MISD Board adopts $9.7 million budget

By RICK WHITE Managing Editor

The Muleshoe Independent School District Board of Trustees Monday unanimously passed a $9.7 million budget for the 1996-97 school year.

No one showed up for the public meeting scheduled before the vote to gather input on the budget. The Board then passed the budget on the recommendation of MISD Superintendent Bill Moore without further discussion.

"I feel real good about the budget from the standpoint of instruction," Moore said. "The Board continues to put money toward special instructional programs that they don't necessarily have to."

Special instructional programs are often the first to go when money gets tight. "It's also fair to our employees with a (salary) increase that was well deserved, and it addresses some critically needed facility issues," Moore said. The budget, which increased $818,562 from last year, includes $230,000 in employee raises and $650,000 for capitol outlay projects.

Mostm of the budget increase($554,371) comes from the district's

The budget was approved without a tax increase from the 1995-96 rate of $1.2704 per $100 of property value. Moore said it is important to both appease the taxpayers and satisfy the state when setting a tax rate.

State funding is gauged on the local tax

"The state wants to ensure a district is making a great enough effort at the local (tax) level, and the carrot is additional funding," Moore said.

MISD received $5.3 million last year in state funding.

In other action, the Board approved the 1996-97 campus and departmental plans.

Goals and objectives were set by committees comprised on faculty, parents, community members and business leaders.

Then specific plans were designed by campus administrators and faculty to meet the set goals and objectives.

Council hires city manager

By RICK WHITE Managing Editor

Citing a desire to return to the Panhandle area, James Fisher Tuesday morning accepted the job as Muleshoe City Manager.

Fisher replaces longtime City Manager Dave Marr, whose June resignation became official Aug. 15.

"People in the Panhandle are friendly, honest and hard working," said Fisher in a phone interview from his office in Castroville, where he is city manager. "People are committed to making good things happen in the community."

Fisher, 34, is a graduate of West Texas A&M and was director of the Tulia Parks & Recreation department for three years.

His wife is from Tulia, and her desire to return to the area also weighed in the decision.

Fisher has worked as the Castroville city manager since 1995. Castroville is a fast-growing community of 2,100 located 40 miles west of San Antonio. He was the assistant city manager in Port Aransas, a resort community on the Texas coast, from 1992-94.

He will start work in Muleshoe Sept. 16.

"We (the City Council) talked about the qualities we wanted for the job, and he fit them to a T," said Muleshoe Mayor Robert Montgomery.

Among those qualities were image and personality.

"We're excited," Montgomery said. "We feel he is someone who projects well professionally and somebody who is going to step in and go to work."

The Council received 26 applicants for the job, which pays $41,000. The Council narrowed the choices to two, Fisher and Brook L. Ward, an economic program analyst from El Paso.

Fisher was offered the job Friday.

"The number one thing I like about him is his experience," City Councilman Roger Williams said. "And he indicated he likes to get out in the public and let people know what was going on.'

Williams said getting the police department back in order and resolving the landfill situation are the two most pressing city issues facing Fisher.

Lt. Jay Livingston has been serving as the city's acting police chief since Julian Dominguez resigned in November of 1995.

Because of new state laws and a nearly full landfill, the city must find an alternative to

Muleshoe offense gets passing grade

By RICK WHITE Managing Editor

Muleshoe High School showed signs it has the kind of offense that can keep rival coaches awake at night — and allow its head coach a good night's sleep.

A week after a shaky outing in an intraquad scrimmage, the Mules looked crisp and confident on offense Friday night during a controlled scrimmage against Floydada at Benny Douglass Stadium.

"A week ago, we were way especially sharp early. behind, "Muleshoe head coach David Wood said Saturday morning. "I could sleep last night."

while for his team to grasp the complicated offense he was installing. He just didn't know how long; or how many sleepless nights.

"We're where we need to be on offense," Wood said. "And we're ahead of where I thought we'd be on defense."

Muleshoe outgained Floydada in total yards, 180-140, with each team running 35 plays. Neither team scored.

Remember this was Floydada, hardly a premier 3A program. The Whirlwinds handed the Mules a heartbreaking 35-34 loss last year.

"We're going to play a lot tougher teams than Floydada," Wood said. "Our goal is the playoffs. We need to get ready to play playoff-caliber teams."

The diminutive Hines is a scat back and dangerous when he gets outside. Field is a northsouth runner who will also see time at fullback. Hines impressed the coaching staff Friday with his toughness, bouncing right up after taking several big hits. Field looked quick to the hole and ran hard.

Senior lineman Rico Aguirre is a man among boys.

He was the talk of the Floydada sideline, especially after treating one Whirlwind ball carrier like a rag doll.

Senior TE/S Jarrod Redwine figures to be busy. Tight ends have a big role in Wood's offense. Redwine is also a big hitter on defense.

 Junior LB/G Rodney Alanis is quicker this year after dropping some weight. He's also become a leader on defense and calls the defensive signals.

Kiwanis keep pride flying high

Every holiday, hundreds of American flags fly throughout the city courtesy of the Muleshoe Kiwanis Club.

While most people are still catching an extra hour or so of sleep Monday, a half-dozen men, rising well before the sun, will be busy placing 130 American flags at businesses and agencies throughout the city, including the mammoth 10x15 foot flag that flies above the Muleshoe State Bank.

"It's mostly about community pride," said Kiwanis member Sonny Bennett.

Labor Day is one of the approximately 11 state and federal holidays that the Kiwanis put out flags.

"I was extremely pleased with the decisions (the quarterbacks) made," Wood said. "Maybe they didn't get the ball there, but it was the right decision."

Most of Floydada's yards came on big plays out of its wishbone offense. Four runs accounted for 82 of the Whirlwinds' 140 total yards.

"We just need to develop more consistency on our reads," Wood said. "When we start free-lancing, that's when we get burned."

Wood again was encouraged with his team's attitude and intensity.

"We have lots of people who want to play," Wood said.

"There's so many people jockeying for position, and that's making everybody so much better."

The Muleshoe JV dominated Floydada, before finishing in a 6-6 tie. Gilbert Vela scored for Muleshoe on a 63-yard run. "We've got a real solid JV team," Wood said. The Mule frosh were competitive, but lost 6-0. Muleshoe was at a huge size disadvantage on the line of scrimmage.

They didn't back down,' Wood said. "They weren't afraid of anybody."

ETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

We are writing concerning the student dress code in Muleshoe Independent Schhol District.

Does the school have any right to tell parents how to dress their kids? Does the length of a your hair or the length of your shirt-tail affect a student's learning ability, or pose some sort of health hazard?

We understand that we should look decent for school, and that bikinis and swimming trunks are not appropriate.

We have never known a shirt-tail to offend anyone or the length of a student's hair to cause a disruption in the classroom. Some shirts are just not made to be tucked in, and some people were not made to tuck in their shirts—no offense.

Most students find it a little offensive to walk into school on the first day with their shirts untucked thinking they looked nice, and then were told they looked sloppy.

We should have the option of tucking in our shirts, and the guys should have the choice to have long hair as long as they keep it neat; if girls can do it, guys can too.

That's being a little sexist, don't you think?

That's practically taking away our right to be an individual. And if the reason that they make us tuck in our shirts to prevent sagging, which is a stupid gesture in the first place, why punish all students? There may be a total of three people that actually sag their pants out of a school of 420 students.

The main concern of the school officials should be how to teach the students, not how they look or dress.

Do we have any evidence that this new dress code will improve a students IQ? When these questions can be answered with facts and not opinions, the students will be happy to oblige by these rules.

"Early Learning"

New Programs Designed to Help Children Achieve at Higher Levels

Johnny Brinson, a 20-year teaching veteran, declares: "I guarantee that every one of my students will be reading by June." Third-grade teacher and 14-year teaching veteran Darlene Barnes is equally confident: "By the end of the year, all of my students will know their fractions and their times tables. They'll know how to estimate, how to borrow and carry, and how to read graphs and charts. I'll stake my reputation on it."

The Merrow Report "Early Learning" follows first, second, and third graders through a year at public schools that claim to guarantee success for all children. The stakes are high; if youngsters fail to grasp basic skills in reading and math, they're almost certain to fall dangerously behind in the years ahead.

Sadly, only 15-20 percent of students in America's schools achieve what these teachers have guaranteed for their first and third graders. Another 15-20 percent fail, and the rest achieve at mediocre levels.

Using this research, teachers Brinson and Barnes have begun a journey they hope will lead to successful reform of teaching methods in the early grade levels. In fall 1995, The Merrow Report "Early Learning" began tracking the program of Brinson's first graders and others as they learned to read following the philosophy of a reform program called the School Development Program. It also tracks Barnes' third graders and others as they learn math following a reform program called Roots and Wings.

"Early Learning" also visits schools using two other revolutionary reforms: the Core Knowledge approach and the Accelerated School

The Merrow Report "Early Learning" will be broadcast Friday, September 6th at 10:00 p.m. Repeats Sunday, September 8th at 4:30 p.m.
