A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Broom seller swept away

A new hotline for anonymous reports of drug activity on Cape Cod, Mass., apparently was a great idea. It would have been better, though, if it had connected callers to the right place.

Instead of ringing at the Cape Cod Drug Task Force, the number sent more than 100 calls to a telemarketer of brooms in New Germany, Nova Scotia. The problems began last week when Robert Segal — a 59-year-old broom peddler — received a new toll-free number from Sprint.

The number had already been assigned to the drug task force and had been publicized in recent newspaper and radio ads.

Segal was soon flooded with phone calls, which clogged his four-line phone system and made it impossible for him to work, he said.

"They all wanted help, but all I could say was: 'Please be advised that yours truly is a telemarketer in New Germany, Nova Scotia,'

Angus becomes sea cow

An 800-pound cow and her 3-week-old calf led police and paramedics on a chase before the animals jumped off a sea wall into Florida's Intracoastal Waterway.

The Black Angus cow and calf eventually were rounded up unharmed after their escape through a downed fence from a pasture in Riviera Beach, near the city of West Palm Beach.

The cattle stampeded through more than 2 miles of neighborhood streets, dashing through gaps between cars, while a half-dozen police and rescue vehicles tried to round them up.

Law enforcement officials, who had not expertise with a rope, could have described the experience as an udderly humiliating day. But then again, they could not bring themselves to say that.

Baby's death brings murder charges

Two Muleshoe residents face murder charges in the death of a 3-year-old boy severely burned after being dipped in scalding water.

A warrant has been issued charging the boy's 19-year-old mother, Leticia Maricela Hernández, with capital murder. Hernandez' boyfriend, Roberto Contreras, 33, faces manslaughter charges.

Both are residents of 414 W.

Second in Muleshoe. Hernández originally was charged with first-degree injury to a child, while Contreras was charged with third-degree injury to a child.

The child, Jesús Angel Haro, died Sunday in a Lubbock hospital, where he had been transferred after initial treatment in Juárez.

Hernández was arrested May 2 by El Paso police after she allegedly took the child for treatment at a hospital in Ciudad Juárez, Mexico. Hospital personnel notified Mexican police, who then notified authorities in El Paso.

Police believe the scalding took place in the Muleshoe residence.

Contreras was arrested May 3 at the Muleshoe residence. An 8-month-old child in the home was taken into custody by Child Protective Services.

Both Hernández and Contreras are jailed in Muleshoe, with Hernández under $50,000 bond. Contreras' bond is set at $35,000.

Muleshoe Police Chief Don Carter said the case remains under investigation. An autopsy was performed on the child's body Monday, he added.

The original arrest warrants were issued by Muleshoe Justice of the Peace Todd Ellis.

Commissioners renew health insurance policy, county depository contracts

Bailey County Commissioners voted Monday to renew the county's health insurance policy with the current carrier American Continental, and to renew the county's depository contracts with Muleshoe State Bank.

The insurance agreement involves a premium increase, but less of one than the alternate bid submitted. County Judge Marilyn Cox told commissioners the increase was smaller than she had feared it would be, due to two large claims filed on the county insurance in the past year.

On bids for depository contracts, the biggest difference in the two appeared to be a 1/4 percent difference in the amount of interest to be offered on the county deposits.

Commissioner Joey Kindle moved to renew the contract with Muleshoe State, while Commissioner Jerry Damron seconded the motion.

In other business, the commissioners:
• Appointed (or in some cases re-appointed) Ruth Hall, Vivian White, Julie Cage, Tom Boutell, Maurine Hooten, Anne Camp and Jerry Hicks to the Bailey County Historical Commission for 1999-2000; and

UDSA triples loan sources

At the request of House Agriculture Chairman Larry Combest (R-TX), USDA has tripled the sources for streamlined loans by private lenders. In 1992, Combest championed the Preferred Lender Program enacted by USDA in February of this year.

The Preferred Lender Program's main feature is a guaranteed 14-day turn-around on applications. At Combest's insistence, the lending program will now expand the number of eligible lenders from 238 to 747.

"This announcement is well ahead of next year's loan season, giving lenders ample opportunity to provide timely delivery of guaranteed loans to ranchers and farmers," said Combest. "I have fought hard to streamline this program and I thank USDA and Under Secretary Gus Schumacher for helping local lenders and produc-

CORRECTION

In the Bailey County Journal's Sunday coverage of the Mother of the Year, we inadvertently left out the name of one of the children of Albert and Isabel Garcia.

Besides Jerry, a fourth grader who wrote the letter that helped his mother win the title of Bailey County Mother of the year, the Garcias have two daughters, Sarah and Stiphina, and son, Chris, who is a junior at Muleshoe High School and works part time at Fry and Cox True Value Hardware.

The Journal regrets the oversight.

High Plains Chorale to perform today (May 13) at CCC Town Hall

The High Plains Chorale, a 35-member ensemble comprised of CCC students and members of the community, will present its Spring Concert on Thursday, May 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the Town Hall. The program, titled "An American Sampler," will feature spirituals, hymns and traditional songs as well as music by George Gershwin and Randall Thompson. Randall Thompson (1899-1984) was a professor of music at Harvard for many years and is known for his sacred and secular choral works. The concert contains two settings of poems by Robert Frost beginning with "The Road Not Taken" followed by "Choose Something Like a Star." The grouping concludes with "Alleluia," a rich and sonorous unaccompanied piece that begins quietly, builds to a dramatic climax, and ends with a barely audible "Amen." Jazz great George Gershwin is featured in the next group. Soft, lyrical versions of "Embraceable You" and "Someone to Watch Over Me" will be performed as well as an uptempo setting of the immortal "I Got Rhythm." Tradition hymns, songs, and spirituals will be heard during the second half of the program. "Simple Gifts" and "At the River" in setting by Aaron Copland and Philip Kern's "Little David, Play on your Harp" will be featured.

CCC music instructor Dr. Jed Watson directs the chorale and Ferrell Roberts is the accompanist.

A reception for audience members and the performers will be held in the lobby immediately following the free concert. For more information, please contact the CCC Marketing Office at 769-4009.

Process helps keep melons sweet longer

Sweeter, more nutritious honeydew melons might be rolling onto grocery shelves soon - thanks to a simple process that allows them to stay on the vine to full maturity, while remaining firm enough to withstand cross-country shipment.

Two USDA scientist have found that cooling melons in a water bath containing a special calcium-amino acid solution right after harvest slows the natural aging process.

"Calcium, found in the green tissue under the rind, moves to the seeds as the melon ages which softens the rind and eventually leads to spoilage. The calcium bath puts more of the mineral into the rind, keeping it firmer longer. This not only increases shelf life, but also fortifies the fruit's calcium content," said Dr. Michael a. Grusak, a plant physiologist at the USDA/ARS Children's Nutrition Research Center at Baylor college of Medicine in Houston. Grusak and Dr. Gene ers in this financial partnership."

Local lenders who meet federal requirements make loans approved by the county Farm Service Agency (FSA).

"The PLP is designed to allow lenders to make loans to eligible producers without unnecessary and burdensome government regulations. However, the strict eligibility requirements made this difficult," said Charlie Stenholm, the committee's ranking minority member. "The goal is to streamline the paperwork requirements for as many producers and lenders as possible and I am pleased the FSA has relaxed the lender requirement."

Original rules announced on February 8, limited participation to lenders processing 30 guaranteed loans over a 3-year period. Under that criteria, 238 lenders in the country were approved. Concerned that not enough lenders were available to producers, Chairman Combest insisted that USDA change the 30 loans/3 year criteria to 20 loans in 5 years. This will expand the number of eligible lenders to 747.

Chairman Combest noted the importance of rural lenders' participation in streamlined lending not only during this year's demand but also for next season, particularly if prices remain where they are now.

"MACARTHUR"

No soldier has ever captured the American imagination like Douglas MacArthur. He led Americans into combat for a half-century, through glorious victories and soul-numbing defeats. Courageous and supremely egotistical, he battled anyone who dared question his military judgment — even the president. The American Experience presents "MacArthur," a compelling 4-hour portrait of a complex man.

In 1899, 19-year-old Douglas MacArthur enrolled in the United States Military Academy at West Point. He already had his own image of the ideal soldier: his father. Arthur MacArthur was a Civil War hero who had been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Douglas MacArthur distinguished himself on the battlefields of World War I. He was wounded, gassed, cited as "the greatest front-line general of the war," awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, and was known for leading his troops into battle carrying a riding crop.

In 1922, MacArthur, age 42, married Louise Cromwell Brooks, a divorced socialite 10 years his junior with two children — and a fortune. The unlikely union between the high-flying flapper and the general ended seven years later. When he was Army Chief of Staff, he brought to Washington Isabel Rosario Cooper, an actress of Scottish and Filipino ancestry who had become his mistress in Manila after his divorce. In 1937, the 57-year-old MacArthur wed Jean Faircloth, a 37-year-old from Tennessee.

That year, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, fearful of provoking the increasingly aggressive Japanese, cancelled MacArthur's appointment as U.S. Military Adviser in the Philippines. He remained on the Philippine payroll, but retired from the Army. As war appeared imminent, FDR recalled MacArthur and put him in charge of U.S. forces in the Far East. Within hours of their attack on Pearl Harbor, the Japanese attacked the Philippines. MacArthur withdrew his troops to Bataan and Corregidor. Three months later, under orders from Roosevelt, he fled the Philippines with Jean and their four-year-old son Arthur, declaring "I shall return." His quest to keep his word became one of the greatest sagas of World War II.

The general's last campaign was as commander of the U.N. forces in Korea. He bridled under the constraints of the nuclear age — limited war. In the spring of 1951, following a series of confrontations, President Harry Truman relieved MacArthur of his command. He died in Washington, DC, in 1964.

A fascinating look at the private and public worlds of a preeminent modern military leader, "MacArthur" is both an intimate biography and a sweeping view of America at war in the 20th century.

The American Experience "MacArthur" will be broadcast over two consecutive evenings, Monday and Tuesday, May 17th and 18th at 9:00 p.m. on KENW-TV.

Weevil pesticide draws ire of Florida residents

ULV malathion is a pesticide used for boll weevil eradication programs and is the product of choice because of its effectiveness against the insect, its economical low cost to producers, and its safety for workers and area residents.

Some Florida residents are claiming that they are being harmed by a similar important pest control program aimed at eliminating the Mediterranean Fruit Fly.

The aerial spraying of Malathion over citrus-growing areas raised some hackles, last year, and now there's a federal class action lawsuit over it. The controversial pesticide rained down on both groves and residential areas, in an effort to eradicate the potentially-devastating medfly. The Southwest Florida families who filed suit claim they came in contact with contaminated Malathion, running up big medical bills and property damage.

At least 100,000 people who claim they suffered health problems because of exposure to Malathion are part of a lawsuit against the substance's manufacturer.

The class-action suit was filed against Cheminova Inc., of Wayne, N.J., last week in U.S. district court. The lawsuit claims the company improperly handled and stored the chemical, which was sprayed in 1997 and 1998 in several Florida counties, including Hillsborough, Polk, Manatee and Sarasota.

An estimated 1 million people lived and worked in the spray zone, and some complained of sinus congestion, headaches and respiratory problems. Those suing the company say they were exposed to contaminated batches of Malathion. They are seeking unspecified damages to pay for past and future medical bills, property damages and other expenses.

"I hope this ends the use of malathion," said Kathy Rink of Sarasota, one of the plaintiffs named in the class action suit. "I hope this sends the message that they can't come and poison us." Cheminova officials had no immediate comment.

The suit asserts that Malathion was stored above recommended temperatures, causing the pesticide to break down into its highly toxic components, malaoxon and isomalathion.

It accused the company of knowing about the danger, and also entrusting handling and storage of the chemical to unqualified people.

The Florida Senate has passed legislation that allocates $450,000 for the state Department of Health to study what effect — if any — aerial spraying of malathion has on people's health.

In recent years, state and federal agriculture officials have turned to Malathion to beat back infestations of the Mediterranean fruit fly, which is capable of destroying more than 250 types of crops grown in Florida.

After days of aerial spraying in the Tampa Bay area two years ago, some 700 residents complained of respiratory problems and rashes they believed were caused by Malathion.

Meanwhile, Medicis Pharmaceutical Corporation has announced it has received approval from the FDA for its application to market its OVIDE® prescription pediculicide product. OVIDE® Lotion (0.5% Malathion) is indicated for the treatment of head lice and their ova. The company expects an adequate supply of inventory will be available within the next few months and anticipates product launch soon thereafter.

According to medical authorities, 10-12 million Americans, mostly school-age children, have lice infestations each year. Current treatment options are limited to pyrethroid products which are generally available over-the-counter. Several recent studies have demonstrated significant levels of head lice resistance to these presently available agents. No resistance has been demonstrated to the active ingredient in OVIDE®.

Unlike other available lice therapies, OVIDE(R) is indicated for the treatment of both head lice and their eggs (ova).

"We are proud to add OVIDE® to our core ethical product portfolio," said Jonah Shacknai, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Medicis.

"After consultation with the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention and leading pediatric dermatological professionals concerning the increasing problem of lice resistance to pyrethroid compounds, we recognized a strong opportunity to bring this product to market. We believe dermatologists will welcome OVIDE® as a desirable alternative in their currently limited arsenal against pediculosis."

Lester, an ARS Subtropical Agricultural Research center scientist in Weslaco, Texas, developed the anti-aging bath.

"Honeydew melons are very perishable, which has forced growers to pick them several days poor to full maturity to allow for shipment," Grusak said. While early harvesting has helped extend the melon's shelf life, it's also made their purchase a hit-or-miss situation for consumers.

"Once picked, honeydew melons don't develop any further sweetness, he said. A fully mature melon has a "soluble solids" content of 12 to 15 percent, mostly in the form of fruit sugar. But to allow for shipping, honeydews are currently harvested with levels as low as 9 percent. That's why some honeydews can lack flavor and sweetness.

Because the calcium-containing solution can be added to water baths used to cool melons at harvest, it is an easy and inexpensive process for growers to adapt, Grusak said. Several U.S. growers are considering testing the process during the May to June melon harvest season this year. Once perfected, this could make "vine-ripened" honeydews available to consumers.

Honeydew melon is rich in vitamin C and potassium and already provides a fair amount of calcium, for just 60 calories. It also provides fiber and smaller amounts of other important vitamins and minerals.

"It's exciting to develop a sweet and simple solution to a problem that can benefit everyone, from growers to consumers," Grusak said. Sweeter, more flavorful honeydews should make consuming the recommended five servings of fruits and vegetables each day much easier.
