A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Two record perfect scores

Two entrants in last week's football contest — Max Steinbock and Tony Nicolas — called every game correctly.

Steinbock came closer on the tie-breaker game, guessing that the combined Muleshoe-Friona scores would be 30 points (the game ended at 21-14). Nicolas guess that only 14 points would be scored.

Finishing in third place was Rusty McFarland of Friendswood, Texas, who only missed one game — usually good enough to win the weekly contest.

As might be expected in an area of diehard Dallas Cowboy fans, the Indianapolis-Dallas game was the most frequently missed call of the week.

Only 12 of the 49 entrants picked Indianapolis to win that one.

Best Frito pie? Santa Fe!

For years, Santa Fe legend has held that Woolworth's restaurant worker Teresa Hernández came up with Frito pie sometime in the 1960s, pouring leftover chili, meat, onions, tomatoes and beans over Fritos to boost sales.

The Wall Street Journal carried a different tale — that Daisy Dean Doolin invented Frito pie in 1932 in her San Antonio home.

John McCarty, a longtime Santa Fe resident and former Frito-Lay executive, said he hired a home economist who put together a cookbook of recipes, including Frito pie.

There may be no clear-cut answer. But the best Frito pie, according to the chip company, is clear: Santa Fe Frito pie.

Crab traps save man's life

Overboard without a life jacket in the Gulf of Mexico off Tampa, Fla., John Harris became innovative.

Harris, 53, relied on flotation devices borrowed from crab traps to keep him above water while he awaited rescue.

When Harris' nephew reported him missing, and a state officer spotted his boat with no one aboard, the Coast Guard launched a search. When he was rescued, the improvisational buoys had kept him afloat for 30 hours. He was in good condition at Naples Community Hospital, a spokeswoman said.

Nursing home clears up problems with state

By RONN SMITH
Editor

Getting ready to build a new facility hasn't been the only urgent priority for the Muleshoe Area Healthcare Center during the past few months.

Rosemary Patterson, public information officer for the Texas Department of Health and Human Services' long-term care office, said the problems found at the center during an inspection were considered fairly serious, but the problems have been addressed and the facility is in substantial compliance.

An Oct. 14 report showed the nursing home to be in compliance with state regulations now.

But an earlier inspection by the department determined that the nursing home had been offering substandard care, and the investigation team recommended that the facility's license be terminated if the problems were not solved.

The license is not due to expire until July 12. The negative evaluation of the nursing home resulted from an Aug. 5 visit by state inspectors, who found the violations to be serious enough that the team's report recommended "denial of payment for new admissions" and possible civil penalties of $50 to $3,000 a day until the problems were cleared up.

This was not the most serious category of violation, which would have included fines up to $10,000 a day, immediate termination of the license or installation of a temporary manager by the state.

According to state records, one of the findings was that residents of the center were not protected from physical and verbal abuse by both staff and other residents.

As a corrective action, the center agreed that "we will continue to do criminal background checks on all personnel necessary to assist in the elimination of any type of abuse by an employee."

The center agreed to install written policies to try to guard against mistreatment or abuse of residents and "misappropriation of residents' property."

Apparently the center had such a policy, but the staff could not find a copy of it when the investigators asked for it.

One conclusion of the investigators was that "failure of the facility to have an abuse prevention policy readily available and current guidelines for reporting policy caused residents actual harm from abuse going unreported and not being investigated."

The investigation team found that a resident was administered a psychotropic drug for reasons of "discipline or convenience" rather than medical necessity, thus raising the possibility of unjustified negative side effects for the resident.

Mules to seek playoff berth against Cooper

By KEVIN WILSON
Journal Sports Writer

The Mules could spend time being upset about last week's loss to Friona. Four fourth-quarter turnovers gave the Chieftains the chances they needed to score 14 points and improve their district record to 4-0.

But Muleshoe doesn't have time to worry about that loss anymore. They have a playoff berth to clinch. They can do so by beating Lubbock Cooper, a team that hasn't had its share of luck in district. Cooper has been beaten 114-19 in their last three games, including last week's 21-6 loss to Shallowater.

Mules head coach David Wood is hopeful that the Mules can win the game convincingly and perhaps have time to rest his starters for the playoffs. A good idea would be to blow out Cooper in the first half.

"We always try to score quick," Wood said. "Hopefully, we can rest some kids."

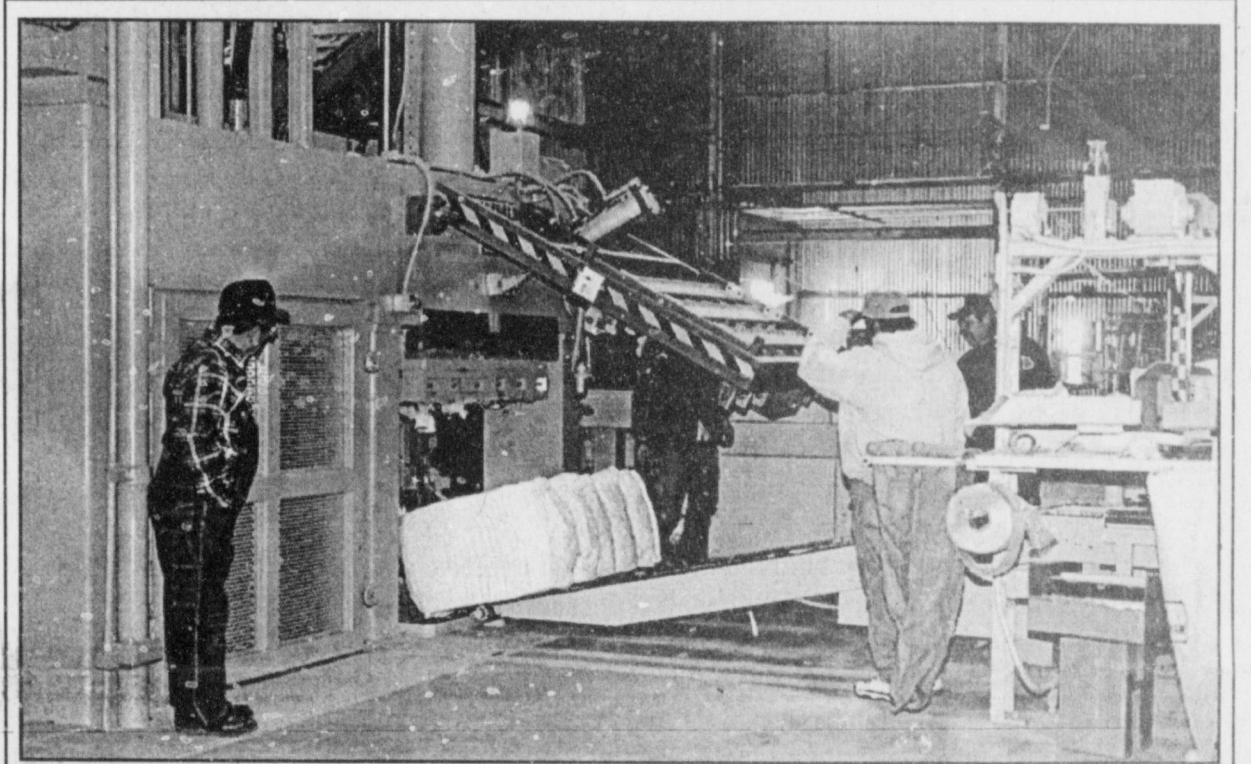

The game against Cooper is one of two games that will determine the playoff picture for Muleshoe. The Mules will have a playoff spot with a win, but the Friona-Littlefield game will determine where the Mules end up.

The only team in the district that has clinched a playoff berth is Friona, thanks to its 4-0 district record. The three teams that have shots at the final two playoff berths are the Mules, Shallowater and Littlefield.

Like the Mules, Littlefield can make the playoffs with a win. Shallowater is not so lucky: The Mustangs need a win against Roosevelt, a Mule loss and a Littlefield loss.

The Mules don't really care whether or not they end up in the large school division (with a Friona win) or with the small school (with a

Three Way grabs playoff berth

THREE WAY — With a playoff berth cemented, the Three Way Eagles would love to head into the postseason with some momentum.

The Eagles hope to continue that momentum Friday as they travel to Lazbuddie to play their geographic rivals in a District 3A six-man contest. Kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m.

The Eagles battered Amherst 57-6 at home last Friday in a game that was ended two quarters early on the 45-point rule. Marvin McCaul rushed 10 times for 159 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Eagles, who improved to 5-4 overall and 3-1 in the district.

The victory punched Three Way's first playoff ticket in

DISTRICT 3A SIX-MAN STANDINGS

School	Overall	District
Whitharral	8-1	4-0
Three Way	5-4	3-1
Cotton Center	6-3	2-2
Silverton	3-6	2-2
Lazbuddie	3-6	1-3
Amherst	2-6	0-4

several years. The Eagles will be the district's second seed behind Whitharral, which clinched the district championship with a 51-22 win over Lazbuddie.

Typically, Three Way has come into the final week of the season needing a win over Lazbuddie to get into the playoffs. Twice in recent years, the Longhorns have ended the Eagles' playoff aspirations.

This time, the outcome doesn't factor in the playoff picture. But the Eagles remain hungry for a win against the Longhorns.

Against Amherst, the Eagles got on the board early in the first period as Michael Soliz scored on a 10-yard run. But Amherst, just a couple of years removed from back-to-back state six-man championships, bounced back to tie the game at 6-6 on a 37-yard pass from Brandon Gilmore to Eric Quintana.

It was the last time the Bulldogs would get on the board.

Locker, Atwood take cross country titles

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Muleshoe's Stacy Locker and Kyle Atwood won their respective district cross country titles last Saturday.

Locker had a time of 12:37 on a 2-mile course to take first place among the girls, while Kyle Atwood won the boys' district meet with a time of 16:45 on a 3-mile course.

Coach Shana Simms said Locker had been beaten several times throughout the season by four or five of her district opponents, but "when it really counted, Stacy came out on top."

"That was the best race she ran all year. She really stepped up to the challenge," Simms said.

As teams, the girls finished third in the district meet and the boys second.

The top three teams and top 10 individuals from the district meet advance to the regional meet, scheduled for this Saturday. A total of 13 Mules will compete at regional.

"There is going to be tough competition at regional, but I think our district helps us get ready," Simms said. "This is a tough district to compete in. I feel we have a good chance to send someone — or a team — to state."

Simms had nothing but praise for the runners. "I was very proud of everyone's effort," she said. "Not everyone sends that many kids to a regional meet. They have worked hard all year, and their efforts showed Saturday."

Muleshoe Cranefest proclaimed

Muleshoe Mayor Robert Montgomery and Bailey County Judge Marilyn Cox joined this week in proclaiming the first weekend of November as Muleshoe Cranefest weekend.

The proclamation points out that more than 30,000 sandhill cranes are expected to be at the Muleshoe National Wildlife Refuge, the oldest such refuge in Texas.

Saturday's first-ever Cranefest begins with the sunrise observation (for those who want to brave it) of the cranes lifting off from the refuge's lakes, followed by breakfast being served from 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m.

During the day, there will be wildlife and arrowhead exhibits at the refuge headquarters, plus young sidewalk artists doing their best work on the streets of downtown Muleshoe.

In the evening, back at the refuge, the Jennyslippers will serve picnic packs from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. as people gather to watch the cranes return to the lakes from their day of feeding.

Care-givers critical in Alzheimer's cases

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
WICHITA FALLS — Care givers and family members should use understanding and compassion to connect and effectively communicate with elderly people suffering from Alzheimer's disease and other forms of dementia, said Naomi Feil, a nationally known health-care professional.

Feil addressed the recent "Breaking Through the Barrier of Alzheimer's Disease" seminar sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The seminar presented new perspectives on gerontology to care-givers, health and human service workers and others who regularly deal with the elderly.

"The very-old elderly often loosen their control of strong emotions they have kept bottled up inside," said Feil, creator of a concept known as validation therapy.

"When these people emote strongly and loudly, they are 'unpacking' these buried emotions and seeking resolution. Hate, love, passion, jealousy, etc., come spilling out after they are triggered by a symbol such as person, thing or situation. "We must validate their need to resolve these emotions by listening compassionately, by acting as sounding boards and by treating them with respect," she said.

"We respect their struggle to resolve past, often painful issues, and in doing so we help them reduce stress and enhance their dignity and happiness as they face their last journey in life. By venting these emotions, they are in a sense unpacking before their last journey," Feil added.

The elderly can pass through four distinct stages — mal-orientation, time confusion, repetitive motion and vegetation (a non-responsive vegetative state) — during their resolution struggles.

Guiding them toward successful resolution before vegetation occurs is a chief goal of validation, Feil noted.

"Emotional health is as important as mental or physical resident in question had been making inappropriate sexual statements as well as "attempting to pinch and grab" staff members, other residents and even visitors — including a member of the investigation team.

The state team did determine that a requirement for prompt delivery of mail to nursing-home residents was being violated by not providing Saturday mail delivery at the Muleshoe facility.

Saturday mail deliveries were not being made because the care center's office is closed on Saturdays; the facility arranged with the post office to deliver Saturday mail to the nurses' station, from where it is being distributed to residents.

The investigators also reported observing that "dependent diners" were not being given help during meals. They reported observing one woman trying to feed herself, spilling a glass of water which was then refilled by a staff member but spilled again because the staff member did not help the resident with the glass.

The center also was criticized for allowing Spanish to be spoken around residents who understood only English, and agreed to an English-only policy except in regard to residents who do not speak English.

Another point that brought an objection from the investigators was observing a resident being transported through the facility with their hospital gown in such disarray as to expose the resident's groin area. When this was pointed out, the report states, "staff replied 'he came from the hospital that way.'"

That situation will be monitored by management to avoid its being repeated, according to the report.

The report also states that three new wheelchairs have been purchased. That will take care of three residents who were observed in wheelchairs that did not allow their feet to touch the floor even though all three had the use of their feet and could have been self-mobile in a more suitable wheelchair.

The report also criticized "lingering odors" in several parts of the facility and lack of sanitation in others.

The survey team also reported hearing several residents complain that the facility was kept too cold; during the Aug. 4 visit, several areas of the facility were found to have temperatures of 68 to 69 degrees. The facility has agreed to maintain temperatures between 71 and 80 degrees now.

Overall, the report noted various areas where there had been little or no formal assessment of problems before action had been taken, and generally lax monitoring after the fact.

Onions — they're not just for eating anymore

By RONN SMITH
Editor

Maybe it's time to think about onions in your flower beds.

I'm not necessarily thinking about the members of the onion family everybody knows about — THE onion, garlic and chives — although chives in particular is a very ornamental plant and worthy of a place in flower beds.

These are alliums, and there are more members of the family than you will ever be able to grow — some of them spectacular in flower.

Most of them look basically the same, a larger or smaller version of the familiar onion — a ball of flower atop the leaves we refer to as "onion blades."

Size can range from tiny plants suitable for edging a walkway to those that grow chest-high.

Flower colors range from white through pink and blue and lavender, and there are yellow species.

Now, some of you are probably already thinking of our wild onion that's native to the Llano Estacado and how it spreads over vacant lots — particularly in Clovis. Maybe you're visualizing those seas of pink blooms and muttering, "I don't want to get that started in my yard."

Our little native onion is a prolific seeder and a tough plant to boot, so it does have a tendency to overdo itself. Most of the ones grown as ornamental plants are not going to take over, though (although they're toughies, too).

Dan Hinkley, of the fantastically successful Heronswood Nursery near Seattle, says alliums provide more of a display with less work than any other group of plants.

Barbara Blossom Ashmun, writing about alliums in the December issue of Fine Gardening magazine, writes fancifully about members of the genus:

"Some are just plain fun. The immense purple balls of giant allium (Allium giganteum) seem like something Alice in Wonderland would have stumbled upon beside the Cheshire Cat.

"Alliums are novel plants, and their playful shapes and fascinating structures lighten the gardener's mood and awaken a sense of wonder.

"After a long bloom period, their seed heads decorate the garden and may be cut for dried flower arrangements."

Luckily for us, most of them also demand hot sun and not too much water, and they are not picky about soil types.

They're usually better planted in groups, so that their sparse stalks form a "colony." Of course, there are times when a solitary stalk or two might be just the look you want.

Most of them are spring bloomers.

With many of the species, the foliage is already looking ratty by flowering time, so you'll probably want to set annual bedding plants around them to hide the dying leaves. Or plant some late-developing perennial along with the alliums.

Because of their strictly upright growth, alliums are good for narrow strips where you don't want plants that sprawl.

In addition to the giant allium (3 or 4 feet tall), some of the kinds usually available are:

- Star of Persia (Allium cristophii) — Only 15 inches tall, but with immense flower heads of a silvery lavender;

- Allium moly and other small alliums, often sold as an assortment including yellow, pink and white species. Different nurseries sell them under different common names, which usually have nothing to do with anything except generating sales;

- Nodding onion (Allium cernuum) — A 12-inch American native whose rose-purple flower heads sway back and forth, giving it its common name;

- Drumstick allium (Allium sphaerocephalum) — Up to 2 feet high with egg-shaped flower masses of dark purple;

- Allium schubertii — My favorite. A 2-foot-tall outerspace oddity whose beautiful flower heads (I think they're beautiful, anyway) contain blooms on stalks of widely differing lengths. The effect is like a pink porcupine or pin-cushion full of pins; it has also been described as a starburst or looking like pink fireworks (Ashmun's term);

- Allium karavatiense — The exception when it comes to onion-blade foliage. This one makes only a pair of leaves, and they are flattened into broad paddle-like things — not really like anything else. Flowers are a pale whitish lavender;

- Allium triquetrum — The exception when it comes to hot sun and well-drained soil; this species likes it shady and moist. Flowers are white and somewhat ethereal. Hinkley says one writer described them as unusually beautiful but "looking like the ghost of a dead white flower drowned long ago in deep water." (No, the guy was not a Southern Gothic novelist, but may have needed some professional help.)

I don't think many of us have bug zappers in the yard anymore, but for those of you who use them in the belief you're getting rid of mosquitoes:

A study cited in the November/December issue of Bird Watcher's Digest points up the futility of this practice.

The magazine didn't say who conducted the study or who funded it, and that information should always be supplied when you're talking about studies.

But, whoever was responsible, the magazine says a study of 14,000 insects killed by bug zappers showed that only 31 were female mosquitoes (and females are the only ones that "bite").

That isn't the worst of it, though. In the same study, 2,000 of the dead insects were species that would have EATEN mosquitoes if they'd been left alone to do so.

And for good measure, the magazine mentions a second study where the percentages were just about as bad.

I know we all went to Europe last summer, so it would be such a drag to go again next year, but if you really like gardening there's something that might entice you.

I'd say it's the gardening workshop to end all gardening workshops.

Penelope Hobhouse, certainly one of the most famous garden designers of all time, will be joined in the workshops by various other "celebrities" from the gardening world to talk about their areas of expertise.

What sets this event apart, though, is that the whole thing will be hosted at Hobhouse's family seat, the 18th-century Hadspen House, by her son, Niall Hobhouse.

This is the same Hadspen House that has given its name to several varieties of perennial plants, perhaps the most popular at the moment being the dark-red astrantia 'Hadspen Blood.'

The prices start at 1,800 pounds (roughly $2,000, I think) — more if you want to actually stay at Hadspen House during the festivities.

More information is available by e-mailing nazreenm@johnbrown.co.uk. By telephone, as they say in England, "please ring" 0171 565 3268.

Happy planting!

Inhalant abuse becoming more prevalent among children

HOUSTON — Inhalant abuse is a silent epidemic on the rise in Texas.

A recent Texas School Survey of Substance Use indicated that about 15 percent of all elementary students in fourth through sixth grades had used inhalants.

Over the past three years, inhalants are the only substances that have increased in usage among Texas school-age children.

"Although these numbers don't translate into large numbers of children who may be abusing substances, they present an opportunity to take action at a time when prevention and intervention efforts are most effective," said Dr. Joan Shook, chief of emergency medicine at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston.

"Huffing" is a form of inhalant abuse in which vapors or fumes are inhaled through the mouth to obtain a quick high. Also known as "sniffing" or "solvent abuse," this harmful activity can cause short- and long-term health problems, including brain damage.

"Although inhalants rank fourth behind alcohol, marijuana and cigarettes in usage, they are the most dangerous in regard to risk of death in the short term," said Dr. Todd Vedder, inhalant abuse expert at Texas Children's Hospital.

A child can die from using inhalants only once.

Common household products like spray paint, cooking sprays, air freshener and butane can be sprayed into cans and small plastic bags or onto clothing so the concentrated vapors can be inhaled.

Ten to 15 seconds of huffing might produce a high that lasts 10 to 15 minutes.

Texas Children's physicians encourage parents and teachers to look for clues that a child might be huffing or abusing other inhalants. These signs include:

- Unusual breath odor or clothing that smells like chemicals;
- Slurred or disoriented speech;
- Spots or sores around the mouth;
- Chronic runny nose and red eyes;
- Paint or stains on body or clothing; and
- Drunken, dazed or glassy-eyed look.

There are many reasons why children find inhalant abuse appealing, and these products are cheap, accessible and legal.

"Any experimentation with drugs is potentially harmful, and the danger of inhalants coupled with the ease of abusing them make this an urgent fight for our kid's futures," Shook said.

Making it 9-0

JV Mules Cade Hooten (No. 51) and Chad Bales (No. 60) bear down on a Springlake-Earth running back in last Thursday night's junior varsity game. Muleshoe won the game 49-6, pushing its record to 9-0 for this season and 19-0 over the past two years.

EAGLES

12 and 9 yards, and Soliz ran for a PAT to make it 19-6 at the end of the first period. And when the Eagles scored five times in the second period, the game was over.

Daniel Reeves returned an interception 26 yards for a score and Soliz hauled in a 25-yard scoring pass from James for a touchdown. Reeves caught a 30-yard strike from James for the third score of the second period and Monty Kirby's kick made it 41-6 with 6:03 left in the half.

McCaul scored from 40 yards out and James sprinted 37 yards for a score to bring the score to 57-6 with 3:22 to go in the half. The scoring ended there as the 45-point rule took effect.

Amherst managed just 91 total yards and suffered four first-half turnovers, two interceptions and two fumbles.

The Eagles rolled up 339 total yards in a half; 264 on the ground and 75 in the air.

Besides the Three Way-Lazbuddie game, Whitharral plays at Silvertown and Cotton Center is at Amherst on the final night of the regular season.

MULES

Littlefield win.)

"It doesn't matter to us," Wood said. "All the playoff games are going to be hard."

It's likely the Mules will be able to win Friday night against Cooper. The Pirates are 1-3 in district, with their only win a 46-0 decision over Roosevelt, who has scored six points in four district games. In their three losses, their average margin of loss is 32 points.

Expect the Mules to play stingy defense against Cooper. The Mules have allowed 89 points this season and will likely be stellar this Friday.

One player to watch will be Mitch Mason, who was chosen as the Mule player of the week. Mason had 12 tackles in the game, 10 of them solo. Also, he had three catches for 39 yards.

The final step to reaching the playoffs will begin at 7:30 Friday night in Muleshoe.
