"A TREMENDOUS PRICE REDUCTION"

"On January seventh, nineteen twenty-six, Dodge Brothers, Incorporated, will announce a tremendous reduction in the prices of their complete line of motor cars.

"These reductions will apply on all cars bought after midnight, December fifteen, nineteen-twenty-five.

"When the new prices are made known on January seventh the full amount of the reduction will be immediately refunded to all purchasers since December fifteenth, nineteen twenty-five.

"These revolutionary reductions are made possible by a recently completed ten million dollar expansion program—new buildings and equipment that will nearly double the capacity of Dodge Brothers' factories in nineteen twenty-six.

"There is no change in the policy upon which Dodge Brothers established their leadership eleven years ago—the policy of constant improvement without yearly models."

They had sca*. tered as families sometimes do, and those left in the town were two older families. Yes, it was quite true. There wasn't a single child in the family now. They had nieces and nephews, small children they knew and were fond of to whom they would give presents. They would give nice presents,

They themselves would be sensible. They would not give presents to each other. They were grown-up. Why should they go in for something that was distinctly a possession of child-

They would have Christmas dinner together. That they had finally decided they could not forego. Oh, the other ruling was very sensible, and they all agreed, but-well, it was quite sensible. Children belonged to Christmas, Christmas to children. Let it remain that way.

The family who lived down by the dinner. The other family were coming to it and were going to bring the mince pies and the plum puddings as their part of the Christmas feast. They wanted to do something about a Christmas dinner-there wasn't any special reason for it but they wanted to do something.

The table was set the night before. There wasn't much to do Christmas morning. Later they would go to church and join in singing the Christmas hymns. That would be suitable to the day-to the holiday, holy day,

No one said a word. No one knew what each other was thinking.

But early that morning one of the members of the family down by the mill telephoned the other family an asked them to come down early.

"I just fixed up one or two little things," said the one who had tele phoned, a little shyly, and to her own family she said the same.

They came. Every one gathered about the old table that had been brought out every Christmas. It was a shaky old table, but it somehow seemed to be a part of Christmas. And in no time it was covered with gifts. Every one had surreptitiously been fixing up little presents for each other, And the table groaned under its weight of packages tied with gay old mas after Christmas they had taken ribbons and tissue paper as of yore.

New Experience for Santa Claus

By W. D. FENNYPACKER European conservation and the servation of the servation

APTAIN and Mrs. Pickering promised to play Santa Claus. They loved to do a little towards making the day bright and spreading the holiday spirit. Christsome part-if not for the children, then for the sick or aged-but always

This time it was different. They, themselves, nervously awaited the day. "We said we wouldn't have a It was to be unique. They were to Christmas celebration now that we help in a festive occasion at a state's prison. They were to carry gladness and the spirit of Christmas with them and radiate it within four sombre stone walls. It

The Pickerings were to impersonate Santa and Mrs. Santa Claus.

When the time arrived and everything else was in readiness Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus found there was but one way to get into the assembly hall to create the proper effect. That was by climbing three tiers of fire escape and entering a window. This was the plan chosen as there was no dressing room in connection with the hall and no place where Santa and his party could be detained in comfort throughout the first half of a lengthy program without being observed by all.

To climb three stories of fire escape on a winter's night with ever so small a bundle is difficult enough, but to ascend the cold iron stairway each with a large basket or bag filled with oranges and candy, and to have to re-dangerous way was almost more than they bargained for or were, indeed, able to do. It was work, and Captain and Mrs. Pickering never denied it.

When Santa poked his bewhiskered head through the window and dragged his lumbering bundle after him there was a hum of suppressed voices, and a marked increase in noise and merriment when Mrs. Santa appeared.

All the time they were distributing candy and fruit they were besieged by questions from the crowd, and replied with as much spirit and galety as the place and the condition of the assembled audience would allow. It is but fair to say that Santa and Mrs. Santa both enjoyed their visit to that unusual place, and that they lingered processes of reconstruction and preslonger than their usual custom on holiday visits.

Christmas is always a day of joyful interest, and Santa was glad to look squarely into the faces of the many gathered in that hall that night. In spite of the clouds and mists of circumstances that engulied them his visit during that holiday season seemed to have touched a chord that about $100.000, whereas in these times was welcome in the memory of each. Countenances at first hard, softened with the recollections of happier years. Flashes came into eyes that bespoke all that is good, and ambitious, and noble. Regrets, and remorse, and sorrows-if there were any-were this mental and romantic myths about Christmas. That was a memorable day for Mr. and Mrs. Pickering. They had given a little of themselves in their desire to cheer others, and in doing so the chimes of gladaess were started with renewed vigor in their hearts. They had learned something, too. They were wiser.

They became con-

is no soil so dark that it will not respond promptly to the sunshine and gladness of Christmas. The almost instantaneous change in the expressions of many faces was entirely convincing. Christmas had come, and again it had impressed the old, old message of peace and good will to men.

When the Pickerings went back to their own comfortable home that night and sat in front of a welcome log fire they were conscious of wishing that this good spirit of Christmas might last throughout the entire year. It doesn't, of course, for human nature

 Trimming the Tree By Frances Grinstead

HE decorated tree, around which our Christmas holiday enters, has an origin older than Christianity itself. In ancient days trees were held sacred to various good and evil spirits and offerings to them were hung upon the branches. To the Teutons the fir tree, with its symmetrical spreading branches, was a symbol of the sun and they celebrated the winter season by decking it in tinsel, flowers, toys and other ornaments.

Christian use of the tree symbol probably began in Germany, but there are many stories of the first Christmas tree. One is that Martin Luther, walking under the stars one Christmas Eve, was moved by their wonder as a revelation of the nearness of God to man. When he reached home, he took a little fir tree and put lighted candles on its branches to explain his thought to the children.

With age-old traditions behind it, it is fitting that the typical Christmas tree in these days is decorated purely for the sake of its own beauty. Small and graceful, it often stands on the library table, gifts heaped around its base, or in miniature form graces the dining table, the center of cheer until New Year's. If it is to shine in the memories of children through years to come, its ornaments must be hung with as much thought as ever the old Teutons gave to the placing of their sun-festival gifts. The secret of decorating a tree effectively is to make its decorations look as if they grew there. One secret of that is to place the ornaments at the points of growth.

where the limbs branch and where the twigs leave the branches; the other is to place ornaments that look heavy where the tree looks strongest, well back on the branches and toward the lower part of the tree.

It is a good thing to lay out the like shape and color together and to handle one kind of decorations at a time. In this way it is easy to distribute masses of trimming and spots of color evenly and to see that the different kinds are well intermingled. It is a common mistake to place most of the ornaments on the tip ends of the they will show up best there. As a matter of fact, a few ornaments well placed on the body of the tree are more effective than if they are scattered on the outer circumference.

The remainder of lights reflected from various ornaments should also be considered; those with glassy surfaces shine with a different glow from that of tinsel, and apples, oranges and cornucopias of candy must not be expected to counterbalance brighter surfaces. So distribute the decorations having a different kind of surface. The glassy ornaments will relieve the dark masses of the tree if they are hung well back in it, but dull-surfaced objects, if not too large, should be hung in nearer view. A good place for fruits, which are heavy but too dull to show in the body of the tree unless there is a break in the foliage, is on the sturdy lower limbs. The small electric lights which have superseded candles for the Christmas tree should be arranged in orderly gradation from the lower limbs to the top. A pretty effect is produced if tiny white bulbs are substituted for the vari-colored ones that usually make up these circuits and each light enclosed in a small paper cone of soft yellow or orange. These cones projecting downward give much the same impression as the vertical effect of

Chains of tinsel and colored paper are effective decorations if they are used rightly. They should not be simply strung around the tree, weighing on the tips of its branches, so that they seem to fetter it. If they wind pranches, as a vine might, they seem to belong in the tree. Toys may have their place on the tree itself, if they are decorative. An amusing doll perched on a limb, a bright-colored horn gleaming in the shadows, a rubber ball suspended high in the branches, will delight the chil-

SEES WITCHCRAFT AS OLD RELIGION

materials for decoration with those of New Theory Concerning Ancient Superstition.

Science has a brand-new and very interesting theory to explain the belief in witches which at various times which lay purple eggs, and a dozen of in the past, both on this continent and the eggs, arrived at New York. They in Europe, has been the source of so were obtained through the courtesy of

According to this theory witchcraft was a religion which preceded Christianity in western Europe by many centuries and which, after the coming of the new faith, flourished there for a time side by side with it. In its primitive form the witch deity or an animal. Later on this deity was elected from among the members of the cult.

And did the believer in witchcraft at one time worship the devil, as some of our ancestors thought when they jafled and hanged supposed witches so relentlessly in the Massachusetts town of Salem? Miss Margaret A. Murray, an English anthropologist, who has been studying the subject of witchcraft for many years, says there is no positive proof that they did so except what is to be found in the testimony of the cult's bitter enemies. The mysterious rites of witchcraft were always cele brated in the strictest secrecy.

Miss Murray thinks that the adherents of this older religion at last may have been driven by the growing strength of Christianity to regard the devil as their god. In those days Christianity's chief strength was among the upper classes and witchcraft's among the lower. This fact intensified the hostility of the adherents of the two religions.

Christianity was unalterably op posed to the barbaric rites of th witches and to their simple conception of the universe. As a result the witches eventually may have been forced to include in their ritual of in Itiation a specific denial of the entire Christian faith-God, the immortality of the soul and everything else the fol owers of Christ hold dear.

Miss Murray suggests that possibly it was the Christians themselves who first fastened the idea of devil worship upon the witches. The chief deity of the witch cult was first worshiped under a variety of names. Since the witches regarded this being as the supreme ruler of the universe, it was only natural for the Christians to term hlm the devil, Lucifer, Beelzebub, the Foul Fiend, the Enemy of Salvation and the Evil One.

two days now till Christmas. Look at that lot of packages over there on the sofy that I've got to play Santy Claus on. Think of the piles and piles of bundles we've sent out already; big bundles and little bundles, to Jim's apiece, I'm afraid. Come on; let's go folks and John's folks, Sairy's folks in and see what they have got." and Mandy's folks, the preacher, the orphans' home, the old cobbler, the washwoman and the newsboy. It's got so that Christmas is a nightmare. Accordingly the next morning Heppie and Happy Brown started out on their last shopping tour before Christmas. As they turned the corner of the main street they came upon two children, a boy and a girl, poorly clad, who stood with their noses pressed against the window of a small shop, wherein were displayed a few cheap dolls and toys. They were so engrossed in their inspection of these articles that they did not notice the man and woman who stopped behind them and listened to their childish prattle.

"There's a Noah's ark," said the boy. "The baby could play with that a lot. There's animals inside, and if she'd play with one at a time it would seem like new toys all the time."

"Yes, but there ain't no dolly in there," said the girl. "She wants a dolly. How much money you got, Billy?

Carefully drawing his hands from his pants pocket, the boy opened his fingers and slowly counted the few pieces of change in his palm. "Thirtytwo cents, Sissy. I haven't lost any

'ell, then, you could get the Noah's ; that's only twenty-five cents. nen you'd still have money left-how giveth to the moor lendeth to the much, Billy?

"Fifteen and ten, that's twenty-five," carefully separating a dime and three nickels from the rest of the little pile. "See. Sissy, that leaves only seven cents to get something for you"

"For me? Ho! Never mind me. 1 don't want anything. I can dress the dolly, you know, and play it's mine when the baby's asleep. Maybe we can find something for mother. Oh, Billy, if we could get one of those green wreaths with the red berrieswouldn't it be lovely!"

"Mother needs stockings more than anything else. Besides, the green wreaths cost more than seven cents, next street, near the elevator," said Gappy, as he took the boy's hand. "I want to see your mother and the baby."

"It ain't much of a place, mister. And mother's washing, I guess. She most always is."

"Never mind that. Come on, Heppie," turning to his wife, who was just behind, with the girl's hand in hers.

Their stay there was not long, but was momentous for Billy's mother and her little brood. Happy Brown had made Billy wildly happy by placing a dollar bill in his hand and another in Sissy's, and telling them to go on with their Christmas shopping. He had left a yellow-backed bill on the table under a plate. As he and Heppie turned the corner he pulled out a notebook and noted down as he muttered to himself: "Coal, blankets, potatoes. canned goods, apples-here, Heppie, take this money and get things for those children. You know what they want. I'm getting a few things the mother needs."

"Yes, but, Happy, I thought you'd sworn off."

"Heppie Brown, this doesn't count.

This is an investment."

Joseph Sadler was one of the most picturesque rogues of the Seventeenth century-a time when competition in the rogue business was keen. He was neither courageous nor daring-far from it, in fact-and yet there was a style about him that made him an individual. For example, he once stole the beaver hat of a gentleman who was praying in the Temple church and in extentuation pleaded that we are enjoined "to watch as well as pray."

Sadler's crowning achievement, says a writer in Discovery, was his theft of the purse and mace of the lord high chancellor of England. How he discovered in what strong room they were secured is not known, but he not only took the baubles from their lurking place but marched with them publicly displayed through Lincoln's Inn fields A confederate bore the purse before him, another the mace, and Sadler brought up the rear, hat cocked and arms akimbo, with an insolent and strutting grandeur.

The little daughter of Sadler's landlady discovered the theit. While she was playing in his apartment during the great housebreaker's absence sh found a pearl and a piece of tinsel upon the carpet. Anx'ous to know whether there were more of the pretty playthings concealed about the room, she succeeded in opening the cupboard

"Mother! Mother! Come up here!" cried the child excitedly. "The gentieman has his majesty's crown!"

What she beheld, in point of fact, was the coronet of the mace detached from its stock. The landlady warned the watch, and an ambush was laid. Loud was the laughter when the facts became known and Sadler confessed to having figured as the lord high chancellor in that extraordinary harlequinade in Lincoln's Inn fields. Loud was the laughter, but poor Sadler was condemned to death in sober earnest. It is hard for a jester to be taken quite so seriously .- Youth's Com-

A new thermometer, which measures accurately temperatures as low as 380 i degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, was lescribed to members of the American Philosophical society in session in Philadelphia by Dr. W. A. Noyes, professor of chemistry at the University of Illinois. As mercury freezes at such a temperature, a bulb connected with a very narrow tube containing air is used. As the air expands and contracts with variations in temperature a small globule of mercury, kept at a temperature above its melting point, moves back and forth, thus serving as

Kestrels Make Trouble

Two predatory kestrels have made their home in an inaccessible corner of the tower of St. Michael's church, Cornhill, England, and attract attention in the evening by their curious screaming. The kestrel is a small hawk with a bluish beak, black claws and dull-brown coloration. It has a long tail, spread out when flying. It drops noiselessly and suddenly, but with unerring aim, on such prey as mice or pigeons. Besides eating beetles and cockchafers, they swoop down on young pigeons. Bodies of such birds have been found in the little garden

IN MEMORIAM

J. B. Curry, son of Mr. and Mrs.

A. M Curry, was born in Ellis County, pear Sardis, Jan. 6, 1894. Some ear Sardis, Jan. 6, 1894. Some nineteen years ago he, with the family came to West Texas and about six years ago, they located in Snyder, where they have lived since that time.

At the age of eight J. B. was converted under the preaching of the Rev. Will Harris. He was always a loving son and brother and was his father's counsellor and business adviser and his mother's comfort and helper, always gladly helping to bear the family responsibilities. On July 30, 1925, he was united in marriage to Miss Loree Stokes-

one of Snyder's truest and noblest young women. J. B. had a serious illness last May, but apparently had fully recovered: but in August he was again stricken and forced to ke his bed; and in spite of the et that everything was done that al science or loving hands could weath, ever a grim visitor, would be stayed but claimed his victim, T. B. passed to his eternal reon Dec. 2, and is now that of ours who dwells with God. rvived by his young wife, by mes Joyce, raham. The futhe Methodist pastor,

Dodson, assisted by the 1 resbyterian pastor, Rev. H. J. Manley. The quartet of the Methodist Church sang most beautifully, "We Are Going Down the Valley one by one," and the choir sang softly some comforting selections, one number being one of J. B.'s favorites, "The Old Rugged Cross."

It was a very sweet and consoling service. Death at just entering the glory of his manhood with the bride of his dreams, looking away into their new home and by each other's help to walk close to God and seek to be of service to their fellows.

We cannot understand why J. B. ad to go away at the hanniest neriod of life; but perhaps some day we shall understand. Our hearts ached for all as we looked into the tearstained faces of all the loved ones that day-and yet we saw shining there the light of a true Christian faith that can only come from a true Christian life and character. These friends and loved ones were not seeing the open grave as the end; but were already in their minds, seeing an unbroken family ci? ' some day around the throne of God; and J. B. had gone on to welcome the others

The trust and fortitude shown by such strength of faith brought to our minds the beautiful lines of Tenny-

"Sunset and evening star And one clear call for me, nd may there be no moaning of the bar When I put out to sea.

"For the from out this borne of time and place

The flood may bear me far I hope to see my pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar."

PROCLAMATION BY MAYOR.

The holiday season is near at hand, and in order to make it a season of joy, as it should be, and not of sorrow, we urge that the entire citizenship of Snyder co-operate in an effort to prevent any disastrous fires that sometimes occur during the Christmas holidays. The hazard can be reduced by refraining from the use of candles and inflamable materials for Christmas tree decorations in the home, as well as in public buildings, and making bonfires and the careless discharging of fire works. Your co-operation in this connection could mean the saving of thousands of dollars in the destruction of prop-

> Respectfully, A. C. ALEXANDER, Mayor Protem.

Dear Santa—I want you to pleas bring me a little rocking chare, a set of little dishes, a stove and all kinds of little dishes, a stove and all kinds of fittle dishes, a stove and all kinds of fruit and nuts. I am nearly three years old. Santa, don't forget the other little children. Genevive Tankersley. Snyder, Texas.

Camp Springs, Dec. 9. Dear Santa Claus-Please bring me a baby doll. Bring me a sewing set with a thimble and something to embroidery. A needle and thread. Bring me anything you want to. With love.-Hazel Pollard.

Wayne and Edith were visiting as if they, too, had been separated several months. "Well, Edith, what think you of Ponca now, and of mother? She is some mother, I tell you. You need not fear the Indians. Now that you've met mother and have seen Ponca, aren't you ready to give me that answer? I'll count it a mighty fine Edith's eyes opened-"Oh! I thought all Indians wore blankets and guns!" "Edith, the Indian of today is civilized. A race that has suffered, yes; but a truly American race; a race that was sent from place to place; a race that fought and won. Only a small portion of their vast inheritance was allotted them, but that portion has waxed rich in oil. I am an Indian, Edith, nor would I conceal it. I am bestowing upon you the highest honor man can give to woman. Will you become my wife, Edith-the wife of an Indian-a man who would die for his race and you? If you will promise me, this will be the happiest Christmas of my life. "Yes, Wayne, I promise. I want to be the wife of an Indian-a Bearfoot Indian-with a brave athlete as my protector." The radio was tuned in and-"A Merry Christmas to all," was the greeting.

terse note to each saying "No," definitely, but found it a little difficulteven he-to be so cold. Finally he thought the easiest way to get out of it gracefully would be to write saying that he himself had had reverses and was poorer than any one of them. To make it a little more graphic, he even referred to his "cold garret."

Mrs. J. J. Jackson appeared at the breakfast table next morning with a letter in her hand.

"From Uncle Jim," she answered simply to her husband's inquiry. "Nothing doing, I suppose?" he asked.

"Oh, it's much worse than that Jack; the poor old man-read this. "Let's invite him here for Christ nas dinner," suggested Mrs. J. J. "It's He's just one of the gang and it's pretty hard on him, you know, being alone and old like that." It was agreed. Mrs. J. J. sat down and wrote the following:

"Dear Uncle Jim: "We are so sorry to have bothered you with our note, but we never knew of your-reverses. Won't you come and spend the Christmas holidays with us? The enclosed is a postal order for $2.50 to cover the fare. Do come. We are most anxious to see you.

"Your affectionate niece, "ANN." The peculiar thing was that precisely the same thing happened in the home of the R. P.'s and W. J.'s, with ceived three letters from his nieces all enclosing the fare to Evansville If it isn't an ad it's sure to be for Christmas dinner.

Old Uncle Jim was genuinely have happened, certainly this was the last he would have expected.

That night, Christmas Eve, the Jacksons met again at the J. J.'s to discuss what could be done about the note, which had to be met on the 26th. They had not gotten far with their plans when the noise of a high powered motor was heard outside and the bell rang "Gracious, Uncle Jim!" exclaimed

Mrs. J. J., when she opened the door "Of course, Uncle Jim," said the old man. "I was only teasing you when I wrote that letter. I had intended coming all along and paying off the little note. Here take these-just a few Christmas greetings for each of you.' (@, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

"THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM."

In December, 1604, the Great Astronomer Kepler saw a strange sight in the heavens-a sight which occurs only once (or rather is repeated two or three time at one period) in 300 years. It was the conjunction of the bright planets Jupiter and Saturn close together at one point of the heavens. Five months later in the For, believe me, you'll get a genuine following way the wonder was repeated in a more wonderful way, Mars joined with Jupiter and Sat a a fiery triad in the constellat Pisces; and a new star appeared the constellation of the Sirpent. Firs seen in Oct, 1604, it grew more and more brilliant, then duller and dimmer and finally vanished altogether. Was this the Star of Belhlehem? Some have thought so. Next Sunday at 11 a. m. at the Methodist church, the subject will be "The Visit of the Wise Men." Don't miss this sermon. Let's have 300 at Sunday School. Come to "The Church of the Glad Hand."
