He was high in his praise of the splendid work and high percentage of efficiency of the libperience of the majority of the Stratford teachers. Outstanding was the fact, Mr. Clifft said, that each of the first year teachers in the school system exhibited some exceptionally fine work, was unusually enthusiastic, and was imbued with a real educational attitude toward her class

To the twenty-three and one-half fully accredited subjects which are now affiliated in the Stratford high school system have been added a credit each in typing and speech, and a half credit in trigonometry, bringing the total to twenty-six units of affiliation. These last credits were granted by Mr. Clifft after observing the high standard of proficiency in each subject and making a study of details given to him from the office of Superintendent Wooten.

Farmers Warned To Plant Good Seed This Year

Farmers are warned against using seed that has a low percent germination in planting their row crops. County Agent Art Bralley reports that one sample that was sent to the State Seed Testing Laboratory showed only 63% germination. "Seed should test 80% or higher for accurate seeding," the County Agent

The unusual rainy season last summer and fall has evidently lowered the germination of many sorghum seeds. Agronomists attribute poor germination to a combination of showers washing the pollen from the plants while in bloom, and due to damage from excess rain during the harvest season. The County Agent will be glad to send samples away for testing for farmers and the only cost will be postage.

The Sherman County Improvement Association ordered some 30,-000 pounds of State Certified Seed for farmers last year, and much good planting seed should be available in the county this spring. INSTALLMENT THIRTEEN THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, who has come to Honolulu to press her claims to the island estate of Alakoa, learns that she is not an heiress at all, as her grandfather, Garrett Waterson, is still alive and on his way to the island. She and Tonga Dick or Richard Wayne, a member of the Wayne family which has been in control of the property since her grandfather's disappearance, find they are in love and decide to leave the island of Alakoa together. Out to sea, they discover that Lilua, a native housegirl, has stowed away aboard ship. Karen accuses Dick of making love to the native girl and they quarrel. Angered, Dick orders the ship to return to Alakoa. On the way back, Lilua is found seriously hurt with a knife wound. Dick questions the Chinese mess boy regarding the incident.

New continue with the story.

"Has anyone gone out of here through the galley?" Dick asked. "No, sir.

"This girl has been hurt-stabbed. You stay here with her-do anything you can for her, until I get

The face of the Chinese was staring with confusion and alarm. Very probably he had never seen the girl before in his life, and now supposed that Dick himself had done her in. He remained silent, however, and stayed where he was told.

Inyashi slid down the hand rail and landed at the foot of the ladder as Dick turned.

"Someone was knifed here a min-ute ago," Dick told him, "when you heard that scream. Has anyone come up the ladder since then?'

"No, Captain Dick. But there's a man standing by the taff-rail. He acts queer—maybe he is the one. He stands naked by the rail and looks at the sea, and the crew is afraid to go near him. Maybe he came up from here by the skylight?"

Dick snatched a rifle from a rack upon the forward bulkhead. "That's it! Who is he-do you know him?' "It's that big new Kanaka."

"I hired no new Kanaka!" "He came over the side out of the water, just before we sailed; he said you sent him. His name is Hokano, Dick seized Inyashi and pushed him up the ladder. "Stop your engines," he ordered, following close on Inyashi's heels.

"Full astern?"

"No! If you do that the propellers will catch him as he jumps. Man the dinghy with the four Kanaka boys, and lower away."

"Yes, Captain!" In a moment more everyone on the ship was snapped into action by Inyashi's shrill, sputtering commands.

Emerging on the deck, Dick saw at once the immensely tall, broadshouldered figure of Hokano standing against the rail in the extreme stern. Hokano faced the sea, motionless as a mast. The tall figure away, and for a moment Dick was strongly tempted to try bringing down Hokano with the butt of his rifle. He gave up that idea; even if he succeeded in felling the big Kanaka before Hokano could leap into the sea, the stunned man would be extremely likely to slither over the rail and sink like a plummet.

"Kamaku! Roll the searchlight

Karen was at his elbow, her face white and frightened.
"What is it? What's happened?"

"Lilu's lover has come after her -and got her," Dick said. "She's-killed?"

"Probably."

Her eyes were on the rifle in his hands. "What are you going to do?" "Going to call a policeman," he snapped at her. "Get that boat over! What are you waiting for?"

Now the Diesel quit, so that the Holokai seemed suddenly silent. The rush of the water at her bows diminished as she lost way.

As if awakened by the shutting down of the power, the motionless figure in the stern came to life abruptly. Hokano sprang lightly onto the rail itself, and for a moment poised upright. Then he launched into the night in a beautiful clean arc, arms outspread, turning downward to disappear almost silently into the black water.

Now the big searchlight came trundling out on its unwieldy tripod. In a moment more it began to sweep the surface of the sea, searching for the place where the swimmer would come up. The Holokai's dinghy took to the water flounderingly, and immediately shot astern.

Dick said to Karen, "I knew he was going to do that." He walked after without hurry, and took his place at the rail where Hokano had There wasn't any way to stop him. He'll be easier to handle to get back."

The searchlight picked up the swimmer now, fifty yards back in the Holokai's wake. In moments when the waves favored, those on the deck of the vessel could glimpse a flash of wet shoulders, but nothing else. Hokano was swimming face down, taking advantage of the swells like a seal. The Holokai had lost steerage way, and was rolling sickly in the swells. Dick braced a knee against the rail and brought his rifle

Karen cried out, "Would you shoot him in the water?"

He went on deck and stood at the

He fired, and a spout of water sprang up far to the left of Hokano. Karen saw now what Dick was firing at. The tall fin of Kai-Ale-Ale was curving near, gliding lazily, unhurried. Dick fired again, without effect; he could not see his sights. Karen's teeth were chattering. thought—I thought you said sharks never harm brown men."

"This thing isn't like other sharks! Nobody knows anything about him."

The incredibly long, monstrous shape of Kai-Ale-Ale was snouting near to the swimmer now; Hokano must have seen it, but he swam straight on, unmindful. The boy manning the searchlight suddenly swung it aside, and held it unsteadily upon the monster. A long phosly upon the monster. A long phosphorescent gleam of turned water suddenly shone half the length of the whale shark's back emphasizing the unbelievable.

Dick sighted upon the base of the great fin and fired four times. Suddenly the fin jerked rigid, and a great gout of water went up. The fin sunk from view; far back, in-credibly far back from where it disappeared, the great tail fluke rose out of the sea. For a moment the searchlight held it—a vast scimitar shaped thing, higher from the water than the Holokai's booms; then it drove downward, disappearing in black water as Kai-Ale-Ale sounded.

"Stay down there a while," Dick said.

"Did you kill it?"

"You can't kill that thing." The searchlight found the boat again. It was rising and falling idly, and its bow rose clear of the water was no more than twenty-five feet as the Kanakas hauled the slack body of Hokano over the transom.

CHAPTER XII

Hokano, that tall unhappy man who had tried to end Lilua's life and his own, presently lay bound with wet cordage in a foc'sle bunk. One of his brother Kanakas had bashed him over the head with an oar, as Hokano had turned, treading water, to look at Kai-Ale-Ale.

Tonga Dick Wayne had been right in sending a Kanaka crew in the boat to pick up Hokano; the maxim of South Sea sailors was true-that no one knew how to handle a Kanaka except a Kanaka. Hokano, naked though he looked, had his knife slung about his neck by a sennet cord, and he would have slashed the wrist tendons of anyone who laid hands on him from the boat while he was conscious. After one of them had knocked him out with an oar, another Kanaka had dived to rescue him, and had stopped the sinking of the inert turn. It would have been weird watching, for anyone, to see those simple, casual maneuvers—the Kanaka boys standing with easy, natural balance in the reeling little boat on the swells of the sea, letting the dinghy stand on the heel of her scant hull while they dragged Hokano in, without any one of them ever losing his superb balance, and never shipping a quart of water. Nobody not a Kanaka could ever understand the easy affinity of that amphibious people to the sea; sea-riding a small boat, or a canoe, or a floating stick, as easily as a haole walks on asphalt pavement, or handles his knife and

Bound with cords that cut too deep ever to slip, Hokano lay in a foc'sle bunk, awake and impassive. Aft, in Dick Wayne's bed, lay the girl Hokano had tried to kill, fighting for her life; the intense native vitality of Lilua's body held onto life avidly, regardless of how little Lilua herself cared whether she lived or died.

Karen Waterson sat beside Lilua, and Inyashi and the Chinese mess boy hovered behind Karen, useful chiefly to hold Lilua down when she could no longer be controlled. Lilua was not out of her head entirely; she babbled unceasingly in the Hawaiian tongue. Dick went away, unable to listen any more; Lilua was talking as if her heart would break and kill her if her wound did not.

His whole soul was trying to jerk the Holokai out of the cling of the sea. He would have liked to lift her and throw her through space, and bring her against the beach of Alakoa like the thrust of a knife.

He was standing there, watching what seemed to him the slug-like process of the straining Holokai, when Karen came to his side.

"I'm sorry," Karen said. "I'm terribly sorry. Dick, this has been a thing such as I have never seen." Dick said in a muffled way, "You don't know what you're saying. How would you know?"

"Dick," Karen said, "I should never have come into the Pacific-above all, I should never have come to Alakoa. I bring nobody anything but sorrow, and trouble, and death."

"Yes," said Dick brutally.
"I think," Karen said, "if it hadn't been for this mongrel girl, it would have been all right. We're an awfully long way apart, I guess; butexcept for her-I think you and I have got together, in the Dick Wayne's elbows rested on the rail. The Holokai was throwing everything she had into kicking the sea behind her, and the white boil of her wake stretched into a path that failed only with night vision; but Tonga Dick was looking at something beyond its utmost reach. He spoke thickly, with an unaccustomed incoherence.

"That girl knew what it was to love something," he said.

Karen's mind to know what girl he any battering that ever cracked a meant; but when she had done that she was ready for what he said next, even before he said it. "Without demanding anything, without ever any questions, or any terms. None of this everlasting doubt, and wavering, and indecision. Once and for all, she gave everything she had, and asked for nothing."

"I suppose you mean," Karen said, "that this half caste girl, this cousin of mine, as you say-

"It matters a lot to you, doesn't it," Dick said bitterly, "exactly who this girl is? I would rather ask a woman what she thinks and feels, than who she is."

"And so," Karen said, with something like a tone of despair, "if a brown woman, or a black woman. can let herself go, more fully than I can, your answer is-?"

"Karen," Dick said, "if ever any woman has to ask herself if she loves a man, the answer is 'No.' " The stubborn silence that fell between them then was broken-very gratefully for them both-by the impetuous projection of Inyashi between them. It always seemed that whatever Inyashi did was high-pressured, and sudden. "Captain Dick, a vessel is coming in; she's three points off the quarter, now. I think it may be the boat you look for. Hard to tell yet, from just the lights."

The two at the taffrail, swinging their eyes to the left, could now see on the horizon a speck of light that showed winking in the rise and fall of the sea-the high running lights of a ship quartering in from beyond. "All right," Dick said. "When we've anchored, I'll go out and pilot When Inyashi had moved away, Dick and Karen stood silent for a little while. When Karen spoke it was apparent that she was steadier, better poised than he. "Can't you be fair to me?" she said. "Can't you be honest? If you and I can't be frank and honest with each other, who in the world can?" "Honest?"

"You haven't always been honest with me, Dick. If you had told me at the first that Garrett Waterson was alive-"

"More honest, I think, than you with me." "I can't imagine what you mean."

"You've played your hand aloneor else with John Colt; never with me. I've protected you in situation that you tried to conceal from m

VER 40 years ago a kid came out of Bucknell university who was better known as a football star than any baseball wonder. He was a big, knock-kneed blond who hammered lines and kicked field goals. But he turned out later to be a pretty fair country pitcher. His name was Christy Mathewson. Maybe you remember him as Old Percentage or Big Six.

Turning from the Matty of 1902 to the New York Yankees' Spud Chandler of 1942, it suddenly occurred how few college football stars had ever taken a firm grip or grab on big league baseball fame.

There have been a few-Matty of Bucknell and the Giants, Orvie Overall of California and the Cubs, Frank Frisch of Fordham and the Giants, Mickey Cochrane of Boston university and the Athletics, Lou Gehrig of Columbia and the Yankees, Sam Chapman of California and the Athletics, plus a few others But not so many in a 40-year roundup.

ball players carry away too many kinks in shoulder, knee or ankle to be good ball players. And too many are also muscle-bound."

With Georgia's Best

Chandler was a star back and a star kicker at Georgia around 10 years ago. He went north with three Georgia teams that beat good Yale teams three years in a row. His Georgia teams also made it two out of three from N.Y.U. when Chick Meehan had the Violet at a violent tide. Those were among the best teams Georgia ever turned out.

"I was lucky," Spud said. "I was never hurt although we played tough ligament or strained a muscle."

Now at the age of 32 it would not be any too surprising to see Chandler stepping into his best season. Last season, although pitching well, he dropped his first four starts. Then he won his next ten straight.

The Georgian, now living at Moultrie, has a husky son who is just nine months old.

"Laughing, he wakes me every morning at six o'clock," Spud says. 'He laughs all the time.

Which shows in these times what a wonderful thing it must be to be nine months old.

After the football-baseball argument had subsided, someone opened another debate, namely, what is the easiest job to handle on a ball club? Bill Dickey picked right field. At which point some indignant rightfielder named catching. Words flew in various directions until the final verdict pointed directly at third base.

Mel Ott, who has played many jobs, voted for third. So did Jimmy Foxx who has also caught, played first and third. Their angle was that at third you either do-or you don't. It's either a hit-or an out.

"The toughest play a third base-man has to make is handling a swinging bunt," Bill Dickey said. 'But there are not so many of those. And, when they come off they are generally hits, anyway."

The Rebuttal

This final decision failed to lift any cheers out of the third basemen in sight.

"A third baseman has to be set for the two opposites," one of them said. "Either a smoke ball or a The majority of those balls bunt. driven down our way leave a tail of fire behind. They are moving in a hurry. And we have to move in a hurry to kill off the hit.

"At the same time we have to be ready to come in fast on bunts or slow-hit balls. We haven't the time a shortstop or a second baseman has. And we have a longer throw to make—a throw that often has to be made in a hurry."

In that football-baseball debate we overlooked Eddie Collins, a good quarterback at Columbia before he went to the Athletics.

But such crack football players as Sammy Baugh, Ernie Nevers, Harry Hopp, Jim Thorpe, Dixie Howell and many others couldn't make the grade. They couldn't hit.

AIR CRASHES

With the tremendous war expansion of the army and navy air branches has come an accompanying frequency of press reports of crashes by fledgling pilots. These stories have brought a flood of worried inquiries to Washington authori-

Relatives of aviators have expressed concern over the number of these accidents and the adequacy of the training programs.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND has investigated both matters. For military reasons detailed figures cannot be disclosed. But the following generalizations can be published:

1. That the U. S. percentage of accidents is less than that of the British and appreciably under the best available German figures. The casualty rate among Nazi trainees is reported to be quite high due to limited training facilities, personnel and equipment.

2. While U. S. accidents have increased numerically because of the greatly increased number of men in training, the percentage of accidents has not increased. Today it is about the same as the ratio in 1940. This fact is of key importance, since it means there has been no deterioration in the basic quality of the army and navy air training systems despite speed-ups and other war factors.

3. The present training systems are far superior to those of the World war. Trainees are selected more carefully and given much more and better instruction before they get their coveted wings.

The question of allowing military air crashes to be reported has been a subject of inner circle debate for some time. Some authorities contend this is valuable information to the enemy, and cite the fact that Britain has banned such press stories.

The President, however, has not entirely agreed with this view. He is against publication of totals or percentages but sees no objection to press reports of individual mishaps. This is the policy being followed but the question is still under discus-

SPRING AT THE WHITE HOUSE Outside the White House fence march soldiers with fixed bayonets. But inside the tall, iron fence, defying the changes wrought by war, is the perennial transfiguration of spring.

The grass is a soft green, and the beds of pansies and jonquils have burst into bloom in colorful bril It required a conscious effort of schedules every year. I didn't take liance. The flowering shrubs and trees were never lovelier—the magnolias, japonica, and forsythia.

On the Pennsylvania avenue side, the magnolias are making a gorgeous showing, supported by the forsythia and japonica bushes, all at their best. The same three faithfuls are on display near the fountain in the South garden. These are the two best show places in the White House grounds.

The only scar in the scene is the construction work on the East grounds, where sewers and conduits are being laid for what is officially described as a "remodeling operation."

The colors seen best by the President from his desk are those of the jonquils and pansies in the rose garden just outside his office window.

There is a touch of irony in the fact that some of the best color is Nipponese in origin—the Japanese magnolias, and the japonicas, which are otherwise known as Japanese quince.

HULL AND WINCHELL

Cordell Hull, dignified, austere secretary of state, sat gazing out over the Atlantic ocean recently from a Miami Beach cabana adjacent to the cabana of turbulent, Broadway news-sleuth Walter Winchell.

For two months Mr. Hull has been absent from Washington; there has been speculation whether he would return. So news-sleuth Winchell put the question bluntly to his cabana neighbor:

"Mr. Secretary, are you going back to work?"

The secretary of state replied in the affirmative. He said that after he had had sufficient rest in the South, he was going back to work.

Note-One of Winchell's friends reproached him for putting such a blunt question to Mr. Hull. Replied Winchell: "I've gotta ask questions. That's my racket."

WAYSIDE CONVERSATIONS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 13:22-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple.—Luke 14:27.

Learning by talking with Christ as they walked from place to place -such was the training for service which the disciples received. That was the greatest school this world has ever known, for while it had no great buildings, no beautiful campus, no learned faculty, it had the Son of God Himself as preceptor and teacher. With all due regard for our fine colleges and seminaries, we say this is still the outstanding need of Christian workers-to walk and talk with Christ.

On the day of which our lesson speaks the subject considered was how to be saved, and who should be saved. Several trends of thought emerged, but all pointed in the one direction of a diligent following of God's plan. In order to be saved, we learn, a man must

I. Make an Earnest Effort (vv. 22-24)

The question regarding how many were saved received no direct answer for our Lord wished to direct attention to the far more impor-tant question—Are you saved? Get that settled and the other matter will care for itself.

Here some who assume that it is an easy thing to be saved will receive a surprise, for our Lord says (v. 24) that it is something one must agonize" over, for so may the word "strive" be translated. The door into eternal life is so narrow that no man can pass through it with his sins-they must be taken away. Seeking is not enough (v. 24), one must "strive" to enter in.

II. Enter While the Door is Open

The door stands open for all who will, to come in. (What a friendly thing is an open door!) But men idly ignore it, or definitely reject its opportunity. Or they seek it, but do not strive to enter in, and all at once it is closed. Then in a frenzy they seek to enter, but it is too late. What an appalling thing-to be eternally too late!

Note their claims of acquaintance with the Lord (v. 26). One is reminded of those who think they are Christians because father or mother belonged to the church, or because they attend an occasional church supper or listen to a sermon by radio. Unless we know Him personally as our Saviour, He will have to make that matter very clear to those to whom we minister, lest they be eternally lost.

III. Follow the Fearless Christ (vv. 31-33).

To know the high and unwavering character of one's leader is to go forward with real confidence. What about the Captain of our salvation? Here we find Him facing the indirect threat of a powerful and wicked earthly ruler, in perfect calmness, with the very poise of eternity upon mission and with determination to do the Father's will (Heb. 10:7), knew no fear of man. As we are in His holy will as Christian men standard of living than that of Amerand women, we too may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I markets, through the development will not fear what man shall do unto me" (Heb. 13:6). Consider the rebuke to Herod (v. 32). There is probably no place in Scripture where our Lord spoke with such stinging contempt of any man. It is almost as though the black cloud of eternal judgment already had settled around the head of this man who was so sly and crafty that | their insistence of the necessity of the tenderhearted Jesus called him a "fox." One wonders of how many He would have to say the same in this our day of supreme and mali-

We find one more vitally important thought here. Our Lord offers me to make this trip to California, Himself. He calls sinners to repentance, but they must cious wickedness.

IV. Respond to His Invitation (vv.

34, 35). To fail to accept His proffered love is to be left desolate. To reject Him as Saviour (either by neglect or by definite act) is inevitably to bring judgment. To the Jews this meant loss of their national home—their leading city, but to us in financing the war. it means the loss of our eternal

"There is terrible suggestiveness in the two statements in verse 34, 'I would,' 'Ye would not.' The whole secret of Jerusalem's desolation and destruction is found in the words, 'Ye would not.' The whole secret of the loss of the individual soul is found in the words, 'Ye will not' (John 5:40)" (John W. Bradbury).

This lesson presses home to the individual reader the question, Are you saved? What is your answer? It also affords the Sunday school place to give an invitation DOMINATE AMERICA SOMEWHERE I have read statement to the effect that the Main streets of America are more powerful than the Broadways. That is very, very true. The hard, horse sense of our Main streets dominates America. From them are recruited the larger proportion of our college students, a great proportion of our industrial and political leaders. From the Main streets are elected a trifle more than 50 per cent of our representatives in congress.

Progress is found on our Main streets quite as much as on our Broadways. The hitching rack and watering trough of a generation ago have given place to the automobile parking place, the gas station and the garage. The kerosene lamp has been replaced with the electric light bulb. The wash tub in the kitchen for the family Saturday night bath is no more. In its place is a modern bathroom. Every convenience that Broadway has known is also found on Main street. There are a larger number of automobiles per Main street homes than per Broadway

Yes, there is progress on Main street, but with the advance in material things there has been retained that hold on cultural and spiritual things which makes the Main street perspective so different from that of Broadway. Main street gives seri-ous consideration to the problems of life and of the nation. Its social life is built around the school and the church. Broadway is largely frivolous. Its social life is that of the night spots, the bright lights and the country clubs. It is not easily brought to a serious consideration of national or governmental problems. The Main streets of America represent the future of the nation. They have the virtue of progress, without the frivolities and the bright lights. From them comes most of the sane thinking of the nation.

FARMERS' REACTION TO AID PROGRAM

ON A RAILROAD TRAIN between Chicago and the West coast, I had, among others, seven farmers as fellow passengers. Four of them got on at Chicago. One was from Michigan, one from Wisconsin and two from Illinois. One got on in Iowa and two, one from Missouri and one from Kansas, boarded the train at Kansas City.

Of the seven, five were definitely opposed to government bonuses to agriculture, although four of the five were accepting government payments. The farmer from Wisconsin was not. He was operating a dairy farm and was bitter in his denunciation of the government's effort to induce American people not to eat cheese so there might be a greater say to us, Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity' (v. 27). Let us co-operatives had spent a million co-operatives had spent a million dollars in an advertising campaign to create an increased market for

The man from Iowa expressed the views of the five opposed to government payments:

"Farmers are not mendicants any more than are merchants," he said. "Some farmers fail at farming because they are not capable farmers. Some merchants fail at storekeeping because they are not capable merchants, but the government does not subsidize merchants because of Christ, conscious of His divine the failures. As farmers we want a protected American market. We do not want to compete with farmers in countries with a much lower ica. That protected market and new of the scientific application of agriculture to industry, is all we want. With that we want to stand on our own feet. The government should save the more than a billion dollars a year now being paid as farm

> The two farmers who favored the bonus plan were equally definite in its continuance.

"The farmer," said one, "is entitled to a standard of living he cannot achieve without government help. It is what I get from the government that makes it possible for and my wife and I are entitled to such a trip."

Did those seven farmers represent a cross-section of the farmers of America? I do not know. I give you the story as I received it and without comment, other than if it does represent the attitude of a majority of American farmers, the billion dollars would aid materially

There are three things that should never be above normal in war times and they are: Prices, teacher an excellent opportunity to Profits and Wages. We should not seek to lead the members of the ask our boys to fight and die for class to a definite decision for us and we take advantage of the Christ. Pull the Trigger on Constipation, with Ease for Stomach, too

When constipation brings on discomfort after meals, stomach upset, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blue" because your bowels don't breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin for perfect ease to your stomach in taking. For years, many Doctors have given pepsin preparations in their prescriptions to make medicine more agreeable to a touchy stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy on your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin, as directed on label or as your doctor advises, and feel world's better. Get genuine Dr. Caldwell's.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Edward C. Wayne

Russ Situation Grows 'More Serious' As Nazis Move New Troops to Front; Jap Pacific Supply Lines Endangered By Increase in U. S. Naval Activities

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Situation Serious

Spring officially had arrived in the United States with the opening of the wartime baseball season, but it was hardly far advanced on the Russian front, though warm enough in the southern portion.

But the Nazis' spring drive was on, and the Russians, keeping them-selves highly on the alert, had never seemed so active, and were attempting to continue to "beat the Germans to the punch. Kuibyshev and Moscow reported constant attacks on German positions, Berlin was admitting breakthrough's here and there, with huge tank attacks, and the Reds were proudly declaring that much American equipment had arrived.

Best report tending to show the Russian situation was serious had emanated from neutral sources, and said that Hitler had begun to move additional troops from occupied France, probably from other occupied countries onto the beleaguered Russian front.

If true, and it might well be, this might be tied in with General Marshall's talks in London, hinting that the time was ripe for invasion.

Perhaps, on the other hand, Russians were claiming continued victories in hopes of convincing "fencesitting" England that she ought to cross the channel.

At all events there were signs that the German spring offensive was fairly started in Russia, and also that it was getting nowhere fast.

BRITISH:

Days Still Dark

From the unsuccessful mission of Sir Stafford Cripps England was forced to the admission that her days continued dark indeed.

Britain had the galling reminder that she was keeping large fleets of naval vessels in the Indian ocean; that her troops were bravely fighting in Burma; that she was suffering heavy losses on several fronts, and that India was blandly talking over post-war conditions while the Japs were at her very gates.

In fact, after the loss of the Hermes, an aircraft carrier and two cruisers in the waters off Ceylon, word came that the British were planning to send a punitive fleet for a final showdown with the Jap navy in the Far East.

But Britain was having a tough time in Libya, in the Mediterranean generally, and the threat to Australia was a serious one indeed.

The failure of the Cripps mission had been handled by Bernard Shaw, anti-government speaker, as "to have been expected," but the rank and file of England didn't feel that way about it, nor did Sir Stafford himself, who left India a grim and , sadly disappointed man.

His last word to the Hindus had been that Britain naturally would have to withdraw her proposals, but that she would not withdraw from attempting to defend India, but would do her duty whether the Indians helped or hindered.

Many believed the breakdown of the conferences had laid the groundwork for possible revolution or civil war within India, either of which would surely seal her fate if the Japs (as they certainly would) should move in with a strong invasion force.

As to friendliness with the Japs, few believed the Indians felt that The Japanese smacked too much of occidental civilization and thinking to suit the Indians.

RAF: A Ton a Minute

Finally the British had hit a tempo of bombing Germany which was catching the imagination of the man in the street.

In one raid they had dropped a ton a minute in high explosives, sending thousands of tons of bombs across the channel in a single squadron. Some of the squadrons had totaled as high as 300 planes, a figure which the British compared with the estimated 400 which Germany had sent over during the height of the air war

OUR NAVY:

Busy; Building

Despite the published details of the losses of the Java sea and at Pearl Harbor, also the heavy losses of merchantmen in the Atlantic, also the occasional ship reported "missing and presumed lost" in earlier actions, many believed that the navy was doing a big job, particularly in the Pacific and doing it well. One recent report told of activities of submarines in points as far removed from each other as "near Bali" (right off Java), and in "Japanese waters," probably close to the coast of Japan.

Four more Jap ships had been sunk, bringing the total since December 7 to 217 ships sunk or dam-

This was a toll far enough in advance of our own to make any layman realize that a battle with such unequal results could have only one

Those who chafed against a navy which could not wipe the Japs off the seas in a matter of weeks, and which, in the only two large engagements lost heavily, were forced to admit that in actual ship and tonnage losses, the Japs were doing very badly.

And there also was the realization that once fleet supremacy was established in the Pacific, the Japanese supply lines, and therefore their conquest, must fall immediately because of its own weight.

Also those who believed in the job the navy was doing pointed with pride to the thousands of troops and tralia with a single loss, of the other thousands of troops and huge supplies sent to England without loss.

Japanese transports have been sunk, but our troops were getting to their destinations safely. That was a superiority not to be denied. Many felt that this move had won an important victory in the war and that Japan, afraid of our link with Australia, had definitely turned aside from a real effort of invasion of that continent and would live on the hope that the Allies could not develop a real winning offensive from that ter-

AMERICANS:

Up and Doing

Speaker Sam Rayburn of the house had reviewed the situation as far as the present attitude of Americans toward the war outlook was concerned when he revealed pertinent facts about the armed forces and their progress.

He pointed out that America now had on foreign battlefields, six times the number of men we had in Europe after eight months of the last

He declared that planes were being turned out at the rate of 3,300 a month; that Garand rifles were far ahead of production schedules, with already enough on hand for every soldier in uniform to have one; that tanks were ahead of schedule, with one factory turning them out at the rate of a trainload a day; that the building of merchant ships would catch up with schedule by midsummer, and other items of like importance.

Rayburn felt that the temper of the people was such that no lessening, rather an increase of this good work would be demanded. He said that on one recent day 100 men had been on strike in all war in-dustry, and added "that was 100 men too many."

Some Americans were puzzled by the demands, in view of our produc-tion, that all old-style army rifles, the Springfields and the Enfields of the last war, all that were fit to fire, at least, be turned back to the war department for shipment to other members of the United Nations.

This was to include a highly controversial point, the recalling from the 48 state guard organizations, all their rifles.

They were to get shotguns, as were the military police, and the war department announcement addon one day over British objectives. ed "that is all the arms they need."

BATAAN: Aftermath of Historic Battle

The final loss of the battle of Bataan, even though Corregidor's heroic garrison disdained surrender, and continued to lob shells over the Japanese positions as long as they could man their guns, left the United States a little more chastened, a little more grim, still vitally determined to win the war.

One result of the Japanese victory "at long last" over the legions of Filipinos and American soldiers who had fought so bravely and determinedly side by side for more than three months was the lifting of the veil of secrecy about what had been going on.

It was revealed that the forces on Bataan had been less than 40,000 men; that they had no air force; that strong efforts had been made to succor them, to open to them a supply line; that of the ships which had been sent there, two had been sunk for every one that arrived.

It also was learned that the only regiment of U.S. infantry on the island had been the thirty-first; that there had been only two battalions of tanks, and the rest of the gloomy picture of insufficient forces was all told.

Another dividend had been the filing from the safer walls of Corregidor of pictures, of feature articles telling of the closing phases of the battle, material which had been heaped up and refused to pass the censor, but now could be told because it no longer would be of aid and comfort or information to the Americans saw pictures of nearly naked Jap prisoners, saw the types of faces and bodies of the nation's prime enemy, saw them herded to the rear by American boys in uniform, saw the Filipino soldiers lying wounded side by side with our own doughboys, realized perhaps for the first time what the fighting on Bataan had really been like.

The reaction and aftermath throughout the nation had been twofold; a renewed determination that the war should be won, and a powerful demand that the future news bring us victories and offensives rather than further defeats and withdrawals.

In the meantime the Japs continued to move into other islands, had attacked Cebu with a force of 12,000 men, undoubtedly released from the rear of Luzon once the front had fallen.

The attackers met resistance, but it was generally conceded that the battle for the Philippines was lost, for the time being, just as its loss had been conceded by most leading observers from the beginning of the

Invasion Hinted

General Marshall, our chief of staff, and Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal representative, with some others had made the long hop from the United States to London in a bomber, and this led many to believe that an American

Others thought a juncture with Russia in the far north and a sweep down through Norway might be the

MISCELLANY:

Washington: The army had commandeered 85 more air liners for use in transporting troops and supplies, taking over one-fourth of all the air liners now plying the commercial lines.

London: Beatrice Lillie, Lady Peel in private life, received a telegram of the probable death of her son, 21-year-old Sir Robert Peel, in action on a ship on which he was second-class seaman, as she was about to sing before a rural English audience. She finished her concert.

New York: A federal judge de-clared that General Motors high officials had mismanaged bonus funds, had made an unauthorized distribution of stock in the company, and ordered four, including Alfred P. Sloan, Junius S. Morgan, George Whitney and Donaldson Brown, to reimburse the company by more than four millions of dollars.

Washington: The WPB said daily government expenditures for war purposes during March averaged Don't overload the washer, or use it to wash out just a few small pieces unless necessary.

oughly. Rolls and frame of wringer should be wiped dry. Release pressure on rolls when not in use. Leave cover off tub until all dampness has evapo-rated. Cord should be wiped dry and carefully wound on hooks. In using wringer, take care that no objects are left in pockets or metal buckles are allowed to scar or nick the rubber rollers.

How to take care of Your Electric Water Heater

No special care is required for an electric hot water heater. If properly installed, you can for-get it. It will take care of itself. But be sure the thermostat is set to give the correct temperature

Keep it in operation all the time. (Since it's automatic, turning it off and allowing the water in the tank to cool, then reheating it, uses more current than continuous operation). If you live in a section where the water is extremely "hard," it occasionally may be wise to have the heating element taken out and the lime deposit removed. Other than this, there is nothing for you to do except don't waste hot water by letting it run down the sink

West Texas Utilities Company

BE GOOD YOUR ELECTRIC APPLIACES THEY'LL BE GOOD TO YOU!

EW METHODS of efficiency and economy are being worked out to provide an ample supply of light and power for military training camps and wartime industries in this West Texas country in addition to your home and business. But the factories that once turned out an abundance of electric appliances today have been converted to production of war materials. Since these appliances are vital in maintenance of civilian morale and in conserving time and energy for wartime work, it is essential that we all take steps to prolong the usefulness of the appliances now on hand. We are offering some suggestions to help you make them last.

How to take care of Your Electric Refrigerator

Some older models should be oiled every six months. Those with belts should be checked and new belts installed if needed. Condensors in all models should be cleaned once a year. Defrost at regular intervals, allowing the ice to melt rather than using an ice pick. (There's danger of punching a hole in the metal or freezing coil.) Close the door quickly after putting in or taking food out, using care NOT to touch rubber insulating seal around door with greasy hand. (Grease causes the rubber to deteriorate.) Let food cool before putting in refrigerator. Be sure that motor shipping bolts are fastened to prevent damage in transit when moving to new location. Be careful with ice trays-it's difficult to get new trays of any kind. Wash inside of refrigerator with baking soda and water whenever defrosting to prevent food odors.

How to take care of Your Electric Range and Small Appliances

Plan menus so that entire meals are cooked at the same time in oven or thrift cooker. In top-burner cooking turn burner to low as soon as boiling begins. Be sure to turn burners off when through using them. Don't allow liquids to boil over onto the cooking coil. (Metals in coils include copper and magnesium oxide and are hard to replace.) Wash outside of range with warm soapy water when cool. Food spilled over on surface cooking coils should be burned off. Wipe oven with damp cloth and remove food spillage after it cools.

Take good care of your small appliances because parts are becoming hard to replace. For example, the bristles in your sweeper come from China-or did. Not any more. And rubber belts and cords. You know about rubber and copper. Even electric elements in all appliances and switches for lamps are becoming scarce. So take care not to abuse them. All lamp and appliance cords should be handled a bit more carefully. Keep them off the floor if possible so they won't be trampled, knotted or kinked, causing the rubber insulation to break.
