Milk Is Milk. A RECENT issue of one of this nation's great monthly women's magazines had the following caption under an illustration showing four cans and a bottle: "Evaporated, condensed, powdered or malted, milk is milk just the same." Science based on the above assertion. An article entitled "An Experimental Study of the Use of Unsweetened Evaporated Milk for the Preparation of Infant Feeding Formulae" by McKim Marriott, M.D., and Ludwig Schoenthal, Dr. Med., which was published in a recent issue of the Archives of Pediatrics summarized its conclusions as follows: "The unsweetened evaporated milk is, from the nutritional standpoint, the full equivalent of pasteurized or bottled whole cow's milk." "The continued use of evaporated milk as a routine food for normal infants is unattended by nutritional disturbances."

TEXAS THOUGHTS BY WAYE Other candidates in the gubernatorial free-for-all will receive only a minor vote in West Texas. This correspondent was in Abilene shortly after Tom Love spoke in that city. If Tom Love were the leader of any considerable portion of Texas democrats it would be expected that his support would be found to a marked degree in West Texas. It is not there. This is strong proof of the presumption that Love may be counted out as one of the strong contenders. Increased interest is being shown in the candidacies of contenders for minor state offices. The votes for the gubernatorial candidates were made positive within the past two or three weeks—a condition that makes it possible for voters to give attention to the consideration of possibilities for other state offices. Early in the year very little could be heard in reference to the minor offices—few persons had given any thought to the matter. But with the removal of doubt in connection with the gubernatorial race the other candidates are coming in for mature consideration.

Did you ever stop to think? Edson R. Waite Shawnee, Oklahoma While in Minneapolis I interviewed Wilbur B. Foshay, president of the W. B. Foshay Company, on several subjects. Hearing this company operates properties in Alaska, with headquarters at Ketchikan, I asked him to tell me something about Alaska. Mr. Foshay said: "Ketchikan is a prosperous, modern city, having direct steamboat connections with all Pacific Coast ports. It has a fish freezing plant, numerous salmon canneries, saw mills, cold storage plant, hydro-electric power plant, gold mining and fishing. It exports more salmon than any other port in the world. Ketchikan is on an island approximately 675 miles from Seattle. It is an electric city. The entire water front is electrified. We have just christened a new all steel motor ship to ply between Seattle and Alaska. It had to be done; business is so active." Alaska territory is one-fifth the size of the entire United States, having more than half-million square miles. Over fifty thousand people go to Alaska each summer to work in the canneries. There is one glacier in Alaska larger than all of Switzerland. There are more airplanes and automobiles in Alaska per capita than in any state in the United States. A community is not made by the number of square miles it covers, but by the number of square people who live in it.

All But the Moo THE tin cows of our days are not all made for children. The tin cans of milk which are our modern tin cows serve millions of people and contain all the same nutritional elements, everything, in fact, except the moo of the original animal. This omission is fortunate, for think of the racket that would arise in groceries and in kitchen and pantry shelves if all of the millions of cans of condensed, evaporated and dried milk in this country should suddenly begin to bellow. Tempting Desserts While no food can be considered a perfect food, milk in all of its marketable forms, according to eminent scientific authority, comes about as close to this ideal as we can hope to find in a single product. So here are some recipes calculated to make your children like the beneficial contents of these modern tin cows. Chocolate Bread Pudding: Soak two cups stale bread crumbs for thirty minutes in two cups hot evaporated milk and two cups hot water. Melt two squares chocolate, add two-thirds cup sugar, and thin with a little of the liquid from the bread. Add to the bread mixture with two slightly beaten eggs. Add one-fourth teaspoon salt and one teaspoon vanilla, and bake in a moderate oven until firm and a knife comes out clean. This serves eight. Evaporated Milk Banana Ice Cream: Scald four cups evaporated milk and one cup water with one cup sugar in a double boiler, then cool. Add five ripe well-mashed bananas and two tablespoons lemon juice, and freeze as any ice cream.*

Back Quit Hurting "I was in a very weak condition from a serious sickness," writes Mrs. I. Leonard, of 571 Joseph St., New Orleans, La. "I was so weak, I wanted to sleep all the time. I did not have strength to do anything. My back ached nearly all the time. I was just in misery. My mother told me I must arouse myself from the sleepiness, and take something to help get my strength back. She had taken Cardui and had been helped, so I decided to take Cardui, too. After my first bottle, I could see that it was helping me. I took four bottles at this time. My strength came back and I gained weight. Pretty soon, I was my old self again. My back quit hurting, and I haven't had any more trouble since I took Cardui."

TEXAS THOUGHTS By WAYE Texas Press Service

D. W. Pontius, President of the Pacific Electric Railway Company, says:

That education is the foundation of progress of any nation. Educational advantages available to the citizens of this country is the factor that has contributed more than any other single element to our high rank among nations of the world.

We may rightfully be proud of our school system and to it we should pay tribute for the large measure of progress and happiness that is our lot as a people and a nation. For still greater progress industry must look upon education and our institutions of learning as a vital part of our industrial success.

OF IMPORTANCE TO TEXAS

(From the Dallas Morning News) "Fortunate for Texas," says the Texas Weekly, "is the circumstance that its welfare and future do not depend on politics."

It is well to stress the importance of Chambers of Commerce, as The Texas Weekly starts out to do. But it is not well to encourage the idea that it makes no difference, for example, whether Texas restores Mrs. Ferguson to the gubernatorial chair.

Nor are the Fergusons the only doubtful prospect in the political situation confronting Texas now. The likelihood of a sane, business-like, honest and smooth-running administration is threatened from more angles than one, Texas needs such an administration. The doctrine that politics is something for substantial men to eschew is a bad doctrine. It ought not to have the encouragement of even an unintended phrase.

(Editor's Note: Opinions expressed in this column do not necessarily constitute the editor's opinion. The column is reproduced as an impartial analysis of the political situation as seen from Austin.)

The past week saw important changes in the political complexion of the Texas gubernatorial sweepstakes. Earle B. Mayfield, regarded as one of the leaders in the race, seemingly is the only one of the early starters to remain a favorite.

Sterling and Clint Small have gained momentum and are being placed in the first group by the side of Mayfield.

Without doubt Mayfield still is in the first rank and will be in the run-off against either Sterling or Small, if the political depositions are right. Can either of the two beat Mayfield?

Perhaps not! Even though state highway bonds, so distasteful to the regular session of the Forty-first legislature, are gaining in favor with the momentum of Sterling's candidacy, practically all candidates are opposed to the idea. This condition makes it practically certain that Sterling will receive his full vote in the first election, and that he will add only a negligible number should he be one of the run-off candidates.

Mayfield's advantage lies in the fact that he is well known in all sections of the state. In addition, he has a constructive platform not made up of pet issues. Small is basing his candidacy on a business reform; Love, against Tammanyism; Ferguson, a second vindication; Sterling, on state bonds; and Young is running against everyone else.

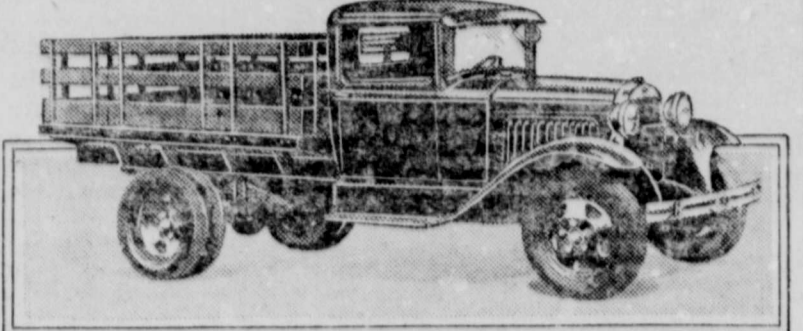

Biennial politics in Texas is a big industry. Some enterprising reporter has figured it out that at the present time approximately 4,000 Texans are bending their every effort to be elected to some state, district, county or precinct office.

Candidates for the minor state offices have been handicapped in this year's elections. There are enough gubernatorial candidates in the race to provide a sufficient number of political orators for all parts of the state. The seekers after other state offices have been unable to attract even a handful of voters to political speakings and in the main they have abandoned this type of campaigning.

Walter C. Clark, candidate for State Treasurer, in the very beginning realized that it would take personal solicitation for him to make an impression. Accordingly he started out with the program of visiting each of the 252 counties of the state. Up to the present time his visitations have carried him to considerably more than half this number. He is still on the road.

Personal letters written by friends and admirers have been resorted to by George H. Sheppard, candidate for State Comptroller and former Governor Pat M. Neff, who is seeking nomination to the railroad commission. Sheppard has the backing of a large group of friends in the tax departments of Texas counties. He formerly served as President of the State Tax Assessors' association and many of his former friends are pushing his candidacy. Neff, too, has the backing of a large group of former associates who are anxious to see him retained in the present position to which he was appointed by Governor Moody.

New Ford Truck With Closed Cab

NEW Ford Model AA trucks and Model A light delivery cars were announced this week by the Ford Motor Company and are on display in the show rooms of Ford dealers. Changes in the trucks are principally in the front end, which has been completely redesigned, and in the cab. The radiator is higher with more cooling surface, fenders are wide and flowing, and a black 'owl' strip adds a note of distinction. The new Model AA trucks with the four-speed transmission introduced several months ago may be had with enclosed or open cab. The enclosed cab, shown above, is all steel, it is low in appearance yet with ample head room. The open cab is of black rubber top material and is easily removed. Both cabs are equipped with windshields of Triplex shatterproof glass and vacuum type windshield wipers.

Model AA trucks may be had with a platform body, which can be equipped with stakes or a panel body. The chassis has many improvements, including the four-speed transmission, larger front brakes, stronger springs, power take-off opening and optional dual rear wheels. The Model A line of new commercial cars comprises a light delivery truck with pick-up body, a deluxe delivery truck, a small panel truck and a station wagon. These cars have the smaller wheels and larger tires of the new Ford passenger cars.

"We want to invite all veterans of the Spanish war to this meeting," Mr. Mullins said, "and we are going to try to get as many of the veterans who live in this section of the state to join the Green camp."

Mr. Mullins also said that all veterans and widows of veterans who had pension claims to make, would be aided by the camp when requests were made.—Sweetwater

THE MODERN GOAT

A Fable. There was a goat, a modern goat. Who tired of common diet; He wandered near, he wandered far, "Things were," he said, "too quiet."

Tin cans he had and herbage, too. But nothing tasted right. Until, by chance, he came across Some sticks of dynamite.

"Now here," thought he, "the chance may be. To get a balanced ration." Refreshments new, he thought, to chew In thrilling rumination.

A ripping sound! A whirl! was seen Of horns and bits of fur! And, sad to say, the goat that was, Was nothing but a blur!

If, when you read these simple lines, A moral you request— 'Tis stated here, in these five words, "A quiet life is best."
