closely divided between quarantine and native divisions. There was quite active demand during early part of the day for the range cattle, but not much stir noted in the few natives offered. But later in the forenoon when buyers got through with the big bunches of rangers the native contingent was given attention on a hasis of about stendy prices compared with the finishing days of last week.

Offerings included nothing in strictly choice or prime fed beeves, although bunch or two of fairly good kinds were here. Sales on a steady basis were a $5.75@6.15 for the pick of offerings, al though choice to prime steers can be quoted at $6.75 to around $7.25 In me diam kinds of steers the moderate offer ings were picked up on a basis of $5,000 5.75, while common light grass native sold on a basis of $4.00@5.00.

COWS. BULLS AND MIXED. There was not a great deal of change in the market for cows and heifers today largely of range stuff. Buyers were insomewhat by late trains and trade was sheep were offered and this end of the clined to bid lower on opening rounds, slow with prices generally considered a but sellers did not think the situation dime lower. Best steers offered sold at $4.00, quoted a steady a rather slow opening trade. The market developed fair activity during middle and closing bours, however, and most salesmen were able to realize steady prices for their holdings. Good native cows were scarce, and bulk of the decent killers sold at $3.00@3.65 with canners and cutters at $2.00@2.75. A range of $2.65@3.35 took most of the range offerings. The supply of helfers was small and the cheape grades predominated, sales being largely life, but prices were quoted about steady with the finish of last week. A good run of calves got in today, bull being rangers. Trade was slow and sharply lower. Prices were 25@50c lower.

CAUSE FOR POOR QUALITY.

Deteriorated quality of hogs on markets during late summer and early fall months is not uncommon. Ordinarily this is traceable to disease, fear of disease and drouth in scattered localities. This year, however, it is corn price and prospect that

EVARTS OFF THE MAP.

The town of Evarts, S. D., until a few nonths ago the greatest cattle shipping center in the country, passed into oblivion Aug. 1. Not even a raflroad track remains to mark the place where millions of head of cattle have been cared for on their way from the great plains to Eastern markets. When the Milwaukee engineers settled upon a site several miles north of Evarts acres of grape vines, most of which are for a bridge across the Missouri river the town was doomed and the exodus began. Buildings were drawn across the prairie to G'enham and Mobridge. In a few days the Milwaukee will tear up its tracks leading into Evarts. That will be the

The government turned it down.

And now the historical sites comnittee of founder's week has turned lown Betsy and the house finally. either of them can have a look in on the festivities because both, says he committee, are fakes. The school book story is down and out.

Nothing has so shocked Philadelphia since it was definitely discovered by the Pennsylvania Historical society that the Liberty bell wasn't cracked while pealing out the news of freedom at all, but while it was discreetly tolling for the death of Chief Justice Marshall.

Officials of the Betsy Ross associaion, which superintended the purchase of the building, had made great plans to have it figure largely in the lestivities. They were horrified the other day when the committee ancounced that Betsy and the house were really a myth.

It was the hand of William J. Camptendent of Schools Martin G.
