MOVING PICTURE SCHEME.

Commissioner Krake Thinks Idea Good One and Writes Film Company. Moving pictures may soon be called into requisition to advertise St. Joseph, as other cities are being advertised.

Horace G. Krake, commissioner of the Business Men's League, has written to the International Publicity company, which makes pictures and sends them all over the world, asking them why it would not be a good idea to take a film of scenes at the military tournament this fall, a subject which would undoubtedly prove interesting to a large number of people. At the same time the pictures would bazon the name of St. Joseph abroad and do much toward bringing the city to the notice of the world.

The idea first suggested itself to Mr. Krake from reading that such a set of moving pictures are being taken in Kansas City this week and sees no reason why St. Joseph should not profit by the example.

MISSOURI RIVER RIGHER.

Union Terminal Company Checks Cutting on Bank With Rock. When the reading was taken at the St. Joseph & Grand Island bridge at 6 o'clock last night it was shown the Missouri river has risen a tenth of a foot in twenty-four hours. The river rose a tenth of a foot Thursday.

The inroads of the river on the property of the Union Terminal company, just south of the Francis street depot, have been checked by the prompt filling in of the spot where a large part of the bank was washed out Wednesday night. Heavy piling has been driven into the river and is backed by a car load of rocks. Although the water is still high, officials of the company say that no further damage is expected.

MRS. COFFMAN ENTERTAINS.

Mrs. Coffman, 5505 South Third street, gave a very pleasant surprise party at her home for Miss Zola Purdie. Games and music were played, refreshments being served later. Those present were Misses Rose Jacquet, Marie Jucken, Ella Metcalf, Gertrude Jucken, Clair Wyland; Messrs. Henry Dobendo, Anthony Wyland, Earl West, Howard Bain, Lawrence Burke, Fred Wolf, Carl Berger, Charles Wolf and Hava Carl.

FINGERS TORN OFF.

Mrs. Robert Thorp, 1712 Calhoun street, wife of a fireman at Hose House No. 9, yesterday suffered the loss of three fingers and a thumb on her left hand when a can of fruit she was preserving suddenly exploded. The accumulation of various acids, used in the preserving preparation, is supposed to have caused the explosion. Mrs. Thorp was attended by Dr. M. L. Kullman. Her injuries were extremely painful, and her hand was badly lacerated.

SEWER FOR KING HILL AVENUE.

A designating notice for a sewer in District No. 102 was issued yesterday by the board of public works. The proposed sewer is on King Hill avenue. Objections to the paving of Twelfth street, Mitchell avenue to Sacramento street, were heard and overruled. Fifteen days was allowed property owners in the district in which to choose the material for resurfacing the street.

CLUB WILL PICNIC.

Journey to 102 in Wagons From South End. If it Doesn't Rain.

Providing it does not rain more than fifty young people of the South End will enjoy an outing at the 102 river tomorrow. The occasion will be the picnic of the Calumet club, which was to have been held last Sunday, but the inclemency of the weather prevented.

The merry-makers will leave early in the morning in a big picnic wagon. The main feature of the day will be the clash of the "Pharaoh's Steppans" and the "Broadway Belles" ball teams. Both teams will be composed of men, despite the name of one of them. A great deal of interest has been aroused, and silently various peculiar wagers have been laid. The teams have been sneaking off to the vacant lots during the earlier part of every evening and practicing.

Lunch will be taken and dinner served in true picnic fashion.

PHYSICIANS WITH BOARD. Promptness in Reporting Tuberculosis is Commended.

Promptness on the part of local physicians in reporting all cases of tuberculosis coming under their care is being greatly commended by the board of health. Twenty-one cases have been reported to the board in the eleven days since the order to this effect was passed.

"That shows that the physicians are with us in our endeavor to stamp out the disease," said Dr. T. J. Stamey, assistant city physician, yesterday. "There are several cases still unreported and arrest and trial in police court of the physicians in charge may result."

FOR WINDBREAKS

ness, both above and below ground; to register the force of the wind near the windbreaks and some distance away; to measure light intensity, and take note of the effects of shade; to register frost at different distances from the trees, and to keep account of the effect of the windbreaks on the snow which covers the ground to leeward in winter. Many other measurements and tests will be made, and elaborate data will be collected by experts who will have charge of the study.

Many disputed questions will thus be settled and the data gathered will be placed at the disposal of the farmers who desire it. Doubtless rows of trees between fields sometimes do more harm than good by casting shade and abstracting water from the soil. Trees may also increase the danger from frost, since the movement of the air lessens that danger. The forest service will study all sorts of conditions, including the relative value of windbreaks, consisting of a single row of trees and shelter belts made up of a number of such rows. A windbreak is usually planted for protection alone, a shelter belt for both protection and the growing of timber.

Corn in the Study This Year.

Corn will be the crop studied behind the windbreak this year. Trustworthy conclusions cannot be obtained by comparing results from different crops. Each crop makes its own demand upon the soil, so that what would destroy one might do little harm to another. Corn is a particularly good crop to experiment with because it is easily injured by hot, dry winds, will not stand standing and is very sensitive to frost.

The instruments and apparatus for each state will be read weekly by persons assigned to that duty by the agricultural experiment stations in the respective states. The whole work will be in charge of an expert for the forest service at Washington, who will be assisted this summer by three or four persons, also from the forest service, who will study general conditions in the states under investigation in regard to the effects of windbreaks on crops. The work will continue until crops are gathered next fall, when the actual yield of sheltered fields will be measured and results compared with nearby unsheltered fields. Some of the observations will continue through the winter.

It is expected that the results will be published both by the forest service and by the experiment stations which cooperate in carrying out the work.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGES.

Address of Wm. Loudon Before Manufacturers' Meeting at Council Bluffs.

William Loudon, of Fairfield, Iowa, was selected by Governor Cummins of that state as one of the three men to represent the state of Iowa in the conference called by President Roosevelt, to discuss the conservation of the national resources of the country. Mr. Loudon was formerly a farmer, but is now the head of the Loudon Machinery Company, of Fairfield, Iowa. He is one of the members of the committee of three of the Iowa Manufacturers' Association on Industrial Education. He has given this subject extensive study—an author of considerable note, intensely interested in the matters which were the chief consideration of the conference at Washington.

As a successful farmer and manufacturer, Mr. Loudon is interested in all that pertains to the agricultural resources of the country. He is an enthusiastic friend of agricultural and industrial schools, and believes they should be of vital interest to farmers.

In an address delivered at the Iowa Manufacturers' meeting at Council Bluffs, Mr. Loudon said:

"It is a well recognized fact that a special education is essential in every branch of human endeavor. If a young man wishes to be a lawyer, he should go to a law school; if a doctor, to a medical college; if a preacher, to a theological seminary; and so on. A rudimentary education is necessary for all and has been provided for by our public school system. After that, whatever additional branches may be taken up by the few who have the time and the money to spare, there should be provided for the many a practical education, which will properly fit them for the active duties of life. In this government the majority is supposed to rule, hence the importance of educating the masses. It is not impossible, however, for everyone to learn everything. Life is too short, and the average capacity and endurance is not sufficient for that. Therefore, a selection in the after studies to be pursued has to be made. In my opinion, after the rudiments have been mastered, the studies should be arranged mainly with a view to the avocation which the pupil is to follow, which should, as nearly as practical, be in line with his natural inclination.

"There is probably not more than one-tenth of the people engaged in what is known as the 'learned professions,' but to make a conservative estimate and including persons of leisure, I will call it one-fourth. This leaves three-fourths of the entire population engaged in the business for agriculture, mechanic arts, housekeeping and kindred occupations are those engaged in these occupations are to have as good an education in their respective lines as those engaged in the professions, you can readily see what will be required. The general idea appears to be that persons engaged in these avocations do not need to be as well-educated as those engaged in the professions; in other words, that almost anyone can be a farmer, a mechanic, a cook, or a general housekeeper without any special preparatory training, or as one has put it, 'the ordinary requirements in this class of work can be easily learned as needed.' This is an utterly mistaken idea. We have to live these things every day and hour of our lives, and unless we can get them right everything else will be more or less distorted and wrong.

"Fifty years ago probably no one had ever heard of tuberculosis in cattle, but it is one of the burning questions of the day. Since the passage of the pure food law and the rigid government inspection of meats, the packers have been losing many thousands of dollars by the rejection of carcasses which are affected with tuberculosis. In addition to tuberculosis in beef, there is in it to be considered also the question of tuberculosis in milk, butter and cheese, which makes it one of the far-reaching questions of the day.

"These are only a few of the problems which confront the modern farmer and there are more to come. How is he going to meet and solve these problems? A reliable understanding of the conditions involved and a practical knowledge of how to overcome the difficulties encountered will alone avail. Nature's laws are irrevocable and are never set aside by anyone. 'Know How' is the only password, and no one can enter without it.

"One of the most distressing signs of the times is the spirit of pessimism and distrust, too prevalent among farmers and laboring men. Some of them seem to think that everyone's hand is raised against them, and that all have conspired to beat them. This is a sure sign of a lack of education. Nothing can be done in this spirit, for one optimist will accomplish more than ten pessimists and will rule them every time. We should look at the dark side of the question for one purpose only, and that is to devise means to better it. It is necessary to look at this for this purpose, and this alone. When the great agricultural, manufacturing and housekeeping masses get together in earnest, and with an intelligent purpose to improve their condition, they will receive the hearty co-operation and assistance of the learned professions, because what is good for one is good for all.

"Agricultural colleges are a rather recent innovation. Fifty years ago the first one in this country was established at Lansing, Michigan, and one week ago its semi-centennial was celebrated in that

TAFT THE NOMINEE

NAMED ON FIRST BALLOT BY THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION.

IS LATER MADE UNANIMOUS

Nomination Made Amid Scenes of Tumultuous Enthusiasm After a Long Session—Cheers for Other Candidates.

Chicago, June 19.—For president of the United States, William H. Taft of Ohio.

Taft on the first ballot; Taft by 702 votes; Taft by the unanimous choice of the convention.

Such is the record of the culminating day of the Republican national convention of 1908, effected amid scenes of tumultuous enthusiasm and after a nerve-racking continuous session lasting nearly eight hours. With president named and platform enunciated there remains only the nomination of the vice-president to complete this momentous work. Thursday night the whole city was given over to wild exultation in honor of the new candidate whose name goes echoing through the country.

The picture within the walls of the vast amphitheater as the presidential candidate was named Thursday was one truly grandiose in its magnitude. In front, to the right and left, below and above the billowing sea of humanity, restless after hours of waiting and stirred from one emotion to another, was in a fever of expectancy for the culminating vote. The favorite sons of other states had been named, save Knox and LaFollette, and now on the rollcall came Ohio. As the Buckeye state was reached, the tall, gaunt form of Theodore E. Burton, with student-like face and severe black clerical garb, advanced to the platform to nominate Ohio's candidate. He spoke fervently, with the singing voice of an evangelist, which went ringing through the great building. The close of his speech of nomination was the signal for the long-pent-up feeling of the Taft legions. Instantly the Ohio delegates were on their feet, other Taft states following, while the convention hosts in gallery and on floor, broke into mad demonstration.

All semblance of order had been abandoned and the delegates' arena was a maelstrom of gesticulating men, the gesticulations of the states were snatched up by the Taft enthusiasts or borne under by the storm of disorder. The band was inaudible—a mere whisper above the deafening volume of sound. For ten, 15, 20, 25, 30 minutes, this uproar continued. It was a repetition of the scene of Wednesday when the name of Roosevelt brought the convention into a frenzy, repeated in intensity and almost in duration. But there is a limit to the physical resources of throat and lung, relays had not been established and at last the tired voices died down to a hoarse shout and at last subsided.

This lull now gave the opportunity for the speech seconding Taft's nomination by George A. Knight of California, his big round face beaming forth on the sympathetic multitude and his splendid baritone voice going forth like the tones of a great church organ. California's tribute to Taft was brief and fervid. Now there was another lull in the Taft movement, while the remaining candidates were placed in nomination.

It was late in the afternoon before the convention now literally swelled, with the intense heat and wear after nearly seven hours of continuous session, reached the end of the floor of eloquence and the decks were at last cleared for the culminating act. Not, just as the last swell of oratory, the seconding speech for LaFollette had died away, like a cyclone, from a clear sky burst a LaFollette demonstration which swept the convention from its very bearings. It was

HOW THE SECRETARY OF WAR RECEIVED ANNOUNCEMENT OF HIS NOMINATION.

Several Important Departmental Questions Disposed of While Awaiting the Result of the Ballot.

Washington, June 19.—"Words do not find themselves at a time like this. I do not deny that I am very happy." This was the response of Secretary William H. Taft to a request for an expression of his views on his nomination for the presidency. The sentences did not come easily. Throughout the afternoon preceding the announcement his nomination the secretary has been laboring under suppressed nervous tension. The atmosphere of his office was electric with excitement. Notwithstanding the great personal interest which he had in the proceedings at Chicago, 1,000 miles away, Secretary Taft did not permit politics to interfere for a moment with his transaction of official business as secretary of war. In the intermissions of the receipt of bulletins from the convention, the secretary disposed of several important departmental questions and when his nomination for the presidency was announced his desk practically was cleared of important official business.

Throughout the afternoon the private office of Secretary Taft and the office of his private secretary, Mr. Carpenter were thronged with members of his family, intimate personal and official friends and newspaper men. As the balloting began in the convention the atmosphere in the two rooms seemed to be surcharged with excitement. Scarcely a word was spoken. Men who ordinarily are not affected by nervousness hung over the telegraphic instrument as if their lives depended upon the words which the stolid telegrapher was tickling on his typewriter. "Something went wrong with the official dispatch. The first announcement was that Massachusetts had cast 32 votes for Taft. Then the announcement from Michigan was made, with its one vote for Cannon. At this moment Secretary Carpenter's telephone jingled and William Panely, Secretary Taft's personal messenger received a flash from the Associated press that Taft had been nominated. The information, conveyed instantly to the secretary, created a commotion. Mr. Williams had the convention hall on the long distance telephone; but on account of the confusion in the Coliseum was unable to confirm the news for a minute or so. Afterward a bulletin from the Associated press confirming the nomination was received and was followed soon afterward by confirmations from other quarters.

Scarcely had this news been conveyed to Secretary Taft when over the official wire came the flash "Taft nominated." Mrs. Taft rose from her seat at the secretary's desk and turned to her husband who was standing at her right. It was an eloquent handclasp they gave each other. Mrs. Taft was bubbling over with happiness. All evidence of the nervous strain which had been in her face during the afternoon had disappeared. The secretary himself laughed with the joy of a boy. Around both the secretary and Mrs. Taft their friends crowded to offer their congratulations. It was a happy scene—the realization of months of labor and tribulation.

Secretary Root was the first cabinet officer to extend to Secretary Taft and Mrs. Taft his congratulations on the nomination. He remarked facetiously to Secretary Taft while the latter was shaking hands with some of his newspaper friends, that he probably would find it difficult to "shake" these men after their campaign or after Secretary Taft's election. Secretary Root responded that he had no idea of shaking them at any time.

Among those whom the secretary greeted after his nomination were all of the employees of the insular bureau of the war department whom Secretary Taft was acquainted with personally. Turning to Secretary Root after the informal reception, Secretary Taft inquired: "Shall we go now to the war college?" "Yes," replied Secretary Root.

JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS OUT

RESIGNS DEMOCRATIC LEADERSHIP IN HOUSE.

In His Letter Mr. Williams Declares He Believes It for Party's Best Interest.

Eufaula, Ala., June 19.—Announcement of the resignation of Congressman John Sharp Williams from the minority leadership of the house was made Thursday by Congressman H. D. Clayton.

Mr. Williams, in a letter to Mr. Clayton, declares that his retirement is actuated solely by the belief that it is best for the party. Mr. Williams' letter follows, in part:

"Dear Henry:—I write this letter to you as my resignation of the position of the parliamentary floor leader for the minority, the resignation to take place upon the first Monday of December following this date. I have been thinking about it a good deal and it seems to me that if the next house goes Democratic, who ever is going to be speaker of that house, ought to have at least the training of the last, or short session of this congress not only to fit him for its parliamentary duties, but also to make a more intimate acquaintance with the personnel of the Democratic side than he perhaps otherwise might have. If, upon the other hand, the next house shall be Republican, the preliminary training will be just as necessary in order to fit him for the very arduous duties of leadership during the sixty-first congress.

I have not consulted any of my friends about resigning for fear they might attempt to dissuade me and my opinion of the absolute correctness of the position which I am taking is so clear that I did not want either to be dissuaded or to appear obstinate towards them. I need not tell you, of course, because you know it, how much I shall personally welcome the release from hard work and from the limelight. As you and some personal friends know, I would, because of the condition of my health have laid down the work before this, but for the appearance of "quitting while under fire." I would not, however, permit the prospect of the work alone make me quit. If that were all, I am actually solely by the idea that the course that I am taking is best for the party.—John Sharp Williams."

He said he had no comment to make on the convention's work, but would soon, probably Friday, prepare a statement of his views on the Republican platform.
