Interscholastic League Meet to be Held With the School Fair

T. J. Bryant, one of the backers of the Scurry County School Fair to be held in Snyder April 1 and herewith he gives his reasons:

To be successful in any undertaking we must have a definite goal in view. We can't expect to accomplish very much unless we keep the objective clearly in mind toward which we are striving. This is quite true in the field of education as any other line of endeavor. Our objectives have been girls for the great school of the women to meet in their work. life. THE STORY

PROLOGUE.—While despondent ever the enforced hiding of her fiance, Jim Dalias, slayer in self defense of Homer Parkinson, member of an influential family, Sybil Saunders, popular actress, is engaged to play Viola in a charity performance of "Tweifth Night" on Gull island, on the Maine coast. In the company are Sybil's bosom friend, Anne Tracy, Anne's brother, Joe, young wastrel, and Aleck Stokes, an actor infatuated with Sybil.

CHAPTER I.—After the play, which is a big hit, Wally Shine, official photographer, learns something of the jealousy, professional and otherwise, existing in the com-

CHAPTER II.—Hugh Bassett, director of the play, and Anne Tracy's fiance, tells Joe he has heard he is spying on Sybil in an effort to learn the whereabouts of Jim Dallas and earn the reward offered by the Parkinson family. The boy's denial is not convincing.

Has the direct and the direct through the stony mouths of ravines—always without him. When they returned to the house, she fell back in the chair, her eyes closed, whispering broken words of thanksgiving.

CHAPTER III.—Joe Tracy is arranging for a vacation trip. To Anne he betrays his enmity toward Sybil. Stokes tells Sybil he has news of Jim Dallas, and to secure the necessary privacy they arrange to meet in a small summer house near the main building.

CHAPTER IV.—The sound of a pistol shot startles the assembled company. Investigation shows a revolver has been taken from a desk in the library. Flora, Stokes' wife, bursts in with the announcement that Sybil has been shot and her body carried off by the swift tide that races by the island.

CHAPTER V.—Flora Stokes tells Bassett she saw Sybil shot but did not see her murderer. Bassett notifies the sheriff, Abel Williams. He arrives with Rawson, district attorney, and a man called Patrick.
All the company is accounted for,
with the exception of Joe Tracy, presumably on his trip. Flora gives her evidence, and the authorities arrange so that no one can leave the island. through Anne's arm and drawing her with her. "You can't sleep, no stretch out on the bed and relaxyou get some sort of rest that way.'

CHAPTER VI.—Discussing the tragedy with Rawson and Bassett, Williams voices the opinion that Flora Stokes is the guilty person, the deed being actuated by jealousy. While they are taiking, the sound of a crash in the living room makes them hasten there.

CHAPTER VII.—Anne Tracy, shocked at her friend's awful death, is also uneasy about Joe Remembering his rage against Sybil, and realizing she is not sure he left the island, her imagination pictures him as Sybil's murderer, and hiding in the house, the upper story of which is unoccupied. Seeking to inform him of the close watch kept, she descends to the living room. There she dimly sees Joe and warns him not to try to escape. He disappears and in her agitation she knocks over a lamp. She tells the three men she came downstairs for a book, and her explanation is accepted

CHAPTER VIII.—In the summer house the investigators find evidence that Sybil had been there, and knowing of Stokes' infatuation, Rawson and Williams at once suspect him of the murder.

CHAPTER IX.—Stokes denies all knowledge of the crime, and deftly throws suspicion on Joe. Rawson, somewhat impressed by the story put forward by Stokes, goes to the mainland to investigate Joe's movements. at loggerheads they'd be pouncing on that—not telling you anything, sending up your blood pressure with their questions. You're spared that, and it's worth keeping your

CHAPTER X

To THE outside eye Anne had presented no more dolorous and dejected an aspect than any of the others. No one, not even Bassett, noticed that her demeanor was in any way other than what might have been expected.

Had they been able to see into her mind the group at Gull Island would have received its second staggering shock.

She kept as much to herself as she could without rousing curios-She had to think and to be alone, where she would focus her thoughts, hold them trained on what she knew and what might She wanted to keep her mind on the main issue, inhibit any fruitless speculation, wait and be ready. Joe was on the island, and with the guarded causeway would stay on the Island till after they had gone. Her hope, giving her strength to go through the automatic actions of behavior, was, that suspicion not being directed to him, he could lie hidden till they left and then make his getaway. She knew that Gabriel had gone to White Beach for a week's deepsea fishing, and Gabriel was the one person besides herself who knew that Joe had not crossed to the mainland. They surely would be moved away before a week and if, during that time, the belief that he had gone remained unshaken, he

There would be no investigation of his movements for there would be no reason for doing it. He had passed outside the circle of the tragedy, was eliminated as the actors were who had gone on the earlier boat.

If they didn't find him! Where was he? He had entered the living room by the door that led to the kitchen wing and rear staircase. That would look as if he was in the house. But she on Gull island, and that he might a passage through the darkened

The living room was empty, but listening at the hall door she heard the murmur of men's voices in the library. They were in conference again and might be long. She passed out into the garden and sank down on one of the benches. She sat with drooped head immersed in thought, her hands thrust into the pockets of her sweater. It was thus that Bassett found her. Life leaped into her face at his voice and she stretched a hand toward him.

"Oh. I've been hoping to see you." she breathed, already trained to a low wariness of tone.

The words, the gesture, pierced his heart. She looked so disconsolate, so wan, her face the pallor of lvory, her black hair always shinng and smooth, pushed back from er brow in roughened strands. He had charged himself to keep from her any knowledge of the interest in Joe, but had he been of the loose-tongued sort that unburdened itself, the sight of her devastated beauty would have sealed his lips. "I thought I was never going to get a word with you," he said. "This is the first moment I've had.

Open House

BEGINNING March 28 and continuing until April 1, we are going to have an open house gathering at our laundry. We are very anxious for you to see the way in which your clothes are handled and the treatment they get when entrusted to us. We have installed some new machinery which we want you to see in operation. The machinery consists of a "sleever," "cuff and collar" machine, regular "shirt" machine, "all purpose" press, and a modern "tumbler dryer." The purpose of this new tumbler dryer is to dry that clothing which ordinarily would not need ironing. For instance, should you send a bundle of clothing to be rough dried, you naturally would not expect to get certain pieces back that looked as if they had been ironed. This is what this machine does to them. It completely removes the wrinkles from such garments as heavy underwear, socks, etc.

What We Want Is This

We want you to visit our establishment during the time we mention above and see what a modern, up-to-date Laundry Snyder affords. We also want you to feel free to ask any question regarding laundry work or make any criticism. There are no secrets about our business.

As An Inducement

-We are going to hand you a ticket as you enter our Laundry with a duplicate number, one of which you retain and the other you drop in a locked box. We will have some disinterested party draw three numbers from the box at the expiration of the "Open House," and each of the three drawn will receive a prize. First drawn will get $10.00 worth of laundry work FREE, second drawn will receive $7.50 worth of laundry work FREE, and third drawn will receive $5.00 worth of laundry work FREE.

We are trying to build and maintain a Laundry that any town should be proud of. We positively know that we have as modern a plant as can be found anywhere in the state, and we want you to see it.

Uncle Sam is about to attempt the tremendous task of clearing up the air, that is, taking the noise, aerial whirlpools and other things out of the great worlds of space. To the Times-Signal this appears to be a tremendous undertaking. And, the question is, what is the matter with the air, anyhow? any other way, when during the great war airplanes simply still being chopped up. You can hear an airplane eating up the air before it gets within five miles of you, and who knows but that these almost vacant places or vacuums made by the airplanes are still stretched across the sea of atmosphere just like ocean currents trailing across the great oceans?

ALTRURIANS MEET WITH MRS. HAMILTON

Baskets of lovely spring flowers in pretty arrangement were added beauty and attractiveness to the home of Mrs. W. W. Hamilton when she was hostess to the Altrurian club members Friday afternoon, March 18.

Mrs. Earl Brown as an efficient leader conducted the program on the cities of "St. Louis and New Orleans," with unusually unique roll call answers, those of quotations from Mark Twain. Two papers were contributed to the program, Mrs. Joe Caton giving "Commercial Relations Between St. Louis and Texas," while "Cieolo New Orleans" was given by Mrs. Joe Stinson. A most interesting parliamentary drill was conducted by Mrs. C. C. Higgins.
