Fast Service Authorized by Department

Effective June 1, the American Red Cross has been authorized by the Departments of the Army and Air Force, to relay through their rapid communications, death messages involving immediate families of overseas servicemen of these two branches, Mrs. C. O. Allard, home service chairman, Briscoe County Chapter, announced today.

Formerly, the Red Cross could send death messages to servicemen via these rapid facilities only if leave for the serviceman, which the family had requested, was denied.

Provision has also been made that all of these death notifications contain complete information as to the time and cause of death, welfare of the remaining family, whether leave is being requested, and any other relevant facts. Whenever possible, the message is given in person to the serviceman by the Red Cross field director at his base, to help him meet the shock of distressing news.

Since November, 1950, the Army and Air Force have allowed the transmittal of birth messages by rapid transit, but these messages do not have priority. The Navy makes its rapid communications system directly available to Navy, Marine, and Coast Guard families for sending emergency communications, as well as birth messages for its overseas personnel.

Reporting and communications service is a charter responsibility of the American Red Cross, Mrs. Allard says. The Red Cross provides the link between service men and their families when regular communication facilities fail, helping to reestablish direct contact, and to provide counsel whenever it is needed. Red Cross furnishes specific information when requested by the military.

To carry out this responsibility Red Cross Home Service maintains 24-hour coverage, thus insuring prompt assistance with reports and requests for reports in urgent situations involving servicemen and their families.

Mrs. Allard pointed out that one of the most misunderstood phases of Red Cross is its inability to grant emergency leaves to servicemen. This prerogative rests solely with the military. When requested by a soldier's commanding officer to verify certain facts, the Red Cross can use its vast network of chapters and field directors to obtain necessary information, but the decision whether or not leave is to be granted must be made by the commanding officer.

Recent Army and Air Force rulings now allow emergency leave to a serviceman whose wife or minor child has died if the family requests leave. For deaths of other members of his family, however, it must be established that additional problems exist in the home which only his presence can alleviate.

As part of its Home Service program, the Red Cross can also help establish the facts when there is serious illness in a serviceman's family and an emergency exists requiring his presence at home. This reporting service also covers emergency family situations requiring the serviceman to be home for more than the normal 30-day leave period, when he is requesting reassignment and deferment from overseas service, or discharge for dependency or hardship. In these latter situations, however, the serviceman himself normally must first apply.

In all of these instances, however, actual disposition of the serviceman's request rests with military authorities. The Red Cross confines its activities to gathering, verifying, and transmitting the necessary information.

Your Wish Is Reason Flying Saucers Seen

EVANSTON, Ill. — People see "flying saucers" simply because they want to see them, a Northwestern University professor said recently.

Basing his observations on a continuing study of public opinion conducted at the university over the past several years, Dr. Curtis MacDougall, professor of journalism, said that people become convinced there are such things as flying saucers or flying disks, look for them in the sky—and consequently think they see them.

But he sees a ray of hope in our current attitude toward the phenomenon. "We're improving," he said. "Today we at least accept a scientific explanation of the saucers, even though that explanation may be space ships from Mars. It wasn't too many years ago when we would have labeled the thing as supernatural, rather than 'super-scientific.'"

Even five years ago, MacDougall notes, the scientists couldn't get a word in edgewise because of the apparent hysteria. Today we at least listen to their premise that unusual light refractions may be caused by varying temperatures of air layers.

We've had scares like this for years, MacDougall said, ranging from Edgar Allan Poe's trans-Atlantic balloon hoax to Orson Welles' famed Martian invasion broadcast.

"Maybe visitors from other planets would be a good thing," MacDougall conjectures. "It might serve to unify us for 'peace on earth.'"

New Container Saves Milk in Cold or Heat

CHICAGO—Whether a housewife lives in Butte, Mont., or Mobile, Ala., she no longer has to worry about spoilage of door-delivered milk, because of a new metal container which protects milk from sizzling heat or bitter cold, hours after it is delivered.

The container is able to protect milk cartons or bottles from freezing or spoiling, because it is insulated with a layer of vermiculite, a material also used for house fill insulation.

The box comes in sizes large enough to hold four, six, or eight bottles. It is constructed of galvanized steel, is water-tight, and has a cover which prevents contamination by dogs, cats, or insects.

Tests have shown that milk placed in the container will not freeze in less than four hours, even when the temperature is 10 degrees above zero.

Scrap From Sea Feed Steel Plants

LONDON—All over the world, the sea is yielding harvests of steel.

Hungry furnaces use millions of tons of scrap metal each year. Roughly half of each ton of new steel is born of scrap. Since World War II, a significant percentage of this scrap has come from ships—ships sunk by battle or storm, or worn out by long service and junked.

At dockside "boneyards," shipbreakers raze obsolete merchantmen, liners, and warships. But the real bounty comes from Davy Jones' locker. In derelict-littered harbors and along coastal sea lanes prowled by submarines a decade ago, marine salvage today is big, risky, and lucrative business.

Lured by high scrap prices, and armed with underwater cutting torches and war-learned demolition techniques, salvage masters tackle torpedoed ships at depths where once they would have remained forever in limbo.

Lloyd's of London lists nearly 600 ships lying at salvageable depths in the Atlantic alone. The war loss section of a recent international directory of merchant ships carries the names of 5,940 sunken vessels, and this list does not include German and Japanese losses.

Spree Costs Playboy Trouble With FBI

MIAMI SHORES, Fla.—A two-day spree and playing sugar daddy to 10 girls cost Ronald Hoatson $5,000 and a bit of explanation to the F.B.I.

So fast did he spend money that the F.B.I. suspected that he had robbed a bank somewhere.

Hoatson, 22, from Port Jarvis, N.Y., was spending cash that a railroad had paid him for an accident. He spent it down to his last $8 and planned a smaller spree on that.

His brother LeRoy shared in the spending marathon, but couldn't take a final tour of Miami night clubs.

Ronald said they spent most of the money on a car and a motorcycle and the rest of it on women and night clubs. He explained, "I spent it on various girls. I don't remember too well, but these girls here are real cool. By that I mean they're really something."

The brothers were arrested—LeRoy in a new convertible and Ronald on a new motorcycle—and charged with drunken driving.

Performance-wise, Pontiac is second to none, with power to spare that whisks you through city traffic or cruises with remarkable economy. And Pontiac is a big car, with a long, 122-inch wheelbase.

But Pontiac's outstanding feature is its price—a price so low that if you can afford any new car you can afford a Pontiac. Come in and get the facts that prove that dollar for dollar you can't beat a Pontiac!
