Nov. 13 was .751, based on 1,660 games picked right and 550 picked wrong.

Muleshoe Area Retired Teachers Meeting

Friday November 19, 1993 the Muleshoe Area Retired Teachers met in the Fellowship Hall of 16th and Ave. D. Church of Christ. Ann Oyler introduced Dr. James Bell, pastor of First United Methodist Church.

Dr. Bell entertained and intrigued each member with his gestures and explanations of the many different cultures in the world. He used a frog test to differentiate each culture.

1. Black Culture-Africa, people with rhythm.
2. Brown Culture-India, quiet, deep thinking people
3. Tan Culture-Arabs, drifters, search for survival
4. Yellow Culture-Chinese-Japanese, eating is very important
5. Red Culture-Hispanic, Indiana, paint, decorate, and celebrate
6. White Culture-people of the mind, direct, learn, understand.

Dr. Bell has experienced life in each of these cultures.

President Wilma Smith led the group in the pledge of allegiance to American and Texan flags. Katherine Sanders gave an interesting Health Care Report.

Refreshments of cake, nuts, coffee or tea were served by hostesses Ann Oyler and Letha Patterson to members Wilma Smith, Jean Moore, Margie Moore, Pauline Guinn, Robin Taylor, Maxine Ragsdale, Mabel Wolfe, Winona Dudgeon, Ethel Allison, Joyeline Costen, Katherine Sanders, Alene Bryant, Elizabeth Watson, Dorothy Bettingfield.

The next meeting will be Dec. 17, 1993, a Christmas covered dish luncheon at 12:00.

The last I saw him...A poem with a "twist"

by Stephanie Quintana
I heard his voice and I knew it was him.

I had seen him in my dreams again and again.
When he spoke to me, I could feel my eyes gleam.
He was the perfect man, or so it did seem.
Believe it or not, we had little to say.
So I took him to the bedroom and showed him the way.
I offered him thanks when the task was done,
But reluctant was he, he said it was FUN.
Relieved was I, and I could only grin,
Happy to know that this plumber made my toilet flush again.

Beware of Holiday Hazards

Dry Christmas trees, faulty tree lights, and mistletoe can make the holiday season dangerous.

Dry Christmas trees are a major hazard, said Dr. Kenneth L. Mattox of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Faulty electrical wiring and outlets can burn the trees by setting off sparks. The base of the tree should be watered regularly.

Twinkling tree lights can attract toddlers who do not realize the lights should not be put in their mouths.

Parents should be careful with mistletoe; if eaten, it can cause serious reactions such as heart failure. Holly berries are also poisonous but, though fatal in rare instances, they usually cause only an upset stomach. Poinsettias also cause an upset stomach.

Month. Her contributions to our community have been considerable."

Superintendent Moore also congratulated the Boys and Girls Track Teams who qualified for Regionals and the girls who came in fourth in the state meet at Austin. "You not only performed well, we are proud of the way you represented the school and community," Moore said. "I would also like to congratulate Coach Langen, she has never failed to take the teams to Regionals since she has been here."

Cindy Purdy, board president also congratulated the teams and the board members presented each of them a certificate.

Mrs. Purdy called the regular board meeting to order and the minutes of the previous meeting were approved as distributed.

The first item of business was the appointment of the District Textbook Committee.

Superintendent Moore, Adrian Meador, assistant superintendent; the principals from all four campuses, Al Bishop, Bob Graves, Barbara Finney, and Helen Grisby; and the teachers who teach the subjects that the books have come up for adoption, will serve on the Textbook Committee.

The Recommended High School program was discussed at length. This year the students need 24 credits to graduate and next year 25 will be required.

A lengthy discussion was held on the implementation schedule for new testing administered statewide.

During the informational reports, Mrs. Purdy reported on a seminar she attended.

Buck Johnson, assistant superintendent of operations, reported on the work being done on the gyms. He also reported that they were still waiting for the carpet for the auditorium.

Jo Mayhugh gave a report on the taxes, bank balances, and fund balances. The board also voted to pay current bills.

With no further business, the board went into executive session.

Lady Mules are: Jim Gruhlkey (Head Coach), Jacinda Langen (Asst. Coach), and Ted Leps.

The Mules got off to a slow start in the second varsity game of the night. The Mustangs scored 20 for the first quarter compared to 6 for the Mules.

In the second quarter Jimmy Gauna hit 3 three-pointers and the team made good use of the free throw line to rally back for the Mules. The second period closed with the score 31 to 23 Mustangs.

The entire game was rough and rowdy as the boys seemed to be breaking in their basketball shoes and throwing away their football cleats. Both teams had several players in foul trouble by the end of the third quarter and both lost a player to fouls before the end of the game. The game ended in a 64 to 48 loss for the Muleshoe Mules.

Members of the 1993-94 Mules Varsity Basketball team are: (Seniors) Freddy Perez, Gage Angeley, Evan Kelly, Simon Chavez, Juan Jaime, Pedro Nunez, Chad Freeman, Mark Miller, Chad Montgomery and (Junior) Jimmy Gauna. Coaches for the 1993-94 Mules are Leon Hagerman & Steven Hatfield.

Give The Gift Of Life, Donate Blood

The gift of life is one that money cannot buy. By donating blood, you give someone the chance to recover from a serious illness or injury. Area residents will have the opportunity to donate blood--this precious gift of life--on Thursday, December 9 from 10 a.m. to 7p.m., at the First United Methodist Church, 507 W. Second in Muleshoe.

During the holidays, there are many demands on your time. But it takes only 30 to 45 minutes of your time to donate blood and save a life. Most healthy people age 17 to 80 are eligible to donate, even while taking many routine medications.

Donors must weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. You may be asked not to donate if you are on an antibiotic or if you have a sore throat, fever or cold symptoms.

The goal for this drive is 85 blood donations. For an appointment to donate, contact Glenda Powell at 272-5676.

Contest...

There are some ties for third place and include: Keith Hicks, Billie Joan Smith, and Nona Blake Douglass.

A number of people have ten and eleven points, so it is still anyone's game. Be sure to get your entry in on time and carefully check it over.

Everyone is a fool at some stage of his life.

Scientist Studying Nicotine's Effect On Brain

Scientists in Texas are exploring new approaches to the study of drug abuse, focusing on nicotine addiction.

Dr. James Patrick, a neuroscientist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, is studying the molecular aspects of nicotine action in the brain.

"People often think drugs of abuse achieve their results through 'magic,'" he said, "but in fact, they modify the body in some way that causes it to need that drug."

In the case of nicotine, one of the most addictive drugs, Patrick thinks the modification is an increase in sites where nicotine chemically binds in the brain.

He is studying how nicotine changes the abundance of these sites and the possible tie to addiction.

Eating Healthy This "Holiday Season"

This Christmas, black Americas can eat healthy and stay true to their African-American heritage.

"People tend to overindulge in food and drink during the holidays, increasing their risk for high blood pressure," said Dr. Addison Taylor, a professor of medicine and chief of the hypertension section at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

But many families who celebrate the African holiday, Kwanzaa, opt for fresh, naturally seasoned foods derived from many African cultures. Kwanzaa is a seven-day ritual to celebrate the year's first harvest and reinforce family values.

Eating a Kwanzaa meal consisting of low-fat, high-fiber foods like brown rice, fruit, vegetables and fish prepared without salt is a good way to avoid high blood pressure and other problems in the long run.

A high-salt diet is a major risk factor for high blood pressure, or hypertension. Studies have shown that many blacks suffer from salt-sensitive hypertension as a result of eating traditional "soul foods" such as sweet potato pie, greens with salt pork, cornbread dressing and ham.

If Kwanzaa is not for you, Taylor suggests preparing traditional holiday foods that are "heart-friendly."

"Fried foods, fatty meats and dairy products like butter can aggravate high blood pressure," said Taylor, who is also an investigator at Baylor's DeBaKey Heart Center. "Lower your salt intake and use margarine, lemon and herbs instead of oil and butter."

According to the American Heart Association, one out of every three African-Americans suffer from hypertension--a "silent killer" because it usually appears without symptoms. The disease strikes black men the hardest, affecting them earlier in life than their white counterparts.

Taylor said that hypertension is seven times worse in patients with diabetes and often leads to a heart attack, kidney failure or stroke if left untreated.

SPC Law Enforcement Professor National Finalist In Award Of Excellence

George Lawless, chairperson of South Plains College's occupational training department and professor of law enforcement technology, has been named one of the top 16 finalists in the nation for an Award of Excellence in Law Enforcement Training.

The award is given by the Department of the Treasury's Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Glynco, Ga, and recognizes extraordinary skills and contributions made to public law enforcement training.

Lawless was notified by letter earlier this week from Charles F. Rinkevich, director of the federal training center. "Because this was a very competitive process and the nominees were of such high caliber, I congratulate Mr. Lawless on his nomination as a finalist," said Rinkevich.

"This is a personal honor, but to me it reflects more the excellence of our law enforcement program nationwide," said Lawless. "Law enforcement agencies and training centers nationwide are recognizing that ours is a top program," he added.

Lawless was nominated for the honor by both college and local law enforcement personnel, including Ted Holder, Levelland chief of police who submitted the nomination. "Mr. Lawless has touched the lives of literally thousands of students and community members," said Holder in a letter. "SPC has been on the cutting edge of program development in law enforcement for the past 20 years, a fact that is directly attributable to the dreams George Lawless had when he first accepted the challenge to direct the future of SPC's law enforcement program," he added.

Lawless was recently appointed to chair SPC's occupational training division, and he has been appointed to serve on the statewide Academic Endorsement Advisory Committee to help standardize law enforcement curricula among two-year and four-year colleges in Texas. He will work closely with the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education.

Soothe Your Sore Throat With A Few Easy Tips

The fall season brings many changes to our environment: leaves changing colors, rainy days, and of course, the dreaded sore throat.

Terry J. Gage, M.D., a family practitioner at Methodist Hospital, suggests some tips in soothing your minor sore throat pains: *Drink lots of liquids-Being well-hydrated helps keep mucus thin and easy to clear.

*Gargle with warm salt water-Mix about a teaspoon of salt with a glass of warm water to soothe and help clear your throat of mucus.

*Suck on lozenges or hard candy, or chew sugarless gum-These stimulate secretion of saliva, which bathes and cleanses your throat.

*Take pain relievers-Over-the-counter analgesics (acetaminophen, ibuprofen, aspirin) relieve sore throat pain for four to six hours.

*Rest your voice-If your sore throat involves an inflamed larynx, talking a lot may lead to more irritation and temporary loss of your voice.

*Humidify the air-Adding moisture to the air prevents drying of mucous membranes and the irritation it causes. Saline nasal sprays also help.

*Avoid air pollutants-Stop smoking. Avoid smoke-filled rooms and fumes from household cleaners or paint.

Dr. Gage encourages you to see your doctor if you were exposed to strep or have any of these symptoms: fever, nausea, vomiting, swollen neck glands, difficulty breathing or swallowing, tonsils with pus, or severe pain that doesn't improve in a few days.

Furrow Dikes Are A Must In Lockney Producer's Operation

Charles Huffman of Lockney strongly believes in making the most of the free moisture provided by Mother Nature. Since 1979, he has been using furrow dikes to harvest rainfall on the 1,200 acres he farms near Lockney.

Furrow dikes are mounds of soil mechanically installed in the furrow. The dikes create basins that hold rainfall until it can soak into the ground and prevent excess water from running off the field.

Huffman says he really doesn't remember why he started using furrow dikes in his field, except that they made good sense to him. The use of furrow dikes seemed to be a good way to improve his dryland farming operation by conserving precious rainfall.

The first furrow dike Huffman purchased did a good job of installing the furrow dikes, but there was one small problem. "It was just too slow, so I built my own," he says.

Huffman has since purchased two additional dikers and now uses all three dikers on his land. "I hardly ever go across a field without diking it," he says.

Since precipitation is unpredictable, it is important to keep the furrow dikes in place as much as possible--especially from June through August, when the High Plains area receives most of its annual precipitation.

Huffman leaves his dikes in place year-round, since he can straddle them with his cotton stripper. The dikes catch water in the fall and winter, which helps improve soil moisture conditions for spring planting. He even leaves the dikes in place when he plants winter wheat. Huffman says the planter does not tear up the furrow dikes too badly, and they still help hold water on the field.

Furrow dikes have been called reservoirs of yield potential. Research has proven that cotton produces an additional 30 to 40 pounds of lint per acre for every inch of water received above the plant's basic water requirement. Water stored in the soil because of the furrow dikes can make the difference between losing money and making money on a crop.

Measurements of rainfall runoff made during a three-year study at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock on loam soils revealed that no runoff occurred on level land and that the average annual runoff was 1.74 inches for land with a 0.2 percent slope (two inches per 100 feet).

Runoff was 2.51 inches from soils with a 0.5 percent slope, 3.08 inches from soils with a 0.9 percent slope, and 3.61 inches from soils with a 1.2 percent slope. The average annual precipitation runoff during the three-year study for the four graded tracts was 2.73 inches per acre.

For the 1993 growing season, Huffman's dryland acreage is producing a little more than 600 pounds of cotton lint per acre. In years with more rainfall, his dairyland cotton yield has been as high as 800 pounds per acre.

"The furrow dikes really saved me this year. We got a 3.7 inch rain in August, which my cotton crop really needed. The furrow dikes held the water on the field and allowed the crop to reap the full benefit of the rain," he says.

He added that he has seen the runoff from a big rain fill his playa lake. However, since he has been using furrow dikes, the lake has far less water after a rain--illustrating the amount of water that was previously lost as runoff.

In the 1970s, the Bushland Experiment Station conducted a five-year study of furrow dikes in grain sorghum fields. The diked areas had an average annual yield of 420 pounds more per acre than the undiked areas. The undiked area had an average annual runoff of 1.7 inches compared to no runoff from the furrow diked area.

Furrow dikes are also beneficial when used with irrigation, especially when used with Low Energy Precision Application (LEPA) center pivot sprinkler systems. They hold water in the furrow until it has time to infiltrate the soil, and this provides a more uniform application of water across the field.

With furrow irrigation, the dikes are typically installed in alternate furrows which are not watered. This allows the producer to take advantage of any precipitation that falls.

"Furrow dikes are very cost-effective. Initial equipment investments range from $140 to $300 per row, but this cost can usually be recovered during the first year as a result of increased crop yields and reduced irrigation pumping costs," says Ken Carver, Assistant Manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1.

Huffman says he is seeing more furrow dikes in area fields each year, and this in turn causes more demand for furrow dikers.

When considering the purchase of a furrow dike, Huffman says it is important to make sure that it has sturdy construction and low maintenance requirements, that it attaches easily to other equipment to combine field operations, that it is capable of high speed operation, and that it constructs a large furrow dike which will hold runoff during intense thunderstorms.

"We have to better utilize our rainfall and our ground water. There is still too much water running down the ditches, and furrow dikes are a good place to start the conservation effort," Huffman says.

The Water Management Note, Furrow Dikes: Small Reservoirs of Yield Potential, is available by contacting the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, 2930 Avenue Q, Lubbock, Tx. 79405-1499 or by calling (806) 762-0181. "The Quarrel" on American Playhouse
Secular Versus Religious

"The Quarrel," based on one of the most powerful works of modern Yiddish literature by Chaim Grade, is an exhilarating, literate confrontation between the secular and the religious, and a deeply affecting story of friendship, loyalty, and the common struggle to make sense of the world we live in.

The year is 1948, and many European Jews who had survived the Holocaust were picking up the shards of their shattered lives and settling in the New World, particularly Canada.

"The Quarrel" begins on one autumn day in Montreal. Chaim Kovler (R. H. Thomson) is a disillusioned writer now living in New York. His skepticism about life has rendered him aloof and insular. On a trip to Montreal, he accidentally meets his oldest friend, Hersh Rasseyner (Saul Rubinek), now a prominent rabbi. They were the closest of friends in Poland, but fought bitterly when Chaim decided to leave the Yeshiva to fulfill his dream of becoming a writer.

In quick order, Hersh and Chaim revive the intense quarrel that tore them apart 15 years earlier. The losses they suffered and the brutalities they witnessed because of the war have only reinforced the Orthodox Jew's trust in God and the secular skeptic's trust in man. Hersh argues forcefully that without faith in God, mankind has no sense of right or wrong, no moral guidance. The enraged Chaim argues with equal force that Hersh's God is a cruel divinity who abandoned his people in the gas chambers.

"The Quarrel" on American Playhouse airs Monday, November 29th at 7:00 p.m.

Voices for Creation
No Monkey Business Here!

Not every scientist wants to make a monkey of your ancestors. A number of today's scientists are forsaking evolutionary theory for creation science, which postulates "first cause" as a creator rather than random happenstance.

In recent years, creationists have often criticized programs such as PBS's Nature, Nova, and The Secret of Life series for portraying evolution as fact rather than theory. Voices for Creation, produced in response to this criticism, allows scientists to explain why they support the concept of creation.

The one-hour program focuses on science rather than religion. Excerpts are used from "The Evolution Conspiracy," a 1988 video which examines apparent fallacies inherent in the theory of evolution, and shows how creation science can account for them.

Voices for Creation airs Saturday, November 27th at 10:00 p.m., Sunday, November 28th at 3:00 p.m., and Tuesday, November 30th at 10:00 p.m.

Coalition Blasts Cigarette Tax Hike; 'Cut Health-Care Waste,' Leader Urges

The Clinton administration's plan to finance health-care reforms came under attack today from the Coalition Against Government Enroachment.

On Wednesday, President Clinton asked Congress to raise the cigarette tax by 75 cents a pack. Jack Ritchie, acting chairman of the coalition, said a tax increase of that size would be "bad for the economy and unfair to smokers. Worst of all, it would allow our government officials to continue spending money the old-fashioned way--wastefully."

Ritchie noted a 1992 Consumer Reports analysis that put health-care industry waste at $200 billion a year. The magazine attributed the waste to unnecessary treatment and bloated bureaucracy.

"Spending another half-trillion on the same old system," Ritchie said of the new spending in the president's program, "and adding even more bureaucracy at both the state and federal levels, isn't likely to cure what ails us."

Ritchie said President Clinton could finance his entire spending plan by eliminating just a third of the health-care waste identified by Consumer Reports.

Ritchie said his opposition to cigarette taxes is based also on being a smoker--"I'm standing alongside America's 45 million other smokers, the minority the majority loves to tax," he said. He also pointed out the effect a cigarette tax will have on the economy.

"I don't like to see friends and neighbors losing their jobs," Ritchie said. "Raise the cigarette tax 75 cents a pack, and you'll see close to 12,566 jobs disappear, right here in Texas."

Ritchie said the figure was based on a Price Waterhouse analysis of the tobacco industry's impact on the U.S. economy.

The Coalition Against Government Enroachment leader also questioned the basic fairness of a cigarette tax.

"Excise taxes are the most regressive weapon in Uncle Sam's revenue arsenal," Ritchie said. "The burden of paying these taxes falls heaviest on low and middle income groups. According to the Congressional Budget Office, the effective excise tax rate for America's highest income families is .3 percent of income. The rate for low income families is 2.8 percent--nine times higher than the rate for wealthy families."

"Think about it. To finance this national health insurance plan, the administration proposes to tax the people who, in large part, can't afford health insurance!"

Ritchie said that raising the cigarette tax just doesn't make sense. "It's bad for the economy. It's unfair to smokers. And it allows our elected officials the opportunity to avoid yet again the responsibility we elected them to assume: the responsibility of spending out tax dollars wisely." Ritchie urged Texans who believe their tax burden has grown unbearably heavy to contact their members of Congress in opposition to the cigarette tax. "Send them a concise message," Ritchie said. "Enough is enough!"

Llamas Attract Stares At State Fair

"What kind of animal is that?" asks one woman, and another comments, "I thought they were only white," as Jim Doyle leads a multi-colored llama through crowds at the 1993 State Fair of Texas.

Llamas are becoming increasingly popular in Texas and are raised and sold as breeding animals, as pack animals, as controls on predators and as producers of exquisite, fine wool, Doyle explains later.

Doyle was among 24 breeders from Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma who brought 80 head of llamas to show at the Fair. Texas is the sixth largest producer of the handsome animals, with about 3,000 head found in the state.

Doyle, a pharmacist who lives in Drum, west of Denton, said he started raising llamas about seven years ago because he was always intrigued by the animals. He used to raise cattle but has completely converted to llamas because less labor is involved and there is more return on one's money.

"I own no cattle whatsoever, and I'll never own another one."

Average prices for breeding males range from $500 to $2,000 and females sell for $4,500 on up to $15,000. However, some male and female llamas have sold for record prices of more than $200,000.

An ounce of llama wool will bring up to $3.50, with most wool sold to individual spinners and weavers, Doyle says. The National Forest Service also uses the animals to pack trash out of the wilderness. And one breeder at the Fair specializes in mountain camping trips using llamas to carry gear. Llamas also are fierce protectors of sheep, goats and even geese.

But from talking to owners, the main attraction appears to be the animals' sweet disposition.

"With these animals, you can walk out in a pasture and love them and hug them and they'll respond to you," Doyle says. Llamas don't spit in people's eyes. Usually, they only spit when extremely provoked and will spit air at other llamas that get too close to their food.

"You can take them in the house, and they'll lie down and watch TV with you," Doyle said extolling some of llamas' unusual charms. He later proves this statement by producing a large framed photo of a llama watching television sprawled and sitting next to its owner in an armchair. Llamas are naturally housebroken, Doyle adds.

For more information about llamas contact Doyle, past president and board member of the South Central Llama Association, at 817-387-3294.

New Director Foresees Ecosystem Management, New Partnerships In Agency's Future

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is embarking on a broad new effort to become the international leader in ecosystem management and conservation of biodiversity, while emphasizing partnerships with states, conservation groups, and private landowners. Director Mollie Beattie announced during her inaugural meeting with agency employees.

In addition, the Service will promote diversification of its workforce and encourage better opportunities for urban residents to enjoy the nation's bountiful fish and wildlife resources, Beattie said. "No other agency is as prepared as we are to make ecosystem conservation its primary mission--this is our mission," she told a gathering of 600 Washington office employees. "In the coming years, we will accomplish it from the old growth forests in the Pacific Northwest to the bayous of Louisiana to the 'river of grass' in Florida."

For example, Beattie said, the Service will seek to make the 491 National Wildlife Refuges "anchor points for biodiversity and ecosystem management.. Each refuge will have its own unique land management plan... showing the public where we are, where we are headed, and how they can participate."

Beattie also reaffirmed the Service's historic commitment to recreational use of wildlife. If ecosystems are kept healthy, she said, there will be abundant fish and wildlife so "Americans can enjoy our wildlife resources in whatever way they choose."

For the Service to be successful, however, the American people must understand that all species, including human beings, are connected, she said. As a result, the Service will make outreach and public education a high priority in the coming years.

"People need to understand that the choice between people and animals, between the economy and endangered species, is a false one," she said. "There is no choice. Our fate is inexorably linked to the state of the ecosystem that make up the global environment in which we live."

Americans "cannot dump contaminants into a river on Monday and expect to catch a fish on Friday," she said. "They cannot drain a wetland on Tuesday and expect to see ducks on Saturday..They cannot eliminate the habitat of their fellow species and expect our own to survive."

Beattie emphasized that the Service will seek partnerships with and the involvement of state and local governments, conservation organizations, business, and private landowners.

The Service already has been part of many highly successful partnerships, including the North American Waterfowl Management Plan, which has protected, restored, or enhanced more than 2 million acres of wetlands across the country, and the Partners for Wildlife program, which has restored more than 200,000 acres of wetlands on private lands.

Beattie said the Service will build on these partnerships and expand into new areas of cooperation, especially working with private landowners.

Beattie also said one of her goals is to increase the diversification of the Service's workforce by hiring and promoting women and minorities.

Such diversification is a "practical necessity" for helping the Service accomplish its goals, she said. People who come from different backgrounds have different perspectives on how problems can be solved and goals achieved.

"The richness of experience is an asset, and its absence is an enormous liability," she said.

As part of this effort, the Service will reach out to people, such as inner city children, who do not have easy access to natural resources and may be less likely to grow up to become fish and wildlife biologists.

"The Service have done a fine job of reaching out in a variety of ways....," Beattie said. "I plan to expand this outreach even more in the coming years."

To facilitate the outreach and partnership effort, Beattie proposed an internal reorganization of the agency. Deputy Director Ken Smith would head a new division that includes the Public Affairs and Legislative Services offices, along with the Federal Aid program.

In addition, the Offices of International Affairs, Management Authority, and Scientific Authority would be placed under a newly created post of Assistant Director for International Affairs.

COTTON NEWS

FROM PLAINS COTTON GROWERS, INC.

By Roger Haldenby

For the past one hundred years the Mexican cotton boll weevil has been "looking for a home" in American cotton. The boll weevil has never found that home on the High Plains of Texas thanks to Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

PCG has operated the High Plains Boll Weevil Diapause Control Program for the past 30 years to protect the 3+ million acres of cotton in its 25 county area. From the start in 1964, the plan was to take a stand against the boll weevil along the edge of the Caprock, the steep escarpment that marks the beginning of the High Plains.

Boll weevil infestations across the state of Texas reached record proportions in 1993. However, the PCG program continues to successfully prevent this highly damaging insect from becoming established in cotton above the Caprock.

The suppression area contains parts of 15 counties and encompasses around 15,500 square miles. There are 5,097 cotton fields within its boundaries totaling 749,279 acres.

The PCG Boll Weevil Program has always been based on an integrated approach to pest management. Cotton producers in the control zone are encouraged to use all cultural measures possible to minimize field infestations. Uniform planting dates, early stalk destruction and short-season cottons help in the fight. The PCG program maps cotton fields in the control zone and carefully monitors boll weevil activity during the growing season using pheromone traps and field scouts.

During the six weeks or so before first freeze, the boll weevil starts to build fat deposits to enable its survival through winter hibernation. This stage of the insect's life cycle is called diapause.

A proven control strategy during this diapause period is to treat infested fields with light applications of the insect control agent malathion.

The control phase of the 1993 program started in mid-September, and ended with the freezing temperatures that chilled the High Plains during the Halloween weekend.

The carefully run suppression program combines proven, safe treatment strategies with ultra-modern computer and satellite technology to control boll weevils. Aggregate acreage totals show 1,357,521 acres were treated to control boll weevil during four scheduled program applications. Total program cost this year is estimated to be $3.7 million for a cost per treated acre around $2.73.

A satellite based, parallel-swath navigation system that automatically tracks and records each aircraft's flight path was again provided to the PCG program by its developers, SATLOC Inc. of Casa Grande, Arizona. The system was first used during the 1992 program.

A total of nine turbine-powered aerial application aircraft were used in 1993. Each was equipped with the Satloc system.

Organization of the program is overseen by PCG's Boll Weevil Steering Committee. Producers in PCG's 25 county area contribute to the program through a per bale assessment on their cotton collected at area compresses and warehouses. Some operational costs are shared with the United States Department of Agriculture as part of the National Boll Weevil Cooperative Control Program.

Agriculture's Contribution to the Environment

With environmental awareness on the rise, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) in Lubbock is evaluating a pesticide disposal system that could make many of these worries obsolete for commercial applicators and farmers in the future.

Lubbock houses one of four pesticide disposal facilities in the state and since the project's beginning in 1991, Doug Smallwood and Stan Carroll have been in charge of evaluating the performance of the facility at TAES. Smallwood, a vegetable and potato researcher, is the present safety officer for the experiment station. Carroll, an entomologist and cotton researcher, was the TAES safety officer prior to Smallwood.

The facility consists of three main areas which include pesticide storage, an enclosed wash bay and a rinsate disposal area. The facility has a number of safety features as well.

Smallwood said the storage area contains locked cages that the pesticides are kept in, and the main building has explosion-proof outlets and heaters. An automatic fan system comes on when the doors are open to draw any harmful fumes out of the building and regulate the climate. Anti-siphon valves are also installed throughout the building to keep the pesticides from entering the water system.

He said a large counter and sink provide for on-site mixing and measuring of pesticides. This insures containment of any spills. A high pressure sprayer allows for washing of spray rigs in the facility's wash area. The rinsate is drained to the disposal area through floor drains in the wash bay.

The rinsate disposal area includes two 8-foot-by-16-foot rinsate treatment tanks which are constructed of quarter-inch steel plate. They are capable of holding 2,400 gallons of rinsate.

Carroll said timers control the pumping of rinsate into an infiltration media which is suspended in a tray at the top of the tank. The infiltration media consists of concrete sand, decomposed peat moss, silt loam soil and composted manure. Bacteria within the media aid in the decomposition of the pesticide molecules.

Every four hours approximately 160 gallons of rinsate is pumped to the infiltration media and an audible and visual alarm system is connected to the rinsate treatment tanks to warn of a potential overflow.

"Meters register the number of gallons flowing into the tanks so we learn what the system is capable of handling," said Carroll.

"It is an enclosed system that, in theory, is designed to contain the chemicals in a defined area," said Smallwood.

Both TAES researchers said that future improvements in the design of pesticide storage and disposal facilities will be possible due to studies involving this facility.
