All Around the Town
by Mary Ann Sarchet

And it came to pass that as a farmer was laboring in his fields he came to notice that his electric fence charger had been taken away. And noting the car tracks nearby and large shoe tracks leading from the car to the place where the fence charger had been, he remarked to his son, Champ, that no one in Briscoe County had a foot that big except Raymond Grewe, Johnnie Lanham and Hanson Smith. (All of whom have served the county as sheriff.)

And placing the facts together with his knowledge that only the day before Lanham's cows had gotten through the fence and into a haystack in an adjoining field, he surmised that Lanham surely must have needed a fence charger more than either of the others.

"Well," he commented, "you'd think it would have taken him a little longer than this to turn dishonest!"

But his industry, patience, kindness of heart and the inability to bring a false accusation against another person was rewarded. The next day J. D. found a very nice mens wrist watch on the street, and he promptly adjusted the size of the band and began wearing it.

Any further developments will surely be reported in the next issue.

No Export Market Acreage For 1965-Crop Cotton

Fred Strange and Robert Haley Hill are shown presenting the profit from the Jaycee football game concession stand to School Superintendent J. S. Hinds. Seventy-five per-

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman has announced that no export market acreage for cotton would be authorized in 1965.

Under the Agricultural Act of 1964, when the carryover is in excess of eight million bales, export market acreage for the 1965 crop of cotton cannot be authorized unless the Secretary determines that the carryover of upland cotton at the end of the marketing year (July 31, 1966) will be at least one million bales less than the carryover at the beginning of the marketing year (August 1, 1965).

The national acreage allotment for 1965 has been set at the minimum level permitted by law, 16,000,000 acres, the same as for the 1963 and 1964 crops. A record high yield per acre was harvested in 1963 and a new record was established this year.

It is not estimated that the carryover of upland cotton at the end of the 1965-66 marketing year will be reduced as much as one million bales below the carryover at the beginning of the year. With the domestic consumption and exports of cotton during the 1965-66 marketing year at the relatively high levels now indicated for 1964-65.

Under this combined supply-demand outlook, the carryover of cotton on July 31, 1966, is estimated to be somewhat lower than in August, 1965. However, it is estimated that the reduction will not be sufficient to meet the statutory requirements for an authorization for export market acreage.

Apart from the statutory requirement, the large stocks of cotton now on hand make the need for a substantial reduction in the carryover so urgent that an authorization for export market acreage would not be warranted, the Department said.

In 1964, export market acreage equal to five percent of the effective allotment for the farm was allowed. A total of 9,826 farms were approved to plant export market acreage and only 47,816 acres were planted. Under the export market acreage program, the production from such acreage has to be exported at world prices without benefit of any export subsidy or equalization payment.

JANICE'S JOURNAL

by Janice Lewis
 "My parents just don't understand me." This or a similar saying has been used by teenagers over and over again. Mr. Webster defines the word "understand" for this situation to mean: to grasp or perceive fully the nature or character of.
 First, consider when this saying is most popular. Could it not possibly be when the teenager has been reprimanded or punished for having disobeyed his parents. Also it might be that the parents have denied the teenager the use of the car or something else equal in importance. Has this not been used as an answer to the question of "What made you turn bad?"

 Parents understand that when teenagers are given everything they desire, they soon fail to appreciate what they receive. Also, when first denied something they often become rebellious. Parents expect their teens to obey and respect them, as well. When parents are not respected and are disobeyed, punishment or scolding is in order.
 There are always two sides to every problem. Parents do not always understand what motivates a teenager. They fail to realize

WHAT WAS IT...

... Mrs. Malone was going to tell Vicki M. in homemaking on Tuesday of last week?
 ... That made Chyrel like Tony's car better than Weldon's.
 ... That Miss Self was doing in American history class on Tuesday of last week?
 ... That Mrs. Malone thought about Jeanne and Chyrel?
 ... That made Ricki leave Vicki Marler's house so suddenly?
 ... That made Lubbock Christian College think that Camellia is Silverton's girl track star?
 ... That made Sandi blush every time a certain person's name was mentioned?
 ... That caused Mr. Francis to set up a demerit system for all his English classes?
 ... That made Gale more interested in bands?
 ... That made Sandra believe that "puppy love" was love of one's pets?

that, although teens are not as wise as adults, they are very near the age of maturity. They have begun to accept their responsibilities and to take life more seriously. Although teenagers do not always act as one might think they should, they are only trying to find an answer to their problems and to find a place for themselves in the world.

The teenage years are perhaps the most confusing ones of a lifetime. It is a time when one is too old to do this but yet too young to do that. It is a problem as to which way to turn. It is a time when your behavior is explained with, "Oh, he's only a teenager."
 So, in answer to the problem of teens not being understood, there is no true solution. Self-analysis might help the situation. Are you a teen who is always mistreated and never understood? It's doubtful. On the other hand you may be a parent who has been quick to judge your teenagers. After all, it's just possible that you don't understand them. A little self-improvement on both sides would make for a better family relationship.

Question of the Week

Do you think it is as important for a girl to go to college as it is for a boy? Why?
 MARY SCHOTT: I think that it is just as important for a girl to get a college education as it is a boy. A college education is just as rewarding for a girl, because girls must grow up to be leaders also. Even if a girl plans to get married when she gets out of high school, I think she should go to college at least one year, because she needs to learn to take res-

What My Junior Year Has Meant To Me

by Elaine Boyles
 I have never had more fun in all my high school years as this year. My Junior year has passed much faster than the previous years.
 When you are a Junior this means you have just one more year before graduation and being on your own.
 A Junior has a few more privileges than a Freshman or a Sophomore, and is engaged in more, possibly, than the underclassmen. I have enjoyed being a part of the Junior Play cast very much. Practices are serious, and trying at times, with all that goes on backstage.
 I am looking forward to our Junior-Senior Banquet, too. I hope the Seniors like and enjoy the banquet as much as we will enjoy preparing it.
 One of the highlights of this year is ordering our Senior rings. This symbol of our school can be worn with great pride.

possibility before trying to make marriage work.
 LINDA FISCH: I think it is as important for a girl to go to college as it is for a boy. Most girls will, at some time, work for a living. Even if they are married, they may need to help support the family. Their husband might die, and they would have to support themselves. I also think that a girl has just as good an opportunity to get an education as a boy. Women are needed in many fields now and are getting some of the better jobs.

SHEILA MAPLES: Yes, because all girls may not have a husband to depend on for money. If a girl doesn't marry, she will have to support herself. If she fails to attend college, her chances of getting a good paying job are slim.

Also, if she does get married and something happens to her husband and he is unable to work, she will need to go to work. She will need a college education in order to obtain a good job.

JUDY MILLER: Yes, I believe it is just as important for a girl to go to college as a boy. The boy is the money maker in a family, but if something happened to your husband you would want to have a good job that paid well if you had to go to work.

If you were left with two or three children, you would want to provide for them as best you could. With a college education, you could find a higher paying job rather than without a college degree.

It has never hurt anyone to know more about things. It would help you to have a broader understanding. It would also aid you in carrying on a conversation.

ORLIN GRABBE: In our time it is not sufficient that a girl know only how to cook, how to sew, or the other essentials of housekeeping. The working girl has become a basic part of our social structure, and her part is an important one. Women are

But whether the goal of a girl is marriage or a career, she broadens her horizons, increases her prospects, and becomes a more amiable companion through a college education. The personage of the dumb blond is gone, I hope, except, of course, in those certain instances when it is advantageous to be one.

PLANNED OBSOLESCENCE

"These were the diseases that were," might make good television programming for a science show in the future if the course of medical progress continues at its current brisk pace.

The dedication and employment of the medical and allied professions toward making all disease obsolete already has relegated many once common maladies to the ranks of medical curiosities, while at the same time lengthening the lifespan some 20 per cent in 20 years and saving the lives of an estimated 4 million Americans who would have died if the 1937 death rate prevailed today.

However, many medical targets still remain, most significantly cancer and heart disease, both of whose death rates have more than doubled since 1900. The investment since 1950 of some $2 billion in research by the American pharmaceutical industry and millions more by the Government and universities has generated unprecedented medical achievements and augers well for the future fight against disease.
