How Harmful are Cigarettes?

In all the history of human habit, there have been few changes so remarkable as the increase of cigarette smoking in the United States. Within a single generation, a new habit has laid hold upon an entire people to an extent which we do not begin to realize, and with effects which we certainly do not understand.

Last year 60 million Americans consumed 400 billion cigarettes. Every year, some 800,000 non-smokers join the smoking ranks. Two out of every three men, two out of every five women, one out of every seven boys of 14 smoke cigarettes. The average consumption is 19 a day. We spend some four billion dollars a year on tobacco products and supplies—twice as much as we pay all the public-school teachers in the United States.

This substance which we breathe into our mouths and lungs in such clouds is nicotine. Nicotine is the essential ingredient of tobacco. It is what makes tobacco and not just another weed. When one smokes, most of the nicotine escapes into the air. About a third gets into the mouth, where a little is absorbed. Of what goes into the lungs, perhaps a fifth is absorbed. The effect of smoking a cigar is equal to that of four or five cigarettes. A pipe gives one a trifle more nicotine than does a cigar. The faster one smokes, the more nicotine one gets; smoking twice as fast results in ten times as much nicotine. And the closer to the end of a cigarette one smokes, the more nicotine also, because the butt, having filtered the first part of the cigarette, has more than its share of nicotine. In pure form nicotine is a violent poison. One drop on a rabbit's skin throws the rabbit into a shock. The nicotine contents of two cigarettes, injected into the blood stream, would kill a smoker very quickly.

Some physicians say cigarettes irritate the throat while other physicians say they don't. First, no doctor claims that smoking soothes the throat. If you smoke a pack a day, you take in 840 cubic centimeters of tobacco tar in a year. That means that you have drenched your throat and lungs with 27 fluid ounces, or 15 full cocktail glasses, of tobacco tar containing benzo-pyrene. The brown stain in filters or on your handkerchief when you blow smoke through it is not nicotine, for nicotine is colorless; it is burned tar products, like the soot in a chimney. Nicotine irritates the mucous membranes of the respiratory tract. Tobacco tar injures those membranes.

Do cigarettes affect the stomach and digestion? Every smoker has noticed that a cigarette seems able to still hunger for a while. This is not a delusion. The sensation of hunger is caused by contractions of the stomach walls and smoking can suppress these contractions. By the same process, smoking interferes with the appetite and thereby with good nutrition. We all have friends who have quit smoking and have promptly gained in weight.

At the great American clinics, ulcer patients are told not to smoke. The Ochsner Clinic in New Orleans refuses to treat an individual unless he totally abstains from smoking. In Boston doctors had an interesting case some years ago, a man who had all the symptoms of duodenal ulcer. Even the X-ray showed it. But an operation found no ulcer at all. The patient stopped smoking, under orders, and his ulcer left him. Three months later, feeling quite well, he took up smoking again, and back came the ulcer. This time, however, the doctors ordered him off cigarettes completely. Since he stopped smoking, he has had no more ulcers.

Smoking is bad for athletes. Where staying power is demanded, tobacco lowers athletic performance. Non-smokers, in four years at Yale and Amherst, grew more in height and weight and lung capacity than did their smoking colleagues. At Yale the increase in chest development of the abstainers was 77 percent greater. At Wisconsin students were asked to hold a small metal point in a small hole, trying not to let it touch the sides. Electrical connections registered the number of times it did touch. Regular smokers were 60 percent more unsteady (Continued Next Week)

"Cooking Electrically, I can depend on good results everytime!"

says MRS. LANDON DONNELL,
 224 N. E. ALPINE DRIVE, PLAINVIEW, TEXAS

Electric cooking — and only electric cooking — with its pre-set, perfectly controlled temperature can guarantee the good results every time demanded by outstanding homemakers like Mrs. Donnell.

And only electric cooking combines perfect results with perfect styling. As Mrs. Donnell says: "Convenience and space-saving features, plus contemporary styling, led us to choose a built-in electric range when we redecorated our kitchen." Mrs. Donnell, incidentally, has used an electric range for several years. Her new built-ins are just modernizing the modern for her, so to speak.

Mrs. Donnell's new electric surface units fold into the wall when not in use — providing extra counter space. Only super-safe electric cooking could offer this fold-away feature.

Accurate, modern, space-saving and safe. These tests or any other that you might choose can be met best when they're met by an electric range. Try one and see.
