Silverton 4-H Club Boy Places Sixteenth At Lubbock Show

Five beef calves were entered in the Lubbock Fat Stock Show, March 19-21 by 4-H club members from Briscoe County. Bennie Pigg of Quitaque entered two steers and Robert Haley Hill, C. L. Dunn and Ronald Welch entered one calf each.

C. L. Dunn's steer, which placed 3rd in the county show February 23, was 16th in a class of 50 heavy Herefords at Lubbock. The steer weighed 1093 pounds on the day of the sale and sold for $41.50 per hundred pounds. It was bred by D. T. Northcutt.

Ronald Welch exhibited a steer bred by J. L. Webb. The steer failed to place in the light Hereford class but sold for $40.50 per hundred and weighed 824 pounds.

The calves entered by Robert Haley Hill and Bennie Pigg were sifted out of the show and sold at the auction sale for sifted calves on Tuesday morning. Roberts' calf weighed 980 pounds and sold for $37.00 per hundred. Bennie Pigg's calves brought $36.00 and $36.75.

C. L. and Ronald did a good job of showing at Lubbock and an excellent job of exhibiting their steers in the show barn. They were awarded a premium of $3.00 each for winning first place in beef calf exhibits. Their exhibit was declared the neatest and most attractive calf exhibit of the entire show.

WHEN "THANK YOU" MEANS YOU

Top—Success of the Red Cross drive means first aid training for millions of persons for civil defense. This trainee uses her lipstick to mark T for tourniquet on forehead of "air attack victim."

Bottom—Red Cross Home Nursing classes are being expanded to train at least one person in every family to care for the sick should sudden emergency overtake hospitals, doctors and nurses.

Red Cross Field Director Henry Hedges, one of 65 serving with combat troops in Korea, helps a Marine with a family problem. A third of Red Cross funds goes to provide this friendly counsel and personal assistance to the fast-growing military forces.

Top—Warm food and friendly service erase terror from this young tornado victim. Always ready to meet natural disaster, this Red Cross service has a vital role in civil defense to help in feeding, clothing and sheltering refugees, after sudden attack.

Bottom—He's only four, but this little boy is waging a man's fight, after 70% of his body was burned, with blood from volunteer donors in the Red Cross Blood Program, made possible by annual public contributions. Blood for the military, plasma for civil defense and continuing civilian needs depend on this year's Red Cross drive.

"Thank you, Red Cross!" was heard hundreds of thousands of times during the last twelve months — gratefully from servicemen in Korea for help with personal or family problems, for blood; from wounded soldiers in hospitals for the kindly acts and comfort articles by volunteers; from victims of accident, sickness and disaster, many whose actual lives had been saved. Those "Thank You's," the Red Cross points out, go to those who contributed to the Red Cross and made this possible.

Urgent need for expanding Red Cross services in Civil Defense, for blood to meet military, national emergency and civilian needs, for welfare services to the fast growing armed forces, for veterans, and disaster relief, amount to an increased budget of $85,000,000 for this next year. More people than before are being asked to share in making "Thank You, Red Cross" possible for tomorrow's humanitarian needs.

SORGHUM VARIETIES FOR PANHANDLE HARD LANDS

Sorghum varieties adapted to dryland grain production on the hard lands of the Texas Panhandle include Early Hegari, Double Dwarf White Sooner Milo, Martin, Midland, Combine 7078, Redbine 60 and Combine Kafir 60, according to Kenneth B. Porter and Charles J. Whitfield of the Amarillo Conservation Experiment Station.

Plainsman, Caprock, Westland, and Redbine 66 mature too late for best results under usual dryland farming conditions but they may produce higher yields under irrigation, or in favorable years on dryland.

These varieties are recommended as the result of tests conducted at the Amarillo station since 1939 on Pullman clay loam, a heavy soil which is the predominant type in Texas High Plains.

Porter and Whitfield report that Early Hegari and Martin have been the most consistent producers in the tests. Combine 7078 is a red-seeded variety which blooms in about 65 days. It is more likely to lodge than other varieties, and it does not have a dry head. It has generally produced favorable results for farmers in this area.

Both Redbine 60 and Redbine 66 have dry head stems and can be combined before frost, if desired. They are similar to Martin but have a brighter, reddish-yellow seed.

Combine Kafir 60 blooms a few days earlier than Martin. It has juicy stalks which stand up well in the field. The seed are white with black specks and the seed stems have a tendency to dry out. Heads of Combine Kafir 60 are borne on long stems, well above the leaves.

Earlier maturing forage sorghum varieties produce higher grain yields, but the later varieties produce more forage. When selecting a variety for bundle feed or silage, the farmer should consider the relative importance of grain and forage, point out Porter and Whitfield.

Texas Blackhull Kafir and Sumac 108 produce good yields of both grain and forage, but they produce much less forage than the later maturing varieties. Sumac 108 is an early-maturing variety which has been grown at the Amarillo station since 1944.

Hi-Hegari is a new, tall variety of Hegari which was bred and developed for silage purposes. It has been tested only one year at the Amarillo station. Like normal Hegari, it blooms a few days to a week later than Early Hegari.

RURAL MEDICINE

Larger Number Of Small Town Students Urged

CHICAGO, Ill.—An increase in the number of medical students from rural areas was suggested as a means of increasing the number of physicians practicing in such areas. This might be accomplished either by preferential consideration of applicants from rural communities or by encouraging and assisting well-qualified students from small towns to attend medical school.

This opinion was expressed by Dr. Harold S. Diehl of Minneapolis, dean of the medical sciences, University of Minnesota. Dr. Diehl was a speaker at the 47th annual congress on medical education and licensure.

The three-day meeting was sponsored by the council on medical education and hospitals of the American Medical Association.

Three Groups Listed

Dr. Diehl reported the results of a study of the present practice location of 545 graduates of the University of Minnesota medical school in relation to the type of community in which they grew up. For the purpose of tabulation and analysis, communities were divided in three groups: (1) with a population of less than 5,000; (2) with a population of 5,000 to 100,000, excluding Rochester, where the Mayo clinic constitutes a special situation; (3) Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. Of the 199 doctors who grew up in small communities of less than 5,000, 116 returned to small towns to practice, 35 went to towns with a population of 5,000 to 100,000, and 48 went to one of the three large cities.

Of the 104 doctors who grew up in towns of 5,000 to 100,000 population, only 25 went to small towns and rural communities. Of the 242 who were raised in large cities, 53 went into rural community practice.

This tabulation, Dr. Diehl pointed out, indicates that the chances of a student brought up in a small town of returning to such a town are more than 2½ times as great as the chances of a student from a large city going into a small community to practice.

Population Trends Cited

His study also showed that group one communities, which can be classed as the home towns of America, have 51 per cent of Minnesota's population, but provide only 36 per cent of the medical students; group two with 18 per cent of population provide 20 per cent of the students, and the three large cities with 31 per cent of the state's population account for 44 per cent of the medical students. "This indicates," Dr. Diehl said, "that medical students of the University of Minnesota are drawn somewhat disproportionately from the large cities. This difference, however, is perhaps less than might be expected in consideration of the greater incentives toward professional careers in the large cities and the remoteness of most communities of less than 5,000 population from opportunities for higher education of all types."

Biblical Paintings Used To Decorate Small Town

ESCONDIDO, Calif. — Holiday street decorations in the small community of Escondido were probably the most distinctive of all small towns in the United States last year. They consisted of a mile-long series of nearly life-size paintings portraying Biblical scenes that related to the Nativity. The paintings, 45 in number, were done by art students in the adult education division of the Escondido high school. Members of the Escondido ministerial association served as consultants in the project, the aim of which was to provide the community with non-commercial Christmas decorations. Art class members spent six months on the painting under the direction of Mrs. Mildred Miller, high school art instructor.

The paintings were attached to light columns along main street and illuminated at night. With the help of the clergymen, the scenes were numbered and catalogued, and a booklet was issued giving the Bible passage to which each scene referred.

Utah Dealers Gross Over $150,000 from Hides

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah—Hide buyers in Utah estimate that they grossed $150,000 last year from deer hides brought in by hunters. Locker plants take in most of the hides. From there they go to hide dealers. One of the area's biggest wool and hide dealers, B. C. Elliott, estimated that about 50,000 deer were killed in the 1950 season by 80,000 hunters. The locker companies usually take the hides as part of their charge for storing venison. They sell the skins to the large buyers for about $1.75 each. Dealers dry and salt the hides. Then they are shipped to tanners who convert the skins to doeskin and buckskin that go into such articles of clothing as jackets and gloves.

Donate 520 Pints of Blood
NEW RICHMOND, Wis.—Some 520 persons in New Richmond, Deer Park, Star Prairie, Somerset, Cylon and Boardman gave a pint of blood each when the Red Cross bloodmobile visited New Richmond for two days recently. Sixty recruiters in the communities named above cooperated in the campaign to add to the original blood bank in St. Paul. A plane leaves St. Paul every day with blood plasma for the Korean battlefields. The committee in charge of the drive provided taxi service for donors who did not have ways of getting to the bloodmobile. Baby sitters were provided for parents who wanted to donate.

74-Year-Old Small Town M.D. Is Family Doctor of the Year

CANTON, Mass.—Dr. Dean Sherwood Luce, 74, a small town physician who put out his shingle here in 1905, was named "the family doctor of 1950" by the American Medical Association. The selection was made from family doctors nominated by county medical societies in the small communities over the nation. Back in 1905, Dr. Luce performed operations on the kitchen table. At that time a visit to his office cost 50 cents, a call at the home $1, and the fee was $8 for delivering a baby. In several cases he has delivered three generations of babies in the same family. "When it comes to the fourth generation, I'm going to quit," his friends quote him as saying. "Everybody hollers 'Hi!' at me when I go down main street, and it's a great satisfaction to know you have so many friends," Dr. Luce says. Friends describe him as soft spoken, mild mannered, not robust, but durable and full of energy. He takes active part in community affairs, is a mainstay at the local hospital, served for many years on the board of health and is still school physician of Canton, as he has been for 25 years. The son of a Yankee sea captain, he was a captain in the medical corps in World War I, and served on the selective service board in Canton in the last war. He has long been active in the local and state medical societies. "If a man begins to consider the dollar that is in the practice of medicine, he is making a failure of the practice of medicine," Dr. Luce has said. "Some doctors have promoted arguments for socialized medicine by overcharging patients and failing to provide out of hour (after regular hour) services."

Community Health Unit Vaccinates Parish Dogs

MINDEN, La. — Webster parish health unit recently held two clinics for the vaccination of dogs under the parish's rabies control program. Dr. T. N. Armistead, director of the health unit, reported that in the five years the vaccination program has been in effect there has not been a case of rabies to originate in Webster parish. Two veterinarians cooperated in helping complete the annual vaccination program. They visited every community in Webster parish. Dr. Armistead explained that the rabies control program in Webster parish, as elsewhere in the United States, was not designed to eradicate the disease in dogs for the sake of the dogs, but is the most efficient means of reducing human fatalities from rabies. Not all communities in the United States have laws requiring owners to have their dogs vaccinated. The Webster parish ordinance requires that all dogs not vaccinated be impounded, held for five days and destroyed or sold if not claimed by the owner.

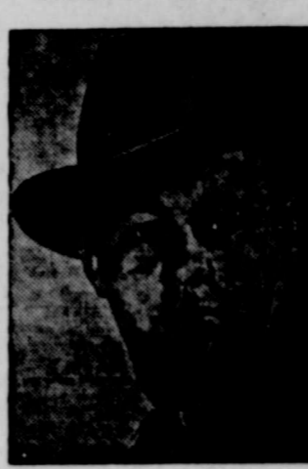

Florida Plans to Build Havens for Pensioners

TAMPA, Fla. — Gov. Fuller Warren has appointed a citizen committee to work on a plan to make the state a haven for thousands of retired workers who have incomes of only $125 or so. Walter E. Keyes, executive director of the Florida improvement commission, says that half of the nation's retired folks above 65 want to come to Florida to live, but couldn't because of high rent. Keyes said the committee and the commission would work on a plan whereby neighborhood villages would be built adjacent to larger cities in the state. The first such village will probably be constructed near St. Petersburg. The homes will have "front yards and back yards. This is important for these people. The yards will give them an opportunity to vent their energies. They can raise chickens and grow gardens." Plans are being worked out to obtain long range loans to finance the villages so that the dwellers, by paying around $15 a month rent, could through the years pay for the dwellings.

FAMILIES OF DECEASED VETERANS MAY BE ENTITLED TO INCREASED BENEFITS

The families of deceased veterans, including those who died in service, may be entitled to increased benefits under the 1950 amendments to the Social Security Act, according to John R. Sanderson, manager of the Amarillo office of the Social Security Administration.

The new law provides a social security wage credit of $160 for each month of military service during World War II. These credits are given to all servicemen whether they have social security numbers or not and regardless of their past employment.

Widows and children of servicemen may be entitled to benefits until the children become 18. The children may qualify even though the widow has remarried. Parents who were chiefly dependent on the servicemen may also qualify for benefits in some instances.

It is not necessary that a living veteran take any action to get credit for his military service. The families of deceased servicemen or veterans should contact the Amarillo social security office if they have not done so. Proof of chief dependency of a parent of a serviceman or veteran who died prior to July 1, 1949, must be filed before July 1, 1951. For deaths occurring later, such proof must be filed before the second anniversary of the death.

Widows and children may also lose some monthly benefits if their claims are not filed prior to April 1, 1951, because a claim cannot be effective for more than six months before the date of filing.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bowman and son, Jackie, of California, arrived last Wednesday to visit his sister, Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Elrod.

'Dimes' Dance In Shadow of the Kremlin

MOSCOW, USSR—A "march of dimes" dance in the shadow of the Kremlin netted a good sum for the battle against infantile paralysis.

Besides the auction of a bottle of champagne for 200 rubles ($50) and a special raffle, funds were derived from an admission charge of 10 rubles ($2.50) and from the sale of drinks and other refreshments. A New York fur buyer was the high bidder for the champagne.

The party was held at the American House—a club about a mile from the Kremlin. It was decorated with red, white and blue streamers for the party and American flags were displayed on each table. A Russian orchestra played modern American jazz music.

The dispatch reporting the party did not mention whether or not any Russians were present. Guests included members of the American and other western diplomatic colonies and businessmen.

Corner Drug Home-Owned In Small Towns

AUSTIN, Tex.—Most people in smaller communities like to call personally for their prescriptions at the "corner drug," a University of Texas professor reports. A survey of 1949 Texas prescription practices by Dr. S. G. Mittelstaedt and his students showed drug stores in smaller towns took only one to five per cent of their prescriptions by telephone while the state-wide average was 32 per cent.

The survey also revealed that 70 per cent of Texas pharmacies handled veterinary preparations and that 75 per cent were independently owned, like the drug store in most small U.S. communities.

White Congregation Of Rural Church Greeted Negro Pastor

STAFFORD, Conn.—The 100 people or so in the small rural church at Staffordville, Conn., recently greeted their new pastor, the Rev. Roland T. Heacock, a Negro, without any fuss.

But the former army chaplain, noting many strange faces, sermonized: "It is a sad commentary on the state of democracy and Christianity that when an obscure, untalented Negro minister takes over the pastorate of a tiny rural Connecticut church, that it is big news. Why should it be big news?"

"Why shouldn't we, human beings, just accept one another regardless of the color of our skin or our eyes, if we are decent and worthy?"

"The plain truth, is, and I take this opportunity of saying so, so that reporters may report it, the Christian church should hang its head in shame at its snobbery racism and class consciousness."

That was the inaugural sermon of the slender, 56-year-old minister. Mrs. Ina Prager, chairman of the church council, said the decision to call Mr. Heacock was based on "our confidence in him."

"We knew him to be a friend, popular with everybody in town and able to cope with any situation, and in our town we aren't interested in the color of a person."

Mr. Heacock was pastor of a Negro church in Springfield, Mass. for 17 years. He lives on a 30 acre farm near Staffordville and is chaplain of the town's American Legion post.

A small, rural American community has again taken the lead.

Mrs. G. W. Dowdy left Monday for a visit with relatives in Fort Worth and Dallas.

Tom Brooks, of Borger, spent the Easter holidays with relatives.

Contest Entry Is Forty Years Late; Receives a Prize

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Forty years ago the Twin City Sentinel conducted a contest in which their subscribers could clip a number of coupons from the paper and win a "large, massive wall clock" of 1911 vintage.

Timothy C. Shea, 33, of New York, recently sent in the required number of coupons and demanded his clock.

There was a tendency to believe that the honor not only of the Twin City Sentinel but of Winston-Salem and the whole south was involved in meeting Shea's Yankee challenge. The newspaper checked pawn shops and parlors, attics and anterooms, published and broadcasted appeals for a timepiece similar to the one it offered readers back in 1911.

Out of retirement to direct the search came Bradley Welfare, who joined the paper in 1898 and was its circulation manager until recently. "I started this thing, so I'll finish it," Welfare said, reporting to the office.

Everyone agreed that eventually the newspaper would find a clock. It did, but—

One executive of the paper which is owned by Gordon Gray, former secretary of the army, now president of the University of North Carolina, had a worried look on his face when he speculated on the number of still unclipped issues of the 1911 Sentinel that might still be lurking in attics waiting to spawn new demands for clocks.

"When we get straightened out with Mr. Shea," he said, "we want it clearly understood that this promotion offer is closed. Future offers, if any, will have a definite closing date."

Oklahoma City Police Let Violators Charge Tickets

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — It sounds crazy, but the Oklahoma City police department has opened charge accounts for some of its most frequent parking law violators.

The new system is not for the ordinary automobile driver, however. The system is for commercial vehicle fleets. At the end of each month the companies pay the accumulated fines by check.

Companies that wish to open charge accounts supply the department with a list of their license numbers. The department keeps a ledger for each company and lists violations with tag numbers so employers can tell which driver is breaking the law.

The plan has proved popular with both delivery services and car rental companies, which no longer find their cars impounded for tickets they didn't know they had received.

As one manager remarked, "I'd rather pay an occasional dollar than have my drivers waste a lot of time hunting for parking places."

Traffic Lt. Tom Simpson said the service is run "on a strictly business basis."

"It's no crime to get a parking ticket," he explained. "Some of the best people get them. We figure they may as well pay for them like the public pays for other things—on credit."

Bushman, Famous Gorilla, Dies At Chicago Zoo

CHICAGO, Ill. — Bushman, the most famous gorilla in the world, died recently at Lincoln park zoo in Chicago. He had been the single biggest attraction at any Chicago zoo for the last 20 years.

He came to the zoo when he was two and weighed 38 pounds. He had been captured in French Cameroon country of West Africa. The zoo paid $3,500 for him.

Zoo officials said the big animal was a showman, that he liked crowds and they seemed to stimulate him. He weighed 550 pounds and was six feet, two inches tall when he died.

Some three million persons a year went to see Bushman. He was as widely known—some would say better known—in Chicago than the mayor or any other citizen.

Zoo veterinarians said the great ape died of a heart attack.

Lowell Elrod, of Borger, spent the Easter holidays with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Elrod.

Mrs. Lee Montague, who has been visiting relatives here for several weeks left Tuesday for Amarillo, where she will visit her son, Obra Montague and family. Mrs. R. M. Hill and Mrs. Troy Burson took her to Amarillo.

Atomic Clock Off Only One Second In Twenty Million

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Dr. Harold Lyons, head of the micro-wave department at the national bureau of standards, the government agency responsible for keeping accurate time, is building a new clock. He's not satisfied with the one he built two years ago because it loses about one second in every 20 million.

He is nearly ready to make preliminary tests on his new atomic clock which he expects to be about 900 times more accurate than the original version.

Official time is based on astronomy, which may show a variation of as much as several thousandths of a second within 20 years. While such slight variations won't affect your soft boiled eggs or make you miss trains, they do make a big difference in the accuracy with which intricate communications instruments can be tuned.

Four Under Construction
Dr. Lyons' new clock is one of four in various stages of construction. But there's no chance that you'll ever be able to get one of them. They're a bit unwieldy for the average home.

The original one, for instance, was based on the constant, natural vibration frequency of atoms in the ammonia molecule. It depends on a quartz crystal oscillator, and in a second version, Dr. Lyons is substituting an oscillator using ammonia itself, which has a frequency of 24 billion times a second. The improvement necessitates three new amplifier tubes which cost $30,000 each.

The new one he thinks will be most accurate of all is what he calls a cesium clock. This uses the atomic beam technique, which is 600 times more accurate than the ammonia system.

According to Dr. Lyons, it works like this:
Cesium, an extremely active silvery metal, is heated until it vaporizes in an "oven" at one end of a metal tube about a foot in diameter. The vapor is shot as a narrow beam toward a wire detector at the other end of the tube.

WV Check Equipment
As long as the beam hits the detector wire squarely, the clock is "on time." If it misses, a chain reaction is set up in the rest of the clock until the frequencies mesh so that the clock corrects itself automatically.

A fourth clock, just being started, is called the nuclear quadrupole clock and uses iodine. It won't ever be as accurate as the cesium time-piece, but it will have a greater practical value. It will be semi-portable and thus can be used by the military for checking communications equipment on the spot.

Archeologists Find First Roman Grave in Denmark

COPENHAGEN, Denmark—Archeologists and historians are excited and bewildered by the recent discovery of a Roman grave in Denmark.

Archeologists are excited because there is no record in the writings of any Roman historian of an expedition to Denmark and only vague references to daughters of Romans being carried off by Cimbrians and Teutons.

History is equally vague as to the fate of those two northern nations after they attacked southward and were smashed by Marius at Aquae Sextiae and Campi Putridi. All that is known is that some remnants went to Britain and the others returned to their original homeland in southern Sweden and Denmark.

The grave is that of a woman and a wealth of Roman art objects corresponding to a period about the middle of the third century B. C. have been found.

The only Roman grave ever discovered outside the outermost limits of Rome's spread was a mound in southern Rhodesia, where a Roman style mausoleum was found apparently constructed by the legion that was captured by the Scythians and carried away into what was then a land of mystery.

Corn Borers Prove Smarter Than Agriculture Scientists

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Department of agriculture scientists are beginning to believe that the European corn borer is smarter than ordinary man.

After years of experimentation the department devised an electric trap to destroy the moths in flight. Research experts tried it on the early season hatch. They set up a grid of wires, suspended between two poles, in an infested field. The wires were charged with 6,000 volts. The moths literally exploded when they tried to fly through the grid. The experts were elated.

But the second generation moths fooled the experts. They cruised over the corn tops until they sighted the grid. They dipped under it unscathed.

The experts don't know why. They are trying to find out. Meanwhile, they are not recommending the device for control of corn borers.

The Exes will meet next season's football team in a game Thursday, March 29. It promises to be an exciting rough and tumble game. The futures have the exes out numbered in men, but the exes are saying that "what they lack in quantity, they make up for in quality." Thursday's game will prove or disprove their statement.

Football

German Causes Uproar

DOORANCE, Kas.—The Kansas High School Athletic association protested the decision of Doorance principle Glenn Y. Wycoff to let a German high school team play football as part of his one year education in life in the United States.

Wycoff said that he wanted the team, Rudolph Dirschlger of Baden, Germany, "to have the experience during his one year here that is so thoroughly typical of the fall activities of the American high school—football."

The association, however, would not see it that way and ordered all games played by Doorance forfeited.

The youth came to the United States for a year of American education under sponsorship of the German bureau and the grange. Wycoff wrote the other principals protesting the association move. "We certainly did not want to Germany to recruit a player for our football team," he wrote.

Disaster-Loan Plan

Farmers Grows into Huge Business

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The flood relief measure started in the west has mushroomed into tremendous business. In fact, the disaster-loan program has grown into a $33,000,000 business and covers parts of 37 states and Puerto Rico. It is still growing by leaps and bounds.

The program was born in April, 1948, to help ranchers in western Texas and Wyoming who suffered heavy livestock losses in the "great drought."

Since then it has expanded to include any type of production hazard from bollweevil damage in the cotton states to wind damage in England.

Congress put the farmers home administration in charge of the program. The organization reports that more than 25,000 loans have been made to farmers in 1,156 counties in 37 states as well as to 37 municipalities in Puerto Rico.

The loans are secured by real estate and chattel mortgages bearing three per cent interest and, with few exceptions, are payable at the end of the next harvest.

The average about $1,192 each, although there is no limit on the amount a farmer may borrow if he qualifies as a "disaster victim" and can put up sufficient collateral.

The largest loan approved to date was $400,000 to a Mississippi farmer.

The number of regions designated as disaster areas are mounting, with the state of Mississippi where the cotton crop was damaged by bad weather and weevils. Loans in the state are expected to swell the total of outstanding loans by several million dollars.

"The end isn't in sight," one official said. "It looks like the program is here to stay—unless the government starts taking losses like it did in the feed-and-seed-loan program of the depression era."

Young Buried Coal Miner

After 3 Days of Digging

SELLECK, Wash.—For the second time in 18 years, John Walti was rescued after a mine disaster. He was saved recently when rescue crews found him 400 feet underground where he had been a prisoner for 54 hours.

He was weak, pain wracked from a crushed right arm and near a state of shock when he was brought to the surface of the Big Four coal mine.

In his latest accident, Walti was caught in an avalanche of rock and timber when the mine roof gave away. Several other miners escaped and they were sure that Walti had been swept to his death by the slide.

But a huge 12 by 12 timber fell down in such a manner that it and others held off the rock. He was able to breathe and remained conscious.

"I got cold. Then it got colder," he recalled after his arrival at a hospital near Selleck.

"A long time went by. A hell of a long time. Then I heard some noise. I whistled. I yelled as best I could. I don't know whether they heard me."

When I kind of gave up. I didn't think I could make it. I passed out. Then I came to and heard more noise. I yelled and talked to them. They heard me this time."

Sweetening National

Home for Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia—Yugoslavia is capitalizing on its export honey.

High up in mountainous Slovenia, among the towering peaks of Triglav, Yugoslavia developed—even before World War II—a bee famed for its honey.

Before the war, most of the output was kept at home. Now the bees themselves are being sold abroad to strengthen Yugoslavia's beleaguered budget. The bee-boys—who tend the hives and collect honey with scarcely a sting—formed a cooperative with 1,500 members.

Corn King

Named at Montana Show

SIDNEY, Mont. — Dwight L. Howard of Savage was crowned "Corn King" of Montana at the state corn and eastern Montana grain show.

Hilmar Sherman of Forsyth was named runner-up. Rosebud county won the county collective banner with Richland county taking second place.

Howard won the Corn King trophy as a result of his exhibits of the champion bushel of corn at the show, the best bushel of semi-dent corn, and the best ten-ears of semi-dent corn. Sherman exhibited the champion 10 ears of corn, the best 10 ears of Flint corn and the best bushel of Flint corn.

There were 30 bushels of corn, 30 ten-ear exhibits as well as 50 exhibits of grain at the show.

Population Shift

From Rural to City

Life Noted in Census

NEW YORK — A further shift from rural to city life has occurred among Americans during the past 10 years, Metropolitan Life Insurance company statisticians report. This trend is evidenced, according to the statisticians, by the 1950 census returns which show that the rate of population growth has been least in counties with small communities.

Although the county's total population increased by 14.5 per cent in the ten years from 1940 to 1950, the counties with a population under 25,000 in 1940 increased only 0.3 per cent. By contrast, the counties with 25,000-49,999 population gained 8.3 per cent. The most rapid increase—19.5 per cent—was in counties with 100,000 or more people in 1940.

"This tendency of the people to concentrate more and more in areas which already are well populated continues a trend which has existed for many decades," the statisticians observe, "with the result that a steadily increasing proportion of the population is living in the larger towns and cities."

The counties with less than 25,000 residents in the south-central and west-north-central agricultural regions actually lost population between 1940 and 1950. In California, however, which had an extraordinary population growth during the decade, even the small counties, with numerous small towns, increased 27 per cent.

The over-all growth of population in the past decade is found to follow a definite geographic pattern. "The relative gains were smallest in the northeast, and accelerated as one goes southward and westward," the statisticians noted.

Half of Town Made Ill

By an 'Airborne Virus'

MERCERSBURG, Pa. — More than half of the 2,300 people in this small community were made ill recently by an "airborne virus."

Dr. Louis Hitchcock, member of the borough's board of health, said the symptoms of the illness were nausea, vomiting, severe pain in the abdominal region and diarrhea.

The attack started on a Tuesday night. In the ensuing hours 1,100 citizens, including 135 students enrolled at the Mercersburg Academy became infected.

There were isolated cases in farm areas, cases in the public schools and elsewhere. For that reason, Dr. Hitchcock said, the board of health ruled out the possibility of water acting as a carrier of the illness since not all of the people used the same water.

Dr. Hitchcock said a possible explanation might be that the virus was blown into the area by air movements. He estimated that more than half of the Franklin county community had been affected. Many persons recovered without medical attention.

Iowa Testing Landing

Fields for Small Towns

OSCEOLA, Iowa. — Four Iowa cities are leading the way toward an airport program nearly every small town and city can afford.

Osceola, Hampton, Ida Grove and Guttenburg now have single-strip airports, adequate for farmers' and businessmen's private planes.

Each of the airports was built at a total cost of well under $1,000. The airports have runway markers, a windsock, tiedown areas for parking planes, outdoor restrooms and a shelter house with telephone. They adjoin a main highway and are only a mile or so from town.

The Iowa aeronautics commission thinks all of the state's 930 towns should have landing facilities. Norbert Locke, director of the commission, reported that there are 2,400 private planes in Iowa, and 4,500 active pilots who use them on business.

He commented that Iowa has 500 flying farmers—more than any other state—and many of them fly to town for implement parts, or to let their wives shop. Low-cost landing strips open up smaller cities for business, and offer an advantage in being close to town. The Osceola airport, for instance, is only a 50-cent taxicab trip from the business district.

SKY WONDERS

Glowing Gas

Found in Sky

CLEVELAND, O.—Dr. Edwin F. Carpenter of the University of Arizona reported the recent discovery of vast rivers of glowing gas and stars formed by cosmic collisions.

Long and thin, the streams of gas stretch like a faint filament or link between two galaxies, the great star cities of the universe, he said.

He suggested that they were formed by a great sideswiping collision of two galaxies that lasted for 1,000,000 years. Hot gases were sucked out as a long streamer of wreckage as the galaxies tore through each other and then rushed apart.

The swirling river of gas apparently condenses into stars as it cools, and thus keeps glowing all the time. The rivers give a clue as to how some stars are created, and indicate that more stars are being born continually.

Gas Closes Collide

Dr. Carpenter said he found 15 cases in which pairs of galaxies are engaged in collision or emerging from one. Galaxies are great collections of stars, containing up to 100,000,000,000. Our Milky Way is one of the largest.

Some are spiral and some globular. They may be 100,000 light years wide, a light year being the distance light travels in one year. There are millions or billions of galaxies in the universe.

Stars in a galaxy are so widely separated that one galaxy can go right through another "without either group being aware of the other," Dr. Carpenter said. But gas clouds in the galaxies collide and grow hot, and the glowing filament of gas is pulled and trailed out as the star cities race on away. In some 4,000,000 to 6,000,000 years, the streamer becomes as long as a galaxy is wide.

Some are relatively thin, forming almost threadlike streams. Others are wide and fuzzy in appearance. Some look like an axle connecting two spiral galaxies.

New Type Star Found

Dr. Carpenter found the rivers in studying pairs of galaxies, or even larger groups, far out in space. Meanwhile, three other astronomers have announced the finding of what seems to be a brand-new type of star, a blue dwarf. It is one of the bluest stars in the heavens, and very hot. All other very hot blue stars are extremely large.

The blue dwarf lies in the Northern Cross constellation, but is well outside the Milky Way. That is, in a place where hot stars are found only rarely, they explained. It may represent a new family of dwarf, high-temperature stars, never before seen.

Washed Out French Cadet

Steals Army Plane, Dies

CALDWELL, Tex.—A French air cadet, heavy hearted because he couldn't win his wings, stole an air force plane and, laughing, flew it to his death.

Jean M. le Mitourad, 22, son of a French surgeon, was at the Randolph air force base with other young Frenchmen for training under the north Atlantic pact.

Randolph officials said that he had been downcast since failing as a pilot trainee. The cadet went to the flight line, climbed into the plane and took off. He zoomed low over Stinson and Brooks air bases, whizzed down over Randolph, then headed north.

A note indicating that he intended to crash the plane was found just after he took off. In it he apologized to "the American air force for destroying this plane."

Flights of other planes chased him over the skies, but returned to base when their gas started running low. Capt. Alain Jourdan, a French liaison officer, who flew along-side the cadet in another trainer in an effort to coax him down, said le Mitourad told him by radio: "I spend my last hours in the air and then I die."

Jourdan said the cadet seemed in command of his emotions and "laughed many times." He crashed in a wooded pasture about five miles west of Caldwell.
