Houston firm buys Anthony's

Store will be converted to Bealls

By RICK WHITE Managing Editor

A Houston-based retailer has announced plans to convert Anthony's clothing store to a Bealls department store.

Stage Stores, Inc. recently acquired 426 Anthony's stores, including the one in Muleshoe.

Each Bealls will be geared toward meeting the needs of individual communities, according to Joanne Swartz, senior vice-president of marketing for Stage Stores.

The Anthony's has been rumored to be in financial trouble for the past few years.

"I think it's a step forward," said Patty Hartline, director of the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce. "(Having Bealls) is something that will improve the variety for Muleshoe shoppers and that's always positive. Lots of people from Muleshoe have been going to the Bealls in Clovis for years, so they'll be familiar with the products."

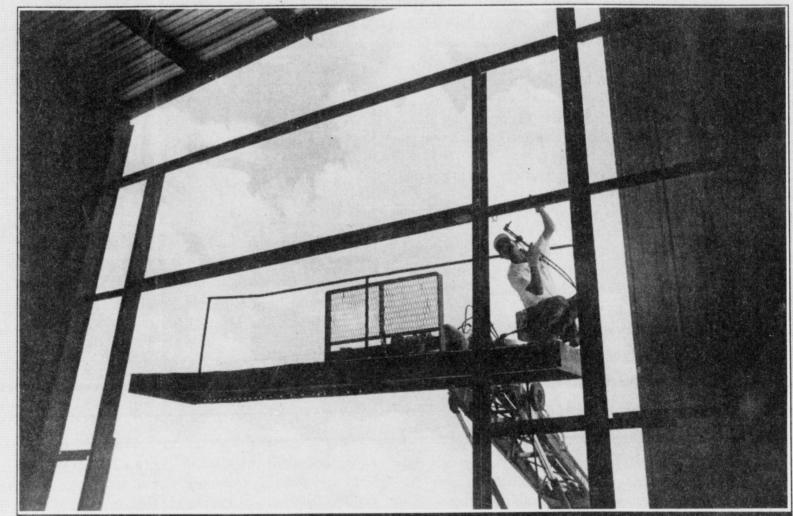

Swartz said the 14,000 square-foot Muleshoe store will be closed for a few weeks for remodeling before a grand reopening Sept. 11.

No personnel changes are anticipated as a result of the acquisition, Swartz said.

Muleshoe customers will find the same kind of merchandise they're used to finding (in Anthony's) and more, according to Swartz. She mentioned a full line of cosmetics, fine jewelry and fragrances and a broader line of sportswear as

USDA launches new weapon in battle of bugs

SHAFTER, Calif. -Government researchers are taking a fling at a different way of spreading beneficial insects into cotton fields.

Scientists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Shafter research station are using a launcher — the kind that flings clay pigeons into the air for trapshooters — to blast beneficial bugs into cotton fields.

The live bugs are put in discs that look like clay pigeons but are really limestone, a biodegradable material. Compressed manure or peat moss also could be used to make the discs, according to researchers.

The limestone disc are scattering widely along the ground as the launcher is moved down a row of cotton plants.

When the temperature is right, the good bugs leave the disc in search of bad bugs to

Damage high from July 5 storm

By RICK WHITE Managing Editor

A July 5 thunderstorm destroyed more than 10,000 acres of cropland and left a trail of possible of tornadic activity in western Bailey County.

The fast-moving storm packed with hail and high winds carved a path of destruction three to four miles wide from the West Camp area southeast to Baileyboro, affecting nearly 25,000 acres.

About half of those acres were destroyed, according to Kim Hanlin, director of the Bailey County Farm Service Agency.

Mst of the acres affect were planted with cotton.

Because the storm came in the middle of the growing season, farmers were left with little choice but to switch to cover crops or hope battered cotton and corn plants at least partially recover.

"This is worse than any storm we've had - so far," Hanlin said. "It couldn't have come at a worse time."

Insurance will cover some of the damage, but farmers will still take a big financial hit, according to Hanlin.

He said farmers have turned to sunflowers, peas and beans, or grain sorghum in hopes of recouping some of the loss.

Cotton fields were the hardest hit. Bailey County Extension Agent Curtis Preston, who surveyed the damage last Monday with Hanlin, said hail stripped cotton plants so completely that the stems "looked like toothpicks." What the hail didn't get, the wind

Most of the damage south of the Coyote Lake Feedyards was wind related, Preston said.

Gusting winds of 50 miles per hour plus "sandblasted" cotton plants, turning the leaves black, Preston said.

Damage in corn fields from 10 to 100 percent, according to Hanlin.

A possible tornado heavily damaged at least a half-dozen irrigation sprinklers and downed several utility poles in the Coyote Lake area.

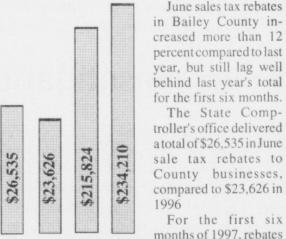

The Bailey County Sheriff's Office reported no actual sightings but the twisted sprinklers hinted toward some tornadic activity.

The storm also dumped three to four inches of rain in some spots, temporarily closing several county roads due to flooding.

No room for nervousness on stage

By RICK WHITE Managing Editor

Shy won't fly when it comes to community theatre.

Fortunately, Twlya Gear, Nikki Felan and Sandra Ellis combined don't have a shy bone in their bodies.

All three are featured performers in this year's version of "Keepers of the Legend," which runs from Aug. 8-11 at the Muleshoe Heritage Center. The locally-produced outdoor drama is now in its third year.

Commission saving historical cemeteries

AUSTIN- The Texas Historical Commission has created a new preservation tool to help save historic cemeteries in Texas. The Official Historic Texas Cemetery designation was developed to respond to the problem of the destruction and illegal removal of historic cemeteries in Texas.

Individuals or organizations may submit an application to the Texas Historical Commission to apply for this designation. If a cemetery meets the criteria of being at least 50 years old and is deemed worthy of preservation for its historic associations, a Declaration of Dedication, certifying the cemetery as historic on all deed records, will be issued to be recorded in the appropriate county clerk's office.

For more information, contact Gerron Hite, Local History Programs Division, Texas Historical Commission, 512-475-4167.

High Plains cotton producers who face the possibility of increased pressure from aphids in 1997 will likely be denied the use of, arguably, the most effective aphid control tool available, Furadan.

According to Lubbockbased Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. (PCG) the Texas Department of Agriculture has not received any written confirmation about the status of its Furadan Section 18 request. EPA officials have verbally notified TDA that the request has been denied.

Mississippi agriculture officials have already recieved written notification from the Environmental Protection agency (EPA) denying a Section 18 request under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA) for Furadan, whose active ingredient is carbofuran.

The EPA letter denying the Section 18 request states that the reason for the denial as the inability to make a determination of "a reasonable certainty of no harm", primarily for infants and children under the age of 12.

Cotton industry organiza-

Belt are pulling together through the National Cotton verse this decision.

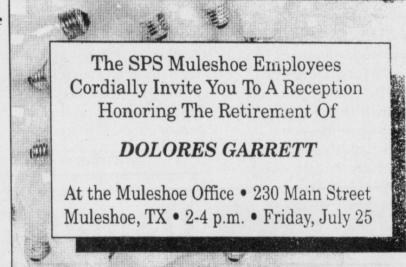

PCG has signed on to a let-Goldman, MD, EPA Assistant Administration, laying out points of disagreement concerning EPA's decision.

The industry letter takes EPA to task for decisions made under the auspices of implementing the Food Quality Protection Act and the ever changing criteria EPA uses to make these decisions. The letter also asks for justification of the stan-tions throughout the Cotton dard used to make the determination regarding carbofuran.

The loss of Furadan for Council in an attempt to re- aphid control means cotton producers who experience severe infestations my be left to ter being sent to Lynn fend for themselves. Finding effective control strategies for cotton aphids is difficult because of the explosive nature of infestations and the aphids ability to rapidly reproduce.

Often, producers forced to use less effective products must apply higher rates of the aphicides currently available more often in an attempt to gain the level of control possible with use of Furadan.

Loan consolidation made easy online

Sallie Mae, the nation's leading source of funds for college, to say unveiled SMART LOAN online, the company's Web-based application for federal student loan consolidation. A new feature to Sallie Mae's award winning Internet site (www.salliemae.com), SMART LOAN Online enables borrowers to begin the process of consolidating their federal education loans by applying electronically.

After reviewing the online workbook, loan consolidation applicants can determine monthly loan payment and overall borrowing costs by using the online repayment calculator. They can also compute anticipated savings through SMART REWARDS Program (a 1% interest rate reduction after a the first 48 scheduled payments are received on time) and Direct Repay plan (a quarter-point rate cut when payments are automatically deducted through the borrower's bank account). Applicants then enter their personal information and student loan data into the online form, which is then sent electronically(with encryption) to Sallie Mae. Before processing can begin, however, applicants, must print and review loan terms and conditions, sign and "promise to pay" document and forward it throughout the mail. Borrowers with at least $7,500 in eligible federal education loans can referenceor consolidate— their loans into one loan. In addition to the convenience of making one rather than multiple monthly loan payments, loan consolidation also appeals particularly to highly indebted borrowers who may have difficulty meeting their monthly loan obligations. By extending the term of their loan, borrowers receive their monthly payments, although overall borrowing costs will increase.

The Sallie Mae online SMART LOAN application was developed jointly with Universal Algorithms, Inc. (UAI), which through its ongoing partnership with Sallie Mae, has helped pioneer inno-

European cattle ban could be lifted

As expected, the World Trade Organization ruled July 1 that the European Union must lift the ban imposed in 1989 against cattle treated with growth-promoting hormones. The EU quickly vowed to appeal, reports DTN Meat Industry News.

WTO decided that in imposing the ban, the EU has made only an "arbitrary or unjustified" differentiation, lacking any basis in recognized scientific standards, between hormone-treated meat and other types of meat.

EU spokesman Gerard Kiely said the EU would likely file and appeal with the WTO in Geneva in late August. A new dispute panel would then have between 60 and 90 days to make a final ruling, he said.

If the EU loses the appeal, it would have to lift its ban or compensate the United States. A U.S. trade official said Washington would probably not be satisfied with compensation and would insist on market access for American beef.

The U.S. beef industry has long argued that the ban costs its members nearly $250 million a year in European sales.

For a city to have made the final cut it had to have at least one team in each of the four major professional leagues, as well as a school that plays Division I-A football and Division I basketball.

Weather phenomenon brewing in Pacific

El Nino, meaning the little boy in Spanish, is an abnormal state of the ocean- atmosphere system that develops every few years. It involves anomalous warming of the surface waters in the eastern portion of the tropical Pacific Ocean. This yields important consequences for weather around the globe, especially the southern United states.

Usually, the trade winds blow westward across the tropical Pacific. In response, warm surface water accumulates over the western Pacific. Rainfall, associated with rising air over the warmer waters, is prevalent over the western Pacific.

During El Nino, the trade winds relax in the central and western Pacific Ocean. This allows the warmer surface water to move eastward across the tropical Pacific. Rainfall follows the warm eastward. The eastward translation of the atmospheric heat source above the warmest water results in large changes in the global atmospheric circula-

As of June 1997, weather observations revealed unusually strong El Nino conditions over the tropical Pacific. Preliminary indications suggest this developing El Nino may be the strongest one since the fall and spring of 1982/1983. That El Nino was the Local golfers qualify for PGA event

Four Muleshoe golfers qualified for the West Texas Junior PGA area championship tournament July 23-24 in the Midland-Odessa area.

Nine-year-olds Ariel Flores and Trevor Turnbow will play in an 18-hole tournament played over two days at Hogan Park in Midland while Kyle Embry and Keisha Whitt will play in 36-hole tournaments at Odessa Country Club.

Flores will play in the 7-9 year old co-ed division after winning a pair junior PGA regional tournament at Muleshoe and Olton this summer.

Turnbow qualified by winning the 10-11 age group at a tournament in Levelland last week. There was no 7-9 tournament that day.

It is uncertain if he will have to play in the 10-11 age group or if he will be allowed to drop back to his normal age group.

Embry qualified by winning the Junior PGA tournament at Muleshoe and Whitt won at Tulia in June.

WT Heat advance in BCI tournament

LUBBOCK — Muleshoe junior Erin Whilhite is a member of the West Texas Heat girls basketball team that advanced to the quarterfinals of the Basketball Congress International Girls Summer Prep Tournament being held at Texas Tech.

The WT Heat beat the Oklahoma Express 53-41 Monday to advance to the quarterfinals, where they faced San Diego Showcase Blue at Municipal Coliseum.

The team is made up of high school players from the Panhandle-South Plains area, including three players from Denver City.

She also likes the fact that people will be coming from all over the area to a little town like Muleshoe to watch her perform.

"It's pretty neat," she said.
Ellis plays Grace Masters, the wife of rancher John Masters, a lead character who struggles to convince fellow ranchers of the need to incorporate Bailey County.

"It's a lot of hard work, but it's fun," said Ellis. "I like to sing and dance, but mostly it's a chance to socialize."

Previous experience in an outdoor drama in Crosbyton helped her land the role.

Ellis, who grew up in Muleshoe and is returning after 17 years to teach at Three Way school, will have to sing a solo, something she's never done before.

Still, Ellis didn't anticipate any knee-knocking jitters.

'The audience knows we're amateurs, — and we are — so their expectations aren't as high," Ellis said.

Besides, performing is something she does every day while teaching.

"In order to teach, you have to perform to hold their attention. If you don't hold their attention, they'll never learn anything."

Shy doesn't fly for teachers either.

Hosted by John Viehman, executive editor of Backpacker, the programs explore some of the most exotic and wild landscapes. Desert and jungle hiking, kayaking, whitewater canoeing, low-impact caving, and ice climbing are all part of the real-life, human-powered adventures captured on film, as guests weave stories about each region's wildlife, indigenous cultures, and history.

Episodes include wilderness survival in California, kayaking Utah's Green River, jungle hiking in Belize, rain forest hiking in Washington, whitewater canoeing in Maine, desert hiking in Mexico, and much more.

Anyplace Wild will be broadcast Sundays at 12:30 p.m. beginning July 20th. The series repeats Thursdays at 10:00 p.m. beginning July 24th on KENW-TV.

Women's Basketball: The Road to Respect

As summer 1997 approaches, sports fans and the media turn to focus on women's basketball, as the Women's NBA bounds into the limelight. Women's Basketball: The Road to Respect, a one-hour documentary, traces the remarkable roots of the sport from its beginnings, soon after the invention of the game in 1891, to the popular full-court, fast-break sport it is today.

Vintage photos, rare video footage, and in-depth interviews with toplevel contenders set the tone for this exciting history of women's hoops, highlighting players from the 1930s to the 1980s. Those players, whose teams ranged from industrial organizations such as Hanes Hosiery of Winston-Salem, NC (winners of 102 straight contests) to barnstorming teams such as the Arkansas Travelers and the all-American Redheads, reveled in the spirit of competition, building a sense of camaraderie that set a precedent for the modern game.

Women's Basketball: The Road to Respect airs Sunday, July 27th

at 4:30 p.m. on KENW-TV.
