Some of the leading medical authorities of the United States will attend the 79th annual session of the State Medical Association of Texas at Galveston May 6-9. They will discuss, for the benefit of Texas doctors, subjects of medical science in which they have won eminence. The eight distinguished guests represent such centers of medical learning as Johns Hopkins, Duke University, Mayo Clinic and University of Michigan.

Lucky Kids

These children have healthy teeth. They are a lot better off than most American children.

Right now, according to Dr. Walter H. Scherer, president of the American Dental Association, children between 6 and 18 years of age in the United States need more than 244,000,000 dental fillings, many millions of extractions and vast amounts of other corrective work.

Communities, states and the federal government must share with parents and dentists in the respon-sibility of providing sound dental health for all children, Dr. Scherer hard to heat?

There is a furnace fan on the market which can correct that trouble, and the nice part of it is that instead of increasing your fuel cost, it will actually save you

This fan is not the ordinary blower type, but is a large-bladed four propeller device which is placed in the top of your warm air furnace. It both pulls and pushes the air—pulling the hot air off the furnace, so that it is not wasted in heating up the basement, and then pushing it through the ducts so that every room gets more heat, faster.

What is known as a limit con-trol is part of the installation, it being an automatic instrument which turns the fan on and off according to a pre-determined temsetting in the furnace hood. This automatically prevents the furnace from over-heating, due to carelessness or any other abnormal condition.

Installation of this fan in your furnace will give you a practical forced-heat and air-conditioning heating plant, equal in results to the more elaborate automatic heat-ing systems costing several times as much. All of the circulating air is filtered, taking out all dust. In the heat of summer it can be op-erated as a central cooling fan, with your registers acting as coolwith your registers acting as cooling blowers.

How do you like your Eggs?

Reddy Kilowatt as a trouble-shooter isn't worrying about your eggs-or whether you want 'em soft boiled, fried, scrambled—or if you like eggs at all.

But he is worrying about keeping your electric service flowing along as usual. If that means eggs for your breakfast, okay then, that's why he's up on a storm-lashed power pole.

And, he'll stay there till he gets your line repaired—in spite of hot wires sputtering around him. In spite of rain ...lightning...thunder...and a high wind howling, "Watch out, fella, we're gonna hit it again!"

You don't have to send him a check for his trouble. You won't pay any more on your electric bill-to cover his hard, wet work and the materials he uses. Chances are you'll never know a line went out.

This kind of service is routine stuff for Reddy, and the electric company he works for. Storms—the repairs and cost—are all prepared for and handled in a businesslike way. But it isn't an easy job. Keeping your electric service dependable and cheap is the result of careful planning and sound business management.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt reatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

THE STORY THUS FAR: Sherwin

saw Stenhart riding on the trail below, and his arms ached to catch the rascal and tie him up in the cave. Or he could push him over the cliff. Jane suddenly appeared before him. "Tell me it isn't true," she urged. She did not know that Stenhart was following her until Sherwin told her. "I am innocent of that crime," he told her, taking her into his arms. At the ranch Jim asks about Jane and learns from Stenhart, who has returned, that she is up on the mountainside with Sherwin.

Stenhart tells that he saw Jane and Sherwin making love. Jim is furious and calls the sheriff, but learns the sheriff is on the way over looking for Jordan. Sten-hart rides off to guide the sheriff.

CHAPTER IX

It occurred to him that it would be terrible to have the sheriff find Jane with this man. He drummed with his fingers on the edge of his desk, his face white. He had just tele-phoned to the stables for his horse when a door opened and old Teresa came toward him, a paper in her hand. Jim looked around impatient-

"You'll read this for me, senor?"

The little brown woman thrust the crossing herself. Then she caught at his coat and clung to it, keeping him from the door. "Madre de Dios, Jim, tried to the limit, shook her off. "Oh, mind your own business, Teresa!" he growled.

She covered her face with her shaking hands and he heard her praying Spanish as he ran down the slope. He must get to Jane before Stenhart unleashed the sheriff's gang! He was honestly worried. Second thought had cooled his rage; he remembered that he owed something to this fugitive that he was hounding. Then he saw his sister.

She had just swung herself from the saddle down by the stables, and as she turned he saw how pale she was.

"The devil take that fellow!" Jim and Jim flung himself into the sad-was well in the lead, riding recklessly, but Tex was tired; Jim's horse was fresh and the distance between them grew less and less as he reached the bridge, crossed it, and raced on. He could see now, as met Cutler on the upper road; they were far ahead. The posse had di-vided, too, and, as Jim rode on, he made out their plan; they meant to cut Sherwin off, pen him on the hillside, and then beat the bushes.

If Jane reached his hiding-place

first, if she knew of some secret him! The blood rushed to Jim's face at the thought; he cursed his folly

for giving Stenhart this chance.

But Jane was still ahead and she had taken an unexpected turn to the right. Jim remembered that he did

TURNING POINT

By Mary Imlay Taylor

Here and there was a glimpse of the wild ravine, but Jim had never seen Mac's little cabin and, as yet, he saw no trail; then he observed Jane reining in her horse, looking up. Could she see anything? He struck his spurs into his own horse and the animal bounded forward. They had come to a sharp curve and Jane, trying to turn aside, lost her chance to escape. Jim's horse, faster than hers, leaped a fallen tree and her brother snatched at Tex's bridle and brought him to a standstill.

Jane struck at his hand with her quirt. "Let me go!" she cried fiercely; "I've got to go up that trail!"

She was pointing with a shaking

Then he spoke sharply. "Where have you been?" "I swear you won't!" Jim flung back, red in the face; "you're my sister.' Jane took no notice of his tone.

herself, and both horses plunged. Then, suddenly, she gave a little cry, looking up through the trees. The horses had whirled around the curve and faced the cataract; through widespread branches Jim caught a glimpse of the trail along the ledge, above the precipice, a trail he had never followed, never even seen before.

for Cutler. He's going to take that jailbird, Sherwin, back to Rhode Is-"I'm too late—oh, God, I'm too late!" Jane moaned, dropping the land, and I'm going to help him, reins into Jim's hands and clasping Jane's hand dropped from his her own against her breast.

The white agony of her face smote her brother; in a tumult of feeling, anger and regret, he held the horses steady and tried to follow her eyes. At first, in the broad glare of the sunlight on the high hills, he saw nothing but the white spray of the cataract and the mighty tree-trunks that seemed to rise upward in serried ranks, like an army. He could not even hear voices above the roar of the water, but he knew that Cutler's men were behind them and before them, creeping up the mountainside, stealthy and sure, upon their quarry, as the hunter steals upon his game. Suddenly his heart failed him-he felt he had done a thing that he might well regret. No matter if the man was a convict, he had no reason to hunt him down; rather, indeed, he had cause to spare him. Jim's face sobered and grew pale. Then Jane flung herself from the saddle and started toward the screened opening of the trail. but, though she was quick, Jim was quicker; he was down in a moment and after her. He caught her and held her, struggling, in his arms.

"You're too late, Jane!" he exclaimed hoarsely. "Don't you see?

I do! They're bound to meet look!"

He had glimpsed the steep side of the precipice at last, and seen what his sister had been watching. Sherwin was standing beside a cliff, high on the trail. Below him, two hundred feet, dashed the cataract: along the narrow, dizzy ledge, as yet unaware of him, came Stenhart -alone! Cautiously, searching, peering this way and that, unaware that his quarry saw him, waited for him. Those two alone and the chasm at their feet-Fate, that mocking siren, had staged the scene for murder; the wild torrent below flung up its mad spray with a shout. Jane, looking up now, saw that she could not reach Sherwin, could not even cry out to him. She knew den. But Stenhart did, ne had tot even cry out to him. She knew tracked her, and Stenhart was going toward the cataract when he glimpsed him last through the trees. On the upper road they traveled | could not trap him, but she was too faster, Cutler and Stenhart, turning a | late; Stenhart would see him, Stensharp curve between two wooded hart would betray him! She had fought with Jim, but now she stood still with her brother's arms about her; he could feel her shake from head to foot as she looked up at the two men alone there, on the edge of eternity. The climax had come; they were face to face to fight it out, no one could reach them in > Stenhart, moving cautiously, foot by foot, peering, listening, looking back for help—help that would never reach him! Sherwin waiting.

Jim caught his breath. A cloud had obscured the sun, and as it sailed away he saw Sherwin's face as he crouched, leaning forward, ready! One thrust and Stenhart coming on, unaware of him-would go down-down.

Jane covered her face with her hands, but it was Jim who cried out hoarsely, tried to shout a warning; then, realizing its futility, he groaned aloud.

"Good God, he's going to kill him!" he cried.

Sherwin had stepped out from his hiding-place; he seemed to tower, vengeance incarnate. Stenhart stood still an instant, frozen in his tracks. His drawn pistol fell from his hand; he seemed to shrink together in mortal terror. Then, as the man he had hunted neither moved nor spoke, he tottered back, stumbled and fell headlong over the narrow ledge.

It had happened in an instant, in the twinkling of an eye. Sher-win, waiting for his betrayer, saw him-untouched, unscathed-crumple up, reel backward and plunge over the edge of the precipice. So swift was it, that he neither moved nor spoke; for a full minute he stared blankly at the spot where Stenhart had disappeared. A strange sensation swept him, he grew dizzy himself; his head swam, and the hills seemed to rise up about him in awful majesty. He knew nothing of the men who were creeping toward him through the woods; he believed himself alone, alone with that awful power which had seized his enemy and brushed him like a fly from the ledge! Slowly he took a step forward and, steadying himself, looked over the brink. Thirty feet below him that solitary stunted tree thrust out its dwarfed trunk from the sheer side of the precipice. Sprawled across it, limp, motionless, lifeless, hung Stenhart. The white froth of the boiling torrent below him outlined his sprawling limbs, his hanging head, his ghastly upturned face.

He was not dead! Even as Sherwin looked, he saw him move his head in the torture of pain and fear; it was more terrible than a swift and he would go down into eternity, and if he hung there-with no mortal help at hand—he must perish thus! It could not be for long, but Sherwin, looking down at him, knew that he was conscious and saw no help, only the face of the man who had sworn to kill him! Revenge exquisite in his torments, was accomolished. Sherwin need but stand there and see him die! Even as he looked, he saw the old tree begin to waver under the dead weight of the fallen body; its roots were loosening in their age-old crevice of rock. In a little while, long before help could reach Stenhart, it would bend downward. Annihilation waited there, eternity yawned for him, and he Sherwin, grasping a ledge of rock to steady himself, looked down at the helpless man who had betrayed him. Stenhart, looking up dizzily, saw him and tried to lift a feeble hand in entreaty. It was beyond his strength. He hung there, feeling the tree sway beneath him, helpless, at the end of hope.

Sherwin straightened himself suddenly; he had heard a distant sound, voices in the woods! Instantly, he divined the truth; Stenhart had again betrayed him, they were after him, But he had ample time to reach his cave, and once there they would not get him, for he knew the other opening and it was safe. Nor could they save Stenhart; the tree was giving! Five minutes more-and he would be avenged! He need not stir a finger, and Jane, who had besought him not to slay, would know that there was no blood upon his hands!

He drew a deep breath; almost at his feet lay the coil of rope that he had dropped when he met Jane. He saw it and remembered the purpose he had had in mind. The minutes seemed to beat themselves into his brain, his pulses throbbed, his lips were parched. He stooped, reached for the rope and, uncoiling it, wound it about the great trunk of a sycamore, then, tossing the long end over the side of the abyss, he grasped it and began to descend, hand over hand.

The rope swung out and then went taut with his weight. Little by little he lowered himself and, as he went down, he glanced aside at the tree under Stenhart. It was yielding, one crack more in the straining bark and it would snap! Swinging at the rope's end in space, Sherwin, the avenger, risked his life.

LEARNING TO LIVE TOGETHER

LESSON TEXT-Matthew 18:15-17; 21, 22; Mark 10:35-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.—John 13:35.

One world! Men have discovered in recent years that we do live in one world and that we must learn how to get along with one another, or we may find that we have destroyed civilization and one another. God has always taught in his Word that all men are of one origin, and that despite their differences, they would have been blessedly true if men had obeyed God and his law. Sin brought division and confusion. Now in our day, when we should be far on the way to the attainment of God's purpose, we find men more inclined than ever to be suspicious of one another, grasping are to live in unity and peace. That evil in many of their ways. We have not yet learned to live together as nations. Let us set ourselves to the task of living together. I. A Method for Dealing with Dif-

in their desires and purposes, and ferences (Matt. 18:15-17). This is the God-prescribed method for dealing with personal problems in the Christian church. That body in which love should reign is often rent by jealousies and personal resentments. If permitted to run on unchecked, they create division and even strife before the world, with all the disgrace it brings on the cause of Christ.

Such matters are to be dealt with promptly. The aggrieved one is not to wait for the sinner to make the approach, but is to go to him and place before him the evidence of his guilt. Done in kindness and with tact, this is frequently all that needs to be done. A man may thus win his brother, with no further ado or fuss in the church.

If he proves stubborn, the next step is to bring some brethren along and talk it over again. This evidence of their concern may break the stubbornness, or their prayers may win him. And if it does not work, the things said and done will have been witnessed by brethren who can faithfully report them to the church.

The final step is to bring the erring brother before the church. Now he may see the seriousness of his offense and repent. If not, there is one plain duty; he is to be put outside of the fellowship of the church.

Does that mean that he is abandoned and forgotten? Certainly not. a neathen man and a publican." Does the church have any interest in such individuals? Indeed it does, for the primary business of the church is to win both heathen and publican to fellowship with Christ.

II. A Measure for Determining Forgiveness (Matt. 18:21, 22).

Peter's question was a practical one. He supposed the case of one who sinned repeatedly against one who had shown a forgiving spirit. Most of us need not suppose such cases; we have them before us.

We forgive and are ready to let it all be forgotten, when lo, the offender turns up with an even greater wrong, indignity or sin! Then there is weeping and apparent repentance, followed almost at once by another offense. How long is this business to go on? The Jews said, "Three times, then let judgment fall." Peter, being a follower of Christ, went much farther. He would forgive seven times. Well, that's a lot of forgiveness; let us recognize that. Most of us haven't even gone as far as the Jews, and Peter is way ahead

But it is not enough! Forgiveness which has any limit set on it is not forgiveness at all. The very genius of forgiveness demands that we do not stand there with a measuring line or an account book. It must be from the heart, without limit and without restraint.

III. A Means for Attaining Greatness (Mark 10:35-45).

To want to be truly great for God is certainly not a sin. In a world which was rejecting Christ and getting ready to crucify him, this mother wanted her two boys to have a place of honor in the service of Christ. So far, so good; but then came the thing which spoiled it all -selfishness.

To seek honor for oneself, or for those one loves in order that the ego might be inflated and self given chance to show off, that is definitely unchristian.

greatness, how may it be done? Verses 43-45 tell us. It is by way of sacrificial service, the denial of self. This world and its kingdoms say that the one who serves is inferior

If then it is right to seek proper to the one who is served. In the kingdom of Jesus it is the one who serves who is greatest. Where will such a path lead? For Christ it led to the cross, and beyond it the victory of resurrection day. It may mean death for us, for a real willingness to serve connotes willingness to give all, even life itself, for his glory.

This board studies the case, and decides whether the veteran incurred his disability in service, whether the disability is sufficient to justify a pension award, and how much the pension shall be.

The amount of pension depends on the extent of the vet's disability. A veteran rated 10 percent disabled is eligible for a monthly pension of $11.50, while one rated 100 per cent disabled will receive $115. In addition, further payments for certain injuries, such as "Marshall Of Laredo" loss of an arm, can boost the veteran's monthly payment as high as $300. The number of the veteran's dependents has no bearing on the amount of pension.

If the veteran applies for pension within six months after his discharge, he probably will not have to take a physical examination. If an exam is required, VA will notify him when and where it is to be taken.

If he applies within a year after discharge, whatever pension is awarded ordinarily will be made recroactive to the date of his discharge. If he applies later, the pension will begin as of the date of his discharge. If he applies later, the pension will begin as of the date he applied.

Cattle Thrive On Wheat Grasses In Plains Area

Blue grama and buffalo grasses may be relied upon by cattlemen for summer grazing, and western wheat and crested wheat grasses may plug the gap between wheatfield grazing and the growth of native grasses in both spring and fall, the Texas A. & M. College has announced.

These recommendations were made by the Texas Agriculture Experiment Station in reporting results of the third year of steer grazing trials at the Amarillo Conservation Experiment Station, carried on cooperatively by the Research and Operations Division of the Soil Conservation Service and the Station's Division of Range Animal Husbandry.
