"YOUR HOME COUNTY PAPER"

SNYDER, TEXAS, THURSDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 30, 1933.

FORTY-FIFTH YEAR.

NUMBER 42

Fluvanna Wins League Events

HERMLEIGH RUNS NEXT, SNYDER IS THIRD.

Fluvanna came out of the north last Friday and Saturday to rout all other schools of the county in the annual Interscholastic League meet. Hermleigh was second, Snyder was a close third, and Dunn came fourth.

The Frogs won Class B honors each of the three previous years, but Snyder, only Class A school in the county, usually comes out with the long end of the general score. It was a jam-up good meet from every standpoint, practically every attendant at literary and athletic events will tell you. Despite the exceedingly large number of entries, events were reeled off with precision.

The track meet Saturday attracted hundreds of visitors who welcomed the warm sunshine and light breezes. R. L. Williams, athletic director, has received many compliments because of his firm yet courteous handling of participants and spectators. "It was the best managed athletic meet since I have been in the county," declares E. E. Kerr, Hermleigh, general league director.

With McClinton and Wiese on the sidelines, Snyder dropped into second place in senior boys' track events. Fluvanna took 49 points, the Tigers 45, Dunn 41, and Snyder barely dropped into third with 44 1/2 points. The final event of the afternoon, mile relay, determined the standings of the three neck-and-neck leaders.

Ashley of Dunn won high-point honors in the athletic events with 21 markers, and Moore of Fluvanna was second with 15 units.

Fluvanna easily won the grammar school track meet with 41 points, against Crowder's 12, and Snyder's and Ennis Creek's 4 apiece.

In junior boys' high school track, Snyder stepped ahead with 24 points, Fluvanna 14, Pylon 10, Dunn 7.

A new cup went to Fluvanna as Class B champion and another to See LEAGUE EVENTS—Page 8

Cemeteries Have Been Beautified With RFC Funds

If you haven't driven out to Snyder's two cemeteries during the past few days, you will be surprised and delighted at the transformation that has been wrought.

A large concrete tank has been built on the upper side of the cemetery. Workmen are still busy clearing the grounds of weeds and otherwise adding to the appearance.

The old burial grounds, at the intersection of highways in East Snyder, had been hidden beneath weeds, tin cans and other rubbish for many years. Men with rakes, hoes and shovels transformed the eyesore into a spot in which the community may take due pride.

The little grove of mesquite trees, now pruned and trimmed, overlook many graves—72 to be exact—that are headed by new native stone head and foot boards.

Mrs. W. R. Bell, chairman of the cemetery association, has been largely responsible for the transformations. She has been assisted by these other members of the special committee: Mmes. J. W. Warren, Allen Warren and D. C. Howell.

Warren Taken To Lubbock Sanitarium

Allen Warren, who is seriously ill with pneumonia, was carried in an Odom ambulance to the Lubbock Sanitarium Friday. He was accompanied by Mrs. Warren and by his brother, Bob Warren, of Post.

It has been reported this morning that he is still in a serious condition, having shown slight improvement since his arrival at the sanitarium.

LEAVES SUNDAY

Red-Hot messages have been delivered at the local Baptist Church for almost two weeks by this evangelist, Dr. W. Y. Pond. Large crowds have attended the series of services, which will end Sunday night. The visiting preacher does not mince words in his condemnation of the liquor traffic and other evils of the day.

FOUR COUNCIL PLACES WILL BE OPEN TUESDAY

Leath, Ely and Monroe Are Up For Relection — Two Entered In North Ward Vacancy.

Two-thirds of the governors of city affairs for the ensuing fiscal year of the city of Snyder will be named by local citizens Tuesday, April 4, when four of the six aldermen will be elected. Two of the new councilmen will be from the north ward, and one each from the east and west wards.

Saturday will be the final day on which candidates' names may be filed for the official ballot. Five names have been entered in the north ward, and one each from the east and west wards.

Interest in the election is growing as the balloting day approaches, and it is believed a fair turnout of Snyder citizens will express their sentiments Tuesday.

Presiding officers for the election were selected at the last regular City Council meeting. E. A. Black will have charge for the east ward voters, the voting to be done in the home of R. H. Stovall, northeast corner of the square. Mrs. J. P. Morgan is the official for west side voters, the polls to be in the justice basement. R. H. Stovall will preside for north side voters, in the Caton-Dodson store, north side of the square.

Bob Gray and Fred Merrell Will Open New Sandwich Shop

Friday evening is official opening time for the new sandwich shop that is being prepared by Bob Gray and Fred Merrell.

The spiffy little Howard Brothers service station, corner of Twenty-fifth Street and the Colorado highway, has been converted into a speck-and-span stand for the sale of sandwiches, cold drinks, confections and other thirst and hunger silencers. The interior is finished in green and black, with matching curtains, walls, chairs and private tables. Plenty of parking space is provided for those who want curb service. Balloons will be given as souvenirs for the kiddies.

Bryant-Link Taking Its Spring Invoice

Spring came in real earnest for Bryant-Link Company this week. Manager A. V. McAdoo and all the other members of the force have been busy with the regular spring invoice. Fortunately, they missed all the sandstorms, and have labored under almost ideal weather conditions so their customary good humor has not been spoiled.

Previous to the inventory, the colorful display blocks in the front windows were brightened with new paint.

Clean-Up Drive Plans Complete

MANY OUT FOR RABBIT DRIVES

Snyder is to be taken to a clean-up. That's the sentence pronounced by Mayor H. G. Towle in his spring clean-up proclamation issued last week through The Times. The official time for the concerted drive against rubbish and filth in the city has been set for the week beginning Monday, April 2, and will continue throughout Saturday.

Cooperation of the entire citizenship is urged in this beautifying and sanitary movement. Already the campaign has been started in the business district by workmen under employ of the City Council. It is the desire of those in charge that the people in the residential districts will take up the challenge and carry on in making Snyder one of the cleanest towns of the Lone Star State.

City officials have made arrangements to have all rubbish and trash hauled off free of charge to the property owners in the city limits. Tin cans and other trash picked up in placed towsacks, barrels or other containers and put in convenient places for the trash wagons will be picked up the latter part of the week.

Officials point out that there is plenty of cheap laboring men and boys in this vicinity who are anxious to secure employment, and that with special efforts in cleaning up will assist alleviating the unemployment situation here as well as in beautifying premises of the city.

Plane Lands Friday Near Camp Springs

When the Kinner-powered American Eagle of Don Teel developed motor trouble he landed his ship in a stalk field of shifting sand grains two and a half miles south of Camp Springs Friday afternoon.

Another thrilling settlement will come weekly from Miss Gloria Brunton, prominently identified in that section. Lone Star is in the extreme southwest portion of Fisher County, about eight miles from Hermleigh.

Christian Endeavor Meeting April 28-30

San Angelo will be host April 28-30 to the mid-west district convention of Christian Endeavorers. The district includes Snyder County.

More Boys On Honor Group

Boys of Snyder High School gained a lap on the honor roll just issued for the first six weeks of the second semester. Four of them gained places on the list, as opposed to only one or two in previous honor rolls of the school year.

Practically All Fruit Killed By February Freeze

Old timers say you'll be lucky to get as many as two or three good fruit crops from a peach tree in Snyder county.

Murphy Machine To Be Demonstrated At Rollins Place April 4

A demonstration of the Murphy terracing and ditching machine, to be sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, will be held Tuesday afternoon, April 4, from 2:00 until 5:00 o'clock, at the J. H. Rollins farm, just east of Snyder's city limits.

Tennis Court Work Now Going Forward

Work on a surfaced tennis court is going forward this week on the southeast corner of the school grounds. A heavy rock and gravel base is being put in. Clay will be used for the top coating. Funds for labor are provided by the RFC.

Snyder Girls Go To Finals In Debating

Snyder's debating team of girls went to the finals in an invitational tournament at Abilene recently. Before they were defeated in the finals by a Lubbock entry, they passed San Antonio, Dallas and other city arguers.

WOMEN HOPE FOR KEEN INTEREST IN EVENT.

Everyone who has anything that they desire to swap is to be reminded this week-end that Monday is the day for the big county-wide exchange, which will be conducted in the former D. P. Strayhorn building on the east side of the square.

Baptist Revival To Close Sunday After Two Weeks

LOANS SHOULD BE ASKED NOW

Farmers who plan to turn in applications for government crop loans are urged to do so at once, if they wish to avoid lengthy delay in receiving a loan from the division office at Dallas.

Charles J. Lewis, manager of the local office, states that the state office is flooded with applications from other parts of the state, and says it is imperative for home farmers to act immediately if they wish to assure early returns.

Sports Club Gives Annual Banquet Friday Evening At Manhattan Hotel

Among the most enjoyable and gayest events of the season for the Lucky 13 Sports Club is their annual banquet, which was held Friday evening at the Manhattan Hotel.

The banquet table, in the shape of a horseshoe, was decorated with mounds of white sweet peas and greenery, with the club's colors, green and white, being emphasized in the miniature horseshoes and numbers 13, which were placed effectively about the table. Myriads of green tapers burned in silver candlesticks. On the backs of unique place cards were printed programs.

Miss Mildred Stokes, president, acted as toastmistress. After the singing of the club's song, Miss Stokes welcomed the guests. A history of the club was given by Miss Margaret Deakins, and Miss Estine Dorward spoke on "Entertainments of the Club."

Superintendent C. Wedgeworth and Principal R. L. Williams of Snyder High School were honored guests, and spoke on the following subjects, "Modern Girl's Opportunities" and "Modern Boy's Opportunities."

A duet was sung by Misses LaFrances Hamilton and Florencia Winston, accompanied at the piano by Miss Frances Northcutt. Miss Netha Lynn Rogers favored the audience with a tap dance, with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Elmer Spears. "The Snooper" turned out to be Miss Roberta Ely, who gave, in fun, the "lowdown" on members of the club.

A toast to the club's charming sponsor, Miss Mattie Ross Cunningham, was given by Miss Ruby Lee, who also presented Miss Cunningham with a gift from the girls. Following a response from Miss Cunningham, the boys, in turn, told of their appreciation of the club. Piano selections were played by Miss Wanda Newsom.

Guests were Messrs. Morris Casey, Jack Darby, Oscar Brice, William Boren, Jesse Browning, Fred Wootcot, York Murphy, Aubrey Wilson, Royce Eiland, Bob Hamilton, John Blakey, Billie Lee, Lewis Hairston, Harrie Winston and R. L. Williams and Mr. and Mrs. C. Wedgeworth. Members present were Misses Ruby Lee, Wanda Newsom, Roberta Ely, Mildred Stokes, Margaret Deakins, Florencia Winston, Frances Northcutt, Netha Lynn Rogers, Martha Jo Jenkins, LaFrances Hamilton, Mary Margaret Lynn, Estine Dorward, Frances Stinson and Mattie Ross Cunningham.

Ruth Anderson Auxiliary In Meeting.

Miss Ora Norred and Mrs. F. W. Cloud were hostesses Monday afternoon to the Ruth Anderson Auxiliary of the First Methodist Church, which met in the home of Miss McLeod.

The meeting was opened with prayer directed by Mrs. R. H. Odum. It was reported during the business session that $92.64 had been spent on local work during the year.

Following a song, Mrs. E. J. Randall gave the devotional, "Neighbors," from Matthew 5:43-48. Mrs. A. E. Wiese led in prayer, after which "The Deaconesses" was discussed by Mrs. Ivan Dodson. The bulletin was given by Mrs. V. L. Littlepage, and Mrs. C. W. Harless read a paper on "Social Service."

Sandwiches, cookies and punch were served to Misses W. Norred and R. E. Gray and Misses Glenzie Moschel, guests, and to Misses A. R. Porter, R. H. Odum, R. J. Randall, V. L. Littlepage, A. E. Wiese, J. G. Hicks, C. W. Harless, Ivan Dodson, Wellington Taylor, Wayne Boren, Homer Snyder and Claude Sims.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Black had as their week-end guests his sisters, Misses Mollie, Ola and Ella Black, of Alvarado. W. T. Black, another brother, returned home with the Misses Black for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Joyce have returned from a week's visit with friends and relatives in Fort Worth and Mount Vernon.

San Roberts of Haskell and Grady Roberts of Chillicothe were guests of their brother, J. W. Roberts, and family Saturday and Sunday.

Grain Gets Lost in a Rainstorm

A STORY FOR CHILDREN

By Miss Lucilester Roberson

Grain o' Sand and the Colonel said good-bye to their host, the secretary, early the next morning, to be on their way again.

"It looks like rain this morning," remarked Colonel Horsely as he was preparing to hop off.

"Oh, I hope not," cried Grain. "For then we would have to stop, wouldn't we?" And he was right, for though the raindrops were Grain's friends, they were not the Colonel's. Miss Brown very easily, you know, because they breathe all over their bodies instead of with their noses!

"We can't let it stop us now," the Colonel answered. "It's soon enough to stop when the drops begin to fall. Now, climb in, Grain."

Away they flew, waving to the gray stone as they went. "I really did enjoy making a new friend," the sand boy said to himself.

"Spit-spat-splat-splat-splat," went the raindrops that were beginning to fall all around, even on the Colonel's back. He wanted dreadfully to shiver but he didn't dare as he might shake Grain off and they were then away up in the air. There was nothing to do but come down and try to find shelter.

"Zoom, zoom, zoom, zoom, zoom," went the Colonel, coming to the ground in a hurry.

In the meantime Grain was looking around for a place to keep the rain off, but not one thing could he find. He looked at the trees, and what good were they, he wondered. "They can't be much account," he told himself, "else we would have them out on the Plains."

Just the same, Colonel Horsely headed straight toward one, and in no time at all was holding to the under side of a big limb.

Imagine standing upside down! The fly was so used to it that he didn't think of his friend being in danger.

"Oh, Colonel," Grain called, "I can't stand on my head. I'm falling out. Look out."

He tumbled right out and fell down, down, down! That frightened him because he knew the Colonel did not hear him, and, besides, he knew the raindrops might just carry him clear away where his friend would never find him.

Then he struck something. What was it? Not the ground, he saw, and was disappointed. It was another limb of the tree.

He saw couldn't I have gone on to the ground? He waited, "for I can't even get down from here."

It was then he realized some of the noise he heard was not made by the rain. Most of it was coming from a pile of sticks on the same limb with him. It sounded like half a dozen voices all crying at once.

Grain began to think. "It can't be anything, I know," because I never saw anything which looked like that. Grandfather told me about a jail once, and I just bet this is one. The prisoners are all yelling.

"Wheat, wheat!" came a soft call from the air, and in an instant a bird alighted on the edge of the sticks with a worm in her mouth. The noise suddenly ceased.

Grain laughed at himself. "Why, it's only a bird's nest!" But then he stopped laughing, for he remembered he was lost, away up here on this tree limb.

Hospital Notes

A new son has arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dyer. He made his appearance Wednesday morning, March 22.

Two fine boys arrived at the hospital Monday morning. They are sons of Rev. and Mrs. Philip C. McCahey and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Imman. One has selected for his name John Miller McCahey, but little Mr. Imman just can't decide on his.

Mrs. Joe Parks underwent a tonsil operation yesterday morning.

Afternoon Club Meets With Miss Boren.

Members of the Wednesday Afternoon Bridge Club and guests were entertained this week in the home of Miss Helen Boren.

At the conclusion of the bridge play, the hostess, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Hugh Boren, served a lovely salad plate. High score award was won by Mrs. G. B. Clark Jr., with Mrs. Bertie Bell Putman receiving cut prize for guests.

Guests were Mrs. Bonnie Greenfield and Mrs. Blanche Doherty of Post, Misses W. O. Stevens, Felix Parker and Bertie Belle Putman and Miss Dorothy Strayhorn. Members present were Miss Dorette Beggs, Misses Robert Curtnutte, Ottis Moore, W. W. Hill, Amos Joyce, Gathler Bell, J. D. Scott, P. W. Cloud, Herbert Bannister, G. B. Clark Jr. and Max Brownfield.

Miss Ruth Yoder has as her guest Miss Ruth Treadwell of Abilene.

Twentieth Century Entertained Tuesday.

Mrs. C. E. Fish, 2901 Avenue W, was hostess to the Twentieth Century Club Tuesday afternoon, at which time Mrs. F. J. Brice directed an interesting program on "Russia."

Mrs. Brice gave an outline of Russia's five-year plan and discussed the results of the plan. "The Old Russia" was Mrs. Nelson Dunn's topic, and Mrs. J. E. LeMond spoke on "Russian vs. American Temperament in Art, Literature and Music." The history of Russian music was related by Mrs. Fish, who also played a piano number by a Russian composer.

Teed punch and cake were served to Misses I. A. Griffin, H. E. Rosser and C. F. Senell, guests; and to Misses I. W. Boren, H. J. Brice, B. M. West, Nelson Dunn, W. J. Ely, P. C. Chenault, W. C. Hamilton, J. E. LeMond, W. M. Scott, J. J. Taylor, Joe Strayhorn and O. S. Williamson.

Missionary Society Holds Regular Meet.

The regular Monday afternoon meeting of the Adult Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church was held this week in the home of Mrs. I. W. Boren, with Mrs. Jim Henderson as an assistant hostess.

After an opening song, and prayer led by Mrs. A. C. Pruitt, Mrs. R. M. Stokes, president, presided during a short business session. The devotional, from Mark 1:29-31, was given by Mrs. J. C. Dorward. Mrs. A. M. Curry spoke on "The Deaconess, and Who Is She?" The difference between a deaconess and a social worker was discussed by Mrs. Joe Caton. Miss Pauline Boren sang "My Prayer for Today," after which news from the Bulletin was given by Mrs. Joe Strayhorn.

An ice course was served to 13 members and one guest, Miss Boren.

Charles Shell and Mother at Wedding.

Charles Shell, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Mary B. Shell, attended, as best man, the wedding of his cousin, Miss Frances Margaret Hollis and Charles Marstrand, at the Central Presbyterian Church in Abilene Friday evening, March 24.

Dr. E. B. Surface, church pastor, was the officiating clergyman in the impressive ring ceremony which was solemnized before an altar banked with ferns and flanked by gleaming cathedral tapers in floor candleabra of white.

The Shells were guests also for the 6:00 o'clock dinner given for the entire wedding party and a few other friends at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Seestrund, North Seventh Street, Abilene, on Sunday evening.

Other out-of-town guests for both occasions were Miss Cleo Marstrand of Fort Worth, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pauling of Stamford and Miss Pauline Kelly of San Angelo.

Art Guild Gives Texas Day Program.

A Texas Day program was rendered by members of the Art Guild Monday evening in the home of Mrs. Joe Caton. Mrs. Odelle Ryan was director for the evening.

In response to roll call, members rendered a prominent Texas art. Mrs. J. C. Smyth discussed "Natural Wonders of Texas," and a Texas song was sung by Miss Hattie Herm.

Miss Jo Halley told the legend of Mineral Wells. A parliamentary drill was conducted by Miss Hattie Herm.

The charming hostess served a dainty refreshment plate to Misses Wayne Williams, Overa Jones, Ixon Joyce, Mary Ruth Sperry, Aileen Smyth, Omaha Ryan and Mary Clark, Misses Lovce Clark, Jo Halley, Bonnie Gary, Blanche Mitchell and Hattie and Gertrude Herm.

Juanita Burt Hostess To Girls' Auxiliary.

The Intermediate Girls' Auxiliary of the First Baptist Church was entertained Wednesday afternoon by Miss Juanita Burt at her home on Avenue R.

Following a business hour, the sponsor, Mrs. W. A. Morton, gave an inspiring talk on "Building World Peace on the World." During the social hour refreshments were served and the hostess complimented her guests with a song.

Misses Joyce Clarkson, Geraldine Longbottom, Gerline Bell, Joe Farnese Isaacs and Frances Belk and Mrs. Morton were present.

There is no denying that this is a spring season of suits. In woollens, in crepes and in silks the suit is smart and for streets wear can not be excelled. Now comes the word from style centers that the newest in colors are the light woollens and silks dyed in flower colors. Suits, coats and frocks in lilac, delphinium blue and crocus yellow are already fitting along fashion avenues.

The suit shown in the sketch above incorporated every new slenderizing line. It is in a crocus yellow of light woolen, the relief being a trim of marine blue silk crepe inset on yoke and jacket sleeve. The jacket hangs straight in line and the sleeve, while full, hangs in straight line from a draped shoulder.

On the right is a full sleeve frock in silk print, which with its high neckline and ascot scarf accentuates the bias cut of the material, even including the paneled skirt which is full despite its straight-line hang. Both models are popular spring styles.

Miss Norred Hostess To Club Tuesday.

The San Souel Club was entertained Tuesday evening in the home of Miss Maggie Norred.

Lilac blooms added to the attractiveness of the entertaining suite, where bridge games were enjoyed. Winners of high scores were Mrs. W. W. Hamilton, guest, and Miss Hattie Herm.

The hostess was assisted in serving by her mother, Mrs. W. Norred, and her sister, Miss Ora Norred.

Guests were Miss Lovce Clark and Misses W. W. Hamilton, O. P. Thrane and Max Brownfield. Members present included Misses Bonnie Gary, Blanche Mitchell, Helen Leamon, Neoma Strayhorn, Hattie and Gertrude Herm; Misses James R. Hicks, Wayne Boren, R. L. Williams, Albert Norred and E. J. Anderson.

Mrs. Wayne Williams of Snyder Gets Division Better Homes Appointment

Mrs. Wayne Williams of Snyder has received notice from Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Better Homes in America, New York, of appointment as chairman of the Better Homes in America committee for the seventh division of Texas.

Texas is composed of 34 divisions, the seventh division consisting of Cottle, Dickens, King, Kent, Stonewall, Scurry and Fisher Counties.

Better Homes committees are being established throughout the nation to arouse interest in the improvement of homes and to organize local civic groups to help each family to information concerning the best ways of taking the next steps in improving their own homes. The movement was founded with the help of President Hoover in 1922, and he served as chairman of the board of directors until he entered the white house, when this chairmanship was taken over by Secretary Wilbur.

It is an educational movement, reported by philanthropic gifts, having no commercial connections, and operating for the service of the public. Headquarters of Better Homes in America in New York are under direction of Dr. James Ford as executive director.

In the spring of last year 9,772 committees observed National Better Homes Week. It is expected that even a larger number will have programs of contests, lectures, tours, exhibit and demonstration houses in preparation for the next National Better Homes Week, which is from April 23 to 30, 1933.

There will be special emphasis this year on programs for repair of old houses and for the encouragement of remodeling and modernization. Many improvements of home premises can be made by the family in their own free time. Unemployed labor can be given employment in the making of the more elaborate improvements. All efforts of this sort will help to render homes more healthful and attractive; will help to keep up values of property and serve to enhance the community's reputation for high standards. Many thousands of homes were improved during the recent campaign, and it is expected that a much larger number of homes will be rendered more convenient and liveable by the campaign of 1933.

Mrs. Williams has appointed Mrs. W. R. Bell as county chairman. Under the direction of these capable chairmen Snyder club women and rural chairmen and their committees have already begun their campaign in this county.

A county-wide exchange is to be held in Snyder Monday, April 3, and a hymn and choral contest to be sponsored by the Alpha Study Club and Musical Coterie begins April 23, as part of the program.

Other plans, to be varied in each community and to suit local needs, are being made, according to Mrs. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Floyd are at the Lubbock Sanitarium this week with their 10-month-old baby, Girene, who underwent an operation Wednesday for mastoid trouble, the aftermath of scarlet fever.

Miss McLeod Returns. Miss Effie McLeod returned Sunday from the bedside of her father at Florence. She reports that her parent was slightly improved at the time of her departure, although little hope is held for his complete recovery from a long siege of illness. Miss McLeod took up her teaching duties here again Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Ellison of Crosbyton returned home Sunday after spending several days with relatives and friends in Snyder and surrounding communities.

TODAY and TOMORROW

FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

FORD—By coming to the rescue of the Detroit banking situation Henry Ford has again demonstrated his public spirit, and probably has set himself up as a fresh target for the abuse of the envious.

Mr. Ford refused to become a director or a minority stockholder in the two big Detroit banks that were in trouble, because he has original ideas about the way banks should be run, which he couldn't make effective if he were merely one of a group. But he said his son came forward with a proposal to supply all the capital needed for two big new banks to take over the old ones.

I would be willing to make a fair-sized wager that Mr. Ford will introduce revolutionary ideas into banking and will be as successful in that as he has been in his other ventures.

CASH—Henry Ford and his son unquestionably have more cash in banks subject to check than anybody else in the world. Yet Mr. Ford has a profound distrust of most bankers and their methods.

He told me how once, in his early days, he set a trap for some bankers and they fell into it. He had been told that a certain group of bankers wanted to get control of his business. He went to them and "talked poor." They lent him what was then a large amount of money, about half a million dollars. Shortly before the note came due he wrote them a letter asking for an extension. The next morning the heads of the banking houses was in his office, offering an extension on condition that Mr. Ford would turn over a controlling interest in his company to the bankers.

Ford's answer was to write a check for the entire amount of the loan with interest.

"That was my first lesson in high finance," he told me.

FINANCE—The depression has proved not that there is anything the matter with our industrial system, but that the nation's financial system had got into the hands of incompetent or reckless men bent on enriching themselves at the expense of the public.

The chairman of the board of the nation's largest bank resigned a few days ago as a result of disclosures of his banking methods before a senatorial investigation committee.

The country has been suffering from too many weak banks and too few honest bankers. One of the big jobs the new administration has ahead of it is the reorganization and rehabilitation of the nation's banking systems and methods.

ORIGINALITY—I have known Mr. Ford for a good many years. What makes him different from all other leaders in business is that he has no fixed "brain patterns." Because things have always been done

Dusting Indoor Track

Gene Venzke, noted University of Pennsylvania miler, is burning up the indoor tracks, stepping the three-quarter mile in 3 min., 52.5 sec. in the first mid-winter meet. He holds the indoor mile record.

In a certain way does not seem to Mr. Ford sufficient reason for continuing to do them that way, if a better way can be found.

Mr. Ford is often called an autocrat, because he insists upon doing things in what he believes to be the right way. He has no patience with people who tell him that his way is the wrong way because it has been tried out. That is why he bought out his minority stockholders for nearly a hundred million dollars in cash, because they thought the right way to run his business was to pay all the profits in dividends instead of using them to improve the plant and the product and reduce the price to the buyer.

HOSPITAL—One example of Mr. Ford's "autocracy" often cited is his management of the big hospital which he gave to the city of Detroit. Although not a resident of Detroit, Mr. Ford was a member of the committee which was trying to raise funds for a new city hospital. Money came in slowly and conflicting ideas about what kind of a hospital ought to be built were put forward. Mr. Ford finally said that if they would give him full control he would put up all the money and build the first hospital in the world.

He did exactly that, after employing scores of experts to study and report upon hospital construction and management in all the great medical centers.

The Detroit hospital is the only important hospital that is not run by doctors. It is run by Henry Ford's appointees for the benefit of the people of Detroit. A good many doctors don't like that, but I doubt if there is any hospital in the world where ordinary patients have more comfort and better medical care.

Mrs. W. T. Baze had as her guests Tuesday her sister, Mrs. Mack Maples, and her brothers, Dock and Frank Ellis, of Spur.

VACANCIES ON COUNTY BOARD WILL BE FILLED

Rural and Independent Trustees Also To Be Chosen in Annual Balloting Saturday.

Scurry County poll taxpayers may vote Saturday to fill two vacancies in the county school board, and at least one vacancy in each of the rural and independent groups of trustees.

Frank Farmer, county superintendent, urges that everyone eligible to participate in the election should vote a ballot Saturday. Interest in trustee elections is notoriously lax, but Mr. Farmer is of the opinion that a heartier vote than usual will be cast.

The name of J. E. (Cub) Murphy of Ira appears on the Precinct No. 3 ballot to fill the place now occupied by A. Rhoades of Snyder. M. A. Class of Pyron and S. L. Johnson of Hermleigh have been asked by their friends to fill the place now held in Precinct No. 4 by E. J. Ely of Hermleigh.

A Johnson is board member at large, Ben Hamilton represents Precinct No. 1, and J. L. Carrell is on the county board from Precinct No. 2. All of these are serving hold-over terms.

The rural districts, as usual, will each add a new member this year. At Pyron, seven trustees will be elected, while most of the other independent districts are choosing three trustees each.

Miss Helen Earen had as her guests Wednesday Mrs. Blanche Dalby and Mrs. Bonnie Greenfield of Post.

Mrs. Jack Deakins of Floydada is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Deakins and Miss Margaret Deakins.

Complete Results of Rural Athletic Meet Reveal How Independence Won

Independence walked away with rural interscholastic League senior athletic honors this year with little trouble, as everyone knows. Complete returns of the rural meet, held two Saturdays ago, give the "Holler" boys 75 points against Plainview's 20 points and Bison's 12 points.

In the junior division Crowder was first with 33 points, Ennis Creek ranked second with 18 points, and Independence took 7 points. Bethel and Bison have 3 each, and Plainview 2. Patrick of Crowder and Rainwater of Ennis tied for high point position with 12 each.

Ennis Creek, Crowder and Bethel also won points in the battle against sand and wind.

Strickland of Independence was easily high point man, with 25 tallies. Barnes of Plainview ranked second.

C. S. Harris of Ennis Creek is rural school athletic director, and

R. L. Williams of Snyder is general athletic director.

Belews Are Improving.

J. J. Belew and son, Burl Belew, of Fluvanna, who have been confined for several weeks at a hotel in Snyder with pneumonia, have both been removed to the Lubbock Sanitarium. Burl was carried Friday, and on Monday it became necessary that Mr. Belew be removed. Late reports are that both patients are back on a slow road to recovery.

W. T. Brice Wants To Get Paper Again

Folks tell the Times publishers that when they are away from home they appreciate the Home County Paper most. That's the case with W. T. Brice of Weatherford, who once resided in this county.

Mr. Brice's name was taken off our mailing list by mistake, and he let his son, H. J. Brice of Snyder, know that he didn't like the oversight. The 83-year-old pioneer is spry for his advanced age, and the local man says he still gets a tremendous "kick" out of political questions and arguments.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Downing and daughter, Ethel Dean, of Abilene were week-end guests at the J. O. Temple home.

H. V. Williams Jr. and wife of Estelline were guests of his parents in Snyder during the week-end.

Miss Thelma Leslie has returned from Lubbock, where she has been the guest of friends.

The Times Creed.

For the cause that needs assistance;
For the wrongs that need resistance;
For the future in the distance,
And the good that we can do.

THE WEEKLY DOZEN.

The Other Fellow's Yard.

Pessimism Pete says the old saying that "the grass is always greener in the other fellow's yard" is all bunkum. For Pete's chickens have not been penned this spring, and their feet have dug worm-seeking holes in the other fellow's yard.

The Return of the Swallow.

That old gag about America's theme song being "The Return of the Swallow" by I. Belch, needs reviving again. Brass rails and foaming glasses will soon be common in many states, and the wets will begin reaping their dollars and drunkenness. Poor Uncle Sam!

Early Sandstorms.

Early-season sandstorms have their drawbacks, but no one can deny that they taste better early in the spring than they do early in the summer, when heat crowns every grain. Early sandstorms are somewhat like Roosevelt's banking holiday: they taste bad any time, but they may prepare the way for a gentle and rainy season of late spring and early summer.

Exchange Day at Snyder.

Monday will be exchange day at Snyder. The regular first Monday trades day will be held as usual. In addition, women of the county will present a unique exchange at which everything from canned goods to chickens to quilts will be exchanged. If you have something you wish to exchange, especially in the line of smaller stuff, read the front page article about the exchange, and act accordingly.

More Snyder Publicity.

Some of the publicity that Snyder has received in times past has not been altogether favorable, although it might have advertised the town in many directions. But the new publicity that has come as a result of the Stinson home winning a national prize will be worth while for years to come, although it may seem of only passing importance now. Let us hope that this publicity may be a boomerang of more beautiful homes.

Preaching the Gospel.

The evangelist who is holding forth in Snyder has a command of the word of God that enables him to convince people that "pure religion and undefiled" is the only certain cure for the depression and the moral laxity of our modern day. Great minds are unanimous in this belief (including the affable Mr. Alfred E. Smith). Yet there is something in the public mind that seems to say we don't observe very many tenets of our religion.

Our Cities of the Dead.

It is an enterprising and highly worthy work that has been done with R. F. C. funds at the two local cemeteries. Our larger cemetery has always been more neatly kept than the average small-town city of the dead, but the older cemetery, in which many of this county's pioneers were buried, has been an eyesore for many years. If you haven't seen the transformation that has taken place at both cemeteries it will give you solemn thoughts of respect to drive out this very day.

Wanted: A System.

Wanted, An ironclad system to separate the printed chaff from the printed wheat. One letter carries beautiful laudatory matter for the Texas Press Association; another condemns the ancient order for falling in with the utilities. One screaming paper declares promotion with all the vigor of phobosy; another says promotion is oil on troubled waters (or water on troubled oil). Perhaps our inability to do our own separating comes from our inability to do enough of our own thinking. Perhaps we have all become a race of robots.

Maybe It's Not Proper.

Maybe it's not very proper to advertise The Times in the editorial columns, but since several of our merchants seem to have forgotten, we wish to say that we handle (six days every week) the following items, and others: Wedding announcements and invitations, calling cards, billheads, statements, letterheads, envelopes, circulars, labels, salesbooks, printed forms, inks, typewriter ribbons, carbon paper, typewriter paper, cardboards, placards, glue, receipt books, pamphlets and dozens of other things you need from time to time. The Heart of Man.

Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer, has been sending newspapers some interesting news letters. The last one relates that 15 gallons of blood an hour is the astonishing work done by the heart, and that this vital organ is much more faithful in the performance of its duties than man is in taking care of his heart. For that matter, most of us neglect our physical selves more than we neglect our chickens and

The Town Needs Cleaning Up.

Spring Clean-Up Week, designated by the mayor to continue from Sunday through Saturday of next week, deserves more than passing observance by Snyder citizens.

The town needs cleaning up. Our alleys are filled with last year's weeds and tin cans. Our vacant lots are filled with straggling tree shoots, and trash that has been collecting for months. Our yards, in many cases, are still strewn with stuff that was made for the dumping grounds.

It is remarkable what a little work can do about any home. And it is remarkable how quickly a dump little place can be transformed into an attractive home. Ofttimes the transformation can be effected with no cash outlay whatsoever.

Many a yard maker in Snyder is willing to trade—or give away—cuttings from shrubs and flowers that have overgrown their bounds. Most any of us can get hold of a rake and a hoe. And an old "goose-neck," by the way, serves just about as many purposes in town, if properly disciplined, as it does on the farm.

If you just don't have time to do your own work, you will find that someone will do it for you at such low rates that you will blush to pay them. Or, if you want to help the unemployment situation here, jar loose with 75 cents or a dollar, and see what can be done in your yard for that small amount.

Yes, the town needs cleaning up and prettifying up. The city is setting a splendid example this week by putting several men to work here in a campaign against rubbish in the back alleys of the business section. Trash is being hauled away on the usual contract with the city clean-up man without extra cost to the property owner.

The evangelist now conducting a meeting here is giving some pointers on moral and religious housecleaning. Perhaps cleanliness, which we have heard is next to godliness, would go a long way toward reviving our moral and religious sluggishness.

Beauty outside often creates beauty inside. Put out your tin cans for the hauling man. Rake up your old papers and leaves for the ravages of fire. And gird up your overalls or house dress for an old-fashioned siege of outside home-making.

EDITORIAL OF THE WEEK.

THE TASK OF FARM PRICES.

If President Roosevelt does to farm prices what he sets out to do, he will have to double the price of cotton, of meat animals, of poultry products and of fruits and vegetables. Grains will have to be trebled in price, which dairy products have to go up 50 per cent. This is apparent from examination of present price levels in comparison with the prices of the 1909-1914 period, which the president hopes to restore.

That is a tremendous task, in the opinion of those who know about the visible supplies of these commodities, the condition of the export market and the habits of producers as formed through the generations. Indeed, so skeptical are the thoughtful on the likelihood of success that many Democrats in Washington are said now quietly to be preparing to "save" the Democratic party from the effects of the country's disappointment, should failure come.

It is tolerably plain that what the farmer lacks is customers. It is tolerably clear also that the situation in the towns and cities is forcing more and more marginal men into submarginal farming, where they ask, not a living wage, but bare subsistence. The principal farm products of the United States, with the exception of feedstuffs and certain others, are export products depending upon the trend of foreign trade. Purely domestic measures can not restore those foreign customers, the lack of whom is the chief lack of American farming. It is for that reason that the Wallace plan meets with so little enthusiasm on the part of those who have submitted it to careful analysis.—The Dallas News.

SAYING IT IN RHYME.

THOUGHTS FOR 1933.

If these come from loss: a calmer view,
A fresher courage here to dare and do;
A closer kinship with all men we meet,
Increased devotion and less vain conceit,
The will to face days difficult and drear,
Then happiness may fill the present year.

If we can set ourselves to meet the task,
And not too much of rest and comfort ask,
But, knowing ease, can weariness assume
And not insist that life's one round of gloom;
If we can work once more and banish fear,
Then happiness may fill the present year.

If we can throw away all foolish pride
And put old thoughts of luxury aside,
To find that simpler pleasures are as fair
As those which wealth and lavishness prepare;
If we can comfort others who are near,
Then happiness may fill the present year.

livestock. Most of us know that cleanliness, proper foods and exercise are essential to health, but few of us observe the simple rules that are capable of cutting doctor and hospital fees in half.

The Nation's Masseur.

A syndicate writer reveals that the innermost secret of Roosevelt's tremendous vitality lies in his frequent treatments by a masseur. A masseur, if I interpret correctly, is a "rubber"—a man whose profession leads him to rub the kinks and stiffness and soreness from tired and sluggish muscles and nerves. Roosevelt, in turn, has become the nation's masseur. He has rubbed out most of the banking troubles, rubbed in the throat tilters, and rubbed out a lot of uncertainty concerning his ability. If he and Secretary Wallace can rub out some of the farmer's worries now, may God in his heaven be with the two geniuses!

The Wheat We Eat.

The Pathfinder discovers that these new-fangled breakfast foods represent one of the most potent arguments for removal of a host of middle men. A quantity of wheat that costs the manufacturer only a few dollars brings more than $1,000 out of the consumer's pocket, the Pathfinder records. Along the way, of course, there is the manufacturing expense, and several salaries to pay, but the major profit, if the Pathfinder be right, goes to the manufacturer and to a surplus of middle men. All of which reminds us that the regular prices of most wheat cereals have gone down only 2 1/2 cents per box while wheat has dropped 200 or 300 per cent.

A welcome guest is Spring, with her trailing garments of flowers, her carpets of grass and bluebonnets. . . . For when Spring visits West Texas Grandpaw must mix his tonic of sulphur and molasses, and life with its joyous song of vitality bubbles over with optimism. . . . Talk of rods and reels fills the club-room, and even the leaves of life, which keep falling one by one, rest with a knowledge that resurrection will awaken the sleeping travelers. . . . With all the worries and cares incident to happiness one has a deeper reverence with the passing of years for God, that generously carpeted Texas with beauty, and made each citizen an heir to its empire of gardens.

The Fort Dodge Bio-Chemic Review says the market for horses and mules the past three years has declined none at all. . . . Horsepower is more in demand now than in several years, the journal also states. . . . In fact, horses are wanted in some parts of Texas, where aged stock have been converted into glue. . . . Only recently this writer noticed several truckloads of mules being trucked from the Plains to East Texas. . . . Power farming, of course, has its place in Texas and elsewhere, but the demand for good stock is an indication that the small farmer especially will require horsepower in farming.

A meteor with a tail about 65 miles long recently flashed across Southwestern Kansas, across Oklahoma. . . . Then the gaseous whirlwind of iron streaked across the northern tip of Texas, a part of Colorado, and evidently disappeared in New Mexico. . . . Meteors are something of a rarity that visit this one's path. . . . Scientists are intensely interested in the composition of meteors, and they tell you that friction sets them afire as they tear through space, literally burning the air.

When Russia started on its second five-year plan recently Soviet officials reassured the masses the first five-year plan succeeded "some-what," meaning failure. . . . They gave an alibi that four Englishmen poured acid on turbine blades used in the hydro-electric plant at the Dnieper Dam caused the whole plan to be upset. . . . Feeling ran high in England, because the four imprisoned at Moscow were accused of sabotage. . . . It is pathetic to know the ruthless policies of infidelity are holding back the peasant class of Russia, when Christianity could transform the peasant into a progressive human, instead of making a serf out of labor.

Preparations are under way to introduce a beer bill at Austin to attempt to legalize beer in Texas. . . . Give the Crusaders (wet organization) their way and lobbying of a high crust nature will harangue our legislators, but put the Crusaders out of Texas, and the beer cry in this state will not amount to a wet hen cackling for the moon to fall.

The Federation of Women's Clubs is nationally doing an excellent bit of constructive work in directing feminine shoppers to purchase quality goods for one thing. . . . The most important thing is concerning the return privilege of customers purchasing merchandise from reputable stores. . . . It is estimated three billion dollars is annually lost by stores because the return privilege is sometimes abused. . . . If a purchase is unsatisfactory, or the incorrect size any store should willingly rectify the matter. . . . And if the item purchased is damaged the manufacturer or merchant pays the cost, but if the goods bought are to be shelved (if returned) the buyer pays the cost every time. . . . Merchants add this sum to gross operating costs, which, in turn, is paid by the customer.

About Time To Wean the Darn Thing

Getting Attention. A tired pilgrim once arrived in the up-to-date and perfectly self-satisfied city of Athens. He arrived on foot because he had no car-fare. His shoes were sadly worn and his clothing unkempt and covered with dust. One would say that these disadvantages were enough to disqualify him for success in a city so smart and critical, but he had other handicaps that were more fundamental. He was too short and thick-set to be impressive; his eyes had a decided squint; altogether he was not at all the kind of a man who commands respect before a crowd.

The principal business of the clever gentlemen of that city was standing around the market-place, there to "hear or to tell some new thing." They were the joke-makers and fashion-setters of their era. As for investing in a new religion—they had hundreds of religions, some new, some fairly new, some old, but all entirely unused. A fine appreciative atmosphere for the foreign visitor named Paul. Straight on he marched until he reached Mars Hill. A few of the clever ones gathered about. The critical moment had come. Paul must say something, and no matter what he said, it would be wrong. Suppose he had said: "Good morning, gentlemen. I have something new in the way of a religion which I'd like explain." A boisterous laugh would have ended his talk.

But Paul knew the psychology of the crowd. "Men of Athens, I congratulate you on having so many fine religions. I've traveled about quite a bit and your assortment is larger and better than I have seen anywhere else. I noticed that you not only have altars erected to all the regular gods and goddesses; you even have one dedicated to the unknown god.

"Let me tell you an interesting coincidence, gentlemen. This God whom you worship without knowing his name is the very God whom I represent."

Paul stopped short and voices called out demanding that he go on.

JEVER STOP TO THINK?

By EDSON E. WAITE

From the window of my room in the famous Oklahoma Biltmore Hotel in Oklahoma City, the vision is one that conjures thoughts of a greater city in the making. It is early in the morning. Radiantly blue is the sky. The hum of busy traffic not yet rising to the familiar crescendo we have come to know.

Yesterday I went on a journey through this hotel and it was a long and most interesting one. In the Biltmore you see a city in its entirety. It is a complete, self-contained unit; every facility, every convenience of modern living can be found in the 26 stories of this magnificent structure. Starting from the basement, revelation after revelation unfolds itself. The lobby, complete laundry, telephone room where the operators were so busy receiving and transmitting calls; its kitchens, coffee shop, dining and banquet rooms, its luxuriously furnished guest rooms and the many appointments for the comfort and pleasure of their guests were a revelation to me. I regret that space forbids my telling all about them.

The management of the Oklahoma Biltmore is under the personal direction of James E. Barrett, managing director, a gentleman with exceptional hotel experience who is well acquainted throughout the United States, Canada and Europe. Under his direction the Oklahoma Biltmore has acquired an atmosphere which hardly can be equaled and which has made it one of the most popular hotels in the great Southwest. Permeated by a true spirit of hospitality, established by a personal contact with guests, either by himself or through his assistants an element has entered into the management which is in striking contrast to many hotels where so often coolness and aloofness prevail.

How the Vaculator Operates

Measured water in the bottom, pulverized coffee in the top, one heaping teaspoonful of coffee to one cup of water.

Heat generates pressure that causes water to flow upward. The use of hot water hastens this preliminary action.

Coffee is brewed in upper glass where correct temperature is controlled. When upward flow of water stops, current should be turned off.

Removing from heat creates a vacuum in lower glass which "pulls" down filtered coffee in a jiffy.

Remove upper glass and serve. The coffee will stay hot up to 15 minutes in the bottom.

SYNOPSIS—Pauline, sentimental, trusting, sincere and loving love, becomes engaged and marries Dennis O'Hara in the belief that their blissful happiness will continue unchanged through all the years. On her wedding morning she awakens with a strange premonition that maybe love does change, a thought buried in her mind. The next morning, on her wedding morning, she awakens with a strange premonition that maybe love does change, a thought buried in her mind. The next morning, on her wedding morning, she awakens with a strange premonition that maybe love does change, a thought buried in her mind.

He opened his eyes. They were clouded still and far away. They searched her face without recognition; then his lips moved slowly. Pauline bent to catch what he said. "Barbara?" The name was unmistakable. Pauline answered at once: "Not hurt. She's all right, quite all right." "Yes," the faintest word of satisfied assent; then his eyes closed again. Pauline turned to Barbara. "He wanted to know how you were. Isn't that like him? So unselfish. Oh, are you sure he will be all right, Barbara?" "Quite all right, dear. Look, I think he's asleep now." "Suddenly Pauline spoke slowly. 'I don't believe he recognizes me just now. I don't believe he even knows who I am.' 'I don't suppose he did,' she said evenly. 'He was only half-conscious, you know.' Pauline raised tragic eyes. 'But he asked for you, he knew

"I've promised." "It's because she doesn't want to meet Dennis," Pauline thought bitterly, when Barbara had left her. "I know that's what it is. Why do those two dislike each other so much?" Then suddenly a bright idea came to her. If Dennis was well enough to come home on Friday, he would be well enough to come home on Thursday. Barbara should not know and Peter should be asked to dinner for Thursday instead. She made her plans as happily as a child, taking only the maid into her confidence. And on Thursday Barbara had a headache. "Nothing much," she told Pauline, who went to her room and hung over her with solicitude. "It's the kind of headache I get when I know an extortion lies before me. Leaving this comfortable room, for instance, and moving on. All my life I seem to have been moving on," she added rather drily, and then she saw

"Dennis!" Pauline was down on her knees beside him, sobbing broken-heartedly.

The man hastened to reassure her. "Nobody killed, miss, nothing to be scared about. Just a bit injured and taken to hospital. My orders were to fetch you." "I'll come now." Pauline flew upstairs. She was hardly conscious of what she was doing. A hat and coat—any hat, any coat—a word to the maid—"It's the master—how she loved calling Dennis the master—he's been hurt—the car, somehow." And she was downstairs again. "Oh, hurry, hurry!" she implored the officer. The car moved off down the road, and Pauline began slowly to regard her self-control. "How did it happen? My husband is such a wonderful driver!" "Collision at the crossroads. No one seems to know whose fault it was." Pauline hardly heard. "How is he hurt? His arm—leg? Where is he hurt?" "I couldn't say, miss. Why would he insist on calling her miss when she was a married woman—when she was Dennis's wife? It was not dignified. 'My orders were only to fetch you and to say it was not serious.' 'I see.' She sat staring before her with blind eyes, her hands clasped in her lap. Suppose he were dead and they were afraid to tell her? To be a widow when she was only so recently a wife. All her pretty frocks would be quite useless—she would have to wear black. All sorts of incongruous thoughts kept tumbling over and over in her dazed mind. She turned sharply to the man beside her. "There was a lady with him—Mrs. Stark—was she hurt, too?" "Just a shaking, miss—I saw the lady myself—she was very distressed, naturally, but not hurt, I should say." She moistened her dry lips. "How much farther is it?" "Just round the corner by that red building—the one with the watercock on it." When the car stopped she stumbled out blindly, evading the officer's proffered hand. Up the steps to the big open door. "Where is he? I am Mrs. O'Hara. My husband has been hurt. Where is he?" The maddening waiting, the formalities! Pauline had worked herself into a frenzy by the time someone said, "Please come this way." At least she was in a small room with a single bed. There was a smell of drugs in the air, and the polished floor felt hard to her feet. Sift to think of small things like that at a moment when her whole being should have been concentrated on the man lying there—his head bandaged, his eyes closed. "Dennis!" He did not move or seem to hear. Someone standing in the window turned, came forward. Barbara, of course. "Dennis!" Pauline was down on her knees beside him, sobbing broken-heartedly. Barbara put an arm around Pauline and lifted her to her feet. "You must control yourself. They won't let you stay here at the hospital if you make a scene. He's all right, I promise you. Pauline, you know I would tell you the truth." "I know—but he might have been killed. How did it happen? It couldn't have been Dennis's fault, he's such a careful driver." "It was at the crossroads," Barbara explained. "It's always hard to say who is to blame. The man driving the other car wasn't hurt at all." In her heart Barbara knew quite well Dennis had been to blame. When she had warned him that he was driving too fast, he had deliberately accelerated instead of slowing down. She helped Pauline to a chair, not a very comfortable one, and stood beside her waiting for her robe to cease. Pauline took her hand and pressed it. "I'm so glad you were with him, Barb," she sobbed. "I'm sure things would have been much worse if you hadn't been there." Barbara drew her hand gently away. "I think they are bad enough as it is," she said. She looked across the room at Dennis. He was so white, he hardly seemed to breathe. Supposing he had been killed! Pauline had ceased sobbing, but her breath kept coming in little snaps. She got up and crept close to the bed. "Dennis," she whispered again, but he did not hear her. She bent and softly kissed his cheek. She turned softly to Barbara, tears raining down her cheeks. "Will they let me take him home now?" "I think it would be very unwise, my dear." At that moment Dennis stirred a little and flung out a hand. Pauline seized it and covered it with kisses. "Darling—darling!"

Scenes From Heart of Earthquake Zone

Here are photos from the heart of the earthquake zone which took 110 lives and did damage to property estimated at $50,000,000 in the Los Angeles area of Southern California. Photo No. 1 shows a street scene in Compton where 20 persons were killed by the collapse of building; No. 2, shows the ruins of a high school building in Long Beach, the town considered the quake's epicenter and where 45 lives were lost; No. 3, shows homeless and penniless refugees being fed by the U. S. Marines at Long Beach.

More Letters from California Relate Wierd Stories of Recent Earthquake

Two more letters to Scurry County relatives have been passed on to The Times, in which tales about the recent earthquake in California are given below. The first is from Earl Parker, a sailor aboard the U. S. S. California, stationed at San Pedro, the son of Mrs. L. W. Parker, who lives four miles north of Snyder. The other letter is from Mrs. W. O. Trigg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Cope of Snyder. Both the writers are former residents of this county and are well known here.

Stand by, folks, if you want to get some real dope on the recent earthquake which shook up Southern California, Friday evening, and which has not completely settled down at this time (Tuesday, March 14). On this particular evening I, fortunately, (or, if you please, unfortunately) was ashore. I left the machine to shake loose and by way of ship about 5:00 o'clock, and by way of Fifth Street, San Pedro, some 15 minutes later. The main object in my going ashore this evening was to purchase a number of articles, and to attend a fraternity meeting an hour or so later.

After obtaining something from an unusually accommodating hardware clerk, I ventured on to a tire-and-tube store where some minor articles were added to my list. I distinctly remember that this girl clerk didn't have a very pronounced saleslady personality. She didn't seem to care what the world moved—but if she had just the least idea of what was coming half an hour later, boy, oh boy! From the five-and-ten I returned to the hardware store, and then to my tailor on Front Street, between Fifth and Sixth. The boy was delighted to see me—I had made several previous purchases from his shop—and arose from his machine to shake hands and ask where I had been for the past month. He also picked up a pair of dungarees which I had ordered tailored on a previous visit. I took the trousers, and after a minute examination, started for the anteroom to try them on. Wow! Bang! Crack! Crack! I couldn't stay on my feet, the lights were swinging, the glass shades cracked together. What was it? I looked through the glass front—people were running into the street by the hundreds. Then the tailor, half-way to the door, yelled out, "Earthquake!" Instantly and feebly I dashed in the still swinging door to the open, crowded street, leaving the dungarees and packages behind. All this took place in 10 or 15 seconds, for I was in the street before the earth stopped shaking, and the tremor lasted less than 20 seconds.

In the street I saw tons of bricks fall from buildings on each side of the street. I had vacated so rapidly. Cars crashed, and two people were instantly killed less than a block away. Women screamed—one fainted and was taken care of by stanger hearted soda. There was the siren. Yes, the ambulances and firemen were on the job quickly enough. All traffic stopped, and everything was very quiet, people were still in the streets. There was a strange crowd—no one seemed to know what to do. There was nothing that we could do except stay delighted to hear that no one is seriously ill. I volunteered to go to Compton, California, on Saturday after the quake—that is, in the evening after I sent the letter. We stood guard over things that were left open by the walls falling away, roofs caving in, show-glass breaking, etc. In short, we were policemen, guarding property, directing traffic and telling people to stay away from unsafe buildings, etc. This small city of approximately 15,000 population was one of the most severely demolished cities in the quake area, second only to Long Beach. The downtown district was almost completely wrecked. Every building of brick composition was scattered over an area twice its former size. The detail that went the same time as I was on duty from Saturday night until Monday noon, with a few hours for sleep and rest. Several times I was on watch for six hours without relief. It was all intensely interesting to me, for I had never done police work like that before. The citizens, with few exceptions, gave us excellent cooperation, as we carried loaded guns and had orders to shoot first and ask questions afterwards; in reality, the order was to shoot over the head once and then shoot with better aim. There were hundreds of people who could not live in their wrecked home, and the Salvation Army and Red Cross were there with food for the unfortunates. They cooked and served the food and several times there were lines two blocks long.

waiting to eat. I saw people sleeping in cars and some sitting out on a fender with a single blanket about them. Long Beach is about 12 miles from San Pedro, 20-odd miles from Los Angeles and half that many from Compton. The last-named place is between Los Angeles and Long Beach. There have been hundreds of light tremors, but there will not likely be heavy ones for years now. It seems everything in general is going to be better with the advent of the new administration. I hope so, anyway.

Triggs Are Unhurt.
Letters from the Mrs. W. O. Trigg relate to Snyder kinspeople that her family, the Nugent Cope family and the Orville Cope family had many horrifying experiences during the earthquake, and that none of the three families was hurt. The Trigg and Nugent Cope families live in North Long Beach, while the Orville Cope people reside in Anaheim. Schools where the children of the three families were going were demolished, and the terms can not be completed, the letter relates.

your name—he hadn't forgotten that you were with him, though he seemed to have forgotten me," she added slowly. Barbara did not answer.

It was a month before Dennis was allowed to be taken home. Pauline fretted and worried, but Dennis himself aided and abetted the doctors.

"My dear child, it's far better to leave me where I am. You'd only wear yourself out if I were at home."

"He didn't say he was anxious to get back home," Pauline told Barbara afterward, almost in tears. Barbara had stayed on during Dennis's illness—reluctantly, it is true, and only after Pauline had begged and implored her not to go.

She said now in answer to her friend's words: "Work means everything to a man like Dennis—it includes you and his home and everything else."

Pauline reflected, then she sighed. "I suppose you're right," she said at last. "You understand men so well."

Barbara flatly refused to visit Dennis in the hospital, though Pauline protested that he would think it unkind.

Barbara laughed. "You flatter me," she said mockingly. "Besides, I hate illness and hospital wards—the smell of drugs always makes me feel sick."

Pauline's eyes grew wistful. "Wouldn't you come and see me, then, if I were ill?" she asked. "You're different."

Barbara frowned: "Well, for one thing, you rather like me, don't you? Whereas Dennis—"

Pauline broke in eagerly. "But he doesn't, he doesn't! He's asked after you ever so many times since the accident."

"That's very kind of him." "If you two could only be friends!" Pauline said for the millionth time. Barbara threw a cigarette end forward.

"Dennis and I can never be friends," she said positively. "And what does it matter? No doubt it's all my fault."

Pauline shook her head. "No, I think Dennis is as much to blame as you are," she admitted. "It's such a pity, because you're a darling, and he's really rather a nice man, you know, Barb!"

It was in the middle of the week that Pauline announced that Dennis would be home on Friday. There was a moment's silence, then Barbara said calmly, turning the page of a book she was reading: "What a pity! I shall have to go to town on Friday."

"Barbie! Can't you put it off? I wanted to celebrate. I've asked Peter to dinner." "I'm sorry, but I've promised to lunch and go to a theatre with Captain Barnett!"

Pauline got up and came to sit on the arm of her friend's chair. "I wish you wouldn't go out with that man, Barbie." "My dear soul, why ever not?" "He's married."

"Well, that's his misfortune, not his fault." "Do you think marriage is a misfortune, then?" "Yes, in nine cases out of ten. It was in mine—it is in Jerry's. You, I dare say, will be the great exception that proves the rule." "I wish you weren't so cynical." "Life—my sort of life, at least—makes one cynical, so don't worry your little head about me. I'm quite happy in my own way."

There was a short silence; then Pauline asked almost shyly: "Is Jerry Barnett the man you—you said you cared about?" "Barbie! He's not my sort. We're good friends, but I couldn't fall in love with a man who only talks about horses and dogs."

the concern in Pauline's eyes. She sat up with sudden energy. "Don't take any notice of me. Send me a strong cup of tea and leave me in peace till tea time. Then I'll be down, clothed and in my right mind."

Health Official States Measles May Be Serious

From reports reaching the Texas State Department of Health at Austin, it seems as though measles is quite prevalent throughout the state. Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer, has the following to say in regard to this disease.

"Many persons still insist that measles is nothing serious, and that children should get them early and get it over with. However, measles is a very widespread and highly contagious disease and over 100 children in Texas die of it each year. Children generally have active disease seven to 14 days after contact with a person ill with the measles. Children must be excluded from school for a period of 21 days from onset.

"One never knows at the beginning how serious the attack will be, so a physician should be called when measles is suspected. Most deaths from this disease occur in children under five years of age. If you have a baby or very young child, your first consideration must be to keep him out of houses where measles exists. Prevent him from playing with children who, you believe, may have the disease.

"If your child shows signs of measles—running nose, sneezing, red eyes and watery—put him to bed at once. While waiting for the doctor see that the child is kept warm. The room should be well ventilated, but glare and draughts prevented. Give him a light diet of milk, soup and cereal. Keep him in bed until the doctor permits him to be up. When recovering from measles he is less able to withstand other diseases. The doctor should see the child two or three times in a year following recovery to guard against bad after effects."

New Office Fixin's.
The new gas office will be some pumpkins when it is completely finished. Workmen have been busy this week and last. The walls have been modernized, the ceiling has been painted, and other finishing touches have been given. Stoves and other retail merchandise will be moved into the new display room this week. Even with his bad hand and his sore back, Manager B. G. Johnson is lending plenty of helping hands.

STINSON DRUG CO.

BOWELS need watching

Let Dr. Caldwell help whenever your child is feverish or upset; or has caught cold.

His simple prescription will make that bilious, headachy, cross boy or girl comfortable, happy, well in just a few hours. It soon restores the bowels to healthy regularity. It helps "break-up" a cold by keeping the bowels free from all that sickening mucus waste.

You have a famous doctor's word for this laxative. Dr. Caldwell's record of having attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby is believed to be unique in American medical history.

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your druggist and have it ready. Then you won't have to worry when any member of your family is headachy, bilious, gassy or constipated. Syrup Pepsin is good for all ages. It sweetens the bowels; increases appetite—makes digestion more complete.

CITY ORDINANCE
An ordinance making it a misdemeanor for any person, firm, corporation or association of persons to show, open for business or operate a dance hall within a prescribed area in the fire zone, or within 600 feet of a private residence in a prescribed area in the corporate limits of the City of Snyder and prescribing a penalty.
Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Snyder, Texas:
Section 1.—That hereafter it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or association of persons to show, open for business or operate a dance hall in the City of Snyder within the fire zone of said city in any building fronting upon the public square of said city or upon any public street extending from said public square of said City of Snyder within a distance of six hundred feet from the entrance of said public square.
Section 2.—That hereafter it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or association of persons to show, open for business or operate a dance hall within a prescribed area in the fire zone of said city in any building fronting upon the public square of said city or upon any public street extending from said public square of said City of Snyder within a distance of six hundred feet from the entrance of said public square.
Section 3.—Any person, firm, corporation or association of persons who violate any of the provisions of the foregoing Section 1 or of Section 2 hereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars and not more than one hundred dollars, and each and every day shall constitute a separate offense under this ordinance.
The fact that such enterprises are often located in the business district and fire zone, and that the noise and disturbance interrupts the regulation of business, and blocks traffic on both the streets and sidewalks, and increases fire hazard, and in case of fire the congestion increases danger of loss of life and property, and the orderly administration of the police power and welfare of the public, creates an emergency and this ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage and publication.—Lee T. Stinson, Mayor Protem. Harvey Shuler, Secretary. 1tc

Tips on Taxes

Legislative News Service of the TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION, AUSTIN

Austin.—The Senate has started toward final adoption of a constitutional amendment which proposes to arbitrarily limit the expenditures of the state government to $10 per capita per year. The basis of calculating the maximum of expenditures for any given year is the preceding United States census. This would mean that increases could be made only once each 10 years. The 1930 census gave Texas a population of 5,800,000. The adoption of the amendment in its present form would limit state government expenditures to approximately $58,000,000 annually.

Ben F. Smith Believes Legislature Will Pass Few Laws Before Recess

I have been asked to let our people know how the Texas Legislature is progressing and what shape legislation is to take. It remains to be seen if the House seems to be opposed to a sales tax, but would doubtless approve a sales tax on luxuries and income.

In all the proposals to tax our large industries there has been very strong opposition. The utilities do not want to pay an additional tax, and have maintained a strong lobby in Austin in their efforts to defeat any effort in this regard. The oil industry says it will be bankrupted if additional taxes are placed upon it. If advice of this or that special interest is to be followed, then where is the revenue to come from? Property can not longer carry the burden. The industries say they can not function if further taxed, and it looks like the poor man and the little man and home-owner will have to continue to stagger along under their tax burdens.

It is really too early to predict what will be done during the remainder of the session. There are many changes that ought to be made, sources of revenue must be found and all interests satisfied, if that be possible.

The school teachers of Texas say that they do not want any change in the age limit; that they must have as much as $17.50 per capita. The special interest man is looking for an opportunity to eliminate the sales tax of taxation or slip something by that will continue or better his opportunity to make more money.

So we will say that we will have to wait and see what we will see. The House is laboring faithfully and honestly to cope with the situation, and when its labors have been finished it can be said that they did the best they could under the circumstances.—Ben F. Smith.

RED CROSS TO RESCUE ALONG THREE FRONTS

Mrs. C. V. Shuman, in County This Week, Says Organization Has Big Job Facing It.

Disaster relief was being carried on by the American Red Cross in three fields a few days ago, Mrs. C. V. Shuman, district representative, said here yesterday.

Earthquake relief went to Southern California. Tornado relief went to Tennessee and Kentucky, while flood relief was accorded sufferers in the Ohio River valley.

In California, Mrs. Shuman said, the Red Cross had 18 national staff members. In Tennessee and Kentucky, where a tornado March 14 killed 42 persons, seriously injured 300 and destroyed or damaged 1,850 homes, 12 Red Cross workers supervised a large relief work. Seven workers were assigned to the Ohio valley, where 9,300 families were aided.

The worst case tragedy resulted in a total loss of 115 lives, total destruction of 2,100 homes and partial destruction of 21,000 homes. Six hundred persons were hospitalized, and 2,500 sustained minor injuries. Thousands of persons were elsewhere cared for by the Red Cross. Approximately 40,000 persons were fed daily by the Red Cross immediately after the disaster.

"As a result of these three tremendous drains on Red Cross funds, the national chapter has a big job facing it, and it is in dire need of funds," Mrs. Shuman emphasizes.

The area representative, who is making a careful survey of the conditions, is highly complimentary of the work done here last year in the Roll Call. She is conferring with L. T. Shinson, 1933 chairman of the county work; J. W. Scott, in charge of distribution of funds in the county; and A. C. Pruitt, past chairman.

Treasurer Seek Treasure Butte in Wilds of Kent County, Texas

By Eldon C. Wade.

One day last fall a tall, bearded man called for a package at the post office at Clairmont, Texas, and upon receiving it, hurried home and with hands that trembled with eagerness, unwrapped a set of surveyor's instruments. Enlisting the aid of one of his friends, and carrying a pick, shovel, surveying instruments and a roll of maps on linen, they set out for Treasure Butte.

Treasure Butte is a picturesque mound a few miles southeast of Clairmont, Kent County, and is located in a wild and broken country of creeks, canyons, mounds, cactus flats and butte knobs.

Arriving at this elevation, the old man and his friend consulted the maps, set up the surveying instrument and began running lines. They ran two lines from separate points, and where these lines crossed they began digging with pick and shovel. The younger man could not keep pace with his enthusiastic helper. The older man was turning over shovels after shovels of the sandy soil. A cry broke from the old man's lips, as he stooped and picked up a bone. Beyond any doubt it was a part of a human skeleton, old and mouldy. It crumbled when the air struck it.

"We've sure found it this time!" the old man exclaimed and they continued to unearth parts of the buried skeleton.

"Look carefully up around his head," he cautioned. "There might be another stone planted around this hombr's forehead."

Another Chapter.

But no stone was found. The two men continued widening the hole they were digging. At last the pick in the hands of the old man struck a large stone. They both began digging around the stone. It proved to be but one of a wall of stones that had apparently once been a vault. There was no sound but the quick breathing of the two men as they hurried, and the clank of the pick and the shovel against rock. Finally they had completely uncovered the rock vault. It was empty to its rock flooring.

"Missed it again!" said the old man dejectedly. And in silence the two donned their coats, and picking up their scattered tools and instruments, finally they had completed a little house near the outskirts of Clairmont. It was dark when they arrived at home, exhausted from their day's work.

The foregoing reads more like a bit of fiction than an actual occurrence, but an actual occurrence it was, and it added another chapter to the legend of the buried bullion that gives Treasure Butte its name. Many searches have been made for the treasure. The small mesa around which this legend centers is an historical spot. Near it General McAdoo fought a battle with the Indians, and graves of his men are uncovered now and then. An old United States Army saddle was found recently, and its number was still legible.

The butte has been searched by hundreds who have left few feet of the earth unturned in their attempts to locate the bullion hoard.

Found With Jacob's Staff.

The origin of the legend, which many believe is more than a legend, goes back 30 years, when a pioneer surveyor of that part of West Texas now known as Kent County, assisted by his son, was running some lines through the cactus flats in the sand beds southeast of Clairmont. The surveyor did not have a tripod, but used a "Jacob's staff" instead. This staff was carried by his son, who, when a stand had been determined, would stick it up in the sand. In doing this, the sharpened end of the staff stuck an unyielding object buried in the sand. Out of curiosity, because it was very unusual to find any unyielding object in this vast sand bed, the two men dug it up. It proved to be a large white stone, almost flat. When they rubbed the sand off, they saw that it bore strange markings. On one side was what appeared to be a crude map, and the other side bore other inscriptions and drawings. The surveyor and his son took the rock home with them, and later deciphered the markings enough to tell that they portrayed that part of the country wherein lies the mesa now known as Treasure Butte.

The Terrapin Map.

Among the things depicted upon this stone was a picture of five giant cart wheels, diamond shaped graves; a round well; at the bottom of which were five terrapins, apparently attempting to get out of the well, for they were all turned facing the outer edge. Three other diamond shaped graves were shown, one containing three bodies, another two and the third one.

With the aid of this stone, and by many hours of patient searching and digging, all of these objects were uncovered. Even the well with the crumbling shells of five terrapins was discovered. Perhaps the strangest thing about the entire history of this search was the fact that the diamond shaped graves, containing the bodies of five men, was unearthed, and on the forehead of each of the skeletons was another large flat stone, similar to the first one uncovered, and each bearing maps and drawings. Even one of the five giant cart wheels has been found.

All this time the searchers had been digging with no definite purpose in view, but acting upon the conviction that the stone might carry the clue to buried treasure. The fact that all of these things had been found just as they were depicted on the stone gave new vigor to the belief that there was a well defined plan back of it all.

Came the Strawn.

Then appeared a new figure to arouse the hopes of all who knew of the stones and the findings. An old man by the name of Strawn, or Strain—no one appears to be sure which—came into the country on the trail of gold that he said had been buried by Santa Anna, the grandfather of the "Napoleon of the West." This old treasure hunter had found several buried treasure troves, and was a typical roid hunter—mysterious, uncommunicative and unfriendly. But when he learned of the findings of these people, he became more friendly and told his story, which soon convinced the people that their stones, maps and findings would lead to the buried treasure, said to have been left by the old Santa Anna. Seven oxcart loads of bullion it was, and an actual occurrence it was, and it added another chapter to the legend of the buried bullion that gives Treasure Butte its name.

Many searches have been made for the treasure. The small mesa around which this legend centers is an historical spot. Near it General McAdoo fought a battle with the Indians, and graves of his men are uncovered now and then. An old United States Army saddle was found recently, and its number was still legible.

A Long Journey.

A relative of the old man who found the first stone is said to have made a pilgrimage to Mexico City in an effort to find historical evidence of the lost gold of Santa Anna. He returned after a long absence, and told of visiting the archives of the government of Mexico—of reading an account of Santa Anna senior setting out for Santa Fe with seven oxcart loads of gold, with which he was to found a mighty new empire, and of how his men became "alkaladed" and camped at a butte, near which were three springs of good water; of how the men were attacked by the Indians and how the redmen were beaten off only after his followers had been slain except one man; of how these two had failed to bury the gold bullion, and at last had hit upon the plan of burying their comrades in intricate diamond-shaped patterns and of placing maps of Stone over their foreheads. Their graves were to be the keys to riches.

One of the springs, on top of the butte, was still there at the time the stones were discovered; another, reported walled up by Santa Anna's men, was thought to be an old spring near the butte which has been walled up from the earliest recollections of any of the pioneers of this section. The account further was that Santa Anna the elder and his lone follower fled to Mexico and recruited an expedition to recover the lost gold. But Santa Anna senior had become covetous of the gold, and led his followers on a devious journey into the heart of the Indian country, where constant attacks by the redmen almost wiped out his forces. Then again he returned to Mexico City and another expedition was recruited and soon set out for the Brazos and the buried bullion. This expedition suffered the same fate as the first one, but the survivors suspected the treachery and killed Santa Anna.

Pigeon Shooters Busy.

The annual pigeon shooting spree was enjoyed Wednesday afternoon and evening by several up-town hunters. The pestering fowls at the courthouses were brought down in good numbers as load after load of lead was pumped into them. Most of the birds that escaped have decided to leave the temple of justice for the season.

Free Classifieds For Unemployed Offered by Times

The Times sincerely desires to assist the unemployed in securing part time or full time employment. To this end we offer all unemployed persons the use of our classified columns without cost.

Please bring or phone in your ad not later than Wednesday at noon of publication week.

Paint Poultry House.

J. F. Parker and Carl Eilenberger were busy with the paint brush several night hours last week. They were giving the Snyder Produce Company's local plant new daubs of paint. They must have had an inkling that the week-end would be a big poultry buying time. Friday and Saturday were two of the best days since they have been in Snyder, they say.

Opens Boarding House.

Mrs. Gladys Brook, who has operated a sandwich shop on the east highway for some time, has moved to 1512 Twenty-seventh Street, where she is keeping roomers and boarders.

The regular monthly workers' conference of Mitchell-Scurry Baptists will be held a week later than usual, according to Rev. Philip C. McGabey. It is ordinarily held the second Tuesday in each month, but conflicting dates with another meeting caused postponement until the third Tuesday, April 18.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hull visited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. McGinty, in Clyde Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Hull had as their guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hull of Rotan.

The Times entered an order this week for 500 sales books to be delivered to Winston & Clements. We handle specialty work of this kind as cheaply as anyone—and cheaper than most houses. Phone 47.

"Your husband is mighty good to you. I hear he bought a beautiful washing machine for you."

"Oh, that? He bought that for himself. He heard it was just the thing to make homebrew in."
