Lloyd Dry Goods Co.

SNYDER, TEXAS

Is Going to Give Away Absolutely

FREE To Schools

$65.00 In Gold

This is to be divided among the eight schools of Scurry County obtaining the greatest number of votes. Votes will be given by Lloyd's to anyone who makes a purchase at this store at the rate of 100 votes for each $1.00 that is spent. That boy in the corner is sure that his school will win, whether it is a large school or a small rural school in the far corner of the county, as he realizes that—

All Schools Have an equal chance to win!

By multiplying the school's votes by the difference in size, using the Snyder Grade School as a basis. So he is going after it to win by urging all his school-mates to get their wears at Lloyd's. Then if their school doesn't win First Prize, it may get one of the Eight Other Prizes and the sport of giving the other schools a real race—which will compare to a heated football game. The best part of this race is that no individual can lose, as these votes are given during Hey Kids!

WE'RE GOING TO WIN THAT

Or show the school that does win a real race for the money!

So, let's all get busy and tell our folks right away to be sure and buy our Shoes, and everything else we need, at Lloyd's because Lloyd's Store will give us 100 votes on every dollar we spend there. And if our school gets the most votes by Saturday night, November 15, we will win the First Prize.

No, sir-ee! It doesn't matter if our school is large or small, we have the same chance with the others, as the small school's votes will be multiplied in accordance to the size and distance as near as possible. So . . .

COME ON, FELLERS—LET'S WIN!

RULES OF CONTEST

Any person making a purchase will be given a Coupon with a blank space for the purchaser to write the name of his favorite school. No salespeople shall be allowed to offer any suggestion as to what school they shall vote for, even though the customer has no choice. In this event, the latter may take the coupon with him and deposit it later or give it to a friend who has no connection with the store, who is interested in some school.

To make it fair for schools from a distance, 10 per cent will be added for each ten miles the school is from Snyder.

BIG SCHOOL CONTEST

STARTS

Friday, October 24th

ENDS SATURDAY NIGHT, NOV. 15

Prizes will be awarded that night if the committee is able to complete the count by that time. This committee will be appointed by the County School Superintendent.

In case of a tie for any one of the awards, a prize identical in value will be given each tying.

The Contest Manager will report each week through The Snyder News just how the different schools are progressing. Always ask for vote Coupon when you make your purchases, whether you have children in school or not.

First Prize—$25.00; Second Prize—$12.50; Third Prize—$7.50; Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Prizes—$5.00 Each; Seventh and Eighth Prizes—$2.50 Each. Total—$65.00.

A small token will be given to all schools that take a real active part.

LLOYD'S FINAL CLOSEOUT SALE

The values they are offering are worth coming for. Store is chucked full of items of the highest quality at Astonishingly Low Sale Price. So, whether you have any children going to school or not, you can help your favorite school and benefit yourself. Every school has an equal chance!

Farmers Give Recipes for Curing of "Hard Times"

LIVE AT HOME IDEA LEADS IN PLAN OF FIGHT

Wear Flour Sack Clothes, Get Rid of Non-Essentials, and Other Suggestions Given.

"These Methods Help Beat Hard Times" says the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman over a page filled with farmers' letters, in a recent issue. The suggestions, direct from farmers, will no doubt prove helpful to Scurry County, so we reproduce several of them.

From "An Optimistic Farmer."

Here are three "hard time hints" from "an optimistic farmer":
First, forget all the talk about drouth relief from the government. The only way the government can aid the farmer in this emergency is by loaning him money for which the farmer must have good security to get and which must be paid back with interest on a specified date.

Second, take an inventory of the available feed and of the livestock on your farm to determine whether or not you have any surplus stock that can not be carried through the winter.

If so, it should be disposed of. If the surplus is hogs, cattle or chickens, it might be well to can enough of the meat to use through the winter and spring.

Third, if necessary, sell your old car and buy something to eat or wear with the money. No self-respecting farmer will seek aid of charity organizations when he can help himself.

And Work in Friendliness.

A farm woman has another recipe for the "hard time blues":

My parents were Kansas and Oklahoma pioneers and as the eldest daughter I shared in the responsibility of keeping the wolf from the door during the lean years caused by the drouth, grasshoppers, locusts and boll weevils.

My recommendations for beating hard times are:
Drink pure water.
Eat plain foods.
Keep regular hours.
Work in friendliness.

By following these suggestions you can avoid illness and the consequent bills of the nurse, druggist and doctor and can get by the lean years hopefully and happily!

Trapping Is Some Help.

One Texas farmer recommends that trapping will add several dollars to the family "pocketbook" during hard times. He says:
Here are two ways that we will use to help beat the drouth:

After cotton picking the hunting and trapping season will open. With a few traps and a little time we will be able to catch from $10 to $20 worth of fur during the winter, which will help.

Our garden was short but to make up for the shortage of canned vegetables we are going to plant radishes and lettuce in a cold-frame. We are also going to plant cabbage and onions in a cold-frame to provide frost-proof plants next spring and will sell enough of these to buy our other garden seed.

Save Corn, Feed Meal.

Save your corn and feed your meal counsels another Texas farmer. He writes:

Once before the drouth hit us a hard blow and here we are again in the drouth-stricken part of Texas.

The other time drouth hit us we traded our cotton seed for hulls and meal to winter our stock on. We fed the hulls and meal to our mules as well as to our cows and they all did fine until work began again on another crop. We saved what little corn we had raised to feed to the stock while preparing for and raising another crop. Our mules stayed fat on the hulls and meal but didn't have the strength that they got from the corn and hay.

We will meet the feed shortage of 1930 in the same way. Try our plan and see if it doesn't help.

Keep Only the Best.

An Oklahoma farmer says: Ways of beating hard times have already been put into effect on our farm.

First, we made a list of everything we owned that must be fed. An old worn out car headed the list. We sold the casings, wheels and every part we could. It cost too much to keep it up. We sold all but three horses—enough to work our land. We also sold our hogs; that is, all but two brood sows and shoats for meat.

We are culling our chickens as rapidly as possible. We will keep only about 100 White Leghorn pullets and give them good care.

Our cows are being tested for production and we are keeping the four best producers besides holding some good heifers that will freshen in the spring.

In other words we have disposed of all but the best and those that we knew would cause us the greatest loss.

We saved all the roughage we could—fodder, begari, kaffir. We gathered our corn before the rains ruined the shucks which we will use for hay. I have planted winter pasture in every available place and am also fighting the insects out of our fall garden and potato patch.

Are Your Sheds Tight?

Consider your livestock, another farmer advises. Are your buildings tight and adequate to keep off the north winds? If not, patch them up. Go over the cow barn, horse barn, chicken houses and all other livestock shelters.

If it is possible to keep the hens laying, it won't take many eggs this winter to buy the groceries. The dairy cow must also have some good treatment if she produces her maximum this winter. Every extra pound of butterfat or extra dozen eggs will help.

Many farm people do not have any hogs. If you haven't any, this is a good time to buy a shoat. If you can not afford to buy a good-sized shoat, buy a 50-pound pig. He will make meat before spring if given good care and you will hardly miss what he eats.

Those who haven't good cellars in which to store potatoes to protect them against freezing can keep them by digging a hole in a well-drained plot large enough to hold all the potatoes. Fill in the bottom of the hole with straw, then put a layer of straw on top of the potatoes and cover with 18 inches of dirt. Over the entire thing place a metal or board cover.

Above all, remember, "Take care of your livestock and it will take care of you."

He Will Keep the Faith.

Once before in my lifetime I have experienced hard times and that was when I was 8 or 9 years old, but I remember it as if it were only yesterday. That was during the years 1885 and 1886.

We had two complete failures of crops those years. Stock died by the thousands and the only way we had of practicing economy was to go hungry, do without clothes and stay at home. I expect to have the same thing to do again because it is better to go a little hungry than to steal or defraud my brother neighbor.

Though I am just a tenant farmer, through accident, sickness and foreclosure, I will keep the faith.

Mesquite Beans for Feed.

Out in this country there is a lot of mesquite. We have used the mesquite beans for feed. We gather them while they are dry and put them in the barn and use in feeding both hogs and horses.

Lately we have found that we can feed these beans to chickens. We take a short 2x4 board and the hatchet along when we go to feed the chickens. We place the beans on the 2x4 and chop them into small pieces, letting them fall about in the yard where the chickens pick them up.

Prickly pear apples can also be used for the chickens. Cut the pears open and the chickens will eat the inside part of the pears. The seed of the prickly pears is like corn and the meat part serves as a green feed.

Whistling Along the Way.

One way to beat the drouth is to never give up. Walk if necessary to keep down expenses and go whistling along your way. Buy only what you can pay for. Bake your own bread. Make the sheets, pillow slips, quilt linings and underwear that are needed out of flour sacks and if dresses are needed dye some flour sacks and use them for dresses. Make a substitute for coffee out of roasted wheat. Live within your means.

Prepare for Emergencies.

In times of peace prepare for war. Why not apply this to life and in years of plenty prepare for the lean years?

We have no assurance that one year of plenty will be followed by another year of bounty, so we should be prepared to meet the emergencies. If the money spent for pleasure by the families of moderate circumstances, was laid away for a rainy day or some other emergency, what a help it would be.

The trouble with most of us is that

Willing Workers to Hold Institute Here

The Epworth Leagues of the Willing Workers Union will hold an efficiency institute at the Snyder Methodist Church, November 3-7. The classes will start each evening at 6:45, and three class periods, with a period of games and entertainment, will be held each evening.

A competent faculty, names of which will be published next week, has been secured, and a good institute is expected by Pastor Cal C. Wright and League leaders.

we have gotten away from the idea of saving. I would suggest a budget system for the average family. Work out a schedule that will equal the earnings and follow it to the dot.

Telephone Company Delivers Directories

New telephone directories, dated November, 1930, are being delivered to Snyder residences and business houses this week.

A number of new names have been added since the last directory was issued.

One of the features of the new book is that the new street names and numbers are listed.

A jazz band, a news item says, plays daily in a London railway station. And maybe the fellow with the megaphone croons the train announcements.—Exchange.

Seventh Installment

What Has Gone Before:

Giles Chittentham swears to avenge the death of his young half-brother, Rodney, driven to suicide by the notorious Julie Farrow who had spurned his love. He will make Julie love him, then throw her aside as she threw Rodney. He meets her in Switzerland, goes with her to the hotel on the St. Bernard Pass, and succeeds in winning her love. To his amazement, he discovers that he has fallen overwhelmingly in love with her himself. And he is married, to an American girl with whom he has nothing in common.

Then he discovers that this girl is not the same Julie Farrow who ruined Rodney, but her cousin of the same name. She scorns him when he confesses his love and his inability to marry her. They meet later in London, where she is going the pace that kills. Another man, Lawrence Schofield, wants to marry her, in spite of her wild life.

Through his friend Lombard, Giles Chittentham meets the "other Julie," the notorious woman who had ruined Rodney's life.

She sat beside him, and her voice and her laugh, and her little tricks of manner sometimes made it seem impossible that she was not the same woman who had come so happily to his arms in the cold, bleak room of the little hotel high up in the mountains.

She told Giles frankly that she had been a little nervous of meeting him. "I thought perhaps the family hatred had extended itself to you," she said bitterly. "Life is very unkind to some of us, Mr. Chittentham. I am glad you do not hate me as badly as I had expected you would."

Chittentham hesitated. "When I was on the other side of the world my hatred for you was a very real and vital thing," he said gravely. "I used to hope for an opportunity to, well—" He shrugged his shoulders and smiled. "'Avenge' is such a melodramatic word, isn't it?"

"There is no other word that gives quite the same explanation," she answered. "Don't you still hope for it?"

"No."

"What made you change?"

Giles looked away from her down the crowded little restaurant, and in an aching imagination he saw again the bare, ugly room of the mountain hotel, and heard the wind howling as it flung the soft snow against the windows.

"Something happened—" he said. "She did not answer at once, then she said quietly:

"Well, whatever it was, I am glad, I don't want to be hated any more. I don't think any one—even your mother—could hate me any more if she knew what I know."

"What do you mean?"

Julie lowered her voice.

"If you would like to drive home with me afterwards I will tell you."

"What is it you were going to tell me?" Giles asked after they got into her car. He felt an immense curiosity in this woman, and also an inexplicable pity for her, which somehow angered him.

According to all accounts she was worthless and heartless, and yet . . . once before he had blundered into tragedy through listening to and believing the things other people said. The car stopped.

"We are just home," Julie said. "Come in, and I will tell you."

Julie threw herself down into a big chair with a half sigh.

Giles said nothing. He stood leaning against the mantel-shelf looking down at her, vaguely conscious of something tragic that seemed to have stolen into the room during the last few moments. Suddenly Julie raised her eyes.

"I'm glad you don't ask thousands of questions," she said. "You're such a restful person, Mr. Chittentham. I can be quite sure that you won't say 'Oh, my God!' or anything like that when I tell you that I am going to die."

"I don't look like it, do I?" she queried whimsically. "But it's true, all the same. It's quite signed and sealed, with no hope of a reprieve. I've been to every specialist in London who would take my money, and they all say the same thing. There could be an operation, but I won't have it. I hate the idea of the knife, especially as it can be a cure—but only just a way of prolonging life for a little while. I don't think I want to prolong it either. It's been such fun when one looks back."

"What are you going to do, then?"

"I'm going abroad. Couldn't bear the idea of dying here in London, where so many people know me, so I'm going right away where I shan't know any one, and nobody will know me. What do you think of it, Mr. Chittentham?"

"I think you're a very brave woman," Giles said, and suddenly leaned down and took her hand. To his surprise the tears welled up into her eyes and splashed on her frock.

"That's foolish of me, isn't it?" she said. "And they're not because I'm frightened . . . these tears! It's just because the way you took hold of my hand reminded me of some one . . ." She drew a hard breath as if of pain. "Some one I really loved. There was a man I once really loved, Mr. Chittentham."

"I am sure there was."

"He died . . ." Julie sat very still for a moment, then she gently drew her hand away. "That finished me, in the same way that something of the kind has finished the other Julie too. He died, and then it was as if I died too, all that was best of me at least, and all the hateful rotten part lived on! My cousin Julie is like that now! It must be in the family. Perhaps you don't know her well

Horrible to think that of all the friends and lovers she had known there was not one to stand by her now and hold her hand as she went through the dark valley lying before her.

A day or two later he saw a small announcement in a newspaper to the effect that she had gone abroad, and would be absent for some time, and that no letters would be forwarded. It was the same night that his mother rang up on the telephone to inform him that she was giving a party. "When?" he asked, ruthlessly cutting short her voluble explanations. "Tonight. Twelve midnight. Giles. There'll be ham and eggs and hot coffee for four."

"Good Lord!"

"Don't talk like that. It will be such fun. Every one's coming!"

"Who is 'every one'?"

"Isn't it a scream?" Sadie demanded. "Fancy meeting you in your own mother's house and she not knowing that she's entertaining a daughter-in-law unawares!"

enough to see it or recognize it, but I do! I knew directly she came home from Switzerland . . . We've never been great friends—I told you she didn't approve of me! But the day after she came home—about six weeks ago, I suppose it must be, or more—she came to see me and said: 'I want to ask your pardon for all the hard things I've said to you and thought of you. You've been right, and I've been wrong all the time. It's no use trying to be good—it's no use trying to lead a decent life. The only way is to get every ounce of pleasure possible, never mind at whose expense. That's what I'm going to do in the future—that's what she said.'

"I said: 'You poor little fool!—breaking's no man in all the world worth breaking your heart over'—she would not admit anything, of course, but I knew!—Julie laughed softly. 'And now there is something I want to ask you—something I want you to do for me. Will you be kind to Julie—the other Julie. I'm so sorry for her. I know just what she's going through. I've been through it all myself, you see. And I think you could help her. You're the sort of man who understands. If you'll just be friends with her—'

"Doris, of course—she's bringing a party. And Lawrence Schofield—"

"What made you ask him?"

"To please Miss Farrow, of course. They're always together. I really believe they will make a match of it. 'I thought you didn't like Miss Farrow.'"

"Well, just between ourselves, I don't. But I find that one must be broad-minded in these matters. You see, it takes all sorts to make our world."

"It certainly does. Who else?"

"A lot of people you don't know."

She rang off and Giles turned away from the 'phone with a shrug of his shoulders. It was only when he was in his mother's house that he suddenly realized that in all probability Sadie would be there also. For a moment he hesitated, a sudden chill feeling at his heart, then he philosophically pushed the thought aside and went on.

She was almost the first person he saw when he entered Mrs. Ardron's crowded drawing room.

She was talking to a group of people which included Julie Farrow and several others whom Giles knew slightly, and it was Julie who first caught sight of him and waved an airy hand.

Giles went straight across to her. He did not know in the least what sort of reception to expect from his wife, but after he had greeted Julie and the others whom he knew, it was she who said in her insistent way: "Present your friend."

It was Julie who obeyed. "Mr. Chittentham, Miss Barrow—" "Pleased to meet you," Sadie said impudently.

There was a twinkle in her eyes for which Giles could have shaken her.

Schofield was with Julie, beaming happily upon every one.

"We haven't met lately, Mr. Chittentham," Julie was saying. "Where have you been hiding? So kind of your mother to ask me here tonight."

"So kind of you to come," Giles answered formally. He could see that Sadie was maneuvering to reach his side, and presently they were a little apart from the rest.

"Isn't it a scream?" Sadie demanded. "Fancy meeting you in your own mother's house, and she not knowing that she's entertaining a daughter-in-law unawares."

"You are at perfect liberty to tell her if you choose," Giles answered coolly, though inwardly he was raging. "I have no doubt that you have told other people already."

Sadie gave a little scream of repudiation.

"Tell any one! Not me! It would cook my little goose once and for all if it was known that I'd got such highly respectable relations. No, thanks. Freedom for me all the time, and if there's anything left over, freedom again."

"Why have you come to London?" Her face changed subtly.

"Not to find you, my lambkin, so don't worry! I've come to have a good time, and don't you interfere, or it will be the worse for you."

"Sadie, the situation is impossible—"

She laughed in his face.

"Rubbish! Don't pretend that you want me to come back to you."

Sadie shrugged her naked shoulders. "Times change!" she said. She moved away from him, her slim, scantily-clad body swaying with a little impudent movement.

Giles watched her with hard eyes. And this was his wife! This common little . . . he pulled his thoughts up sharply, ashamed of them. After all, he had once thought her good enough to marry.

Giles turned again to Julie. "I suppose it would be utterly useless for me to ask you to drop this damnable play-acting?"

"My dear man, what on earth do you mean?"

"What I say. You're never natural for a single moment. You hate this sort of—piffle—as much as I hate it. You—you despise people like—like these people here—"

Julie laughed serenely. "I brought Lawrence and Sadie Barrow. By the way, what do you think of Sadie?"

"Is she a new friend of yours?"

Barber Examination To Be Held at Abilene

One of a series of examinations for barbers will be conducted by the state board of barber examiners in Abilene, October 29 and 30, according to announcement made at Austin yesterday.

The first of the series will be held at Houston, October 14 and 15. Other examinations are scheduled for Wichita Falls October 27 and 28; Lubbock, November 3 and 4; Amarillo, November 5, 6 and 7; El Paso, November 10, 11 and 12.

"Unless there were an extremely humorous side to political life, I could think of nothing more grinding,"—Alfred E. Smith.

Tillie Clinger says she dreamed last night she was engaged to a straw boss and when she waked up she found a whisk broom in the bed.

Personally we do not care much for a moving picture in which the heroine doesn't suffer before she triumphs.

Advertising Is Held As Depression Cure

Advertising was advanced as a remedy for present depression, and was described as "a sort of business hypochondria," by Edward F. Flynn, assistant to the general counsel of the Great Northern Railway Company, before the conventions section of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries in Tulsa, Oklahoma, Monday.

"I know of nothing," he said, "which will lift us out of the 'slough of despond' into which we have allowed ourselves to become mired, sooner or more effectively, than advertising and more advertising. It is your duty as advertising men to sell this idea to your city and its citizens. You must go back to your homes and do all you can to restore the confidence of your citizens in the future."

Trying to Produce Rain by Scientific Methods

A party of modern miracle men, operating under the title of the weather control bureau, are endeavoring to produce rain by scientific methods on an old Virginia estate, near Washington. Heavy dynamite blasts are set off against a rocky cliff, which acts as a reflector, in an effort to induce precipitation. The photograph shows the scene as one of the blasts is detonated.

WINNING HIS WAY

Wearing his freshman "pot" and a slightly embarrassed grin, Dana McCutcheon Dawes, son of the American ambassador to the Court of St. James, carries water for the grid men at Williams college, Massachusetts, where he is a first-year student. Young Dawes was competing for the position of assistant manager of the freshman football team, and no task was too lowly to perform in striving for the excited goal.

MAY GET RED HAT

KILLS RATS NOTHING ELSE

K-R-O (Kills Rats Only) killed 238 rats in 12 hours on a Kansas farm. It is the original product made by a special process of squill, an ingredient recommended by U. S. Government as sure death to rats and mice, but harmless to dogs, cats, poultry or even baby chicks. You can depend on this. K-R-O in a few years has become America's leading rat and mouse killer. Sold by all druggists or a money back guarantee.

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like Cascarets. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.
Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime.

Healthiest

"Arthur had a bad case of measles," says Mrs. Clara Gilliam, 4137 Bowdoin St., Des Moines, Iowa. "He was having a hard time until I gave him California Fig Syrup. It regulated his bowels, seemed to give him new strength and energy."

"I have since used it for all his colds or upsets, and it has helped make him the healthiest boy I know."
For over fifty years, mothers have praised California Fig Syrup. Doctors advise its use when children are bilious, headachy, constipated; and to keep bowels open during colds or upsets. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor. It is mild in action.

Look for the name California when buying. That marks the genuine.

Dairy Industry Makes Outstanding Showing—Other Commodities Weak, Report Reveals.

By Victor H. Schoffemayer,
Agricultural Editor of Dallas News

"The return of the next wave of prosperity is as inevitable and certain as was the termination of the last wave. Slowly but surely the forces that will bring about a revival are at work."

This encouraging statement is issued by the Guarantee Trust Company of New York in its monthly release, which further states that "there is nothing abnormal or unprecedented about the present situation. It is a perfectly natural reaction, such as has been witnessed many times in the past and will continue to recur at intervals as long as our economic organization is what it is."

The review then states that seasonal upturns in many lines of industry have taken place and that the exaggerated pessimism that has been visible in some quarters is by no means justified. It deplors overdrawn and distorted views which either give rise to unwarranted hopes or encourage false starts or further dampen confidence and delay in a return of business prosperity.

Butter Prices Advance.

While many farm commodities show a decline in values under the same period of last season the goods which farmers have to buy also show a decline which may help to balance matters some.

The best outlook at present is for the dairy industry, with cold storage stocks of butter showing a decline of 27,788,000 pounds below a year ago and 3,951,000 pounds below the five-year average for the period. Butterfat prices were considered quite satisfactory from the producer's standpoint.

Cattle markets are not as satisfactory as wished, but the smaller movement into the corn belt since July points to a material reaction in cattle feeding during the next six months and should make for better prices for highly finished beefs. Storage stocks of pork were further reduced and show 25 per cent under the same period a year ago. Hogs are going to markets lighter than usual on account of feed shortage, but the outlook for winter markets is considered not as favorable as last season, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Poultry Stocks High.

Stocks of cold storage poultry have been reduced 15,000,000 pounds under the figure a year ago and receipts of dressed poultry at the four leading markets were 4,000,000 pounds under a year ago. Price of farm poultry is about four cents under a year ago, but showed a slight rise recently. Heavy egg receipts and exceptionally large storage stocks prevented the usual fall rise in prices. Storage eggs showed a total of 9,169,000 cases on October 1, compared with 7,195,000 a year ago. Frozen eggs also showed a gain of 712,000 cases on the same date.

Wool markets showed a decline or general weakness, owing to a decline of four to six cents a pound at London auction and large stocks of domestic wool in this country.

However, it is generally agreed that farm commodities have hit the bottom and are expected to work upward with increased demand as soon as general business shows recovery.

Highway 83 Finished To East Now, Report

It is reported that the State Highway Department last Wednesday finished putting the first asphalt topping on the gap in west Shackelford County connecting Nos. 83 and 18, about 2.1 miles in length, and started topping the short gap on No. 18 between Leanders and Albany, at the crossing of the Katy railroad.

Travelers from Scurry County to Fort Worth and other eastern points will remember this stretch of unpaved roads during the wet times.

ROSCOE RESTS UP FOR TILT HERE

Last Friday was an idle day for the Roscoe Plowboys. They had no game scheduled for that day and were resting up for the game today with the Snyder Tigers, according to the Roscoe Times.

"Snyder is reputed to have a strong team this year, and the fans who go to witness the game are going to see one of the best contests of the year."

"Woodrow Jones, Plowboy captain, sustained a dislocated shoulder in the game at Colorado recently, and it is doubtful if he will be able to be in the game next Friday. Ray Hendrix also sustained an injury in the Colorado game but it is expected that he will be able to play next Friday. He is suffering with a knee out of place," the Times continues.

New Post Office to Be Erected at Post Within Short Time

Construction of a modern new post office building at Post will be begun within the next few weeks, according to a letter to Postmaster C. A. Quails, from the postal department at Washington, D. C.

The letter states that a 10-year lease has been awarded the A. J. Rife Construction Company of Dallas for the building and equipment.

The new building will be located on the two corner lots directly across the street from the old court house and across the street west from the new city hall, on Main Street, in the block between D and E Streets, and will face north.

The edifice is to be equipped with new boxes and all other modern equipment, including a private office for the postmaster. The building and equipment will represent an expenditure of about $16,000.

Stepping on It!
If You Expect To Win!

If you expect to be listed among the winners in this campaign November 29, you most certainly will have to do some HARD WORK the next few days. Prizes are awarded according to your votes . . . and if you realize this you will make every effort NOW, while the votes are high, to gather them in. Friends should fulfill their promises while votes are high, and give their FAVORITE the benefit. Remember that $50 will be divided among the workers Saturday night, October 25—a matters of hours.

Subscribe Second Time

—Many have asked us this week how they can help their favorite candidate after they have already subscribed for 1 year.

—If you have already given your candidate a 1-year subscription and desire to extend it another year, the candidate receiving the second payment will receive 1,800 additional votes for each year you have extended your subscription. For instance, if you have given him or her a 1-year subscription and then give another, the candidate receiving your second subscription will be credited with 4,800, instead of 3,000. If you extend it from one year to five—four more—then the candidate would receive 7,200 additional votes above the regular schedule.

—Candidates will find this to be an advantage in getting second payments and will also find that it is a good way to get additional votes. It does not matter which candidate secured the first subscription—if you get the second subscription from the same party you receive the additional credit.

10 Five-Year Subs

—Ten new 5-year subscriptions by Saturday night, counting your club votes, would mean 560,000 votes. Haven't you 10 friends who would help you to that extent to see you awarded one of the big prizes?

They're Off

Following is a relative standing of candidates, with votes cast for publication up to Saturday night, October 18:

MRS. GRACE STEVENSON	197,800
E. M. TAYLOR	194,200
MRS. J. L. FARGASON	186,300
MISS AURELIA WIMMER	183,100
MRS. W. K. GREEN	168,100
MRS. J. C. REA	103,300
MISS JETA LANDRUM	102,000
MRS. J. A. MARTIN	59,000

There are several others who have made small reports but not sufficient to be listed. Remember the big drop in votes each week, and the biggest drop will come November 1.

Votes Take Big Drop Soon

—Votes this week are worth 10,000 on the "club" less than last week. Next week they will be reduced another 10,000, and 20,000 on each "club" the following week. Do you realize what that means. If so, make this week and next your BANNER WEEKS.

—As you know, DOUBLE VOICES are allowed on 3-year and 5-year subscriptions. After November 1, they, too, take a big drop. NOW is the TIME to go after those BIG subscriptions. A few long-term subscriptions from any of the workers right now would change the entire line-up.

$50.00 Free!

—SATURDAY NIGHT, OCTOBER 25—$50.00 will be won by the workers in this campaign. What are you doing to be one of the winners? You should make every effort the next few hours to get every available subscription into this office. Many of you have "promises" enough to cinch this extra award. Now is the time to go after them. The standing at the left reveals the fact that no one has any certain prize won. There is plenty of territory in Scurry County that has not been worked. In some sections no one has even been solicited. If you are a WORKER you will go after them NOW, while the votes are high.

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN USES OF MAGNESIA

To women who suffer from nausea, or so-called "morning sickness," this is a blessing. Most nurses know it. It is advised by leading specialists: Over a small quantity of finely cracked ice pour a teaspoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Sip slowly until you are relieved. It ends sick stomach or inclination to vomit. Its anti-acid properties make Phillips' Milk of Magnesia quick relief in heartburn, sour stomach, gas. Its mild laxative action assures regular bowel movement. Used as a mouth-wash it helps prevent tooth decay during expectancy.

Unharmed by Long Fall
Reversing the case of Humpty Dumpty, a Stockholm roofer recently fell seven stories to the street without causing himself more damage than a broken tooth. The workman, Tore Fredelin, was nailing plates on the edge of a mansard roof, when the plank he stood on gave way and he tumbled to earth. He said later that he remembered striking many beams before he reached the ground, but he remained conscious throughout. Passersby who had watched him fall could hardly believe their eyes when they saw Fredelin unconcernedly pick himself up and brush off his clothes.
